The government is now ready to proceed against the "Little Three" on all of the counts in the bill of complaint which charged them with restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, it was reported in authoritative Washington circles, however. Attorneys who have followed the government's case expressed the belief that the renewed action would be based principally upon the alleged monopolistic aspects of block-booking.

The anti-trust case at New York is not dependent in any way upon the outcome of the Crescent, Schine, or other trust actions involving the "Little Three" elsewhere. Washington observers indicated. They said that the limited personnel of the anti-trust division had probably resulted in suspending the action against the "Little Three" at New York while the U. S. briefs in other trials were being prepared. There is no reason, however, why the New York action should be dependent upon other actions, they said.

Block booking, and the government's charges that the Little Three force pictures on theatres will be the principal issues to be heard by Judge Goddard. The government will seek a court ruling which will compel Columbia, Universal and United Artists to follow the trade practices set up by the consent decree with Paramount, Loew's, RKO, 20th Century-Fox and Warner Brothers, it was predicted.

Under the provisions of the decree which suspended the government's prosecution of the Big Five last year the government has until June 1st, 1942, to bind the remaining defendant distributors to the same or similar trade practices. If it fails the Big Five may be relieved from the blocks-of-five, trade show, and other provisions of the decree.

The government, it appears, has not felt it necessary to rush plans for the Little Three trial. It still appears to believe that there is ample time during the six months until June 1st to try the case and to hear possible appeals from the District Court decision.

It is unlikely that the congested state of the New York district court calendar will permit a trial much before February or March, court officials indicated. Judge Goddard currently is occupied with Big Five pleas for relief from the Minnesota law and has other cases pending on his docket.

Distributors and Minnesota Argue Precedence of Civil, Criminal Suits

How, when and where the validity of the Minnesota anti-consent decree law will be put to a test became a matter for increasingly confused speculation this week as distributors and state attorneys argued on whether civil or criminal actions on the law would be tried first.

On Monday James F. Lynch, Ramsey County attorney, it was reported from Minneapolis, insisted that the civil actions and injunctions against the law filed by the five consenting companies and United Artists be disposed of first. Distributors in New York indicated that they felt that trial of criminal actions against Paramount, RKO, and 20th Century-Fox for alleged violations of the Minnesota law would bring a speedier test of its constitutionality.

The criminal actions are set for trial on December 15th. Mr. Lynch is reported to have indicated that the civil cases could be heard by a district court between December 5th and 10th. In both cases the verdict will be appealed to the state Supreme Court. Distributors are reported to feel that the criminal case would bring a swifter decision in both courts, however.

Minnesota authorities, it is said, want the civil action tried first so that in the event the law is held unconstitutional the criminal actions may be dropped from the lower court docket.

Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest this week instructed its attorneys to intervene in the civil case, as friend of the court, and is preparing arguments in support of the law's constitutionality.

At New York, meanwhile, four of the five consenting distributors have sought relief from the decree's selling provisions in Minnesota. Judge Henry W. Goddard has granted relief to Paramount, Warners, RKO, 20th Century-Fox. Loew's is still considering what action it will take in Minnesota, according to J. Robert Rubin, chief counsel. A decision is not expected until William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, and Nicholas Schenck, president, return to New York next week.

One distributor, Paramount, reports that since Judge Goddard granted the relief order deals have been closed with 50 per cent of its Minnesota customers.

Lucas & Jenkins, Majors Hit by $1,500,000 Suit

Alleging monopoly in restraint of trade, Charles Mion and W. T. Murray, operators of the downtown Atlanta Rialto theatre and three neighborhood houses, Monday filed suit in U. S. district court there for $1,592,785.98 against Lucas and Jenkins, Inc., and subsidiaries, operators of a large chain of theatres in Atlanta and Georgia, and eleven film producing companies.

Actual damages claimed by Mion and Murray are $530,728.66. The suit was brought for three times that amount. The Rialto theatre is not a party to the suit.

Named defendants with Lucas and Jenkins are Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Paramount Film Distributing Corporation; Loew's, Inc.; Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, RKO-Radio Pictures, Inc.; Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; Vitagraph, Inc.; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; Universal Pictures Company, Inc.; Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.; United Artists Corporation; Community Theatres Company; Community Theatres Corporation; East Point Amusement Company; West End Theatre Company; Tenth Street Theatre Company; Evins Amusement Company; Techwood Theatre Corporation, and Arthur Lucas and William K. Jenkins.

The action sought to recover damages alleged to have been suffered in the operation of the Decatur, Little Five Points and East Point theatres as a result of a conspiracy among the Lucas-Jenkins organization and the producing and distributing companies to deprive the plaintiffs of product.

Built in 1940

The petition asserts that in 1940 Mion and Murray decided to build and operate the Decatur, Little Five Points and East Point theatres and queried the producing companies concerning the availability of motion pictures and were told that they (the defendant companies) would not refuse to negotiate for product.

"As soon as plaintiff made known its intention to lease and operate the three neighborhood theatres as aforesaid, the exhibitor defendants, including the individual defendants, Arthur Lucas and William K. Jenkins, conspired to promulgate and carry out plans to maintain a monopoly and restrain competition in interstate commerce by seeking to deter plaintiff from engaging in the operation of the aforesaid three theatres . . . or to force plaintiff out of business by preventing plaintiff from obtaining such feature motion pictures as would enable plaintiff to continue its operation of said theatres," the suit charges.

Mion and Murray allege that producers frequently have refused to make available to them any feature motion pictures except old ones made a year or more prior to the year in which they have been permitted to exhibit them and that in cases where they were able to contract for pictures during the year in which they were made it was provided they could not exhibit them until a specified period after they were made available to the exhibitor defendants for exhibition in the neighborhood theatre or theatres competing with the houses operated by the plaintiffs.

Muscle Shoals Circuit Files Crescent Brief

The Muscle Shoals Theatres, Inc., in a final brief filed at Nashville on Friday in the Crescent Circuit anti-trust case denied that the Muscle Shoals and Crescent chains were affiliated. The brief asserts that the former was named in the government complaint because of erroneous information given the government by a competitor.

Louis Rosenbaum and Mrs. Tony Sudekum, partners in the Muscle Shoals theatres in their brief asserted that Max Buchanan, a competing exhibitor in Athens, Ga., supplied the government with information falsely linking the Crescent and Muscle Shoals operations.

"No theory of public welfare can justify bringing Muscle Shoals Theatres into this case," the brief asserts. "So far as we are concerned," it adds, "this action was brought by the United States against Muscle Shoals Theatres to protect the welfare of one Max Buchanan."

Closing court arguments will be heard on Monday.

COOPERATIVE LEAGUE HAS DOCUMENTARY

Documentary Film Productions, Inc., has completed a three-reel 35 mm. sound picture, "Here is Tomorrow," for the Cooperative League of the United States. The film, in production since August, will be released January 1st. It tells the story of how 2,000,000 people throughout the country, particularly in the middle west, organized "successful consumer cooperatives," for such purchases as groceries, oil, farm equipment, clothing and other commodities.

According to the League, $600,000 worth of business was transacted by cooperatives in 1940. It is understood that the League is planning to distribute the picture both non-theatrically and theatrically.

Willard Van Dyke, who directed "The City" in 1939, is connected with Documentary Film Productions.

Philadelphia Judge Hears Schad Case in January

Final hearing in the anti-trust suit filed August 23d by H. J. Schad, Reading, Pa., exhibitor, has been listed for January 29th before Judge J. Cullen Ganey in the U. S. District Court in Philadelphia. Filed in behalf of his Astor theatre, which is operated on a pooling deal with Jay Emanuel, the suit is directed against Warners, 20th Century-Fox, Warner theatres and the Wilmer-Vincent Circuit, asking for an injunction and triple damages of $750,000.

Mr. Emanuel is not party to the suit, on which a preliminary hearing was held in September. The suit seeks to restrain 20th Century-Fox from selling away from Mr. Schad's Astor. The damages are the largest ever asked in an anti-trust suit filed in Eastern Pennsylvania.

Theatre, Radio Tieups

Four downtown theatres in San Francisco have started using radio as an exploitation means. Some dozen other theatres are reported taking spot announcements. The Fox theatre there has engaged Dean Maddoz, KFRC master of ceremonies, to handle the publicity twice weekly with a "man on the street" program in front of the theatre. The RKO Golden Gate is using a tri-weekly "Under the Marquee" pickup. The Clay and Larkin theatres, both Herbert Rosener houses, have taken a Sunday night quarter hour of station KYA for news of the current pictures and players.

Lester Cohen to Trinidad

Lester Cohen has been named Warner manager in Trinidad, it has been announced by Robert Schless, foreign department manager for the company.

Jaslow Joins John Schaeffer

Jack Jaslow, representing Artkino, Russian pictures, in Philadelphia, has joined the independent film exchange of John Schaeffer in that city.

16mm Defense Films Listed in Pamphlet

A "special" National Defense Bulletin was made available last week by Thomas J. Brandon, head of Brandon Films, Inc., of New York, listing 16 mm. sound documentaries of British and Soviet Union war and defense activities. The bulletin, supplying synopses of pictures and giving rental information, was distributed to schools, churches, clubs, labor and other non-theatrical groups. It is understood that Brandon Films is taking advantage of the so-called "sudden interest" in Russia, by concentrating heavily on rentals of Soviet documentaries and shorts.

Among the films listed are "Crisis," made in Europe some time ago by Herbert Kline; "Inside Europe," "Inside Germany," "Inside Asia," "Neighbors Under Fire," "The Warning," "The Red Army," "After Mein Kampf," "Professor Mamlock," "The Oppenheim Family," "Hitler, Beast of Berlin," "Lights Out in Europe," "The 400 Million" and "Bundles for Britain."

The Russian newsreel material which has been flown to America via Clipper since the start of the Russo-German war, is being prepared for a documentary picture of one-hour length, it was reported last week. Lewis Milestone and Joris Ivens are converting the newsreels in Hollywood for that purpose, it was said. Nicholas Napoli, president of Artkino, Inc., the company which has exclusive distribution rights in America for Russian pictures, is interested in getting the Milestone-Ivens film for major release.

Netter to Texas For Circuit Meet

Leon Netter, of the Paramount home office theatre department, left New York this Friday for Lufkin, Texas, where he attended a directors meeting of the East Texas Theatre, Inc., on Saturday. Mr. Netter plans to be away from his office for a week. Following the Lufkin meeting, he will visit Paramount theatre affiliates in Dallas, New Orleans and Memphis.

Perry Hunter, of the Dominion Theatres circuit, was in New York this week to confer with Paramount theatre officials; Ed Pinanski, of Mullins and Pinanski, came to New York on Wednesday for a conference with Leonard Goldenson and other Paramount circuit chiefs, and Frank Rogers and Fred Kent of the Florida State Theatres, Inc., visited home office executives on Tuesday.

Film Monopoly Decreed in Vichy

The authorization for the government to grant a 15-year monopoly on newsreels for France and other countries under French sovereignty was decreed last week, according to a wireless message from Vichy to the New York Times. The monopoly would exclude all film companies from competing with the firm that receives the concession.

Under the decree Vice-Premier Francois Darlan and the Minister of National Economy are empowered to take measures for the formation of the newsreel monopoly and to grant State financial participation in the initial capital of the company and in eventual increase in capital.

OBSTETRICS NOT BOX OFFICE, U.S. FINDS THROUGH 'FIGHT FOR LIFE'

Columbia Abandoning the Sale of Lorentz Documentary with Rentals as Low as $2.30; Contract Has Three Years to Run

"The Fight for Life" is a headache.

The Pare Lorentz obstetrical picture, produced for the U. S. and for which Columbia has a five-year distribution contract with well over three years still to go, is bringing neither exhibitors, distributor, nor the Government anything more than postage-stamp money, according to officials of the U. S. Office of Education, which inherited the picture from the defunct United States Film Service, and Columbia is abandoning sale of the feature. Mr. Lorentz has since joined RKO in Hollywood.

Under the contract, which was entered into by the Film Service before it was wiped out by the refusal of Congress to allot any further funds, the Government receives 25 per cent of the rentals collected by Columbia. Its monthly checks from Columbia have ranged from a high of about $150 to a low of something like $2.30, officials said.

Meanwhile, the reports to Washington indicate that nowhere has there been any demand for a repeat run. There appears to have been little trouble with censors, although the Chicago police board of censorship flatly refused to let the picture be exhibited in that city .

In short, "Fight for Life" is far less successful than either of the two other big Lorentz documentaries, "The Plow That Broke the Plains" and "The River."

Believe in Educational Value

The Office of Education, frankly, would like to get the picture back. It believes the film has a definite value for educational purposes, but it is not interested in its general exhibition. And while the contract runs, it cannot make any free showings of 35 mm. film, and the office was left by the Film Service without funds with which to buy 16 mm. prints of this picture. Accordingly, until the contract expires or Columbia relinquishes the picture, the educational use of the film is at a standstill.

"Fight for Life" was made by Pare Lorentz as one of a series of Federal documentary films undertaken to show the country how bad conditions were, economically and sociologically, and how they got that way. "The Plow That Broke the Plains" and "The River" got wide distribution and were well received. Accordingly, the Film Service offered "Fight" for commercial contract through the Procurement Division of the Treasury, and Columbia got the picture.

When the Film Service was dissolved, many of its pictures were turned over to the Office of Education. "The Plow" and "The River" were turned back by that agency to the Department of Agriculture, where it was felt they could be used to good advantage. "Fight" was seen as a possible good educational picture, and some day it may be available for that purpose.

DOCUMENTARIANS 'REDISCOVER' U. S.

Producers of documentary films and educators who are using films in teaching participated at a film forum, "Rediscovering America," at the Philadelphia Museum of Art November 23rd, the first of a series has been organized by the Art Museum's division of education in co-operation with the American Film Center of New York City.

Arch Mercey, special assistant to the Government Office of Reports, discussed the subject of Government films in relation to defense, illustrating his talk with a short subject, "Bomber." The problem of making training films for the military forces was covered by Lieutenant Colonel M. D. Gillette, in charge of the training film production laboratories at Fort Monmouth.

Representing education was Charles Hoban, recently appointed assistant to the director of visual aids of the Board of Education. Other speakers included Willard Van Dyke, producer of numerous governmental and commercial films, at whose talk "The City" was shown in its entirety; Mrs. John Frederick Lewis, Jr., civic leader and chairman of the Civilian Defense Volunteers' Office; Donald Slesinger, director of the American Film Center, and E. M. Benson of the division of education of the Art Museum, who is in charge of arrangements for the forum.

Last week, at Columbia's home office, conversation with officials revealed that the company was filling out its present contracts for "Fight for Life" but that no new deals were being made for its exhibition. Queried whether or not the picture lost money for Columbia, an executive said, "We just broke even." Asked whether it was true that exhibitors were squawking on paying money for a film made with public funds, he said, "That's the first I ever heard of it."

Ever since its release early in 1940, "The Fight for Life" has been the subject of wide controversy. In March, 1940, the film stirred a Congressional tempest when the House Appropriations Committee recommended to Congress that no funds be made available after June 30th of that year for the continuance of the U. S. Film Service, which produced the picture, under the direction of Pare Lorentz. At the same time, the Maternity Association Center of New York, comprising well known club women, philanthropists, doctors and other professionals, condemned regular theatre distribution of the picture on the ground that its treatment of childbirth in slums would bring "fear and terror" to women in audiences. Loew's, Inc., meanwhile rejected theatrical distribution of the picture through its circuit.

During the House Committee hearings, reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on March 30th, 1940, it was established that the Lorentz film cost the Government between $150,000 and $178,000. The hearings disclosed that the picture was financed by allocations during 1940 of $75,900 each from the Works Progress Administration and the Public Works Administration. This $168,500 paid costs of administration for the U. S. Film Service, set up by President Roosevelt in the division of the Office of Education, including a $10,000 salary to Mr. Lorentz. Actual production activities, it was brought out, were financed by another grant of $162,500 from the WPA, with which it financed "Fight" and "Ecce Homo —Behold the Man."

Original source material for the film was derived from the maternal welfare chapters in Paul de Kruif's book, "The Fight for Life."

The National Legion of Decency, moreover, placed the picture in the "separate classification" accorded certain pictures, observing that introduction of this kind of material on the theatrical screen was "questionable."

Flaherty's Documentary Hits a Snag

Robert J. Flaherty's 40-minute documentary, "The Land," made for the U. S. Department of Agriculture and completed last Spring, has also hit a snag. For the past six months Government officials have been weighing decision to release the film for distribution. United Artists, it is understood, had been negotiating with the Department for handling the distribution, but a UA executive said on Monday "no definite plans" had been made, as the Government had not decided what to do with the picture.

"The Land" depicts American farm life in such a way as to point to agricultural reforms and according to Government officials in some quarters, they believe that widespread attention to such reforms during the present national defense crisis would be unwise. Department of Agriculture executives, it is said, favor immediate release of the film, but other Government officials want it held up until after the war. In the meantime, "The Land" is resting on a shelf.

Mr. Flaherty traveled 25,000 miles in making the picture which took two years.

Slesinger Also Has A U. S. Documentary

Donald Slesinger, director of the American Film Center, has been in Hollywood for the past week, getting production started on the documentary film on nutrition which the Center is producing for Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services of FSA. Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, announced in Washington on Monday that such a picture was in production.

The American Film Center is an educational organization, supported by the Rockefeller Foundation.

MGM LAUNCHES EXHIBITOR FORUMS FOR OPEN TALKS WITH CUSTOMERS

First Meeting at Convention of Ohio ITO Emphasizes Need of Industry Harmony and Better Merchandising

Columbus, Ohio, was one focal point of distributor-exhibitor "good will" trade practice developments this week, with the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio convening in that city, at the Deshler Wallick Hotel, at the same time MGM launched its first Exhibitor Forum as a practical aid for small-town theatre operators. Some 500 exhibitors attended the two-day ITO sessions and approximately 250 theatre men came to view Metro's new mobile exhibitor-aid unit, "The Show Builder," and to hear discussions on the primary problem of bringing the patrons into the motion picture theatre.

Myers Warns on Necessity of Unity

Declaring that some independent exhibitors considered recent political attacks and revelations against industry individuals as a golden opportunity to "join in the hue and cry and perhaps extort from team some concessions that would be of value to the independents, Abram F. Myers, general counsel of National Allied States Association, addressing ITO delegates, said exhibitors, for their own protection and welfare, would have to cooperate with the other branches in opposing a common enemy. Allied will not "march with selfish politicians, bigots and the remnants of the Ku Klux Klan," he said, in order to obtain a fair deal for independents.

Mr. Myers told convention delegates that in these times many forces were at work "with which he would not have to reckon in normal times," and charged that certain industry leaders had played into the hands of fifth columnists and bigots to such an extent that movements were now on foot in some territories which threatened not merely those who were to blame but also all engaged in and dependent on the motion picture business.

"In conclusion, Allied's general counsel urged that producer-distributors must "realize the dire consequences to themselves if independent exhibitors are at this time forced into a state of angry resentment, or are driven out of business by ever-increasing film rentals while their own earnings mount to higher and higher levels. They must be made to understand," he said, "that the continued good will and suport of the independent exhibitors is the most valuable asset they possess."

On Wednesday, Mr. Myers again addressed ITO delegates. First, he commended MGM's Exhibitor Forum as an "extremely valuable experiment," he then discussed the consent decree which he branded as 'unwanted, unworkable and unsatisfactory." Mr. Myers also expressed high hopes for the success of the Chicago unity meeting scheduled for December 9th, saying that exhibitors might formulate a policy at that meeting which would be acceptable to themselves and to distributors, and which would replace the consent decree. He warned ITO members of the necessity for exhibitors to form a united effort for protection against unfair taxation in the future.

Discussion on consent decree selling brought forth a report from Pete J. Wood ,ITO secretary, on the replies to questionnaires which the organization sent out November 10th. He said that 110 exhibitors accused one or more distributors in the Ohio territory of violating the decree by force or coercion, alleging that distributors refused to sell the blocks of five unless the first blocks were purchased.

All ITO officers and directors were reelected at the convention by acclamation.

"UNITY" MEETING SET FOR CHICAGO

With Chicago set for the place and December 9th tentatively scheduled for the time, National Allied States' Association is moving quickly towards achieving its all-industry unity plan first proposed in Philadelphia some months ago. Invitations to the forthcoming industry-unity conference were sent out on Monday by Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, urging attendance of industry leaders and representative members of exhibitor organizations. Nine of the 11 distributing companies already approached by Allied's unity committee have agreed to send their top executives to Chicago to help set in motion an all-industry program.

It is reported that production branches of the industry will not be invited inasmuch as exhibitors are of the opinion that their principal problems concern the completed picture. While the joint conference has been scheduled for only one day, it was indicated that the discussion might last two or possibly three days.

First MGM Forum In Columbus

More than 250 exhibitors representing 600 theatres in the territories served by the Cleveland and Cincinnati offices of MGM, attended Metro's first Exhibitor Forum in Columbus at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel on Tuesday. H. M. Richey, assistant to William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, in charge of exhibitor relations, presided at the forum which aired discussions on ways and means of getting more people to patronize motion picture theatres. Advertising and exploitation experts in addition to exhibitors from the territory, discussed possibilities of developing greater grosses at subsequent run and small-town box offices. Both MGM's sales department, headed by Mr. Rodgers, and the advertising, publicity and exploitation department, in charge of Howard Dietz, cooperated in executing plans for the Exhibitor Forum.

Mr. Richey's opening remarks stressed the need for closer exhibitor relationship, particularly in the smaller towns, and the necessity of stimulating better merchandising to off-set the tremendous competition now facing exhibitors. He expressed satisfaction with the beneficial results obtained by the interchange of ideas between the exhibitors present and the MGM home office and field representatives.

William A. Greene of the Bureau of Advertising American Newspaper Publishers Association, speaking on "Good Newspaper Advertising," emphasized that the show, not the name of the theatre, should be sold, and that advertising the product was more important than the place where you buy it.

Governor John W. Bricker, of Ohio, addressing the Forum's luncheon guests, said that a grave responsibility rested upon leaders of the film industry today in presenting the truth on the screen without propaganda. W. R. Ferguson, MGM exploitation manager, who spoke about "Exploitation Ideas That Work," explained the many services available to exhibitors and asked for suggestions and criticism. He defined exploitation as creative ability, courage and persistency, and said it was a sure remedy for box-office ills. With Mr. Ferguson was a staff of field men on hand to supervise a display of MGM's 86 exhibitor aids available.

The meeting closed with an address on "Close Public Contact with Your Community," by Edward Salzberg, Bluefield, West Virginia exhibitor, who stressed the importance of the personal side of conducting a theatre, pointing out the importance of catering to children, the adult patrons of the future, and telling his audience to "stop worrying and start working."

Mr. Richey explained the purpose of MGM's "The Show Builder," and introduced Ken Prickett, in charge of the company's new mobile exhibitor aid unit, which was on display in the hotel's grand ballroom.

Predicting that the Exhibitor Forum would start a new trend in producer-exhibitor relations, Pete J. Wood, secretary of the ITO of Ohio, termed the forum at its conclusion a "huge success." "It was not only a tribute to Metro but also to the exhibitors that they are ready to do something to solve these problems," he said.

Admission Increases Studied by Delegates

A primary topic for exhibitor consideration at Wednesday's ITO session, was that of raising admission prices throughout Ohio. Some exhibitors favor the increase on the ground that it is needed because of increased operating costs. Others, however, feel that a price boost at this time would have an adverse effect.

Mr. Wood was to urge convention delegates on Wednesday to adopt a resolution asking Warner Bros. to change its box office policy on "Sergeant York." The ITO secretary had prepared a resolution branding the policy as "bad business," declaring that it was unfair to expect subsequent-run houses to ask downtown prices.

The annual banquet of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, was held on Tuesday night at the Deshler-Wallick, followed by a midnight screening of "Keep 'Em Flying," at the RKO Grand Theatre. A supper party after the showing was held at the Variety Club.

Representing the sales department at the Forum were Central Division Sales Manager E. K. O'Shea, District Managers J. J. Maloney and H. P. Wolfberg and Branch Managers E. M. Booth, Cincinnati, and F. D. Drew, Cleveland.

Mr. Ferguson, who arrived in Columbus on Monday presided at a conference with MGM Central Division field representatives, which was held on Wednesday.

Among those who attended both meetings were Messrs. O'Shea, Maloney, Wolfberg, Booth and Drew, and the following field men: C. C. Deardourff, Cleveland; Charles Barron, Pittsburgh; Warren A. Slee, Detroit; Jack Gilmore, Buffalo; Irving Waterstreet, St. Louis; John E. Watson, Cincinnati; Ted Morris, Indianaplis; Todd Ferguson, Memphis; James Burge, Oklahoma City, and Claude Morris, Kansas City.

CONNORS TO FOX, LESERMAN TO U.A.; AYERS, SEED, SMELTZER PROMOTED

Also, Horen and Moore Promoted; Budd Rogers in New Post; George Schaefer in Full Authority of RKO Changes

Realignments in top and near-top ranks of distribution executive personnel continued this week with some pretty important switches, resignations, replacements, and with signs that still others are in the offing.

Tom Connors resigned as Canadian and eastern and southern sales manager of Metro Goldwyn-Mayer to become personal assistant to Sidney R. Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox. There was speculation that Herman Wobber might retire as Fox sales manager, in which event Mr. Conners would presumably take over those duties.

Carl Leserman became sales manager for United Artists on Tuesday.

RKO board directors were refabricating that company's policies and procedure, under the full authority of George J. Schaefer, president, with indications that there would be changes in corporate personnel, and, possibly, in that of the Hollywood studio. Mr. Schaefer arrived at the Hollywood studio to talk with Floyd Odlum.

Cresson Smith resigned as western sales manager for RKO to join the United Artists sales division.

W. E. Branson succeeded Cresson Smith at RKO.

Haskell Masters resigned as western division manager for United Artists to join the Odeon Circuit and Empire Universal Films in Canada.

Ben Washer on Monday becomes eastern publicity and advertising director for Samuel Goldwyn, succeeding Lynn Farnol, who lately has been handling the Goldwyn eastern account through his publicity agency.

D. J. McNerney resigned as United Artists San Francisco manager, and David Griesdorf resigned as Los Angeles manager.

Samuel Goldwyn and David Selznick reportedly were headed for conversations which might return Mr. Goldwyn to United Artists producing ranks.

At Warners, Norman J. Ayers and Harry Seed were appointed district managers.

William Horan and F. D. Moore became new Warner branch managers.

Budd Rogers has become eastern representative of Charles Feldman Productions, releasing through Universal.

The new re-moulding of top executive management commenced three weeks ago when Gradwell Sears, resigned as Warner Brothers general manager of distribution, accompanied by Carl Leserman, his assistant, to be succeeded by Joseph Bernhard, who took on added duties of Warner management, and by Benjamin Kalmenson, as Warner sales manager. Several other changes and advancements occurred as a result.

Last week, Mr. Sears arrived at United Artists, as vice-president and head of distribution, with Mr. Leserman, becoming, at mid-week, Mr. Sears' sales manager. Also, last week, Edward Raftery was named U. A. president; Arthur W. Kelly, vice president and chairman of the finance committee; Laudy Lawrence, vice president and executive co-ordinator; George Bagnall, head of the production committee.

Tom Connors, until this week Eastern, Southern, and Canadian sales manager for MGM, is going to Twentieth Century-Fox as personal assistant to Sidney R. Kent, its president, on a five-year contract, Mr. Kent announced Tuesday in New York. Mr. Connors takes over in a few weeks and will make a trip to the coast with Mr. Kent January 1st.

By Staff Photographer

CARL LESERMAN, former assistant sales manager at Warners, now general sales manager at United Artists.

This became known to the New York film industry Tuesday, which at the same time knew, from acquaintance with the personalities involved, that Mr. Connors presumably had the consent of Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's.

It was said by informed industry observers in New York that Mr. Connors' arrival at Twentieth Century-Fox would not produce an immediate change in the sales organization of that company. Herman Wobber is still vice-president in charge of distribution.

William F. Rodgers, MGM's vice-president in charge of sales, said in Hollywood Monday he had "nothing to announce" about a successor to Mr. Connors.

He and Mr. Schenck are in the production center for studio conferences on new product and its release dates.

Although the report was that Mr. Connor's berth at Fox would not result in immediate changes, there were subsequent rumors Mr. Wobber had asked release from his distribution post, to return to San Francisco, his home, perhaps as western district manager. Mr. Wobber maintains his family there. The western district managership has been vacant since Mr. Wobber left it to become sales head of the company, in 1938, following John Clark's death.

Mr. Connors' duties will not all be in distribution but will cover other departments as well, Mr. Kent said, adding:

"This move is in no wise a move to appoint a successor to Herman Wobber. Mr. Wobber will remain just as long as he desires to do so. I have made this appointment to give the sales and other departments more help and of a kind that I have been unable to give myself lately. This move will in no way change the company's policy of promotion from within the ranks, which both Mr. Connors and I agree on."

Mr. Connors is a New York City native, a graduate of its Commerce High School, and Manhattan College. After being a salesman for cotton goods, and steel products, he entered the film industry in 1913 as Pathe salesman, becoming one later for MGM. He had been with MGM for 25 years.

He became New York assistant branch manager, then branch manager; 1924 saw him assistant general sales manager; 1925, southern sales manager; 1933, Canadian sales manager. He then assumed both those posts; and, in 1935, became Eastern sales manager in addition.

RKO Policy Reorganization May Be Disclosed Shortly

George Schaefer, RKO president, left New York for the studio Monday night, after the company's full board of directors assembled at New York headquarters that afternoon to hear a report on policy changes, from a subcommittee. What occurred was not disclosed. It was thought the board took no action on the subcommittee's recommendations, but that it might at its next meeting, December 5th.

Conjecture has the subcommittee recommending dissolution of the executive committee, a reduction of directors, realignment of their duties and of the functions of the whole board, and changes in the studio's executive personnel. All change would be under the full authority of Mr. Schaefer, if made, it was understood. Joseph Breen is expected to remain in charge of production.

Additionally, the board was said to have offered Mr. Schaefer a new contract. Whether it was accepted, signed, altered, delayed, was not disclosed at mid-week. Mr. Schaefer was reported saying he expected to remain with RKO.

Conjecture had Richard C. Patterson, chairman of the board, more prominent in the reported new alignment; also, N. Peter Rathvon, chairman of the executive committee, given new duties.

From Hollywood came the report that James R. McDonough, studio executive, was resigning.

Mr. Schaefer's reported assertion he would remain with RKO was coupled with others: that there would be no reorganization of direc-

Gradwell L. Sears, vice-president of United Artists in charge of distribution, announced Tuesday the appointment of Carl Leserman as general sales manager of the company. Mr. Leserman assumed his new post immediately.

Mr. Leserman's career in pictures goes back 20 years, his most recent association being with tors, or of executives.

Warner-Vitagraph, as assistant general sales manager and vice-president.

Mr. Sears said it was his first official act with United Artists.

Smith Leaves RKO, Branson Succeeds

On Monday, Cresson Smith left RKO to join the United Artists distribution division and he was succeeded on Tuesday as western sales manager by W. E. Branson, who has been RKO's midwestern district manager.

Mr. Branson's new territory includes 14 exchanges headed by four district managers. The midwestern district comprises Chicago, J. C. Osserman, branch manager; Kansas City, T. B. Thompson, manager; Milwaukee, A. N. Schmitz, manager; and St. Louis, R. V. Nolan, manager. In the Prairie district, headed by L. E. Goldhammer, are Des Moines, Lou Elman, manager; Minneapolis, C. J. Dressell, manager; Omaha, C. W. Allen, manager; and Sioux Falls, S. W. Fitch, manager.

In the Rocky Mountain district, of which H. G. Fuller is district chief, are Denver, B. J. McCarthy, manager, and Salt Lake City, L. S. Gruenberg, manager. The western district, of which J. H. MacIntyre is manager, comprises Los Angeles, H. C. Cohen, manager; Portland, M. E. Cory, manager; San Francisco, N. P. Jacobs, manager, and Seattle, E. A. Lamb, manager.

Mr. Branson, who is a graduate of the University of Nebraska, where he was a football star, began his film career in the midwest, and some time after being promoted to the home office of the old Pathe company, became branch manager at Chicago. He was transferred to RKO Radio in the same position when that company took over Pathe, in 1931, and in April of 1932 Ned E. Depinet named him midwestern district manager.

Ned E. Depinet announced further promotions from within the RKO Radio sales ranks following the advancement of Mr. Branson. Jack Osserman, Chicago branch chief, moves up to the district post held by Mr. Branson and sales manager Sam Gorelick of the Chicago office becomes branch manager.

Emmet Cashman has been promoted to assistant to William Dahler, in charge of sales approval for the eastern division, by RKO.

Masters Leaves UA To Head Odeon Chain

Haskell Masters resigned his United Artists Western and Canadian sales managerships last week, to head the newly formed Odeon Circuit, of Canada, under the supervision of Paul and N. L. Nathanson. He is officially the circuit's vice-president, and general manager; and has also become president and general manager of Empire Universal Films of Canada, the Nathanson distributing company.

Mr. Masters had been with UA 22 years. He was born in Boston, entered the industry in 1915. His headquarters had been at the UA New York office. His new home is Toronto.

The Odeon circuit comprises approximately 85 theatres. Empire Universal Films distributes most of the English films shown in Canada.

UA executives tendered a farewell luncheon to the new Odeon chief Friday, November 21st, at Toots Shor's Restaurant, New York.

More Promotions Made By Warner Brothers

"In a further move to increase field efficiency to a maximum and speed up contract deals," Ben Kalmenson, Warner general sales manager, on Tuesday named Norman J. Ayers and Harry Seed as district managers and created a new mid-Atlantic district which will be headed by Robert Smeltzer. All promotions were from within the ranks of Warner field forces.

Mr. Ayers becomes eastern district manager with supervision over Boston, New Haven, Albany and Buffalo. He will make his headquarters in Boston.

Mr. Seed becomes central district manager, with headquarters in Pittsburgh. He will have supervision over Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit. Mr. Smeltzer, who had been central district manager, will have supervision over the Washington and Philadelphia offices with headquarters in Washington.

William Horan takes over the Boston branch as manager, a post vacated by Mr. Ayers and F. D. Moore becomes the new Pittsburgh branch head in place of Mr. Seed. Mr. Horan has been a salesman with the Boston branch for some years, and Mr. Moore has been a salesman with the Pittsburgh branch.

Budd Rogers Joins Feldman Productions

Budd Rogers has been appointed eastern representative of the Charles K. Feldman Group Productions, it was announced Tuesday in New York. Mr. Rogers is currently supervising foreign distribution of Frank Capra Productions in collaboration with Warner Brothers.

By special arrangement with Group Productions, Universal has produced and will release on January 16th "Paris Calling," a story of present-day France under totalitarian control. The picture is headed by a cast including Elizabeth Bergner, Randolph Scott and Basil Rathbone.

Mayer Succeeds Doyle For Fox in Far East

Charles E. Mayer, now manager for Twentieth Century-Fox in the Dutch East Indies, with headquarters in Batavia, was named supervisor for the Far East, covering Japan, China, Philippine Islands, Federated Malay States and the Dutch Indies, it was announced on Wednesday by 20th Century-Fox, in New York. Mr. Mayer, now in New York, will leave next week for his territory, and will be headquartered at Manila. He replaces A. G. Doyle who had supervision of Japan, China and the Philippines. Mr. Doyle will return to the home office soon for a new assignment. Successor to Mr. Mayer in Batavia has not yet been announced.

MORE RESPONSIBILITY FOR CIRCUIT MANAGERS

Responsibility for proper booking, and run, of Warner pictures in Warner theatres, will henceforth be that of the circuit's zone manager, rather than that of the distributing company's exchange manager, under a policy delineated last week in New York by Joseph Bernhard. Mr. Bernhard, general manager of the circuit, three weeks ago became in addition general manager of the distributing company, after resignation of Gradwell Sears. The new policy is expected to give exchange managers more time for "outside" customers. Mr. Bernhard left New York Monday for a tour of exchanges.

Connecticut Unit Sets Questionnaire

Allied Treatre Owners of Connecticut met on Monday at a luncheon meeting at the Hofbrau Haus in New Haven. Members voted to meet each Monday hereafter, instead of biweekly. Dr. J. B. Fishman presided. Maxwell A. Alderman, new executive secretary, reported that the poll on the consent decree had been launched and that each independent exhibitor in the state would receive a questionnaire on various aspects of the decree, which was to be filled in, anonymously if preferred, and returned at the earliest possible time.

The queries put to exhibitors are:

1. Are you for or against the consent decree?

2. What companies' 1941-42 product have you bought to date?

3. Indicate the order of increased film rental demands over 1940-41 of the various companies.

4. What company or companies have refused to lease their later blocks of pictures unless the earlier blocks were leased?

5. What company or companies have refused to lease their features unless given a deal for their short subjects and newsreels?

6. Remarks concerning the consent decree in general.

ATO of Connecticut hopes that results of the poll will give a true picture of the actual operation of selling methods under the decree in that state and reactions of independent exhibitors to the decree.

MPTO of Virginia

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia will hold its annual mid-winter convention at the John Marshall Hotel in Richmond on January 29th. Allen Sparrow heads the arrangements committee. Governor-elect Colgate Darden and members of the new General Assembly of Virginia have been invited to attend the annual banquet of the organization.

Succeeding the late L. C. Hehl, Louis Ansell, head of Ansell Brothers Circuit of St. Louis, is acting secretary-treasurer of the MPTO of that city, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, it was reported last week.

Boston film men who are planning to attend the first annual motion picture dinner-dance of Connecticut MPTO on December 9th, at the Hotel Taft, are Louis M. Gordon and Arthur H. Lockwood, circuit exhibitors, and I. H. Rogovin, manager of the Boston Columbia exchange, it was reported this week by George H. Wilkinson, Jr., chairman of the organization and Herman M. Levy, seceretary. They announced that advance reservations are coming in from Boston and all parts of Connecticut from those in exhibition, distribution and allied-industry fields. MPTO of Connecticut hopes that the success of the affair will establish it as an annual event.

Charles Olive was elected president of the Independent Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia, last Thursday, in Washington. Purpose of the new organization which will be an unaffiliated exhibitor unit with members of both Allied and MPTO of Washington active in the new setup, is to handle problems of municipal regulations. A four-point program was established embracing matters pertaining to fire and police regulations regarding theatres; information service for members; united dealings with distributors in Washington and united dealings with employe unions.

Other officers are Abe Tolkins, vice-president; Ashley Abendschein, secretary, and Lloyd Wineland, treasurer. Charter members of the ITO include Harry Bachman, Louis Bernheimer, Frank Storty, Sidney Lust, Ike Notes, Henry Hiser, Abe Lichtman, Samuel Ashman, Fred S. Kogod, E. Lawrence Phillips, Urie Hollingsworth and Don Freeman. Samuel S. Boyd is general counsel.

PRINTED IN U. S.

SCREEN IS 14TH INDUSTRY IN SIZE BUT 2ND IN SALARIES PAID—SEC

Rosten Sociological Study Uses U. S. Figures, Questionnaire Answers in Complete Survey of Hollywood at Work, Play

by MARTIN QUIGLEY, JR.

Hollywood, known everywhere through the efforts of the studio publicity departments, fan magazine writers and newspaper columnists and correspondents, now appears as the subject of a three-year serious study made by Dr. Leo C. Rosten with the help of the Carnegie and Rockefeller Foundations, 11 assistants, and thousands of questionnaires.

The first results of the extensive sociological dissection of Hollywood and its first citizens are printed in "Hollywood, the Movie Colony—The Movie Makers," published Friday, November 28th, by Harcourt, Brace and Company. The book is priced at $4.00 and comprises over 400 pages.

There are indications that the book is but the first of several on the motion picture industry planned by Dr. Rosten. This volume is the most exhaustive study of Hollywood life, manners and customs published to date. The scientific method is carried out to tenths of a decimal point for such matters as divorce rates, salary ratios and fan mail.

The book will find its chief audience among intelligent theatre-goers and students and critics of the motion picture, but it may also be a best-seller in Hollywood, even though the colony's inhabitants may not agree with everything they read. Exhibitors will find the answers to many questions his patrons, especially students and teachers and the local film critics, ask about the motion picture production center.

The what and why of Hollywood are explained by Dr. Rosten perhaps better than has been done previously for the general public or the social scientists.

University Background

Dr. Rosten brought to his motion picture research work a rather long educational background and a well known pen-name, Leonard Q. Ross, under which he wrote "The Education of H*Y*M*A*N K*A*P*L*A*N" and "The Strangest Place." His other works are "The Washington Correspondents," "Dateline: Europe" and "Adventures in Washington." Also he has contributed to such varied magazines as "The New Yorker," "Harpers," "Public Opinion Quarterly" and "The American Mercury."

In his university training at Chicago and the London School of Economics and Political Science he learned the methods of scientific social research and seems to have acquired a great thirst for facts, which has found expression in numerous figures and percentages on many subjects in his book on Hollywood.

In 1939 Dr. Rosten was named director of the Motion Picture Research Project. In 1937, according to his biography, he was a writer for motion pictures. He is also a consultant to the American Film Center and a special consultant to the Division of Information of the Office of Emergency Management and the National Defense Advisory Commission. He was born in Lodz, Poland, April 11, 1908, whence he was brought to the United States at the age of two.

His book shows something of the conflict between a social researcher and a good journalistic writer with a sense of humor. Some parts of his "Hollywood" are rather dull sociological and statistical studies, based on figures which the author admits at times are not conclusive. But other parts of the book, in fact the bulk of it, are written with objective approach, reporting facts in an interesting manner.

The book is summed up by Dr. Rosten in his own preface, "The book is neither amused nor indignant. It does not offer deceptively simple answers to extremely complicated problems . . . this book is primarily concerned with putting Hollywood under the microscopes of social science. For Hollywood is an index of our society and our culture."

Most of the volume, the author tells us, is based on the answers to 4,200 questionnaires sent to the various categories in Hollywood, plus hundreds of personal interviews, with documentary material supplied by the major studios and the personal knowledge gained by the writer during his three-year stay in Hollywood. In addition to the author, two sociologists, an economist, a personnel expert, a statistician, a translator and others, worked over the material, the reader is informed.

Stars' fan mail, as a sample, received special attention from Dr. Rosten. Following an extensive test-sampling the following figures were reached:

Sex of fan writers
Female	89%
Male	10%
Unknown	1%
Approximate age of fan writers
Under 13 years	53%
13 to 21	43%
Over 21	4%
Geographical distribution
United States	87.5%
Foreign	12.5%

It is also reported that 66.8% use postcards and 33.2% letters for their fan letters.

The present volume is restricted to a study of Hollywood as a place of work and play for the principals in motion picture production—the producers, actors, directors and writers. A study of the industry as a business, motion picture labor relations, the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and the Production Code have been reserved for consideration in a later book.

One chief criticism is that the conclusions found from a study of the thousands of questionnaires could have been summarized in a few pages instead of spread over parts of perhaps a hundred pages in the form of various breakdowns of the replies into how many percent and tenths of a percent do such and such. Again, some readers will be disappointed that there are no treatments of individual personalities.

Results Generalized

Although salary information and similar data are connected with particular names, most of the results published are generalized, based on anonymously answered questionnaires. This may be all right for sociologists but others would be more interested in knowing just who was saying what. Perhaps there was no possibility of doing that.

In addition to the facts and figures found by Dr. Rosten and his staff, the volume also contains many other figures in a handy form, such as those of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Census Bureau on the motion picture industry. Emphasis is given to the fact that, according to SEC data, the motion picture industry is only the 14th in the country by volume and the 11th by total assets although it gives executives the second highest percentage of net profits or of total sales, being exceeded only by department stores in one list and the cement industry in the other.

Introducing his study Dr. Rosten wrote, "There is nothing particularly screwy about

THE motion picture industry is 14th in the country by volume of business and 11th by total assets, according to figures assembled from Government surveys by Dr. Leo C. Rosten.

Rank by volume of 1937 business:

1.	Oil Refiners	$4,122,155,556
2.	Steel	2,847,988,476
3.	Meat Packing	2,719,084,404
4.	Automobiles (excluding Ford)	2,604,667,667
5.	Mail Order Houses	1,038,598,068
6.	Chain—Grocery, Food	1,028,195,100
7.	Department Stores	1,003,406,953
8.	Cigarette Manufacturers	938,922,674
9.	Chemicals and Fertilizers	934,084,497
10.	Tires and Rubber Products	784,723,113
11.	Chain—Variety	782,866,328
12.	Agricultural Machinery	598,196,252
13.	Containers and Closures	455,371,874
14.	Motion Picture (includes theatre and distribution operations of majors, excluding United Artists)	406,855,095

Rank by total assets:

1.	Oil Refiners	$6,880,858,481
2.	Steel	4,181,765,978
3.	Chemicals and Fertilizers	1,688,231,343
4.	Automobiles	1,525,435,062
5.	Meat Packers	825,807,223
6.	Cigarette Manufacturers	734,231,460
7.	Tires and Rubber Products	724,271,752
8.	Agricultural Machinery	691,658,262
9.	Department Stores	662,421,723
10.	Mail Order Houses	544,720,716
11.	Motion Picture	529,950,444

However, motion picture executives are paid, both as a percentage of the net profits and as a percentage of the total volume of sales, on a scale only second to the top. Figures are for 1937 also.

Executive remuneration as a percentage of net profits:

1.	Department Stores	32.10%
2.	Motion Pictures	18.96%
3.	Meat Packers	16.11%
4.	Chain—Groceries, Food	15.58%
5.	Cement	14.18%

The automobile industry is 18th on the list, paying 1.52% to the executives.

Executive remuneration as a percentage of total volume of sales:

1.	Cement	1.61%
2.	Motion Pictures	1.59%
3.	Office Machinery	1.22%
4.	Department Stores	.81%
5.	Chemicals and Fertilizers	.75%

In this classification the automobile industry ranks 16th with a payment of .14%. The meat packers rank 18th with a .11% figure.

Dr. Rosten's Book Studies Sociology Of Hollywood

Hollywood; or, better, Hollywood is no more screwy than other and less conspicuous parts of our society." He expressed his general conclusion in these words, "the aberrations of our culture are simply more vivid, more conspicuous, and more dramatic in Hollywood than in New Bedford or Palo Alto. A study of Hollywood can cast the profile of American society into sharper relief.

"If we compare the motion picture industry to other businesses at a comparable time in their sudden heyday, if we compare the nouveaux riches of the movie colony to the nouveaux riches of banking, railroads, or real estate, we discover startling and conclusive parallels between the practices of Hollywood and New York, between the mores of Bel-Air and Oyster Bay, between the chalets of Santa Monica and the mansions of Newport," he said. And this is, in part, what the volume does.

"The Hollywood Legend" is studied in the first chapter; next "The Movie Colony" is analyzed and discussed. The book does not consider the regular movie workers who lead the same kind of lives as is common to others of their class anywhere in America, according to the author.

$75,000 a Year and Up

Dr. Rosten confines his attention to those who make $75,000 a year or more, the "movie makers", according to his definition which he admits is arbitrary but a convenient standard. The $75,000-a-year-plus group is studied first as a colony and then in its chief divisions—producer, actor, director and writer.

"The Movie Elite" who make "The Big Money" are put under the microscope. Everyone in Hollywood will not be pleased by some of the frank statements in this section.

Love, marriage, divorce and kindred subjects receive a whole chapter, "Eros in Hollywood". The general conclusions are that things were not as bad as they were pictured; are not as bad as they used to be, and really are not bad as compared with the rest of the country, especially in places and times of similar new wealth.

Here a lot of "probable" figures on marriage and divorce are printed. Dr. Rosten explained that he had difficulty in getting accurate information because the Screen Writers Guild censored his question on number of marriages and the Screen Actors Guild did not allow him to include such a question on the form sent to actors and actresses.

Political History Studied

Hollywood came of age politically and began to use the screen for such purposes at the time of the Sinclair and EPIC campaign in 1934 when "the producers' main barrage was a series of fabricated newsreels of appalling crudity and immense effectiveness," according to Dr. Rosten. Other and later matters are also considered in the section on "Politics Over Hollywood".

Social activities are discussed in "The Fight for Prestige" and "The Night Life of the Gods". Dr Rosten claims, "The monetary complements of prestige are exact, obvious, and inescapable" in Hollywood. He also says the night life does not compare with the legend about it or with that of some of the very wealthy of the East, especially a few decades ago. A similar conclusion is reached about the homes and estates of the Hollywood elite.

Hollywood's interest in horses, horse races, gifts and superstitions receive special attention.

In the second part of the book, "The Movie Makers" the four chief classes are examined and the duties and activities of each explained together with factual information on age ranges, salaries, experience and other topics. Statistics from the replies to the questionnaires are presented at length. Conclusions include: producers are better educated than the public thinks; the writers, as a class, are the best educated and youngest in Hollywood; only a relatively small percentage of the producers are foreign-born.

Other conclusions are rather well-known, not to say obvious: not all the producers, writers, directors and actors make big salaries; the average and median is not so high; actors are older and successful longer than actresses, as a class; writers and directors regularly blame the ills and defects of the motion pictures on producers; most members of the 'elite' groups have had long experience in Hollywood.

Section on Writers

In each case the descriptions of the activities and the nature of each class is very good, especially the section on writers. Therein many motion picture writers will probably discover the reasons why they are not satisfied with their work as screen writers and why they never will be.

There is a brief section on "The Long Arm of Hollywood", showing the worldwide influence of the motion picture but containing little that is new.

The volume is concluded with a number of appendices and complete notes, supplementing the footnotes which appear fairly regularly throughout. Appendices consider earnings, birth places, marriages and divorces, fan mail comments and preferences of movie makers, their dogs, yachts, resorts and other subjects.

The International Motion Picture Almanac, according to the notes, was the chief source of information about the birthplaces of the 'movie makers', as well as an important source for names and other biographical and general information.

DE VRY, PORTER ON SMPE HONOR ROLL

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers has added the names of the late Herman A. DeVry and Edwin S. Porter to its honor roll, perpetuating the names of distinguished leaders in the motion picture engineering field, and which includes those of Thomas A. Edison and George Eastman. Mr. DeVry was an early Chicago film equipment manufacturer, inventor and designer. Mr. Porter pioneered in the projection field and was responsible for a number of early patents on projection machines.

The SMPE honor roll, international in scope, was inaugurated in 1931. Mr. DeVry's name is tenth on the roll, the first Chicagoan and midwesterner and the fifth American.

Chaplin Announces Bluebeard Film

Charles Chaplin's next picture, it was learned from Hollywood at mid-week, will be a comedy adaptation of the Bluebeard theme. According to a Chaplin representative, the chief character for the film was suggested by the career of the French criminal, Henri Landru. The comedian has begun work on the scenario under the tentative title, "Lady Killer." Production is expected to start late next Spring.

First Industry Contribution to Federation $28,000

Contributions totalling $28,000 have been subscribed in the first days of the Amusement Division drive for the New York and Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, Major Albert Warner reported at a division luncheon at the Hotel Astor Tuesday. Major Warner is co-chairman with David Bernstein.

Major Warner at the luncheon named drive committees for each of the principal home offices and branches of the industry. In most instances the men who served last year were renamed.

Assisting in the organization of the industry drive are Barney Balaban, Nate Blumberg, Jack Cohn, and George Schaefer, co-chairman. Leopold Friedman and William Klein are members of the Federation's city-wide campaign committee.

The committee appointments were:

EXHIBITORS CHALLENGE AN APPEALS BOARD DECISION FOR FIRST TIME

Hayes and Sher, Attorneys for Washington Apex, Contend 'Supreme Court' Did Not Give Attention to Clearance

The AAA's Appeals Board, supreme court of motion picture arbitration this week was challenged for the first time in a decision rendered, independents questioning the board in its Washington Apex ruling of November 14th.

The Appeal Board on Monday admitted that it had granted the petition to reopen proceedings of the K-B Amusement Company, operating the Apex theatre, Washington, D. C. The request was filed on November 18th by James V. Hayes and Robert E. Sher, former Department of Justice lawyers, and now counsel for Fred Kogod and Max Burka, owners of the Apex. The Appeal Board set November 27th as the date for filing briefs on the reopening.

The action was taken by the Washington theatre under Section XVIII of the consent decree which provides that "within ten days after the decision of the Appeal Board has been filed with the clerk of the tribunal the Appeal Board may reopen the proceeding for the purpose of correcting inadvertent errors."

Settlement Reported

Late Wednesday a settlement between the Apex and Warners and MGM was reported. All parties signed a joint letter asking the Appeal Board to close the case.

Under the terms of the proposed agreement whichever of the Warner houses played a picture first would get a three to five day clearance regardless of the number of days the film was held. The Apex could open a picture one week after its opening in the Warner theatre or five days after completion of the Warner run, whichever came earlier.

A pending appeal was also withdrawn this week, for the first time, when Warners filed a stipulation with the Appeal Board at New York, dropping their appeal of the decision in New York's 12th case, which reduced the clearance of Warner theatres over the West End theatre, Newark, from 14 to seven days. The appeal, based on Section XVII of the decree, asserted that Michael N. Chanalis, arbitrator, had failed to consider circuit affiliation in the award published October 4th.

Withdrawal followed an agreement between Warners and the complainant's attorney on application to certain Warner theatres.

The "supreme court" in its decision in the Apex case failed to take into account the effect on clearance of "preferred playing time" pictures, and the factors of time which constitute reasonable clearance under Section VIII of the decree, according to the petition. It asks that the decision be corrected by fixing a clearance of not more than one to three days after the Calvert and Uptown theatres, or not more than 28 to 30 days after Washington first run.

The Appeal Board ruling, its tenth, on November 19th reversed the decision of Louis M. Denit, arbitrator, who eliminated clearance of the Uptown and Calvert over the Apex. The appeal award set a maximum of five days after the two Warner theatres and said that although car checks showed only two per cent interchange of patronage between the theatres' respective neighborhoods it was sufficient to establish the existence of competition and make the elimination of clearance unjustified. The award was dated November 14th.

The brief to reopen cited the Board's finding that existing seven day clearance was unreasonable and assumed that the five day margin was thus intended to give substantial relief. The Apex asserts that the five days do not give this relief because of distributor provisions that top-bracket, preferred playing time pictures be given Sunday exhibition.

It is the practice of both the Calvert and Uptown to play preferred time pictures from Sunday through Wednesday, the Apex asserted. Under a five day clearance it would have to wait until two weeks after the Uptown or Calvert opening before it could open a preferred time picture on Sunday, the brief said.

Time Limit Argued

Noting that downtown Washington theatres close runs on Wednesdays or Thursdays the brief adds that a further provision that pictures play the Apex 28 to 30 days after first run would also insure pictures to the Apex in the week following the Warner houses.

On the question of time the brief declared, "The question of what time less than seven days would be reasonable was not argued before the arbitrator or before the board. In both tribunals the parties devoted themselves to the question of whether the parties were in competition to an extent sufficient to warrant any clearance." Although not agreeing with the Appeal Board ruling that there should be some clearance the brief said it must be accepted. What clearance is reasonable is undetermined, it asserted, however.

It suggested that the Appeal Board should have remanded the case to the arbitrator for further consideration of this aspect. One of the defendant distributor's Loew's, Inc., is cited as having suggested this in its original appeal brief, when it asked remanding "for further consideration and the making of an award in conformity with the principles of competition between neighborhood theatres and as to fair competitive areas which have been established by the Appeal Board in the Westway case."

The Apex expressed willingness for a reconsideration by Mr. Denit, the original arbitrator, although it was not expressly sought in the reopening move. The Apex brief explained:

"We are convinced that the board fixed the five day clearance by pure inadvertence. We are unable to reconcile the Board's conclusions that the Apex has been treated unfairly and that the existing clearances are unreasonable and the board's evident desire to grant substantial relief to the Apex with an award that leaves the Apex where it was before it resorted to arbitration, at least in so far as preferred playing time pictures, the real revenue producing pictures, are concerned. We are convinced that, if the question of what clearance less than seven days would be reasonable had been argued by the parties, the board would have fixed either a clearance of not more than one to three days, or a limitation of not more than 28 to 30 days after first run downtown, or both."

AAA Prepares Expansion

In preparation for the expansion of the activities of the 31 tribunals of the motion picture arbitration system into the field of industrial and commercial arbitration on December 1st the American Arbitration Association in the last two weeks has called clerks to the New York office for special instruction. Administrative and budget routine for the film tribunals was also examined. Clerks in western cities will be visited by AAA executives.

J. M. Carney has replaced J. L. Loell as clerk of the Milwaukee office. Mr. Carney is an accountant.

The AAA announces the addition of Roy G. Bostwick, Pittsburgh attorney, to the motion picture arbitrators panel in that city. He is a vice president of the Wilkinsburgh Bank and active in Pittsburgh civic affairs.

St. Louis

Mrs. Mildred Karch, operator of the Ritz theatre, at Rolla, Mo., won a some run victory over the Big Five at St. Louis last week when John J. Nangle, arbitrator ruled that the consenting companies had refused to license her product in accord with Section VI of the decree. His ruling characterized the offers and negotiations of the distributors as "vague, indefinite and unreasonable and calculated to defeat the purposes of Section VI." The case was St. Louis' fifth action and was filed in September. Costs were assessed against the distributors.

The case was regarded as an important precedent as it involved the right of a new theatre to obtain product. The Gasconade Theatre Corporation, operator of the Rolla contested the Ritz complaint.

Chicago

Arbitration proceedings at Chicago between the Portage Theatre Corporation, the five consenting companies and Balaban and Katz were dismissed November 21th by agreement. The action follows the leasing of three of the complainant GCS Circuit's theatres, the Portage, Drake and Admiral, by Balaban and Katz. Costs of the case will be divided between the complainant and respondents. Balaban and Katz were named as interested party in the original complaint. The case was Chicago's

LAWYERS PROMISE LESS CHATTER

The distributors are in "hearty accord" with the arbitration appeal board's recent enjoinder to arbitration lawyers to deliver more evidence and less legal comment at the hearings of film arbitration complaints. Several home office legal chiefs have instructed their staffs to curb orations at arbitration hearings.

Tyree Dillard, MGM arbitration attorney declared he was "delighted" that the Appeal Board had taken notice of the long comment of some counsel. "We have instructed our lawyers to request that only evidence and testimony be inserted in the stenographic record. All argument and comment will be 'off the record,'" he said.

There have been several complaints from branch managers, exhibitors and other witnesses over lengthy cross-examination and testimony at the hearings. "We can't spend eight days on each arbitration case and still go out and sell pictures," one branch manager declared following a recent midwest case.

fourth and had been pending since early July. Mort and Frank Goldberg, operators of the GCS chain announced their withdrawal from exhibition in the Chicago area.

In Chicago's 11th case, clearance action of the Don theatre, Downers Grove, Ill. George Zulas, operating the Westmont in Westmont, Ill., filed a declaration of intervention on November 22nd. Balaban and Katz intervened for the Tivoli theatre on Monday.

The time for filing briefs on motions to dismiss in the Oriental theatre clearance demand has been extended to November 24th and the deadline for replies advanced to December 4th. Complainant has until December 15th to answer. No hearing date in the case, Chicago's sixth, has been set. The Department of Justice, it is reported from Washington is preparing a brief explaining its interpretation of the Chicago availability scale in reference to the consent decree and the precedent established by the Ken theatre Appeal Award.

Drennan J. Slater, an attorney, will arbitrate the ninth Chicago case, the clearance action of the Alcyon theatre, Highland Park. Hearings will start December 5th.

New Haven

The complaint of Joseph Shulman's Plaza Theatre, Windsor, Conn., against the consenting distributors seeking elimination of the Windsor Theatre 30-day clearance, completed its first day of hearing Monday at New Haven before arbitrator George P. Murdock, a Yale professor. Joseph Shulman appeared on his own behalf. Herman M. Levy, for Lampert Theatre of Windsor, Inc., intervenor, Charles Young for 20th Century-Fox, M. Ruffman, for Warners, M. Goldstein, Metro manager, Edward Ruff, manager for Paramount, and Barney Pitkin, manager for RKO testified.

Mr. Shulman asked for presentation of contracts with the distributors, schedules of clearance, of correspondence with home offices with reference to both theatres, availability and playdate records from 1939 and film rental summaries. The Windsor in turn asked for all Plaza contracts with Monogram and Republic and the 1941 Warner contracts.

On objections by defendants and the intervenor to the tardy introduction of an amended complaint, to lack of jurisdiction of the arbitrator, and prematurity under the provisions of Section X of the decree, Mr. Murdock ruled that he would take the matter under advisement, but hear the case under both sections of the decree in the meantime.

George Wanamaker, deputy city controller, at Buffalo, will arbitrate the city's sixth clearance case filed by the Allendale theatre, Buffalo. Hearings open December 3rd.

Final arguments in the fifth Buffalo case, for the Bailey theatre, will be heard on December 2nd by Michael Catalano, arbitrator. Meanwhile he will inspect the theatres involved.

San Francisco

Following eight days of hearing in the clearance complaint of the Piedmont theatre, Oakland, Donovan O. Peters, arbitrator adjourned the case on November 18th to inspect the Oakland theatres involved.

Detroit

Hearings in the Parkside theatre case at Detroit, complaint No. 6, have been continued until December 8th following the presentation of evidence on Wednesday, November 19th. Wilbur H. Brucker, arbitrator, and former governor of Michigan, at the hearing threatened to continue the hearings all night to conclude the presentation of evidence and a lengthy cross-examination by counsel for the complainant of Carl Buermele, general manager of Michigan Cooperative.

Washington

John E. Laskey, attorney and professor of law at Georgetown University, will arbitrate the tenth Washington case, the clearance complaint of the Bayne theatre, Virginia Beach, Va.

Universal's Latin-American Conventions Plans Completed

J. H. Seidelman, Universal vice-president in charge of foreign affairs, left New York on Monday by plane for Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, to preside at two Universal conventions in Latin America.

The first convention will be held at Rio de Janeiro starting December 5, the second at Buenos Aires starting December 13. Latin American Supervisor C. C. Margon now in Brazil will make the arrangements for both conventions. The one in Brazil will be attended also by Al Szekler, General Manager for the territory and by I. A. Bergstein of Rio de Janeiro, C. C. Gemino of Bahia, A. Russ of Bello Horizonte, J. Cardoso Filho of Campos, L. Holzmann of Curityba, I. Schmidt of Porte Alegre, E. De Medeiros of Recife, Marcel Schwab of Ribeirao Preto, E. Trucco of Sao Paulo, and N. Costa of Soledade.

The delegation in Argentina will be headed by Manager Monroe Isen and will include Enrique Pardo of Buenos Aires, H. Coletti of Bahia Blanca, German Lipesker of Concordia, A. Pettenazza of Cordoba, H. Pricolo of Mendoza, E. Elorz of Rosario de Santa Fe and David Zuritz of Santa Fe.

"Stevens Scholarship"

MGM has announced a "Rise Stevens Scholarship" to be aarded some New York high school senior with a promising voice. There will be auditions in conjunction with radio station WHN. The scholarship is named after Rise Stevens, of the Metropolitan Opera, star of the picture company's "The Chocolate Soldier."

"Land of Liberty" Nets $50,000 for Red Cross

Will H. Hays, on behalf of a special committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, has sent a check for $50,000 to the American Red Cross for war emergency welfare work, Chairman Norman H. Davis announced this week.

The check represented part of the proceeds from the distribution of the patriotic and historical motion picture "Land of Liberty," originally produced by the entire motion picture industry for the World's Fairs in New York and San Francisco. On popular demand the film was later distributed to theatres throughout the country under a plan whereby the net proceeds from the distribution would be devoted to war emergency welfare work.

Mr. Hays presented the check on behalf of the board of directors acting as a special committee of the MPPDA. The committee consists of the following members:

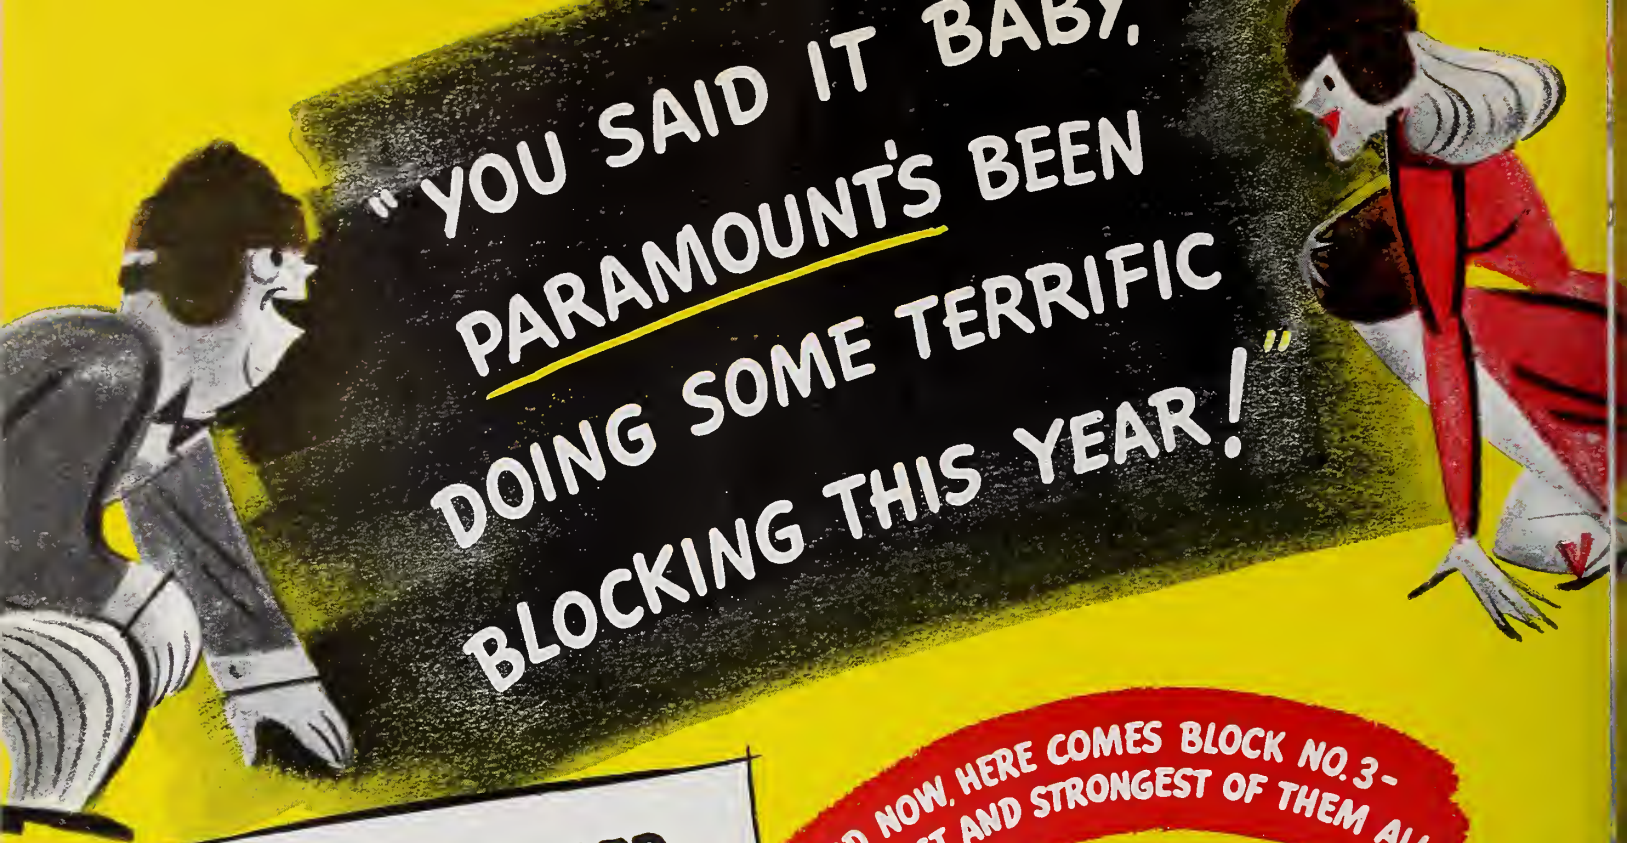
Barney Balaban, Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Nate J. Blumberg, Universal Pictures Company, Inc.; Jack Cohn, Columbia Pictures Corporation; Cecil B. DeMille, Cecil BB. DeMille Productions, Inc.; E. W. Hammons, Educational Films Corp. of America; E. B. Hatrick, Cosmopolitan Corporation; Arthur W. Kelly, United Artists Corporation; Sidney R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp.; Hal E. Roach, Hal Roach Studios, Inc.; George J. Schaefer, RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.; Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew's, Inc.; Walter F. Wanger, Walter Wanger Productions, Inc., and Harry M. Warner, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

USO Contributions

The motion picture theatres accounted for the largest single contribution to the United Service Organization's drive, Thomas E. Dewey, national chairman of the drive, revealed in a letter to Joseph Bernhard, chairman of the theatre drive committee.

Acknowledging receipt of the theatre's drive check for $943,684, Mr. Dewey wrote: "This is a grand result. The committee rendered a very great service to the USO and, I believe, the nation."

The theatrical industry's annual offering in behalf of Jewish charities was held at Madison Square Garden in New York Wednesday night, with Nathan Strauss, Administrator of the United States Housing Authority, presiding. Proceeds from the affair will go to the United Jewish Appeal and the Joint Distribution Committee.



Admission Taxes Take Turn Upward

Federal admission tax collections turned upward another $367,325 in October, totaling $6,812,275 as compared with $6,444,950 in September and $6,628,430 in October, 1940, it was disclosed by the monthly report of the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau issued over the week-end at Washington.

The October collections were the last to be reported under the 20-cent exemption—the current nine-cent exemption going into effect October 1st, to be reflected first in the figures for November—and bureau records show that the revenue under that exemption for the 15 months it was in effect totaled $96,661,301 compared with $26,635,327 for the preceding 15 months, when the 40-cent exemption applied, an increased revenue to the Government of almost exactly $70,000,000 for the period.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

FLASH: from Luis Celis, our correspondent in Mexico City: "Juan Blanch, male lead in 'La Virgen de Media Noche' (Midnight Virgin) which is being produced here, was shot in the head during the filming of a night club scene. Another player had used his own private pistol and had neglected to put in fake studio bullets. "The scene was not spoiled by the mishap," reported Senor Celis.

Twentieth Century-Fox put in a claim for Victor Mature to the extra special distinction of being the first person to lose a pair of pants from a stroke of artificial lightning.

Mature was working the other day at the Fox studio in California in "Song of the Islands," playing a scene with Betty Grable. They were slushing through a tropical rainstorm. The 'rain' was provided by the usual sound stage overhead sprinklers and the accompanying 'lightning' came from electrically-charged clusters of carbon points which furnished brilliant sparks shooting between them.

Says Fox: "Mature stood too near the 'lightning machine.' But he got out of his pants quickly enough, although the pants were burned through"???

Three happy new faces based on the good old vegetable carrot have been created by Walt Disney for the British Ministry of Foods.

British Press Service wire-photoed the drawings via RCA wireless the other night direct to London for immediate adoption into an extensive poster program which is to cover the civilian populace as well as the R.A.F.

The Ministry made the special request to Disney in Hollywood. The drive is to urge the British public and Air Corps to eat more carrots for improving night vision. Heavier carrot consumption, it was said, creates keener sight for blackouts, as well as on actual flight service.

The new characters are Doctor Carrot, Clara Carrot and Carroty Carrot.

Any promotional resemblance to the current showing of "They Died with Their Boots On" is purely coincidental, but Warner publicity does explain in detail how Errol Flynn, star of that movie production, was inducted the other day into the Sioux Indian Tribe, going through a long ritual in New York, even to the drawing of Flynn's 'white blood' and the infusion of Sioux Indian blood into his veins.

Patents of the week included one for a new Eastman Kodak process of improving motion picture sound tracks by using gold instead of silver and one for Mr. Raymond Kennedy's for an electrically operated calf-weaning device operated by electric batteries which gives the calf a shock should it attempt to suckle milk from its mother.

It is not disclosed by correspondent F. K. Haskell, in Portland, Oregon, whether a certain farmer up that way uses music, as others do, to obtain more milk from his cows, but Mr. Haskell does report how the farmer, J. L. Wolf, got an extra $2,703 from the United States Government because of his contention that if the dairy herd was moved —the Government wanted the property for soldiers' camps—the moving would make the cows fretful and they would produce less milk.

So the Government paid Mr. Wolf $16,500 for 270 acres near Camp Lewis, instead of $13,797, when the farmer convinced Uncle Sam that his cows would lose that contented expression if sent to other pastures.

The morning mail brought to the desk of A. P. Talley, manager of the three Sparks Circuit theatres in Tallahassee, Florida, an official envelope from the Tallahassee post office containing a note that "The enclosed piece of mail was received at this office with a number of other letters damaged by fire. We have not yet determined where or under what conditions the fire occurred."

Further inspection by Mr. Talley disclosed that the 'enclosure' was a very badly scorched and burnt letter. But there was enough readable matter left to show that it was from RKO Radio Pictures and someone had "just returned from the studio. It was worth the 3,000-mile trip just to see Samuel Goldwyn's new production of 'Ball of Fire,'" they said.

There seemed no use to look further for the source of the "mysterious' fire.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Halsey Raines, demon of research, bridge, football pools and primitive Harlem, working out on the Howard Dietz staff at the company's home office in New York, is now engaged in a sort of 'survey' of the screen's Tarzans—Tarzans of the screen being one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's favorite subjects.

Mr. Raines could start his story back in that wintry bleakness of February, 1918, when one of the independent producer-distributors of the day opened "Tarzan of the Apes" on Broadway, accompanied by the most boisterous billing ballyhoo of that day, machinations of the late Harry Reichenbach, who maneuvered a 'most ferocious' lion into the Hotel Algonquin New York apartment of the screen's first Tarzan—Mr. St. Elmo Lincoln, who later became just plain Elmo Lincoln.

The press learned through the most 'subtle' channels about Mr. Tarzan Lincoln and his mancater, who turned out to be a poor old broken-down beast without a tooth in his head. He had been hoisted up the front of the Algonquin in a boarded upright piano box, a hoisting which got by the hotel management under the understanding that Mr. Lincoln always carried his own piano box with him.

Since that first "Tarzan of the Apes," we have had on the screen a "Tarzan and the Green Goddess," "Tarzan and the Golden Lion," "Tarzan Escapes," "Tarzan Finds a Son!", "Tarzan, the Ape Man" (no relation to "Tarzan of the Apes"), "Tarzan the Fearless," "Tarzan's Revenge," "Tarzan and His Mate," "Tarzan the Mighty," Tarzan this and Tarzan that.

Tarzans have run in all types, from the hairy-chested Tarzan of Elmo Lincoln to the vaseline-haired, streamlined Tarzan of Johnny Weismuller, who was Tarzan more times than any other Tarzan, thanks to the fiery Mexican-isms of his former mate, the fiery Lupe Velez.

A few oldsters who heard the baronial voice of Mr. Sarnoff remembered 30 years ago when the same Sarnoff made a name as the first wireless operator to catch the then primitive wireless signals of another liner, the Titanic, as she went down at sea from a foggy-night crash with a mountainous iceberg, taking that brand new sea hotel to the bottom and 1,517 persons with it.

The wedding breakfast was contributed by a home town restaurant in Garfield, N. J. and the wedding clothes, flowers, music and furniture were also all donated. The movies' David Selznick provided the honeymoon costs and $200 in cash (for the movie rights to the love story), plus a chest of silver.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Goldwyn Makes Gossip; Gossips Switch Places

ESTEEMED EDITOR:

It would seem there may be more than meets the eye in the timing of Samuel Goldwyn's visit to your city.

Off for there on Monday, the producer of "Ball of Fire" was officially reported as taking with him a print of that film "for showing to RKO home office executives." 'Tis but a fortnight since RKO home office executives flew here to view "Ball of Fire" in exhibition before a theatre audience and, after some confusion which necessitated a switching of cinemas, did so.

To be sure, the fact that the Goldwyn-RKO contract expires upon delivery and distribution of "Ball of Fire" suggests that conferences anent the handling of future Goldwyn pictures are in order, but it is not in evidence that the producer must confine his conferrings in this connection to the executives of RKO.

On the other hand, Producer Goldwyn of "Ball of Fire" is also Proprietor Goldwyn, in a separate corporate personality, of the Samuel Goldwyn Studios, recently evacuated by Walter Wanger Productions and operating at this time as a rental studio with arrival of David O. Selznick's official family and executive personnel considerably overdue. You will be remembering a joint statement issued a number of weeks ago in which Messrs. Selznick and Goldwyn announced an agreement under which Mr. Selznick would utilize the studio for production of the several pictures on his schedule. There are those hereabouts who assert that no formal signing of contracts has occurred and remark that the producer of "G. W. T. W." is a deliberate man with a pen.

It would seem a detail in the course of business for Proprietor Goldwyn to discuss with Producer Selznick, during their stay in your city, this matter of tenancy.

It would seem a detail in the course of United Artists Partner Selznick's canvassing of available independent-producer talent, for the purposes of his distribution company, to consider the qualifications of this man Goldwyn.

It is of record that both of these men, individualists if ever there were two, at various times and in various ways registered dissatisfaction with their experiences as contributor-producer and owner-partner respectively of United Artists. In the flow of events contributor-producer Selznick has become Owner-partner Selznick, and Owner-partner Goldwyn has become a free agent. 'Twould take no more than a bit of seeing eye-to-eye, mayhap, to net a complete reversal of past positions with satisfaction for all hands.

A bit of turnover in the radio-gossip department this week is regarded as in the nature of a break for those residents whose doings are microphone fodder and, of course, for the art-industry they represent.

Jimmy Starr, who commences a series of nightly quarter-hours over NBC's KECA on Monday, is well liked by the populace and is primarily a newspaper man, having risen from copy-boy to cinema editorship of the Herald-Express, the Hearst evening daily the hard way.

Jimmy Fidler, who is scheduled to conclude his series of weekly quarter-hours over MBS' KHJ on the 27th, came to broadcasting and syndicated columnizing via the acting profession and without benefit of journalistic experience, a little known circumstance which may explain a good deal that has seemed to call for explanation.

Another spurt of premature reviewing by the lay press set back again this week the inauguration of that honor system under which present restrictions upon screening of product are to be relaxed in the interests of journalistic convenience and competency of copy. Doubtless it will be some while now before the gentlemen who control these matters regain faith in the conviction, which springs eternal, that Hollywood correspondents are in fact as trustworthy as the rank and file of the nation's book-reviewers who have been functioning under an honor system for 50 years to the satisfaction of all.

Edwin Schallert of the Times printed a review of "Ball of Fire" received from a reader who'd witnessed a screening of the film in Long Beach. Louella O. Parsons of the Examiner and the International News Service reviewed "They Died With Their Boots On" after attending the trade press preview at the studio as a member of Director Raoul Walsh's personal party. Jimmy Fidler of the McNaught Syndicate not only reviewed the Walsh film but cited Errol Flynn's portrayal of General Custer as the performance of the week(!).

Neither of these pictures has been made available to local theatregoers and all of these reviews, therefore, are in contravention of the principle stated by MPTOA President Ed Kuykendall, adopted as a resolution by that exhibitor body and implemented by the Association of Motion Picture Producers.

It is in the wishful-thinking of the men who manage the preview that a state of mind will eventuate in which film-critics will align themselves with the other staff critics on their newspapers and strive for distinction through display of judgment, scholarship and the attendant tools of criticism, instead of identifying themselves with the newsroom in its quest for scoops. With advent of that attitude, a system of advance screenings providing film-critics that allowance of time for reflection and for care in composition which prevails in the realm of books will be inaugurated. Too bad for the many that the few hold out for quick-copy-and-the-hell-with-it.

PRESS AGENTS' UNION WILL FIGHT MAJORS

Publicists' Guild Breaks Off Negotiations for Contracts; "Appropriate Action" Sure

Distributor home offices this week awaited the results of the Screen Publicists' Guild promise of "action." The Guild, representing advertising and publicity workers in the major's New York home offices, announced Monday night it had suspended negotiations for a closed shop contract with majors' personnel executives and lawyers, and that it would now take "appropriate action on all public and labor fronts."

The announcement came after weeks of complaints and warnings by the Guild that negotiations were unduly prolonged, and after accusations by its spokesmen that the majors were "stalling."

It is understood the Guild ended negotiations because the companies offered a flat ten per cent wage increase, not accepting the Guild's proposals for a 30 per cent increase for workers earning up to $75, 25 per cent for those earning between $75 and $100, and 20 per cent for earnings of more than $100 weekly. The Guild executive council was to meet Wednesday night, and the membership Thursday night, to consider steps.

The negotiations have been in progress for several months under the impetus of a National Labor Relations Board certification of the Guild as the proper bargaining agency for the advertising and publicity workers. The Guild is unaffiliated with the national parent labor unions, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and the American Federation of Labor. Last week members, in a mail ballot, rejected affiliation with the CIO.

The Guild has a West Coast section and, presumably, other independent guilds on the Coast, such as the Screen Writers, and Directors, may support forthcoming "action."

Walsh Promises IATSE Support

Meanwhile, as Willie Bioff and George E. Browne, erstwhile heads of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, signified in New York their intention of starting their prison terms for extortion now the new IATSE president, Richard F. Walsh, over the weekend said locals would soon receive a financial report, indicating the union's financial position.

Reported, also, will be the status of the fund raised by the special two per cent assessment during Browne's regime, and, until his resignation, under his exclusive control.

Mr. Walsh added that he and other union officers were studying the advisability of making public the financial report, before the convention scheduled for next summer. The union is not compelled to make reports public.

While Browne and Bioff were being examined last week in New York Federal Court for their ability to pay the $20,000 fines given each, it became known, and was confirmed by Mr. Walsh, that all defense expenses of the convicted labor leaders had been borne by the IATSE, under special by-laws approved at the 1940 convention. Such by-laws are common in corporations, protecting officers from suits incurred during prosecution of duties. Mr. Walsh added, however, that the Alliance had paid nothing since George Browne's resignation.

The two men are expected to begin serving their Federal penitentiary terms within two weeks. Both have elected to serve now, instead of remaining in New York's Federal House of Detention until determination of their appeals. They receive no credit for time spent in the House of Detention.

In Hollywood nothing further developed early this week on negotiations between nine IATSE unions and the producers for new contracts. The Conference of Studio Unions elected temporary officers: Herbert Sorrell president; D. T. Wayne, vice-president; Russell McKnight, secretary-treasurer. The Conference was formed several weeks ago to join all AFL studio unions, for "protection." Permanent officers will be elected when more unions have joined. About five are members now.

The Studio Labor and Utilities Local 727 has reelected Zeal Fairbanks business agent, and Fred Gilday to the executive board. Elected to the board were Orville Broan, L. M. Gill and Al Erickson.

Organizing in St. Louis

In St. Louis, the office workers in the film offices are objects of an organizing drive by the AFL Stenographers, Typists, Bookkeepers and Assistants Union, Local 17,707, aided by the Film Exchange Employees Local B-1, which has organized the inspectors, shippers and poster clerks.

Louis D. Lovato, business agent of the exchange employees' union, said the campaign to enlist white collar workers in an AFL union began after reports reached the city of the CIO's "invasion" of majors' home offices in New York City. He added his union was negotiating for a new contract.

The Atlantic City musicians' local has reelected Alfonso Porcelli president. It is his tenth term. New vice-president is Peter Russo. Reelected secretary-treasurer was William Renaldi.

The Des Moines film exchange employees' local is asking for a new contract, embodying pay increases. Ray Butcher heads the union.

24 Properties Ready For Columbia Shooting

Preparing to step up the production pace at its studio, Columbia Pictures this week reported a total of 27 writers actively engaged in preparing 24 properties for camera work.

The first important picture to go into production in addition to the four now shooting, will be "Trinidad," with Pat O'Brien, Brian Donlevy and Janet Blair. By mid-December Robert Sparks will be ready to launch "Blondie Greets a Guest" and Colbert Clark will put "Canal Zone" before the camera.

Top among the January starters will be the George Stevens production, "Mr. Twilight," starring Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman; "Highly Irregular," co-starring Franchot Tone and Joan Bennett under the direction of Richard Wallace and the production guidance of B. P. Schulberg; "Professional Model," featuring Jinx Falkenburg, with Jack Fier supervising production, and an as yet untitled feature based on Elizabeth Dunn's Ladies Home Journal story "Something Borrowed."

Companies Set Premiere Plans

With the first quarter of the 1941-42 motion picture product season almost over distributors are rushing plans for their current major attractions; Universal's "Keep 'em Flying," starring Abbott and Costello, opened in New York, Wednesday. MGM has announced the opening for "H. M. Pulham, Esq." in Boston, and has set additional premieres in other key cities. "How Green Was My Valley," which opened in New York a few weeks ago was premiered in Scranton, Pa., by Fox, Wednesday night, and the world premiere of Producers Releasing "Swamp Woman" has been set for Detroit, November 28th.

Continuing the cooperation with the United States Army which started with the production of "Keep 'em Flying," latest Bud Abbott and Lou Costello vehicle, Universal's New York premiere of the picture on Wednesday, November 26th, at Loew's Criterion, was part of the Army's recruiting drive to procure aviation cadets.

The tractor-trailer mobile recruiting unit of the Southern New York District was stationed in front of the Criterion Theatre during the run of "Keep 'Em Flying," to enlist or answer questions of those interested in joining the air corps, according to Lieutenant Colonel John F. Daye, Q.M.C., Recruiting Officer.

The premiere was followed by a supper party given in honor of the Army officials by Universal Pictures at the Hotel Astor.

"Pulham" in Boston

With the world premiere of "H. M. Pulham, Esq.," already announced for Boston, the major locale of the J. P. Marquand story, at the State and Orpheum theatres the evening of December 3rd, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has announced five additional key city engagements for the film.

Four of them will start December 4th, at the State, Providence; Loew's, Dayton; State, Norfolk, and State, New Orleans. On December 25th, the picture will start an engagement at the Four Star, Los Angeles.

Hedy Lamarr, Robert Young and Ruth Hussey play the leading roles in "H. M. Pulham, Esq., which was directed by King Vidor.

A dual opening of Twentieth Century-Fox's "How Green Was My Valley," took place at the Comerford in Wilkes-Barre and the Strand theatre in Scranton, Wednesday evening, November 26th.

Miners See "Valley"

The twin bookings for these Pennsylvania cities were arranged as the only theatre engagements, in addition to the New York world premiere run at the Rivoli, to be held this year. This was due to the unusual interest aroused by the picture in this territory because of this region's large Welsh population and mining interests.

The world premiere of "Swamp Woman," the Producers Releasing Corporation Special starring Ann Corio and Jack LaRue, is set for the Cinema theatre, Detroit, Friday, November 28th. On the same bill with "Swamp Woman" is "Mr. Celebrity," the PRC race track melodrama with Buzzy Henry, Doris Day and James Seay, featured with three oldtime celebrities, Clara Kimball Young, Francis X. Bushman and James J. Jeffries playing themselves.

Bill Flemion, Detroit PRC franchise holder, has also closed deals for "Swamp Woman" with the Creston theatre, State and Rialto, all in Grand Rapids, Mich., and at the Strand in Lowell, Mich.

BROADWAY, HOLLYWOOD IN DITHER TO GET ENTERTAINMENT TO THE ARMY

Camp Shows, Inc., Rushing Organization of Units for Tours; Plans Call for from 13 to 27 Unit Companies on the Road

New York and Hollywood this week were centers of extraordinary and somewhat frenetic efforts to entertain the men in Army camps with the best, smartest, latest, and cleanest of stage and screen talent, under the aegis of USO-Camp Shows, Inc., New York head of which is actor-producer Eddie Dowling, and Hollywood director of which is Edward Arnold, president of the Screen Actors Guild.

Mr. Dowling is president of Camp Shows, Inc.; Mr. Arnold, vice-president.

The Army and the Navy will not only have touring shows with talent rounded up by the organization; they will also benefit from a "talent pool" to be formed in Hollywood this week by Mr. Arnold, who flew there from conferences in New York last week with Mr. Dowling and other executive members of Camp Shows, Inc., and who was to organize a show for Seattle performance December 3rd.

The United Service Organizations has allotted $850,000 for the CSI shows. This money will allow 11 to 14 road companies betor the year's end. However, there may be as many as 27. It was noted special programs near New York and Hollywood, would cost little since many players in the "talent pools" in each center are expected to donate their services.

Theatrical unions have agreed to lower minimum scales 15 to 33 per cent, it is said, and in return, Camp Shows, Inc., has promised them continuity of employment.

Three Shows Purchased

Three "package" shows have been purchased, their prices averaging $2,200 to $2,300 per week. Mr. Dowling said last week eight musical shows and stage comedies were ready for presentation. By December 1st, he said, the circuit of 13 would be ready. He added:

"In a trifle over three weeks of preparation, we have assembled the highest ranking talent that the country has produced, and we are now ready to open up our circuit in Army camps, and Naval stations, with shows containing all the color and sparkle and brilliance of the best Broadway efforts."

The new road show company constitutes by far the largest legitimate-vaudeville enterprise ever constructed in this country. The actors will play to a greater number of persons than they ever have, in ordinary practice. Their bookings—their rail and bus routes, staging and housing, heating, and feeding—constitute a logistic problem possibly equivalent to that of some Army corps commanders.

Following is the schedule for the shows, as given at Camp Shows, Inc., New York office, this week:

November 27: "Follow The Crowd," musical comedy with chorus girls and vaudeville artists, at Camp Claiborne, Alexandria, Louisiana.

November 28: "Funzafire," a comedy, with audience participation and cast of 33 at Naval Air Station, Norfolk, Virginia.

November 29: "Ada Leonard and Her All-American Girl Revue," a musical show with girl band, supplemented by vaudeville, at Pine Camp, New York.

November 29: "Beachcombers of 1942," a musical comedy with a cast of 40, at United States Naval Station, Bremerton, Washington.

December 2: "Razzle Dazzle," variety show with eight vaudeville acts and chorus girls, at Camp Barkeley, Abilene, Texas.

December 3: "Happy Go Lucky," a musical with comedians, supplemented by chorus girls, at Fort Dix, New Jersey.

December 4: "Thumbs Up," vaudeville show, at Fort Bliss, El Paso, Texas.

December 4: "The Laugh Parade," with dancing, chorus girls and music, at Camp Forrest, Tullahoma, Tenn.

December 5: "My Sister Eileen," New York legitimate show, at the Naval Station, Charleston, South Carolina.

December 9: "Harlem On Parade," all-Negro revue produced by Noble Sissle and Bill Robinson, at Camp Grant, Rockford, Illinois.

December 9: "Hollywood Hit Parade," a show with singers, dancers and comedy acts available from the motion picture industry, at Camp Ord, Salinas, California.

The shows will cover two "circuits"; that is, the first series of shows will cover 65 Army and Navy stations; the second, 141.

National publicity for Camp Shows, Inc., will be handled by Oscar Doob, director of advertising and publicity for the Loew circuit.

Assisting Mr. Dowling will be Abe Lastvogel, of the Artists Managers Guild, Hollywood. Assistant to Mr. Arnold, in Hollywood, is Morgan Wallace.

On the Camp Shows, Inc., board are Mr. Dowling; Frank Gillmore, Associated Actors and Artistes of America president; Mr. Lastfogel; Harper Sibley, USO president; Walter Hoving, USO chairman of the board; Bert Lytell, Actors Equity president; Lee Shubert, theatrical producer; Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president, in charge of production and Association of Motion Picture Producers president; Clarence Michalis, Seaman's Bank; Lawrence Phillips, Camp Shows executive vice-president; Mr. Arnold; Lawrence Tibbett, American Guild of Musical Artists president; George Schaefer, RKO president; Morton Downey, American Guild of Variety Artists president; Mark Woods, NBC treasurer; Charles Koerner, RKO Theatres general manager; Joseph Hazen, Warner attorney; Henry Jaffe, union lawyer; Emily Holt, American Federation of Radio Artists executive secretary; Emil Friedlander, theatrical costumer; Lawrence W. Lowman, CBS vice-president; Brock Pemberton, theatrical producer, and Edward Johnson, Metropolitan Opera general manager.

Studios are expected to cooperate with Mr. Arnold's Hollywood efforts for the organization by furnishing daily, lists of stars who are available.

"Big" name stars are donating services. Talent of smaller significance will be paid the minimums of the Screen Actors Guild, and Actors Equity.

Mr. Arnold said in New York Friday a great difficulty was the lack of theatres for stage shows, at Army and Navy posts. Of 167, he asserted, only 71 have stages; of the 71, only 32 are adequately equipped.

Officers Pleased

Representatives of the United States Army's Morale Division, in Washington, are said to be pleased at the speed with which the organization of rolling entertainment for the new armed forces is proceeding. The camp shows are a consequence of meetings between officers of the Morale Division and GHQ, and executives of stage, screen, and radio, in Washington, some months ago, following haphazard, scattered, inadequately organized efforts by privately acting individuals and committees to provide "live" entertainment for the military.

The shows now being built and presented will play their two circuits until April 18th, according to present CSI plans.

The United Service Organizations reported last week that more than 160,000 soldiers had attended its first 106 mobile film shows, in audiences ranging from 50 to 3,500 men per performance, and averaging 1,500.

PRESS INTERESTED IN "TWO-FACED WOMAN"

Providence, R. I., Officials Refuse License for Showing After Legion Condemnation

The most emphatic expression concerning the mores of the screen and its wares since 1933 came this week when the National Legion of Decency in its rating schedule placed on its condemned, or "Class C," list, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Two-Faced Woman," starring Greta Garbo and Melvyn Douglas. In immediate sequel came the banning of the picture by the authorities of Providence, Rhode Island, with consequent revision of regional booking schedules and marked attentions in the press of New York and New England.

Newspaper attentions, in New York and Providence, took cognizance of what they appeared to deem the larger issues and the matter of the general application of the motion picture industry's avowed program and machinery of self-regulation.

The Legion gave as its reasons for condemning the picture: "Immoral and un-Christian attitude toward marriage and its obligations; impudently suggestive scenes, dialogue and situations; suggestive costumes."

Also on the condemned list dated November 27th was the Hirliman-Monogram production "Stolen Paradise" (Adolescence) which the Legion said "emphasizes sex; very suggestive scenes."

Booking Cancelled

On Tuesday, the day after the Legion rating was released, the police amusements inspector of Providence, R. I., Captain George W. Cowan, informed the management of Loew's State Theatre there that the picture would not be licensed. Loew's cancelled the booking scheduled for Thursday.

Captain Cowan, in a page one story in the Providence Evening Bulletin was quoted Tuesday as saying he "never knowingly permitted the showing of a picture in Providence after it had been classified as condemned by the Legion of Decency." The Bulletin also said Captain Cowan indicated that other cities and towns in Rhode Island followed the same policy.

The picture was scheduled to open Thursday also at Loew theatres in Baltimore, Cleveland, Dayton, Indianapolis, Kansas City, New Orleans, Louisville, Norfolk, Rochester, Syracuse, Springfield, Mass., Hartford and Waterbury.

Tuesday afternoon Captain Cowan, with his assistant, Lieutenant William F. McTiernan, went to Boston with Jack Simon, manager of the Loew theatre in Providence to view the picture at the MGM exchange. The officers were to submit a confidential review Edward L. Casey, chairman of the Providence Bureau of Police and Fire, the Bulletin reported. The Bureau accepted Captain Cowan's license recommendation.

Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for MGM was quoted by the New York Times on Wednesday as saying he did not see what action the company could take regarding the ban in Providence. Howard Dietz said, according to the Times:

"It is not the attitude of this company to make indecent films. The Garbo picture is a comedy and does not seem to be offensive. It is a story of a marital mixup and conforms to the general concept of the proprieties. It is gay and personal, but I believe it will not give offense to the public."

Legion History Given

The Times observed that "the Legion of Decency first came to grips with Hollywood in 1933 and 1934, when leaders of the Catholic Church, objecting to the general moral tone of films then being released, began urging the faithful to pledge themselves to remain away from pictures condemned by the group.

"The results had such a serious effect on the box-office that Hollywood promised in June, 1934, to set up a self-regulating code of morals, approved by church dignitaries, and to abide by it rigidly.

"It was then that Mr. (Joseph I.) Breen took over supervision of the code, a job which he relinquished last May to become general manager of the RKO studio.

"At that time, Mr. Breen's only comment was, 'I'm fed up.'"

Neither Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America nor Geoffrey Shurlock, acting chief of the Production Code Authority, would comment on the "Two-Faced Woman" ban the Times reported.

The Production Code Authority granted "Two-Faced Woman" its seal of approval No. 7687 after reviewing the picture in October.

The National Board of Review was quoted by the Providence paper as calling the Garbo picture "especially worth seeing as above the average 'selected' picture." The Bulletin quoted at length from the Board's review of the picture as suitable for audiences over 18 years of age.

National Board of Review approval of a picture is required by Rhode Island law before it may be exhibited on Sunday.

Mrs. James F. Looram, chairman of the motion picture division of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, which reviews pictures for the Legion, was quoted by the Times Wednesday as saying, unofficially, that the studios during the last year had made increasing use of marriage to portray suggestive situations. Although "Two-Faced Woman" was approved by the Production Code Authority, she was quoted as saying, it may have obeyed the letter but not the spirit of the code.

The matter continued, on Wednesday, to be front and editorial page material in Providence. The Journal censured Captain Cowan for invoking the police power "to enforce the recommendation of a sectarian organization." The Brown University undergraduate paper took a similar tack.

Loew's instructed Mr. Simon to withdraw all advertising on the picture but it was said that did not mean it would not show the film in Providence. Spokesmen would not amplify that statement.

Three New Companies

Incorporation papers have been filed with the New York Secretary of State, for the following companies: Essex Pictures, Inc., Esquire Films of the United States, and Westchester Panoram Company, Inc., of Yonkers. The first has 200 shares of no stated par value; the second, $10,000 capital stock; the third, $20,000 capital stock in $100 shares.

Legion Again Cites Ratings

Pointing to a decrease in the number of films classified as unobjectionable for general theatre patronage during the last five years and an increase in those rated objectionable in part, the National Legion of Decency in New York issued a statement on Monday, reporting on film classifications for the five-year period. The statement follows:

"During the period from February, 1936, to November, 1941, there has been a decrease of approximately ten per cent in the number of films classified by the Legion of Decency as unobjectionable for general patronage. Over the same period, there has been an increase of one and six-tenths per cent in the number of films rated as objectionable in part.

"In appraising the moral status and trend of the motion picture, statistics alone do not provide adequate and final measurement. Statistics should be considered in conjunction with other factors such as the kind and amount of objectionableness in a film rated in any given objectionable or condemned category. The evaluation of the situation must be based on qualitative as well as quantitative consideration. The present grave concern arises out of the unfortunate trend under which a considerable number of films rated objectionable in part have approached the point of condemnation."

Of the seven motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, two were found unobjectionable for general patronage, four were approved for adults and two were condemned. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Kathleen" and "They Died With Their Boots On." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "A Date With the Falcon," "Design for Scandal," "Men in Her Life" and "Rise and Shine." Class C, Condemned: "Two-Faced Woman," "Stolen Paradise," (Adolescence).

Republic to Establish South American Exchanges

Republic Pictures has announced it will set up its own Latin American sales exchanges, operated under the supervision of Morris Goodman, foreign sales manager, instead of doing business through other agencies.

Offices have already been established in Santiago, Chile and Panama City. In the next two months the company will open its own headquarters in Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro, Lima, Havana and Mexico City.

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT TAKES OVER CONTROL OF THEATRE EXHIBITION

Exhibitors Expect Post-War Fight May Be Necessary to Throw Off Present Heavy Government Regulations

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

Government control of motion picture theatres now practically obtains in Canada as a result of gradual development of official "interest" in the exhibition of films and in the revenue of performances and personnel, as well as the physical aspects of the business. Much of this progression has been done in the name of "war measure" but, regardless of reason, the exhibitors find themselves surrounded by regulations, many of which have been created through Orders-in-Council of the Ministry and not through vote of Parliament.

For long since, actual moving picture standards have been established by censorship, while the operation of theatres has long been governed by annual license. These have been accepted as established routine but in the past year or two there has been a wave of Federal decrees which have directly affected the film houses. A considerable proportion of these are of recent origin.

Federal taxation of gross receipts became a fact with the introduction of the 20 per cent amusement tax and theatre operators were required to take out a license as "manufacturers" for the privilege of paying this levy weekly; failure to do so would mean cancellation of this license and the closing of the theatre. Practically in opposition to this assessment is the new order which fixes maximum admission prices for the remainder of the war, whereby controlling the take of every moving picture theatre but not any other place of amusement. Maximum wages and salaries have now been fixed as a regulation of payment for employment service and the granting of bonuses has been brought within government jurisdiction.

Building Banned

There is strict control of construction so that new theatres are out of the question for an indefinite period, thus preventing amusement operators from capitalizing on local boom developments. Theatre remodelling is being kept within a low limit of cost and the importation of extensive equipment, machinery and materials has been restricted. New oil burning installations are out for the duration of the war under fuel conservation regulations. The control of imports extends to film prints in several respects including a ban on film imports from a number of countries and the ponderous restrictions on the export of cash for payment on films and merchandise to non-Sterling countries.

Not only have wages been fixed, in a move intended to guard against inflation, but exhibitors must struggle with existing payrolls because of Federal Government requirements in carrying out the provisions for varied deductions for unemployment insurance, the Defense Tax percentage and war loan instalments. The weekly payroll has become a document.

There is a warning that control of lighting is on the way and the use of electric current will be restricted to conserve power for war industries. Theatre proprietors have been required to take certain war precautions and must meet blackout regulations with the occasional A.R.P. rehearsals which currently have the effect of hurting business.

A semblance of control of theatre advertising is in effect because exhibitors cannot portray military uniforms or badges in their displays and the Victory symbol cannot be used in a commercial manner. Apart from the war angle, there is control of advertising in censorship.

The Government has expanded its production of films and there is the inference that official subjects and campaign trailers should be booked. Screen co-operation was originally volunteered but it can be suggested that it is now expected. In passing, there has been a complaint that some Government trailers are far too lengthy.

These are the highlights of Government interest in film exhibition during the war thus far. The question has arisen as to whether the regulations and orders will cease automatically at the conclusion of the war. Looking ahead, it has been asked, behind the scenes, if the Government will drop the theatre business as a source of revenue through special taxation after the fighting stops and if the restrictions on construction and other details will be quickly removed to permit natural development.

CANADA DELAYS SCALE "FREEZING"

The Canadian government has deferred the effective date for the freezing of theatre admission scales until December 1st, because of protests received and the unexpected problems encountered, it was announced from Toronto this week.

Theatre prices after December 1st, if the present plans go through, cannot be raised for any cause beyond the maximum which prevailed in any situation during the period between September 15th and October 11th of this year. After that date, the only change that can be made will be a downward revision, which is not likely in view of the rising costs. The Government will make a survey of the whole business to insure that admission prices are no higher than those charged during the index period.

Location Unit Films "Canada Carries On"

by ED BAKER
in Winnipeg

Stanley Hawes, film producer; R. J. Edmonds, assistant producer, and Donald Fraser, cameraman, members of the National film board are in Winnipeg to supervise taking of local pictures to be included in a "Canada Carries On" newsreel, now in production. The film will be centered around the railway industry in Canada.

The "Canada Carries On" series, which is carried regularly between 850 and 900 theatres throughout the dominion, is sponsored by the National War Services department and the department of Public Information. Its aims are to bring to Canadians a realization of Canada's war effort, and to show the scope and potentialities of Canada and Canadian industries. This education series has achieved the widest distribution in Canada.

Despite the Dominion government's increasing interest and activity in the making of movies, it is doubtful if there will ever be a "Hollywood" near Ottawa—or any other Canadian city, said Mr. Hayes.

This could be accounted for in the main, by the fact that commercial studios in the U. S. with their vast production facilities, had exploited the movie market to the full and besides, he said, Canadian companies could not hope to meet the salaries paid by American companies.

Although there is a wealth of material for motion picture scenes in Canada, Mr. Hawes said he did not believe Canada would establish herself as a leader in the movie industry. Cordial feelings exist now between Canada and Hollywood motion picture companies, but should Canadian companies seek to set themselves up in opposition, the standard would not come anywhere near that approximated by Hollywood.

By permission of Air commodore A. B. Shearer, officer commanding No. 2 Training Command, the R.C.A.F. band under the direction of Warrant Officer C. South presented a 30-minute concert at the Capitol theatre. The occasion marked the opening of "A Yank in the R.A.F."

The Paris theatre in St. Boniface, Man., across the river from Winnipeg has introduced a policy of showing French films once a month.

The first picture will be "Accord Final," starring Georges Rigaud, Kate de Nagy and Jules Berry. The story is a musical one and enlists the Pasdeloup orchestra under the direction of Albert Wolff. The movie has been praised by a number of Winnipeggers who have seen it at a private showing.

Franklin-Herschorn Deal 'Big Surprise'

by VICTOR SERVICE
in St. Johns

One of the biggest surprises in the eastern Canadian theatre field in recent history is the continuance with Famous Players Canadian of the Franklin & Herschorn chain. The Odeon Theatres, headed by N. L. Nathanson, erstwhile F.P.C. chief, had been the strong favorite to take F. & H. away from F.P.C.

Instrumental in the unexpected shift are J. J. Fitzgibbons and R. W. Bolstad, president and vice-president of F.P.C. At the eleventh hour they made a flying trip to St. John, for a conference with J. M. Franklin, president and founder of Franklin & Herschorn, and followed this up with telephone calls and telegrams from Toronto and New York. Mr. Franklin signed the papers while confined to bed, undergoing treatment for a stomach ailment.

Involved in the contract as mutually agreeable was the transfer of the Oxford, Halifax, from F.P.C. to F. & H. This house was built about three years ago, and seats about 700. F. & H. also have a share in the Orpheus, Halifax. The Frankhorn group consists of: Family and Community, Halifax; Mayfair and Dundas, Dartmouth; Community, Yarmouth; Mayfair and Regent, St. Johns. The two Dartmouth and two St. Johns theatres have been built for F. & H. the past seven years. The Mayfair in St. Johns and Community in Yarmouth, are being remodeled.

F. & H. had been affiliated with F.P.C. since the smaller circuit was founded about seven years ago. Excellent business has prevailed at the Oxford.

Famous Players Canadian Corp., which voluntarily increased wages of company employes by a permanent bonus in October, before Canada's Labor Board fixed wage increases mandatory as a war measure, will not have to add to the statuary cost of living bonus for employes, fixed by the Government, it was reported in Toronto last week.

The cost of living bonus will be determined by Government statisticians every three months but the order does not apply in the meantime to firms which had raised wages and salaries in the recent past.

The circuit launched a special bonus drive recently, running from November 3rd to December 31st, for theatre personnel, unit managers and home office staff, with Canadian Government bonds as prizes. Based on profits, the competition will be among the five divisions into which theatres have been divided. J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of F.P.C., is being honored by the drive.

Allen Takes Four Houses

Four theatres operated by the O'Brien Ottawa Valley Circuit have been purchased by Raymond Allen of Toronto.

The transaction is one of the largest deals in Eastern Canada in some time. The theatres concerned in the sale are located in Renfrew, Arnprior, Amonte and Pembroke.

Equity's Order on Payments Hits Stage Shows in Canada

by PAT DONOVAN
in Montreal

Actors Equity's ruling that travelling American stage road show companies be paid in American money has spelt disaster for many productions which Montrealers had looked forward to. Canada, at war, is striving, might and main, to conserve foreign exchange, and restrictions certainly are not expected to be relaxed for the sake of entertainment.

Among the stage productions seen in Montreal during the past summer season from across the border, were: "Pins 'n' Needles," "Hellzappopin," "Dante, Magician," "The Man Who Came to Dinner," "Blossom Time," "Rose Marie" and "Life With Father."

The past season of "legit" productions was the first for Montrealers in many years. At the outset, exhibitors here watched for a possible decline in their receipts as a result of this competition, but no appreciable indent was made in box-office figures.

Motion picture houses are, nevertheless, without even this competition now, although, it is true that the McCoy stock productions are commencing a winter season, this is held to be no serious threat.

Blanket prohibition of advertising signs or posters of any kind which would be visible from the road, is contained in an order just issued by Hon. T. D. Bouchard, Minister of Roads for the Province of Quebec, regarding the following highways or sections of highways.

Advertising signs skirting the road approaches to Montreal have frequently been employed to advertise films.

Kennedy with Sovereign Films

Walter J. Kennedy, official of Empire-Universal Films, Ltd., in Toronto for many years, has been appointed general manager of Sovereign Film Distributors, Ltd., succeeding James Foy, who resigned to become associated with Oscar Hanson's new company.

CHILD MATINEE OUT, EVEN FOR ALUMINUM

Robert Johnson, manager of the Kent Theatre in Montreal, was refused permission by provincial authorities to stage a special matinee for children at which aluminumware was to be the admission fee. Quebec officials refused to relax the law forbidding children under 16 to attend film theatres, despite the nature of the special matinee. The law has been enforced strictly since the disastrous Laurier Theatre fire of a decade ago.

Hoffman Promises 26-30 for '41-42

M. H. Hoffman, independent producer, who has been in New York completing plans for financing and booking the 26 to 30 films which he will produce for what he terms an "assured market," will leave for Hollywood shortly to begin production. Mr. Hoffman will make four "exploitation" pictures of current topics; two musicals, six melodramas, six adventure stories, four so-called sophisticated comedy-dramas and eight action pictures. He has signed Michael Bartlett and Smith Ballew to star in one or more of his productions. "The White Gorilla," now in the making, probably will be ready for release by January 1st.

Mr. Hoffman said he had enough bookings guaranteed from independent operators to assure him a minimum income to cover at least costs of production. He explained that his company, Liberty National Pictures Corp. would operate on a cooperative basis. "Everybody from the producer, director and star, down to the clerical worker, will share in proportion to his contribution in the profits of the company," he said.

It is understood that Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, worked out the distribution of Liberty National films with Mr. Hoffman.

Mr. Hoffman pointed out that his pictures would be offered to exhibitors on a flat rental basis, carrying out his theory that producers and distributors should follow "a live and let live policy" where the exhibitor is concerned.

Mr. Hoffman is planning to make his production home in Culver City, on the RKO-Pathe lot, in a unit which he formerly occupied.

Telenews Theatre Opens in Dallas

The Telenews theatre, in which the Interstate circuit has an interest, was officially opened on Theatre Row in Dallas, Tex., November 21st.

For the opening a pre-release run of the latest issue of March of Time, "Main Street, U. S. A.," was shown along with the first exclusive Telenews subject with H. V. Kaltenborn; a Reagean "Tex" McCrary subject in the Telenews series, "Ringside Seat to World War II," the latest issue of Popular Science, and a special film, "Salute to Dallas."

Interstate Plans "Teen-Age" Price

Interstate Circuit of Texas and adjacent territories is about to put into effect a new admission price policy for "teen age" persons. The policy will apply to those from 12 to 16, and will probably begin after January 1st.

The circuit, like others, has made special efforts to make motion picture patrons of children so that, as adults, they will retain the habit. Children are encouraged to be weekly patrons at a ten cent admission, but there has been no consideration of the problem of telling these steady patrons, after they have passed the age of 12, that they must pay 30 or 40, or 50 cents to come into the theatre.

In explanation of the new plan to its managers, the circuit's management pointed out that the benefits would accrue at the boxoffice and in good-will, also, that enforcement of price-age differentials, formerly difficult, would become easier, because the new "Junior admission prices" would reduce the customers' temptation to cheat.

The children who have been Interstate patrons will not be required to carry identification cards or other such devices. The management will depend upon their ability to play fair, regarding this policy also as a good-will builder.

Interstate managers are now acquainting youth organizations, schools, clubs, and newspapers, with the new price policy using trailers, lobby setups, and radio plugs.

The Junior Admission Price is 20 cents, and, as set forth in the special announcement trailers from National Screen Service, are to be in effect "Any Day-Anytime."

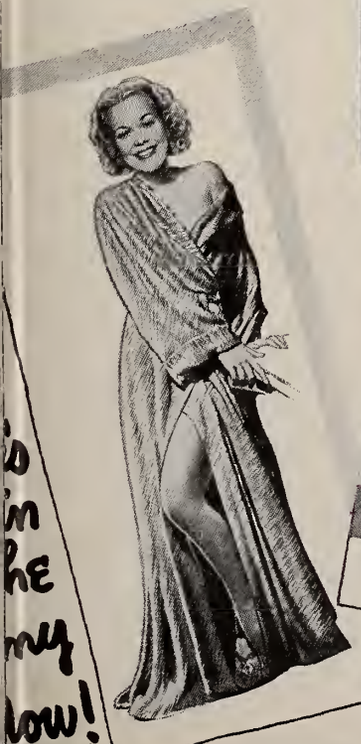
Deer Stresses Industry Pride in Entertainment

"The makers of motion pictures do not believe in Nazism, Fascism or Communism," Irvin E. Deer, field representative of the MPPDA, said in an address at a meeting of the Seventh District Federation of Women's Clubs in Indianapolis. "They are profoundly loyal to Americanism," Mr. Deer said, "and they believe in the American way.

"Consequently they have no apologies to offer any one—including Senate inquisitors—for the making of pictures which depict the effect of totalitarian ideologies upon individual, family, social and national life. They are humbly proud of pictures which have set forth the glories of the American nation.

"Entertainment is the fundamental and primary purpose of the film made for the theatre. People do not go to the theatre to be educated, to become cultured, or to have their morals improved. They go to relax, to be entertained, to be amused."

Mr. Deer predicted, "The double feature is on the way out.



Laurel-Hardy Option Lifted

Twentieth Century-Fox has exercised an option on Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, following the film, "Great Guns." The contract calls for ten pictures in the next five years, the next to be "Pitfalls of the Big City."

Sales Policy Set for "Louisiana" at Paramount Meet

"Louisiana Purchase" will be sold separately from all other product, will be released nationally on December 25th, with the exception of a few cities, and theatres playing the picture will not be asked to advance their admission prices, Neil F. Agnew, vice-president and general sales manager of Paramount Pictures, told a group of district managers and home office executives at the two-day sales meeting held at the Drake Hotel, Chicago, November 21-22nd. The company, however, will insist on preferred playing time in every spot booked after the key runs.

The picture will be backed by a special advertising and exploitation campaign budgeted at $100,000 for newspaper space and $75,000 for magazines. It is planned to use 350 prints of the film for distribution. This is 100 more than are usually used on a picture in the United States and compares with the number used for "Northwestern Mounted Police."

Mr. Agnew denied reports he said were circulating among exhibitors that the company was retreating from its sales policy and that the Chicago meeting had been called to revise selling methods. He reiterated that the company's sales policy stood as previously announced.

1,000 at Trade Showing

Following the trade showing of the picture at the Esquire Theatre on Friday morning, which drew close to 1,000 people and was the largest-attended trade showing in Chicago this year, an informal meeting lasting the balance of the day and into the evening, was held at the hotel to discuss methods of handling the sales and exploitation of the picture. Among those who spoke were Barney Balaban, Paramount president, and Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board. It was pointed out that the picture could not be shown in Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, Philadelphia and Detroit until February 1st because the stage production would be playing these spots. The company's third block of pictures was discussed, together with matters connected with the consent decree selling policy.

Among those who attended the sessions were district managers, Allen Usher, Chicago; William Erb, Boston; M. S. Kusell, New York; Harry Goldsetein, Cleveland; E. W. Sweigert, Philadelphia; R. C. Libeau, Kansas City; Manuel A. Brown, Denver; Hugh Owen, Dallas; J. Kirby, Atlanta, and Del Goodman, Toronto, Canada, also J. J. Donahue, Chicago branch manager, and Fred Bartow, Chicago exploitation man.

Home office officials at the meeting besides Mr. Balaban, Mr. Zukor and Mr. Agnew included Charles M. Reagan, assistant general sales manager; Oscar Morgan, general manager of short subjects and the newsreel, and his assistant, Monroe R. Goodman; Joseph J. Unger, Eastern Division, and George A. Smith, Western divisional sales managers; Alec Moss, Robert M. Gillham and Claude Lee, heads of the advertising, publicity and exploitation departments; Arthur Dunne, Herman Lorber and Joe Walsh.

MGM's annual mid-season meeting of branch and district managers will be held at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago this week-end and on Monday, December 1st. All branches will be represented. William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, will preside.

Trailer on Aluminum Ready for Theatres

Francis S. Harmon, of the MPPDA, and chairman of the motion picture committee cooperating for national defense, announced on Tuesday that 600 prints of the three-minute trailer, "Pots to Planes," were being distributed free to theatres this week. The picture, made by the Office for Emergency Management Film Unit, depicts in graphic detail the method of the Government's reclamation of scrap aluminum for use in airplane manufacture.

In his memorandum to exchange managers informing them of the prints' availability, Mr. Harmon said, "The subject matter is timely and undoubtedly will create interest in theatre patrons since it shows what happened to the pots and pans contributed by housewives across the country in the recent aluminum campaign." It will be remembered that theatre managers throughout the land helped in the drive.

Mr. Harmon also expressed appreciation to exchange managers "for the service you are rendering to the industry and to the nation" in facilitating free distribution of Government trailers and shorts.

Herb Berg, Henry Larner Promoted by Paramount

Herb Berg, formerly Paramount's home office trade paper representative, has been promoted to the exploitation and promotion department under Alec Moss, while Henry Larner, of the company's home office publicity department, has been advanced to trade paper press agent.

Starting with Warners, Mr. Berg later transferred to Fox's exploitation department and then to Tiffany which he left to become associated with UFA. He later joined Columbia. He was with United Artists in 1929 in the publicity department and rejoined the company in 1933. He has been with Paramount since 1936.

Mr. Larner graduated from Harvard University in 1937 and worked on the staffs of the New York Journal-American and Newsweek Magazine. He later went to Paramount in the press book department and was promoted to New York newspaper contact for the company, a position which he held in the publicity department until his recent promotion to trade contact succeeding Mr. Berg.

"Valley" Exhibit Opens

A special exhibit on "How Green Was My Valley," the Twentieth Century-Fox production, has been put on display in 32 branches of the New York Public Library throughout the city. Illustrating the fidelity with which the film was adapted from Richard Llewellyn's best-selling novel, the displays are comprised of stills matched with photostatic excerpts from the book. At the Central Branch of the Public Library the exhibit is of original water-color sketches of the Welsh costumes worn in the film by the various stars.

Flynn to Receive Award

The New York Sunday Mirror Magazine's motion picture medal of merit, won by Errol Flynn in a popularity contest sponsored by the publication, was presented to the actor by Lee Mortimer, Mirror film critic, on the stage of the Strand theatre on Broadway, Thursday evening, November 27th.

ASCAP Retains Officers; BMI Slashes Rates

The board of directors of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers voted last Wednesday to extend to April 1, 1942, the terms of all officers, headed by Gene Buck, president. Annual election of ASCAP officers is April 1st, but no election was held last April because of the Society's feud with radio networks.

Action of the board forestalled a reported move on the part of a number of ASCAP publisher-members of the board who sought to replace Mr. Buck in the presidency, because of their continued dissatisfaction with his handling of the network ban against ASCAP music and other pertinent problems confronting the Society.

Meanwhile, Broadcast Music, Inc., the music-publishing firm set up by radio when ASCAP tunes were barred from the air last January 1st, announced a reduction in its contract rates last week. Two weeks ago, BMI's board of directors approved of the general terms of the new eight-year blanket contracts which will be offered to stations to become effective March 12th, 1942.

Under the new terms which will continue to be based on a sliding scale dependent on gross income of stations, those in the lowest income category will have their maximum fees reduced from 1 per cent to ¾ of 1 per cent, while those in the highest income group will have their maximum fees reduced from 1.66 per cent to 1.2 per cent. The new contract brings into effect clearance at the source by all networks, regional and national. It is estimated that the new plan will give BMI an income in excess of $1,000,000 annually. Terms of a new long-term BMI per-program license contract have not yet been completed. The blanket license, however, will run until March 11, 1950. ASCAP's recently signed network licenses expire December 31st, 1949. The percentage paid by networks for BMI music will be the same as the maximum paid by stations, 1.2 per cent. ASCAP's contract with the networks provided for payment of two and three-quarter per cent of net time sales to the Society for network programs which are cleared at the source, and two and one-half per cent for stations managed and operated by the networks.

Bonuses for Paramount Theatre Employes

The Paramount Theatre management in New York reported on Monday that bonus salary payments for all theatre employes went into effect on November 1st, to meet the rising costs of living. Ushers, cashiers, assistant managers, treasurers, porters and all personel are receiving benefits of the bonus system. The scale operates as follows: those earning up to $25 weekly get 10 per cent more; those earning from $25 to $35 weekly receive 7½ per cent increases and employes earning over $35 get 5 per cent increases. The amounts are allocated on weekly salaries and are set aside for payment to employes once each month.

It could not be determined whether or not this system would be executed throughout the Paramount home office and theatre circuit. Reports last week indicated that RKO and Loew's circuits were voluntarily giving bonus increases to theatre managers.

PRODUCERS BUY 39 MORE STORIES AND PLAYS FOR 1941-42 FILMING

Biography of Rogers Bought by Warners; Four Stage Plays, 15 Books Among Story Purchases for October

Hollywood producers acquired screen rights to 39 story properties in October, for 1941-42. Of these 20 were original stories, four were stage plays and 15 were books, including two biographies and four published magazine stories.

Highlight of the October acquisition was the purchase of "Uncle Clem's Boy," a biography of the late Will Rogers written by his widow, Mrs. Betty Rogers. The property was purchased by Warner Brothers for an estimated price of $140,000. The sale, regarded as one of the most important of the year, was concluded following spirited bidding of all major studios. Under the terms of the contract, Mrs. Rogers will retain scenario and cast approval.

Stuart Erwin, Spencer Tracy and Roy Rogers, Republic cowboy star, are being considered for the role of the humorist-philosopher. It is reported from Hollywood that Mrs. Rogers favors Spencer Tracy for the role, while her advisors are advocating Stuart Erwin, who bears a striking resemblance in both appearance and manner to the comedian.

Rinehart Story Bought

"One Hour of Glory," Mary Roberts Rinehart's character study of a retired small-town business man who visits Washington, D. C., was purchased by RKO last month from Warner Brothers as a vehicle for Thomas Mitchell.

Warners had owned the yarn since its magazine publication early in 1940 and had also announced it for Thomas Mitchell but abandoned the project last January. However, before RKO can put the story into actual production Thomas Mitchell has to complete "Song of the Islands" and "Roxie Hart" for Twentieth Century-Fox.

Paramount purchased "The Passionate Witch," Thorne Smith's last novel, which Norman Matson completed after the author's death, as a vehicle for Veronica Lake. Rene Clair, French director, whose only previous American film was Universal's "Flame of New Orleans" with Marlene Dietrich, has been engaged to direct the picture.

"Common Clay," a melodrama of 1915 which starred Jane Cowl and which subsequently reached the screen in both silent and talking versions, will be filmed again by Twentieth Century-Fox. James T. Farrell, author of "Studs Lonigan" and the recent best-seller, "Ellen Rogers," has been engaged to prepare the scenario from Cleves Kinkead's play.

Properties acquired during September with all available credits follow:

Alicia's Man, a stage play by Leo McNaney purchased by Director Al Santell.

Angel Face, a magazine story by Jean Becket purchased as the second vehicle for Joan Carroll by RKO.

Black Curtain, a mystery novel by Cornell Woolrich acquired by Paramount.

Common Clay, a stage play by Cleves Kinkead of 1915 which reached the screen in both the silent and sound version will again be brought to the screen by Fox.

Crystal Ball, The, an original story acquired by Paramount for production by Arthur Hornblow, Jr.

Deep Harlem, a Broadway stage play of two years ago. The property has been purchased by John Dorn and Associates for production with an all-Negro cast in New York.

Ethan Frome, a novel by Edith Wharton acquired by Warner Brothers as a possible vehicle for Bette Davis.

Fighting Littles, The, a new novel by Booth Tarkington, purchased by RKO. Richard Wallace will direct the film.

Gentleman From the West Indies, The, an original story of the life of Alexander Hamilton by Dorothy Thompson and Fritz Kartner purchased by MGM as a vehicle for Robert Taylor and Hedy Lamarr.

Gibson Girl, an original biography of Charles Dana Gibson, creator of the "Gibson Girl." The story has been acquired for spring production by Warners.

Gilded Pheasant, a novel by Stephen Morehouse Avery purchased by William Hawks.

Highlander, The, an original story on the life of Sir Harry Lauder, purchased by Leon Errol.

Hong Kong, an original story acquired by Paramount as a possible vehicle for Veronica Lake and Charles Boyer.

MOBBING THE MUSIC HALL?
MORNING TILL NIGHT?
THEATRE HOLDING OVER?

Howard Barnes, N. Y. Herald-Tribune, Says:

"'Suspicion' is a far finer film than 'Rebecca'. Hitchcock has made a brilliant film which is certain to move and amuse you as much as it makes your hair stand on end."

Kate Cameron, N. Y. Daily News, Says:

"Packed with suspense . . . Cary Grant and Joan Fontaine give fine performances —intensely exciting."

Bosley Crowther, N. Y. Times, Says:

"A tense and exciting tale, a psychological thriller packed with lively suspense."

Lee Mortimer, N. Y. Daily Mirror, Says:

"A high class package containing Miss Fontaine's most superb histrionics, large gobs of Alfred Hitchcock's suspense, swell settings, photography and background."

William Boehnel, N. Y. World-Telegram, Says:

"Has all the singular fascination of 'Rebecca', '39 Steps' and 'Lady Vanishes' . . . Will keep you mesmerized from beginning to end with its fine chacterizations and its mounting horror."

Cecelia Ager, PM, Says:

"A cinema masterpiece . . . It pays off the audience seeking entertainment, and the student seeking a model of film craftsmanship."

Rose Pelswick, N. Y. Journal & American, Says:

"Excellent entertainment . . . Hitchcock does a superb job in creating aud sustaining an absorbing mood . . . outstanding melodrama."

Eileen Creelman, N. Y. Sun, Says:

"Alfred Hitchcock again has created that extraordinary mood of suspense . . . This is a strange picture, powerful, with the tension mounting steadily."

Archer Winsten, N. Y. Post, Says:

"Suspenseful . . . rich in character observation . . . a distinctly superior picture."

Leo Mishkin, N. Y. Morning Telegraph, Says:

"Hitchcock at his best . . . And, you might say, when Hitchcock is at his best, there is nothing better, anywhere . . . 'Suspicion' stands as one of the terrific thrills of the season."

More of what the Exhibitor has to say About most Everything

CONSPICUOUSLY the motion picture exhibitor, as evidenced in these weekly flows of expression, resents and refuses a point of view which would make him the casual retail outlet of nationally sold merchandise, putting him in the same relative position as the corner store selling Chesterfields or cans of Del Monte.

This sequence of responses to Motion Picture Herald's invitation to the showmen of the theatres of the land gives renewed and reiterated evidence of the creative impulses with which so many of them approach their business of selling. They want to buy what they want, not what somebody wants to sell them because he has it to sell, a quota to fill.

Concurrently, too, there is expression of demand for information about the product, beyond mere ballyhoo, and with that, appreciations of the Herald's basic service of information about the merchandise. What these hundreds of customers are saying about what they want on the screen for their customers, gives in total some measure of what is success in pictures and opportunities for the continued betterment of the health and progress of the box office—which is where all the money comes from.

—THE EDITOR.

¶ With single features (as we play) program pictures are worthless. (Texos circuit)

¶ While we don't have giveaways, would like to see them done away with. (California circuit)

¶ Elimination of "B" pictures.
More new faces, new personalities. Some progress has been made in this direction, but not enough! (Pennsylvonio circuit)

¶ Single Feature Programs Nationally. (Indiona circuit)

¶ That pictures be sold according to the Neely Bill. Also that the distributors furnish more prints on their better pictures.—Iowa (Circuit)

¶ 1. The bettering of feature production which eventually will stamp out the worst evil of the industry—double features.
2. The expansion and improvement of short subject material and production to take the place of a companion feature.
3. Unity among all. No cliques and politics. Let's all work together for the common interest of the industry, rather than have a finger-pointing game. When things go wrong don't point the finger at one another in order to place the blame on some one for the condition.
4. Tighten up the production and economically, e. g., stop these payments of $100,000 to $200,000 for some book or play which, after it reaches the screen, lays a bigger egg than the bird that paid the ridiculous purchasing price—and don't publicize the enormous size of the payment, especially in these critical times—"It isn't cricket!" (Circuit)

¶ Showmanship has been forgotten by most movie men. We small fellows, who must wait from 14 days to a month for clearance, haven't much chance to use our ability except on certain cases. We are penalized because the big fellows delay bookings. Give us a chance by making fair clearance between first run and subsequent runs. The distributors ought to work in cooperation with exhibitors instead of only for themselves. New York (Independent)

¶ The one big thing, I think, that would help this industry is to eliminate double bills. Of course, to do this the producers must stop making pictures that are too weak to play alone. As long as these are made and forced on us we will have to continue with this evil. Also another important thing is to give the independent a better break on clearance. California (Independent)

¶ Well, in really plain speaking, I think the best thing for the industry and perhaps then for our whole country, would be for the big leaders to stop being cowed by labor leaders, and use a little of their own power to fight labor and labor methods, which are hurting not only the industry, but are jeopardizing our very democracy. STAN FRANKLIN, San Francisco, Colifornio (Independent)

¶ Primarily we object to rackets such as cash nights and giveaways as having no place in our business. Second, long clearances are unnecessary and greatly overated. 3rd, the method of booking in affiliated theatres such as triple billing via Hollywood Previews and switching "B" supporting features in the midst of the long run of a strong "A" picture is of no appreciable benefit to them and a decided handicap to us. BILL GRAEPER, Egyptian Theatre, Portland, Oregon. (Independent)

¶ Cut out "B" pictures; no more double bills. Can't someone make more than two reelers that might capture more of the lost art that Mack Sennet used to give us. Pennsylvania (Independent)

¶ Why not a poll for the "Ten Most Ill-advised Productions"; in other words, the stinkers. There is a tendency to lay too much stress on what makes money at the box-office, and not enough importance attached to interruptions in the customer's show-going habit. These mistakes and weaknesses should be discussed within the industry rather than without.

¶ Consent Decree! What a joke. One of the big fives salesmen today said: "If you want the third block, you will buy the first and second blocks or you don't get any. You will also buy the News and the same amount of shorts that you did last year." In other words, you will buy them all or none. About 30 per cent increase in price over last year. Massochusetts (Independent)

¶ Rapid developement of the new and younger talent under contract to studios but whose capabilities have not been recognized and developed. The handful of stars, now especially and who we have had to force on our public, will surely die of old age soon. Indiana (Independent)

¶ Don't like:
The Consent decree! "Jackrabbit" circuits! Anything over 35 per cent in small towns. Demanding small towns who play 6-8 weeks after larger towns charge same admission on big "specials"—"Gone With the Wind" and "Sergeant York!" so far.
Would like:
To see several boards made up of a producer, a distributor, a circuit exhibitor, a small town independent exhibitor to discuss our mutual problems and keep "Politicians" and government out of it. What does U. S. Attorney know about it? I say, let's solve our own problems with frankness, fairness, and confidence in one another. MRS. J. G. PIERCE. Story City, Iowa (Independent)

¶ I never cared who made the costumes, wrote the theme song or even directed the show. So, for my pet peeve do away with all that and I'll be yours for life. D. O. BEAUMONT, 2nd Lt. Infantry Theatre Officer, Camp McQuaide, California (Army theatre)

¶ A clearer understanding between the producer and small town exhibitor, which will,

"A BOX OFFICE BALL OF FIRE"

R K O RADIO PICTURES INC.

RKO BUILDING ROCKEFELLER CENTER NEW YORK RADIO CITY

November 13th, 1941

OFFICE OF THE VICE PRESIDENT

Mr. Samuel Goldwyn
7210 Santa Monica Boulevard
Los Angeles, California

Dear Sam:

Now that I'm back in New York after the preview of BALL OF FIRE and have had time to reflect on its qualities, I want to tell you that the memory lingers on. It has been a long time since I have seen a picture so completely satisfying as this latest production of yours. It is genuine entertainment, Sam, healthy and happy, full of fun and originality. The blending of comedy with romance and sentiment will make it, in my opinion, a box office ball of fire. You and everyone concerned in its making can take a bow.

Having read the script and knowing the splendid cast you had assembled, I was prepared to see a fine picture when I went to Hollywood, but BALL OF FIRE exceeded my fondest expectations. Gary Cooper has never had a role better fitted to him than that of Professor Potts and Barbara Stanwyck, fine actress that she is, was a revelation as "Sugarpuss" O'Shea, the night club "Ball of Fire" who burns up "Pottsy". The seven professors who learn about life from "Sugarpuss" furnish as delightful fun as I've ever seen and every member of the cast is excellent. Howard Hawks' work is brilliant. He has given the show pace and excitement as well as masterful direction. Needless to say, Gregg Toland's camera is still full of miracles.

I can assure you, Sam, that every member of our organization considers it a great privilege to distribute your productions and we are more than happy about BALL OF FIRE. It's a picture that will delight every patron and one that will start every exhibitor's New Year off just right.

Congratulations and best wishes,

Cordially,

Ned

as a consequence, enable him to run pictures best suited to his requirements and allocations best suited to his situation problems. MRS. W. A. WIGHT, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Oklahoma (Independent)

¶ Why is Gene Autry always such a hero? This seems to be hurting him a great deal at the box-office. We have always wondered why some company doesn't make an honest to goodness, down to earth serial. They have them over the air. All serials which we have played were too out of reason to hold the interest of our crowd. Why not have a family serial which will be interesting to all ages and types of people? Montana (Independent)

¶ I want more A & B pictures and no C features at all. Quit this making half-rate features for double bills. Just make me 30 good pictures and forget about the other 20 or 30. D. B. STOUT, Cairo, Illinois (Independent)

¶ An elimination clause in contracts of at least 20 per cent, which, in my opinion, will improve product. Minnesota (Independent)

¶ We want first, entertainment pure and simple. Propaganda, whether New Deal, Roosevelt, war or communistic socialism, have not only become a nuisance, but a box-office opiate as well. Small town exhibitors need one or two more producers like Republic. Features, except Westerns, should run 75 to 100 minutes. There ought to be a limit set to the preachment of sloppy democracy. The people still like good, wholesome, laugh-provoking pictures, and slapstick. JOSEPH GRAY, Gray Theatre, Spangler, Pa. (Independent)

¶ Give us better pictures—less tripe. New plots—fewer re-hash. More down to earth pictures for plain Mr. and Mrs. Smith—fewer grand opera re-makes. Metro certainly clings to the latter. Iowa (Independent)

¶ Send the stars out to the small towns; let the common people see them! It will make the star popular and the theatres money. HOWARD R. GAVIN, Lake Theatre, Polson, Mont. (Independent)

¶ Fewer and better pictures, less ballyhoo from producers and more quality in product, pictures we can make good to patrons on our advertising promises. Product that stresses entertainment and not propaganda. Oregon (Independent)

¶ Single bill—new blood in production. Let's have new stories, new ideas in pictures—witness "Citizen Kane." California (Independent)

¶ I would like to see the enforcement of the ban on advance showings of pictures to radio and newspaper and magazine gossip columnists. I would like to see a "public education" program via radio, newspaper and magazines on what industry as a whole is doing for national defense, charity, relief, better pictures, etc. E. K. LAIER, Sparta, Michigan. (Independent)

AGAINST:

"B" pictures
War pictures
Sermon pictures
Super-length pictures
Dual features
Controversial issues in films
Stars without good stories
"Highbrow" stories
Drawing-room drama

FOR:

Higher admissions
Old buying methods
Protection to single-house booker
Entertainment
Improvements in theatre plant
More "Will Rogers" and "Marie Dresslers"
Producer-exhibitor co-operation on product
Good two-reel comedies
Single features
Ticket-selling titles
Musical pictures
Action pictures
Less dialogue
An educational program addressed to public

¶ What the small town exhibitor needs most is a fair method of buying pictures. It gets awful tiresome, paying too much for all the in betweens and then 40 or even 50 per cent for the pictures that will do business and it is getting worse under the decree. If the film companies don't want small town theatres why don't they say so, and we will get into some business that is operated on a more fair basis. Kansas (Independent)

¶ Lower film rentals—and how. Less dictation as to how I can run my business by the film companies. California (Independent)

¶ Plaining speaking—the big stars make more money, in proportion to the effort expended, than any other type of workman, craftsman, or artist—and there have been too many crocodile tears shed over the fact that the life of a big star is all too short, and therefore they should be allowed to provide for a luxurious life after they're "thru," during the time they are at the top. Okay—that's fine, but let's have the big stars in more pictures. Instead of making only two to four a year, let's put them in six, eight or 10. I firmly believe that the public does not grow tired of really good talent—and the big stars have talent—not just refreshingly new personalities; otherwise they wouldn't and couldn't last. With all studios declaring that the "B"s are out, let them improve their "A"s by giving them plenty of star material. An "A" picture with two or three really big stars can be single-billed in any theatre, anywhere. Let's get back to singles in the only way possible—good pictures, good direction—and good casts. Kansas (Independent)

¶ What the industry needs most today is the trailer situation straightened out. Many a good picture is not grossing what it should on account of the price asked for trailers. (This does not include Metro or Warners.) In some instances we are paying more for a deluxe trailer than our rental cost on two full reels of shorts. Exhibitors and distributors alike are losing thousands of dollars of potential gross. Kansas (Independent)

¶ We need more good action and good comedy features with good titles. Pictures that our patrons like can be made at low production cost. The film company can make a good profit and sell to theatres like ours so everyone can be happy. We don't need so-called great productions; they always prove to be great flops at our box-office. Ohio (Independent)

¶ We would hope for a quick lessening of the excessive taxes which we must collect or pay—that is, in addition to the taxes every business man must pay. Our business is hit trebly. Many a business netting as much, or double as much, as our own escapes practically all excise taxes. We must collect 10 to 12 per cent—and the public does not consider that we are merely a collector. They have so much in the amusement budget, and know only that it's going to take a certain amount of that to attend a show. P. G. ESTEE, Broadway Theatre, Centerville, S. D. (Independent)

¶ Do away with blocks-of-five. Missouri (Independent)

¶ Why not make this a business? If the film salesman would not try to jack prices and argue for hours why it should be more, it might be easier for everyone. The exhibitor is naturally suspicious, after salesmen have talked for months before the decree what they are going to do to us. Let's all be honest or God help us both. Iowa (Independent)

¶ Constant efforts of sales managers and their staffs to worm more dough for rentals out of their accounts-sliding scales, so much to so much, plus so much thereafter-plus all your Saturdays and Sundays—and to heck with the rest of the week—you take the rap. Another unnecessary evil is blind checking of theatres—a costly procedure, and avails nothing, except another request for higher rentals. Oregon (Independent)

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Shortage of Space

Most acute problem facing producers in Britain at the moment is the shortage of studio space. The limits imposed on the use of studio stages through the Government commandeering and freezing storage and office space are holding up the plans of British and American companies here even more than the dereservation of studio technicians.

In a statement prepared by British producers recently for the Minister of Information, some 82 feature films were envisaged for the 1941-42 year. A maximum figure of films which could be produced on the floors currently available would probably not be more than fifty. Estimates are that this figure will be the outside total of films likely to be registered in Britain in the coming year.

Denham, the largest British studio, can probably not, under present circumstances, make more than 15 or 18 in a twelve month period.

Plans of the American companies here to produce world market films with a proportion of their frozen revenues have been considerably sabotaged by the manpower situation and the dereservation of key technicians. Even if some patchwork formula were devised to overcome this difficulty, the paucity of floor space prevents any materialization. The indications are that the American companies here, who quite apart from quota considerations, are eager to get to work on production for purely commercial reasons, and to secure films to supply the cinemas of Great Britain and the United States, will make further approaches to the Government in the hope of getting some action in this direction.

With Britain's battles being fought greatly in the air, and the defense of the country against Nazi aggression hanging to some extent on the R.A.F., it is not surprising that a wide proportion of contemporary British films have a flying flavor. The immense success here of "Target for Tonight" has probably given a further impetus. Balcon's "Ships With Wings" is awaited. It will have been premiered by United Artistes ere this reaches print. It deals with the Navy's Air Arm. Leslie Howard is at work at Denham on "First of the Few," a dramatization devised around the Spitfire and its inventor. General Film will handle this. Michael Powell is putting a final polish to "One of Our Aircraft Failed to Return," which Anglo American will distribute. Warners current contribution is "Flying Fortress." These and other companies have plans for further films with a background of aviation.

Howard, having spent much time on location and exterior work, is now at Denham, though another camera unit is still quartered at a certain British fighter station and a third is at the Vickers Wellington works. Howard, who is producing and directing the film in which he also stars, has been shooting during the week on a set representing the old Supermarine works at Southampton. Scenes shot here recreated the excitement of Summer 1922, when Britain won the Schneider Challenge Trophy. The set was assembled by art director Paul Sherriff from records loaned him by Vickers Armstrong. An early flying boat was loaned by the British Power Boat Co.

In the cast with Howard is Major David Niven, released for the film by his regiment, and the War Office. Others in the cast include Roland Culver, Rosamund John and Anne Firth.

The picture is being made by British Aviation Pictures.

Schoolmaster Comedian Will Hay, who recently made his directorial bow as co-director with Basil Dearden on "The Black Sheep of Whitehall," is to repeat his experiment. He and Dearden will again work together on his next comedy for Michael Balcon, "The Goose Steps Out," due for early production at the Ealing Studios.

"Flying Fortress"

While Walter Forde and his staff are busy on the set at Teddington directing the opening scene of Warners "Flying Fortress," even busier are the technical crew in the workshops building replicas of the huge bombers in which many sequences of the production will take place.

Going into the workshops is like entering vast aircraft hangars where new planes are being made. Wings, cabins, struts, propellers, bomb-racks, all the thousands of parts required in one of the stratospheric flyers, are being assembled under the supervision of men who know how planes are built, and are working from blue-prints and photographs of interiors so that every detail will be authenic.

One of the biggest sets yet used in a Teddington production depicts the editorial department of an American newspaper. Graham Cutts, casting director at Teddington, struck a simple solution of the problem of finding American-speaking newspaper men for this scene. An American correspondent gathered them from his index of United States reporters, who formerly worked on the Continent, and have been more or less stranded in London since Hitler over-ran Europe.

A liason officer has been appointed to supervise all details of studio work to secure authenticity of detail, and, in addition, men in Air Force blue, who have flown Flying Fortresses across the Atlantic and piloted them into action over Germany, patrol the sets and workshops with an eagle eye for mistakes.

Guildhall Rebuilt

The great Guildhall Chamber, gutted in the last raid on London, will rise again at Shepherd's Bush studios. It will be constructed to the actual size. Film draughtsmen have been allowed by the civic authorities to inspect the damaged premises in order to prepare their plans and drawings.

It will be the scene of the climax of Robert Donat's latest film, "The Young Mr. Pitt," being made by Twentieth Century Productions, and Donat will be seen making the stateman's last and most famous speech at the banquet in celebration of Trafalgar.

The huge hammer-beam roof destroyed in the blitz was a 19th century addition to the building, and it is interesting to note that the film reconstruction will show the original flat coffered roof with panels. City of London authorities will follow the film's example and replace a replica of this original roof on the Guildhall after the war.

With the last scene of Two Cities "Unpublished Story" in the can, a close up and sound track was taken of director Harold French—not however for public screening. Harold had received a recording through Alfred Hitchcock, of his daughter, who has been evacuated to Hollywood. The close-up and sound track were made for his daughter, and John Ojerholm of Olympic Labs is reducing this to 16 millimetres so that she can use her own machine.

Arthur ("Big Hearted") Askey without the assistance of his team mate Richard ("Stinker") Murdoch, has gone to work on yet another film for Gainsborough, "Back Room Boy." Moore Marriott, the artful Ancient of so many recent Gainsborough comedies, and Graham Moffatt, lend him comedy support. Herbert Mason directs. As usual, Maurice Ostrer is in charge of production, with Ted Black actual producer.

A copy of Michael Balcon's Fleet Air arm film, "Ships With Wings," has been given by Ealing Studios to the Admiralty with the request that they should pass it on as a present to the officers and men of H.M. "Ark Royal," to whom the film is dedicated and who helped to make it.

Balcon, production head of Ealing Studios, has an option on a story of the building by the Russians of the Dnieper Dam. The story is being prepared as a script for broadcast by Sergei Nolbandov and M. Danischewsky, both of whom are attached to Ealing Studios. Nolbandov and collaborated on the script of and directed "Ships With Wings."

The story of the building of the dam and the final heroic and tragic decision of the Russians to destroy it, rather than to let it fall into Nazi hands, will be traced through the eyes of a Russian family living within sight of the dam.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS REBEL AT COST AND QUALITY OF PROPAGANDA FILMS

Protest Prepared on Lack of Entertainment in Government Pictures for Which Screen Time and Rentals Are Asked

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

Blowing up to the velocity of a stiff breeze —which might quite easily develop later to gale power—a great deal of discontent is manifest currently in industry circles with the official handling of news as progaganda, and no less of propaganda as news. On the one hand exhibitors are becoming increasingly incensed at the way they are being chivvied and browbeaten into devoting screen space to dull propaganda films and sometimes being asked to pay for the privilege. In exhibitor circles, and in a far wider sphere, is an even keener disrelish at the alleged inefficiency and disinterest with which the Government is handling the business of news on the screen. Criticisms are being levelled not only in terms of news for the home screen, but no less for the screens of the U. S. and neutral countries.

Complaint was recently made by the Ministry of Information's Films Division that exhibitors were in many places failing to observe their gentlemen's agreement to devote screen time in every program to one of the Ministry's five minute films. Despite CEA assurances that the delinquent were but an obscure minority, considerable expression has been given in provincial districts to the discontent which exists at the quality of some of the films. In admitted cases exhibitors are refusing point blank to show each and every film or to slip a film into every program.

In some instances exhibitors are screening the MOI films at the end of the program so that they can serve as an exit march.

New Demands Made

Official demands from other authorities are being increasingly made for gratuitous screen time. In one instance exhibitors have been peremptorily asked to screen a film about gas-masks. It is a three reeler and they have been expected to show it, to pay a rental of 33s 4d, and to make good any damage.

Exhibitors, who are as public spirited as any other body of the counity, object to such demands on more than one ground. They object that they should be selectively chosen as a vehicle of "compulsory voluntary" progaganda, whilst other sections of the community are paid for advertising space devoted to national publicity. They have an even keener if more commercial viewpoint which asks, since they are providers of entertainment, that the propaganda which they are ready and anxious to assist shall be both entertainment and efficient propaganda, neither of which, they claim, it can too frequently be termed.

This latter criticism is one of the keenest currently directed against the news quality of the contemporary British newsreel, whether it be that for home or that for foreign consumption. Increasingly, it is stated, complaints are being received from the public on the dullness and lack of enterprise in wartime newsreels, which are found often to be a liability rather than an asset.

PINEWOOD STUDIOS MAY REOPEN

The Pinewood Studios, closed since the start of the war, may be reopened in January as the center of Government film production, it is reported. Pinewood is controlled by the General Film-Gaumont British interests. The Army film unit has taken over the Curzon Theatre in Mayfair.

Paul Soskin will join the Gaumont-British-Gainsborough producing company as a resident producer on the completion of his current film.

Industry and political critics of the British newsreel point significantly to the infinitesimal amount of footage devoted in American reels to British matter. There are no fears of lack of interest or collaboration in the U. S. camp. They are far too well aware of the inferior quality of the material available.

The newsreels themselves vigorously sidetrack any criticism on these grounds, pass the buck back on the MOI and the service departments with whom authority is vested, and with whom responsibility must lie. Control of newsreels is vested in the MOI's Films Division, though it is claimed to be collaborative control. In August last a committee was set up upon which sat representatives of the Newsreel Association and the Ministries, to oil the wheels, so to speak, of newsreel coverage, by co-ordinating the activities of the units and securing liaison between them and the Services. It was intended to help advance buildups of war stories and secure equal treatment for all. Results so far have not been apparent, and the scheme is considered in many newsreel quarters a complete flop.

Material secured under the Committee's auspices is pooled to all the units. It is further claimed that the material they have been allowed to get has been poor, lacking in news value and devoid of propaganda punch.

Whilst on the one hand one section of the newsreels claim this is greatly due to the dead hand of service interference and lack of imagination, it is claimed, and claimed forcibly, in another, that the root of the trouble lies in the fact that in the Films Division of the MOI no less, is there a complete and total absence of anyone with a background and training in the handling, treatment and issue of news, whether by means of the screen or on newsprint itself.

Pooling Kills Initiative

As a side issue the pooling system is said further to kill all initiative among the newsreels themselves.

The demand is now being made that the handling of newsreels should be transferred from the Films Division of the MOI to the more expert and energtic News Division. The noted liveness of the new minister, Mr. Brendan Bracken, is thought to be a potential help in this regard rather than a hindrance.

Another screen time problem facing exhibitors just now is that of the screen time they are compelled by law to devote to British film footage. Consequent on the progressive decrease in British production, it is certain that this year the number of Quota defaults is likely to be considerable. Prosecutions have begun in some cases, though it is authoritatively understood that the Board of Trade are prepared to be indulgent to those exhibitors who have been unable legitimately to secure enough films to fulfil their quota. Powers exist under the Films Act for exemptions to be given in appropriate cases.

Apart from the Quota year recently closed, the forthcoming twelve months period is looked upon with some misgiving by exhibitors as well as by renters. A statistical survey of the production prospects of the next twelve months suggests that if 50 British films are available that will be the top figure. CEA experts claim that 100 are necessary for exhibitors to fulfil a 15 per cent quota. The current quota figure for exhibitors is 17½ per cent.

With these considerations in view the CEA will continue to press their demand that the quota figure be set back to 15 per cent.

The Board of Trade have powers under the existing act to do this but action must be taken by December 31st for films registered in the Quota year commencing October 1, 1942, when the quota figure is due to be raised to 20 per cent.

The continued withdrawing of technicians and studio workers into the forces, plus the unavailability of studio space, referred to in the British Studios page of this issue suggests that production figures in the forthcoming period are likely to drop, at least, to the figure indicated.

Victory Scored

What is regarded in trade circles as a major tactical victory has been scored this week by the Liverpool section of the CEA who after a bitter and protracted fight have succeeded in getting the local Corporation to rescind a ruling that children should not be admitted to cinemas which opened on a Sunday under the recent order. The campaign to get cinemas opened in Liverpool and district took many months of intensive effort. They were the culmination of many years fighting. The Corporation, however, insisting that the opening of the cinemas was on behalf of men and women in the forces, refused to allow children under sixteen to attend.

Liverpool cinemas thereupon refused to open at all, and after the matter had been thrashed out in full Council between the industry and the local authorities, the rule was amended to permit children if accompanied by parents or other adults.

In another Lancashire town, Warrington, a like condition is still being imposed but indications are that further CEA campaigning will result in its removal.

Exhibitors in other areas are experiencing another minor headache, where police officials have insisted upon a condition of cinema licensing being that patrons be refused admission unless they are carrying gasmasks. In some districts the CEA have been able to get the condition withdrawn. Unfortunately the powers of the local police in the matter are wide and the Home Office cannot interfere.

Milder, Rose, Goldsmith Due

Max Milder, Warners managing director for Great Britain, will leave London early in December for New York for home office conferences, while David Rose, Paramount managing director in Great Britain, is in Lisbon awaiting a clipper to the United States.

Isador Goldsmith, president of Grafton Films, Ltd., a London producing company, is scheduled to arrive in this country from England early in December. He will bring with him a print of "Hatter's Castle," produced from the A. J. Cronin novel.

Kalmine Honored; Testimonial for Silver December 8th

Approximately 700 persons attended the testimonial dinner in Pittsburgh Monday night to Harry Kalmine, Warner theatre executive and former zone manager for the circuit, at the William Penn Hotel.

John Harris, national chief barker of the Variety Clubs, presented the guest of honor with a check for $5,000, net proceeds of the dinner, to be used to build a Kalmine recreation hall at Camp O'Connell for underprivileged boys, and a diorama of the camp as a personal gift. The camp was begun several years ago by Mr. Kalmine, Frank Harris, former Senator, and Ira Cohn for the local Variety Club.

Entertainment was provided by acts from local night clubs and the Stanley theatre. Among the out-of-town guests in attendance were: Al Schwalberg, Harry Goldberg, Mort Blumenstock, Leonard Schlesinger, George Dembow, Lou Goldberg, A. W. Smith, Jr., Robert Mochrie, Jack Cohn, Charles Kurtzman, Mike Cullen, Harry Mayer, Phil Spitalny and Abe Weiner.

Si Fabian Heads Silver Testimonial

Si Fabian of New York has been named general chairman of the Albany Tent nine committee planning a testimonial dinner at the Hotel Ten Eyck, Albany, December 8th, for M. A. Silver, recently promoted to Warner zone managership at Pittsburgh.

Mr. Silver, the first chief barker of the newly organized tent, is expected to relinquish his office at the testimonial in favor of L. R. Golding, Fabian Theatres divisional manager at Albany.

Assisting Mr. Fabian on the general committee will be: M. N. Grassgreen, 20th Century-Fox branch manager, treasurer; C. J. Latta, Mr. Silver's successor as New York state zone manager for Warner Circuit; C. A. Smakwitz, Warner assistant zone manager; Clayton G. Eastman, Paramount branch manager; Paul Krumenacker, Vitagraph branch manager; J. Myer Schine and Louis Schine, Gloversville; M. J. Kallet, Kallet Circuit, Oneida; Sam Rosen, Fabian Theatres, New York; H. L. Ripps, M-G-M branch manager; Joe Miller, Columbia branch manager; Nate R. Sodikman, Monogram branch manager; Max O. Westebbe, RKO branch manager; J. J. Spandau, Universal branch manager; Sidney Lehman, Buffalo Variety tent barker; Max Friedman, Warner zone booker; Harry Berinstein, Berinstein Theatres, Auburn; Abe Stone, Eagle, Albany, and Neil Hellman, Royal and Paramount theatres, Albany.

Harris Appoints District Heads

John H. Harris, national chief barker of the Variety Clubs of America, has made the following district appointments:

Sam Galanty for Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia; Marty Mullin for Boston, and to organize New Haven and New York; Elmer Rhoden for Kansas City and St. Louis; Mike Shapiro for Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Dayton; Alex Schreiber for Detroit, Milwaukee and Minneapolis; Eddie Shafton for Omaha and Des Moines; Paul Short for Dallas, Atlanta, Memphis, Oklahoma City, Los Angeles and Charlotte; C. J. Latta for Albany, Buffalo and Indianapolis; and R. J. O'Donnell to organize New Orleans, Chicago, Portland, Denver, San Francisco, Seattle and Salt Lake City.

These district representatives will cooperate with existing Tents in the cities assigned to them and will assist and guide interested industry people in organizing Tents in those cities without Variety Clubs.

These appointments are in line with Mr. Harris' plan to maintain a closer contact between the National Headquarters and the field and thus bring about a closer knit organization throughout the country.

Five hundred Washington Variety Club members and guests attended the Victory Dinner and Dance last Saturday night, November 22nd, at the Hotel Willard.

A bill of entertainment, headed by Abbott and Costello, took the place of speeches on the program, which all present agreed was the best in the history of the annual event. Tickets were $16.50 a couple.

Net proceeds of the affair will go into the club's welfare fund.

Annual Elections In Cincinnati

Rudy Knoepfle, Republic salesman, was re-elected president of the Cinema Club of Cincinnati at the annual election November 22nd, and Peter Niland was reelected secretary and treasurer. Albert Kolitz was named first vice-president, succeeding Marc Cummins, and Lef Bugie was chosen second vice-president, replacing Joseph McKnight. Trustees elected were: Irving Sochin, Milton Gurian, William Devaney, John Eifert, Ross Williams and Mr. McKnight. The installation dinner was set for February 22nd.

Harris Dudelson, Al Kolitz and Albert Weinstein have been elected canvasmen of the Cincinnati Variety Club. Reelected were: Allen S. Moritz, William Devaney, Peter Niland, Saul Greenberg, James J. Grady, F. W. Huss, Nat Kaplan and Andrew Niedenthal. These men, with William Onie, chief barker, Arthur Frudenfeld, Joseph J. Oulahan and Harry J. Wessel, past chief barker, will serve for the coming year. Mr. Moritz and Mr. Niedenthal were elected delegates to the national convention, with Mr. Onie and Mr. Devaney alternates. Mr. Moritz was also elected national canvasman.

The Philadelphia Variety Club will hold its election for a board of canvasmen on December 4th. Eleven men are to be voted on with the following automatically made members: Earle W. Sweigert, Jay Emanuel, Dr. Leon Levy, William J. Clark, Jack Beresin and Ben Amsterdam. Also to be elected is a national canvasman to represent the local tent and two delegates and two alternates to the national convention.

The annual banquet of the Philadelphia Variety Club will be held December 14th at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel. James J. Walker, former mayor of New York City, is expected to be toastmaster. Postmaster General Frank C Walker and Mayor Bernard Samuel of Philadelphia are scheduled to attend.

TAVERN "BANK NIGHT" . . USED IN ST. LOUIS

More than 500 taverns in East St. Louis and in St. Clair County, Ill., have banded together for a joint bank night patterned after the project used in theatres. The attraction is held on each Tuesday night, with the qualification that a winner must be in a tavern to collect. The taverns are thronged on that night, cutting seriously into theatre business. It costs each tavern $2 to participate in the game, and prizes range up to $250.

Columbia Net Is Up to $261,705

Columbia Pictures' net profit for the first quarter ended September 27, 1941, after all charges and provisions for Federal and other taxes, amounted to $261,705, which compares with a profit of $153,878 for the corresponding period ended September 28, 1940.

No provision has been made for the monies presently restricted in England as the company at this time does not have any basis on which to determine how much of these monies may be permanently blocked.

Working capital amounted to $11,619,219; current assets were $14,207,784, and current liabilities, $2,588,565.

"Results to date for the second quarter indicate a continued improvement in earnings," said Harry Cohn, president.

Testimonial Planned For Rubin, Manente

Over 300 associates and other friends of Nat Rubin and Frank Manente are expected to attend a joint testimonial dinner to be given in honor of the two recently promoted theatre men on December 1st, at Seven Gables Inn in New Haven, Conn. Mr. Rubin is now managing the Lyric, Bridgeport, after serving as assistant at the Poli, New Haven, while Mr. Manente, former student assistant at the Poli, is now assistant at the Globe, Bridgeport. Dinner and dancing will make up the program of the evening.

The "Cheer Show," sponsored by the Indianapolis Variety Club, this year consisted of a theatre circus show and was presented on the stage of Keith's theatre in Indianapolis. The show was free for all the underprivileged children and adults with tickets being distributed through all local welfare organizations. C. Arthur Landes, chairman of the committee in charge of this event, secured the full cooperation of the various unions and the theatre.

The Variety Club of Texas bid of $10,500 was accepted at the National AAU Convention in Philadelphia, Sunday, November 16th.

The Variety Club will sponsor the meet in Dallas and preparations have been made to make the affair one of the biggest in the history of the Tent. All proceeds—anticipated at $50,000 net—will go into the club's charity fund. Paul Short, chief barker, has named R. J. O'Donnell chairman of the committee that will handle the club's activities in regard to the meet.

D.A.R. Head Is Guest

Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was the guest of honor of the society's motion picture committee at a luncheon in New York Wednesday at the Therese Worthington Grant restaurant. Hal Hode, Columbia Pictures executive, spoke on "What Was Back of the Senate Subcommittee Investigation of the Movies?"

Preston Is Endicott Supervisor

A photograph appeared in last week's Motion Picture Herald of Lew Preston, with the caption that he was general manager of the Interboro Circuit in Brooklyn. Stanley Kolbert is general manager. Lew Preston, for the past seven years supervisor of the Endicott Theatres, Brooklyn, has resigned to join Interboro under Mr. Kolbert.

F-M SEEN AS 'DARK HORSE' TO AID RADIO INDUSTRY WHEN WAR ENDS

Sale, Construction of New Sets Increasing, in Spite of Defense Restrictions; New Advertising Campaigns Are Planned

Static free frequency modulation radio is the dark horse upon which many of the chief radio manufacturers are placing their blue chips in anticipation of the day when the war emergency ends. In it many in broadcasting see the most fertile new field for a swift and widespread expansion of their industry.

Despite pressure of defense orders, priorities, curtailed installment buying, and many other wartime restrictions, the sale of new FM receivers and the construction of new FM broadcasting stations is constantly increasing.

On November 1st 120,000 FM sets were in use, a manufacturers' survey reported. Nineteen commercially licensed FM stations were on the air, with at least half a dozen more due to open soon. Production of receivers topped the 1,000 per day mark last month. Being built are 41 stations.

Interest in this new medium is rising much more swiftly, in proportion, than the growth of television or standard broadcasting, FM Broadcasters, Inc., trade association of the "staticless radio" industry reports.

Materials Alloted

Leading radio manufacturers, including Stromberg-Carlson, General Electric, Zenith, Stewart-Warner, Pilot and other pioneer licensees of Major Edwin H. Armstrong's frequency modulation patents are allocating large proportions of restricted material to the manufacture of FM sets. With almost a dozen other manufacturers of FM sets they have reduced the output of low cost standard amplitude modulation receivers and used priority allocations for the construction of the frequency modulation sets.

This policy makes it possible to meet the demand in part for FM sets, one executive explained, and at the same time it makes sets available to acquaint the public with the advantages which are claimed for FM. It is hoped thus to build up a backlog of public demand for FM sets against the day when they may be produced in unrestricted quantities.

Current output, according to FM Broadcasters, is about 1,500 sets a day. As of November 15 they estimated that 130,000 FM sets were in use. The total evening audience now listening to the 18 FM stations in operation is estimated at a quarter of a million persons. The figure is not large compared to the circulation of standard broadcast programs. FM proponents point out, however, that the first FM station began commercial operation scarcely ten months ago. The current demand for sets is said to be 20 percent ahead of output.

Advertising and publicity in behalf of FM are being launched by many leading manufacturers. Stromberg-Carlson last week began a pre-Christmas series of newspaper and magazine insertions to stress the advantages of FM reception. Five insertions in each of two New York papers and three insertions in three afternoon papers are to be devoted to FM, plus two pages each in three national magazines.

General Electric, according to H. J. Deines, manager of radio and television advertising, is to devote a substantial part of its 1942 advertising of radios to FM models. Newspaper, magazine and radio campaigns are planned, in time to reach the Christmas market. Newspaper copy will be divided between "all out" promotion of FM in locations where stations are already operating and educational advertising to acquaint the public elsewhere with the new receivers.

In many cities local theatres have cooperated with radio dealers and distributors to display FM receivers in operation in lounges and lobbies. The tie-ins are said to have evoked considerable interest among theatre patrons. In Boston and Milwaukee theatres recently carried Presidential speeches from the stage via FM sets.

The largest number of receivers is in the New York area with an estimated 30,000 sets. Two stations are on the air there with ten more building or planned. Chicago has over 25,000 sets and three stations. In the month following the first programs over W59C, operated by the Chicago-Tribune, sales doubled to 10,000 receivers a month.

12,000 in New England

New England, served by Boston and Mt. Washington stations W43B and W39B of the Yankee network, claims 12,000 sets. Other localities reporting large FM sales within recent months include Detroit, 6,500; Los Angeles, 7,000; Milwaukee, 4,200; Pittsburgh, 3,500; Hartford, 3,000 and Albany-Schenectady with 3,500. The latter area is served by W47A, the only FM commercial station to report operating profits as yet.

Other cities, with FM stations about to open, or in the construction stage also report large anticipatory sales of receivers equipped for frequency modulation. These centers include, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Cleveland, San Francisco, and Kansas City.

Philadelphia's first FM station, W69PH, affiliated with WCAU, a CBS outlet opened on November 2nd. W53PH took the air on November 10th. It is operated by WFIL, an NBC outlet. Four other Philadelphia stations have been licensed.

The first commercial FM contract in Philadelphia was completed last month between WIP and Harry M. Dittman Advertising Agency, Philadelphia, for the Adams Clothes Stores. The contract is for WIP's FM station, W49PH, which is expected to be completed shortly after the first of the year and will operate 24 hours a day.

The American Network, FM's first chain, recently added five more members and stockholders. These include the St. Louis Star-Times Publishing Co., the Indianapolis Broadcasting Company, Inc., WCAE, Inc., of Pittsburgh, the National Life & Accident Insurance Co. of Nashville, Tenn., and the Constitution Publishing Co. of Atlanta, Ga.

Newspaper attention to FM stations, press ownership of which is still being contested by the Federal Communications Commission, is increasing. To open W59C the Chicago-Tribune published a 12-page special section devoted to FM. The Philadelphia Record had a similar special edition last week to promote new stations in that city.

The New York Herald Tribune this week became the first New York paper to list FM programs in detail when it added W71NY, Bamberger Broadcasting Service station to its radio schedules.

Expansion of New York City's municipal broadcasting station into the FM field was approved by the Board of Estimate last week when it voted an appropriation of $16,000 for an FM transmitter to supplement station WNYC the city's standard broadcast station. The new station, to be known as W35NY will broadcast both original and WNYC programs. Bids are currently being received for transmitter equipment and it is expected that the new station will be operating within six months.

Mutual Power Increased

Power for W71NY, the FM outlet of the Bamberger Broadcasting Company — Mutual station WOR, will be increased to its full authorized level of 10,000 watts on November 30th. The station has operated on a temporary power of 1,000 watts since it began commercial operation on April 1st. The new transmitter at 444 Madison Avenue will increase the station's range to 52 miles.

At least four of the FM stations now on the air are operated by newspapers, despite FCC opposition. They are W45D, Detroit Evening News; W59C, Chicago-Tribune; W55M, Milwaukee Journal; and the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram's experimental station. At least 20 other major newspapers, including the Philadelphia Bulletin, New York Daily News, Louisville Courier-Journal, the Globe-Democrat, and Star-Times in St. Louis, and the South Bend Tribune are building or have license applications pending for FM stations.

Advertising rates on the FM stations have been generally low. Only the Schenectady station has been self-supporting to date. The stations have exhibited a trend away from retransmission of standard broadcast programs and the majority of the 19 now in operation, even when owned by a regular broadcaster are putting out new program material.

Typical of the time cost on larger FM outlets is the rate card for W59C in Chicago. Class A evening time sells at $75 an hour with hour rates of $37.50 before 6:30 and after 10:30 P.M. Half hours cost $55 on the A time and $27.50 during other hours. Discounts are graded at 15 per cent for 52 weeks, 10 percent for 26 weeks and 5 per cent for 13 weeks. The Philadelphia basic rate is $60 per hour.

The third Chicago station, W67C, a CBS affiliate, broadcasts on a temporary power of 1,000 watts pending completion of its 10,000-watt tower at 1 North La Salle Street. W59C opened last month, W51C, Zenith Corporation outlet, has been on the air almost a year, commercially since March 1st.

RIVAL SELLS FIELD CHICAGO AIR TIME

Marshall Field III will tell Chicago about his newest publishing venture, a new interventionist newspaper, over the radio waves of the frequency modulation station operated by the Chicago Tribune, arch-isolationist leader of the Chicago circulation field and principal opposition to the new morning newspaper, the Chicago Sun.

Mr. Field's paper, it is reported, has signed a 52-week contract with W59C, frequency modulation outlet operated by the Tribune station, WGN. The contract, which calls for an hour a week for one year, sponsored by the new paper, will cost Mr. Field about $3,315, it is reported. Other standard radio stations, possibly including WGN, will be used for spot announcements and other special programs to plug the new newspaper.

NBC BUYS 4-YEAR-OLD MONOGRAM FEATURES FOR TELECAST PROGRAMS

But Major Distributors Still Refuse to Release Pictures for Medium; FCC Inspects New York Television Studios

Films for television were acquired from a large distributor for the first time this week when Monogram and NBC signed a contract making all of the 1937-38 Monogram product available for transmission over WNBT at New York. The so-called "Big Eight" have steadfastly refused to release any pictures, regardless of age.

It marks the first time that any film distributor, with the exception of minor local distributors holding states rights or the distribution franchise to outdated product, has sold its product to the visual broadcasters. There has been an increasing use of film on the New York programs of WNBT and the Columbia Broadcasting System outlet stations WVBW, WCBW, and the new Don Lee station in Los Angeles is also transmitting several hours a week of film.

Hitherto the films available for television have been almost exclusively non-theatrical commercial pictures, travelogues, educational reels or outdated productions by minor, and frequently defunct Hollywood producers. A number of scientific subjects and the recruiting and defense pictures produced for the U. S. government have also been available, lately, to the television studios.

ASCAP Music Helps

Lifting of the ban on ASCAP music over the major networks last month resulted in a sharp increase in the quantity and quality of films which NBC and CBS report they are using. Most of the available product is scored with ASCAP tunes.

This week the program announcement of WNBT, the NBC television outlet at New York listed half a dozen titles and star names familiar on motion picture screens. Jackie Cooper, Tim McCoy, Warren Hull, James Cagney, and Stuart Erwin were among the Hollywood "names" announced in NBC films.

The pictures, most of them three or more years old, have been acquired largely from independent distributors now holding exhibition rights, it is reported. The television studios report that there is no thawing in the attitude of the eight major producers, who have consistently refused to make their pictures available for transmission via commercial television.

Additional independent product recently booked by NBC include five Grand National Pictures, now held by Mohawk. The James Cagney and Stuart Erwin pictures are in this group. Harold Orlob has sold "One-third of a Nation" and "Back Door to Heaven" and Arthur Lee has sold four titles to WNBT.

The members of the Federal Communications Commission and members of their technical staff will come to New York on Monday, December 1st to examine NBC's color television and other technical aspects of the industry in the New York area. James L. Fly, chairman, announced the inspection on Monday.

The brief visit is not an attempt to review, or evaluate the work done by the two New York stations, WCBW and WNBT, which have been broadcasting 15 hours a week, or more, since commercialization was approved on July 1st.

The restriction of defense materials, and other radio priorities, coupled with the lack of progress being made with the synchronizing pulse for color television make it unlikely that the FCC will set standards on January 1st as was originally planned, according to Mr. Fly. The color subcommittee formed by the National Television Standards Committee is due to report on color experiments before January first. It was reported after a recent meeting that their report will contain no recommendation for standards.

The first motion picture about television is currently being filmed at the NBC studios by Jam Handy for distribution as part of a commercial series of short subjects for the Chevrolet Motor Company. Monogram exchanges will release the educational reel early in December. It will run approximately ten minutes.

Cartoon diagrams, models, and descriptions by NBC engineers are used to explain the transmission of the electronic images. Cullen Landis directed the picture.

Animated Films Used

A new series of educational animated films was inaugurated over NBC last week when the first of a group of "Science in Action" pictures prepared by two New York University professors was shown.

The series, illustrating simple scientific experiments, were made at the N.Y.U. Engineering school under direction of Professors Charles E. Gus and William R. Bryans. Arnold Cohan and Edward F. McDougal of the N. Y. U. staff collaborated in preparation of the films for television.

Live talent programs from the NBC and CBS studios still dominate the program time over television stations in New York. The total film time has seldom exceeded five or six hours a week. WNBT expanded its sports pickups this week when hockey and basketball games at Madison Square Garden were added to the weekly program.

Full length dramas are also being presented over WNBT. Last week "Blind Alley," by James Warwick, was enacted before the NBC camera. This week a regular network radio drama will be televised on Saturday when WNBT presents the Blue Network serial, "The Bishop and the Gargoyle."

An experiment in television productions is being launched by Myron Zobel, head of Telecast Productions, offering complete package shows to the studios. The first, starring Harry Hirshfield, Tony Sarg, Rube Goldberg, Russell Patterson and Otto Soglow, will be transmitted Friday evening, November 28th. Mr. Zobel recently announced an exclusive television contract with Elsa Maxwell.

Norman D. Waters, advertising agent, who recently proposed a government committee for coordinating television and defense, this week asked Lowell Mellett, director of the office of Government Reports and executive side to the President, to form a "fact-finding board without further delay" to study governmental aid to television.

TELEVISION TUBE AIDS AIR SAFETY

The patent office last week reported a new aviation navigational aid which combines six altitude, course, direction, landing and turn instruments in a single cathode ray tube image. An electronic beam, similar to that used in the television set reproduces the various coordinates in a single image on the tube screen. The device is assigned to the Sperry Gyroscope Company for development.

Odeon Circuit, Philco Announce Net Profits

The Odeon Circuit in London has announced a gross profit for the year ending June 21st, last of £643,287 (approximately $2,573,148). A total of £79,470 was appointed for ARP and War Damage Act contributions, and £96,892 (about $387,568) was carried forward.

The consolidated earnings of the Philco Corp., excluding its Canadian subsidiary, for the third quarter of 1941 amounted to $733,939, after provision of $1,125,000 for taxes, according to an announcement by James T. Buckley, president. This is equivalent to 53½ cents on each of 1,372,143 shares of common stock outstanding, as compared to 53 cents in the same period last year.

In Montreal, Confederation Amusements, Ltd., has declared a dividend of $4 payable December 18th to shareholders of record November 29th.

Network Affiliates Form Organization

The Association of Network Affiliates, Inc., was formed in Chicago at a two-day meeting last week at the Drake Hotel by representatives of nearly 100 independent stations affiliated with networks. The initial step taken was to organize a drive against permitting super-power operation by existing clear channel stations in excess of 50,000 watts.

The organization holds that an increase in power beyond that point would create a monopoly of broadcasting power in the hands of a few, so that the independents would be unable properly to serve their communities.

Eugene Pulliman, president of station WIRE, a 5,000-watt station at Indianapolis, was elected president of the new organization.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

This is the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address your reports to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

ADAM HAD FOUR SONS: Ingrid Bergman, Warner Baxter, Susan Hayward—Expected this to flop, but it did very well with our heavy week-end business. Word-of-mouth advertising helped. Susan Hayward and Richard Denning turned in a couple of fine performances. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 1-3.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and small town patronage.

ANGELS OVER BROADWAY: Douglas Fairbanks. Jr., Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell—The public seems to want a show to cheer them up these days. They would rather see the "glitter" of Broadway, than backstage. Poor opening and the second night pitiful. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 29-30.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

ARIZONA: Jean Arthur, William Holden, Warren William, Porter Hall—An excellent adaptation of Kelland's fine book. Columbia has produced in this film an epic of the days of the Arizona territory before the coming of law and order. Not a super-western, but rather a beautifully recorded picture of action and stirring romance with just enough history interjected to give it background. William Holden deserves extra credit for his excellent and realistic acting as does Jean Arthur who, of course, has been good since way back. Warren William and Porter Hall provide the skullduggery with perfection. This is a real interest-holding picture and should be favorably received anywhere. Running time, 125 minutes. Played November 15.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HARMON OF MICHIGAN: Tom Harmon, Anita Louise—Just another football story. No draw, but guess Harmon was never much in Minnesota. Running time, 66 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

HERE COMES MR. JORDAN: Robert Montgomery, Claude Rains, Edward Everett Horton—A few more pictures like this and Mr. Montgomery will be back driving ambulances for good. He can come and pick us up at the Centre.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HERE COMES MR. JORDAN: Robert Montgomery, Claude Rains, Edward Everett Horton—Good draw, but believe this was a little confusing to my patrons. They should see this from the start to really enjoy it. Should easily be in the best ten of this year.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

OUR WIFE: Melvyn Douglas, Ruth Hussey, Ellen Drew, Charles Coburn—Poor business for a better than average feature. We played it on a Bank Night and am glad I did. Running time, 95 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

PENNY SERENADE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—How much Irene Dunne looks like Gloria Swanson, and at times she is almost as good an actress. Audiences liked it in general and it did very pretty business. Running time, 120 minutes. Played October 9-11.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

PHANTOM SUBMARINE: Anita Louise, Bruce Bennett—Spoiled because Miss Anita Louise has to "call in the Navy." An otherwise good melodrama scuttled by completely improbable motivation. "Ice-Capades" on same bill; nice stuff. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 13-15.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

RICHEST MAN IN TOWN: Frank Craven, Eileen O'Hearn—It smells. And so did business. And the baby powder from "Four Mothers" which I played with it, didn't help an awful lot. Running time, 63 minutes. Played October 26-28.—N. W. Mason, Academy of Music, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

SHE KNEW ALL THE ANSWERS: Joan Bennett, Franchot Tone—A very fine piece of entertainment that didn't do the business we anticipated.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

THIS THING CALLED LOVE: Rosalind Russell, Melvyn Douglas, Binnie Barnes—That thing called censorship did something to this one, but there was enough left to draw in and please the adults plenty. Excellent first-of-week business. Running time, 98 minutes. Played October 26-28.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

TILLIE, THE TOILER: Kay Harris, William Tracy—A good cast has been selected for this picture and feel sure the pictures in the future will build themselves up as good as the "Blondie" series. Running time, 62 minutes. Played October 31-November 1.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

TWO LATINS FROM MANHATTAN: Joan Davis, Jinx Falkenburg—Fair entertainment to average business. Seemed to set well with the ladies. Running time, 66 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

VOICE IN THE NIGHT, THE: Clive Brook, Diana Wynyard—Had a special press review for this, with clergymen and prominent citizens invited, and it made a tremendous impression, netting me much word-of-mouth advertising for regular playing time the end of the month. Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 13.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can.—Industrial and mining town patronage.

YOU'LL NEVER GET RICH: Fred Astaire, Rita Hayworth—Very well liked, but business was very poor. Everybody likes to see Astaire dance and Hayworth was a very able partner for him. I'd like to say that this feature was the first one that I've played in months that didn't lead the children to think that liquor was a necessity of life, as there wasn't a drinking scene in the whole feature. Running time, 88 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BIG STORE, THE: Marx Bros., Tony Martin—These boys are all right with me. I have read where a few exhibitors want them to really quit. I know plenty I'd rather see give up acting than these gentlemen. Plenty good gags and laughs in this one. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 22-23.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ga-Ana Theatre, Georgiana, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

BIG STORE, THE: Marx Bros., Tony Martin—Pack up your troubles in your old kit bag and laugh, laugh, laugh. Most people say, I don't like the Marx Bros., they are so silly, but those people are the first to arrive at the theatre on opening night. The boys are floorwalkers this time, in one of their best comedies to date. Hope they have another farewell picture as good as this one next year and years to come. The dialogue in these pictures is fast, very fast, and I am inclined to believe this is one reason some people do not like the Marx Bros. They do not get the drift of most of the wise cracks. Chico and Harpo are better than ever with their music. Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 2-4.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

HONKY TONK: Clark Gable, Lana Turner—A typical Gable picture that did exceptional business. Everyone enjoyed it. We held this one over in our second house and it continued to draw. Needless to say any more about a picture like this. And Gable is far from slipping. Running time, 105 minutes. Played October 10-14.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD: Claudette Colbert, James Stewart—Good picture, but no draw. Got a bad break, the first real snowstorm. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 27-28.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

MARRIED BACHELOR: Ruth Hussey, Robert Young—Here's another surprise hit from Metro. Laughs galore and the people love it. Anyone that isn't convinced that Robert Young is one of the smoothest actors in Hollywood had better talk to his patrons. Both sexes. He deserves the best roles that MGM has. He can handle any of them. The slanguage used in this picture has the audience in stitches and the supporting cast is great. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 22-25.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

SMILIN' THROUGH: Jeanette MacDonald, Brian Aherne, Gene Raymond—We set this picture in for only three days, but it did such big business, we had to carry it over in our other house due to our own commitments. Another lesson, not to over-emphasize our screening room diagnosis. The "Friendly Company" is just bubbling over with box office hits! Running time, 100 minutes. Played October 19-21.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

THEY MET IN BOMBAY: Clark Gable, Rosalind Russell, Peter Lorre—After seeing those Victoria Cross scenes, I didn't know whether to go out and lynch somebody, or whether I should be lynched myself for playing the picture. Most of the patrons were as mad as I was, and business flickered. Running time, 93 minutes. Played October 16-18.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

TRIAL OF MARY DUGAN, THE: Laraine Day, Robert Young—A punkaroo if ever there was one. What did they do with the dramatic suspense pinned on Norma Shearer in the first one Patrons kicked. Running time, 89 minutes. Played September 25-27.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

WHEN LADIES MEET: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Herbert Marshall—It flopped for us like all pictures of this type. We just can't get people to come on a picture like this. The first half of the picture was fair, but when it went dramatic, it went bad. No good for small towns. Business fair Sunday, but it died the other two days. Played November 2-4.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

WHEN LADIES MEET: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Herbert Marshall—This picture did a big business in spite of screening room forebodings. Embellished by a typical cast of MGM stars, each having his own following, it seemed to please everyone and the word-of-mouth helped. Sold a big benefit to a Ladies' Club. Running time, 101 minutes. Played October 15-18.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

WHISTLING IN THE DARK: "Red" Skelton, Ann Rutherford—Our patrons did not seem to care much for "Red" Skelton. The kids got a kick out of it, but the adults found little to entertain them. Business below average. Played October 31-November 1.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

ZIEGFELD GIRL: James Stewart, Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner—This picture failed to draw for me. Was entirely too long. Lana Turner and James Stewart were very good and really made the show. Box office was rotten. Played October 8-9.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

Monogram

ROLLING HOME TO TEXAS: Tex Ritter—If this is the best that Monogram and Ritter can do, then I'm glad they've parted company. My patrons laughed at the wrong time. One of the worst excuses for a western I've played recently. No reality what-

PRODUCT DIGEST

Product Digest? It's the very thing every manager in America has been looking for since "Covered Wagon" days. It's tops.

H. L. RICHARDSON
Smalley's Plain Theatre
Fort Plain, New York

This is my 31st year in the Theatre Business and it is the best thing that has come along to help me intelligently book and exploit pictures.

H. E. MILLER
Miller Theatre
Festus, Mo.

I do my booking largely by its use.

R. D. PAGE
Maury Theatre
Mt. Pleasant, Tenn.

I refer to it most every day as your files have all the information and you don't have to look elsewhere.

FRANK WOLF
Center Theatre
Philadelphia, Pa.

I can truly say that I would not be without it.

GEORGE LABY
Victory Theatre
Holyoke, Mass.

We find your Product Digest as now being compiled very easy to use.

J. G. CALDWELL
Princess-Caldwell Theatres
Aurora, Mo.

Product Digest is in constant and daily use.

ART BOWMAN
Star-Arbo Theatres
Kansas City, Missouri

For quick reference of necessary information it has no equal.

W. J. WILKE
Liberty Theatre
Graham, Texas

It is a great asset in every respect, especially for exploitation of pictures. Your advance reviews and tips are great.

J. G. SAMARTANO
Loew Poli-Palace Theatre
Meriden, Conn.

We appreciate very much the accurate, advance write-ups of the features. It is a time-saver when doing our bookings.

J. W. RICHLEY
York Theatre
York, Pa.

Product Digest is complete, dependable and compiled in a splendid manner. It's not idle gossip when I say we will still be using last year's Product Digest for the next few seasons.

JOSEPH A. FORTE
Parker Theatre
Darby, Pa.

I think the Product Digest of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD is about everything a showman could ask for.

FELIX H. TISDALE

a weekly feature in

"... everything a Showman could ask for"

It is the best system I have ever used.

WALTER BUENGER
Pecos & Grand Theatres
Fort Stockton, Texas

Product Digest is one of the biggest helps in buying, booking and exploitation of pictures that has ever been put before an exhibitor.

C. L. FIRMAGE
Firmage Theatre
Milford, Utah

It is possible to maintain this section with a minimum of time and effort and it provides a maximum amount of information indexed in such a way that it is readily obtainable.

W. CALDWELL
Lyrice Theatre
Scottsville, Ky.

The idea, the system and the method of reference of your Product Digest is excellent.

HUGH W. BRUEN
Bruen's Whittier Theatres
Whittier, Calif.

I can say that it is the most complete and satisfactory way to keep up on pictures, offered by any paper.

JIMMIE REDMOND
Bonham Theatre
Fairbury, Nebraska

We use this feature all of the time and find it very helpful.

LYLE BRIGHTBILL
Auditorium Theatre
Cando, N. D.

I have learned to rely so much on my binder for booking and exploitation that I would be lost without it.

L. C. LAMPO

ever. The children didn't even like it. Ritter not as popular as he once was.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Lynne Overman—Good picture, beautiful color and did the best business yet on a Dotty Lamour vehicle. Patrons well satisfied and so am I at the box office. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 3-4.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

BUY ME THAT TOWN: Lloyd Nolan, Constance Moore—See review on "Nothing But the Truth," Paramount.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Lynne Overman—Sat in the office and happily listened to the audience screaming at Bob Hope. Did fine holiday business. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 6-8.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—Good business. Theme of picture very timely. Many laughs but story very thin and supporting cast not so hot. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 9-10.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Lynne Overman—We expected extra business on this feature, but it failed us. Personally, did not care for it, but it seemed to satisfy most of our patrons. Our folks like Dorothy Lamour, but do not care too much for Hope. And we have him again next week. We were just able to buy a savings stamp after paying expenses and giving Paramount 40 per cent. The small town exhibitors should boycott these 40 per cent features. Played November 9-11.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

FORCED LANDING: Richard Arlen, Eva Gabor—Not bad. Could have been better. It was very intcresting. No complaints from patrons. Running time, 62 minutes. Played November 7-8.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

IN OLD COLORADO: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—Not up to the "Hopalong Cassidy" standard, but always does business. Good for week-ends.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

I WANTED WINGS: Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Veronica Lake—Good aviation picture, quite musical at B. O. Only kicks were disappointments in much-touted Veronica Lake. From the neck up she was reminiscent of El Brendel, and as to performance, was definitely overshadowed by Constance Moore. Running time, 135 minutes. Played November 16-18.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

REACHING FOR THE SUN: Joel McCrea, Ellen Drew, Eddie Bracken—No draw, but an entertaining little picture. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 5-6.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

ROAD TO ZANZIBAR: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—Well received second run on week-end with western feature. Still does business at box office.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—Very good. Carey excellent.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

THERE'S MAGIC IN MUSIC: Allan Jones, Susanna Foster—The young star (Miss Foster) and the other young musicians outclassed by far some of the high-powered operettas that we are forced to show (to empty seats). Played October 31.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

CORRECTION

Legal Notice of PARAMOUNT Trade Showings published for the benefit of exhibitors generally in the November 22nd issue of Motion Picture Herald.

THREE CONTRIBUTORS RESUME REPORTS

Three contributors, whose reports have been missing for some months, have resumed writing to "What The Picture Did For Me" department. They are:

FELIX H. TISDALE, Ga-Ana Theatre, Georgiana, Ala.

STANLEY LAMBERT, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis.

A. E. ELIASEN, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

Read the reports from these and other contributors in the adjoining columns.

Republic

ANGELS WITH BROKEN WINGS: Binnie Barnes, Gilbert Roland, Mary Lee—Vive Binnie Barnes! She made this picture into a riot with rather poor material and, for the most part, sickening support. Played with "Sixty Glorious Years" in which the dialogue was quite unintelligible and we scored a record number of walk-outs, after Binnie had done her stuff. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 16-18.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

DOCTORS DON'T TELL: John Beal, Florence Rice—Average business on a cops and robbers picture which bore no resemblance to the Liberty magazine story of the same name. Just a small picture. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ICE-CAPADES: Dorothy Lewis, James Ellison, Jerry Colonna—See review on "Phantom Submarine," Columbia.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

PALS OF THE PECOS: Robert Livingston, Bob Steele, Rufe Davis—A suitable western. We played with "San Antonio Rose."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theartre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SIS HOPKINS: Judy Canova, Bob Crosby, Charles Butterworth, Jerry Colonna—No getting around it. Republic has something in this girl Canova. This is the best musical comedy we have seen in some time. Can you imagine Judy Canova and Jerry Colonna in college? A riot of fun, and music by Bob Crosby and orchestra. Running time, 98 minutes. Played October 29-30.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CITIZEN KANE: Orson Welles—Here is a wonderful piece of work that brought forth divided opinion from my ranks. I thought it was fine, as did the majority of the people who attended the performances. However, there were some who either did not like it or just did not get it. Business was just average. This is one case where the length was justified. It was necessary for the plot. It deserved better than it got. Running time, 119 minutes. Played November 13.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

JUNGLE CAVALCADE: Frank Buck—Double-billed with Paramount's "Life With Henry," starring Jackie Cooper. This made a good week-end bill in this location, as we have no "action" fans here. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 7-8.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

KITTY FOYLE: Ginger Rogers, Dennis Morgan—Played this second-run with no business to speak of. Thought is, should have done better.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PRAIRIE LAW: George O'Brien—Satisfactory fan fare for our western fans.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SCATTERGOOD BAINES: Guy Kibbee, Carol Hughes—Double-billed with Rudy Vallee in "Too Many Blondes," which is 7,000 feet of film. This was the first "Scattergood" and didn't get enough comments to judge whether they like it or not. Personal opinion, it is a good series. Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 31-November 1.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

SIXTY GLORIOUS YEARS: Anna Neagle, Anton Walbrook—See review on "Angels With Broken Wings," Republic.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

SUNNY: Anna Neagle, Ray Bolger, John Carroll, Edward Everett Horton—This was a good little picture that pleased all who saw it, but that was only a few. I have never been able to sell a picture without a selling name. Our business was just as short as the name of this one. Running time, 98 minutes. Played October 15-16.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ga-Ana Theatre, Georgiana, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

TOM, DICK AND HARRY: Ginger Rogers, George Murphy, Burgess Meredith—What a flop. Poor Ginger, this certainly is hard on your stock. Business very poor. Ran a fashion show and saved the day.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BELLE STARR: Randolph Scott, Gene Tierney—Good picture and good business. Very good color, but cast is a little weak to draw any big business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BLOOD AND SAND: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Rita Hayworth, Nazimova—A good picture that was a little too long for some of the customers. Good color and nothing could have been added to the room where Rita entertained Tyrone. Lavishly produced in this part. Running time, 125 minutes. Played October 19-20.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ga-Ana Theatre, Georgiana, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

BLOOD AND SAND: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Rita Hayworth, Nazimova—Business poor. Picture failed to attract even foreign-born element from southern Europe, of which we have more than several. It is evident to us, if not to the Hollywood producers, that baloney is baloney, no matter how thin you slice it. Running time, 125 minutes. Played October 26-27.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN RIO: Sidney Toler, Mary Beth Hughes—Average Charlie Chan to average business. If you never play it, you haven't missed anything. Running time, 62 minutes. Played November 4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DANCE HALL: Carole Landis, Cesar Romero—Only fair.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST, THE: Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne, Cesar Romero—A good musical that did extra business. I like these pictures with a variety of specialties as the dance numbers of the colored boys and the Ink Spots were the sole reason for some of my extra business. Running time, 91 minutes. Played October 12-13.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ga-Ana Theatre, Georgiana, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN AT LARGE: Marjorie Weaver, George Reeves—Entertaining picture which failed to draw. Lacked star power. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 7-8. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOON OVER MIAMI: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Robert Cummings—Very pleasing to the eye. Box office slightly above average. Nothing else should matter. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 2-3.—A. E. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

MOON OVER MIAMI: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Robert Cummings—One of the most beautiful pictures Pve ever seen. It was also a honey at the box-office. These stars have always been good with me and this picture will make them even better. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 2-3.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ga-Ana Theatre, Georgiana, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE: George Montgomery, Mary Howard—Good western which pleased the week-end trade. Running time, 56 minutes. Played November 14-15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THAT NIGHT IN RIO: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Carmen Miranda—Old, but excellent. Fox musicals are certainly the best, especially when they are in color. This feature was enjoyed by a better-than-average crowd. Very good. Played November 7-8.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

TOBACCO ROAD: Charley Grapewin, Marjorie Rambeau, Gene Tierney—Old and no good. Played November 6.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idabo. Small town patronage.

YANK IN THE R. A. F., A: Tyrone Power, Betty Grable—Good picture and good business. The evacuation of Dunkirk is very thrilling. Running time, 97 minutes. Played Novemhber 12-13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

YANK IN THE R. A. F., A: Tyrone Power, Betty Grable—Tremendous business! We exploited this by having the Red Cross choose a blonde "Miss Yank in the R. A. F." and we broke pictures in stories regularly in the paper. The Mayor and Commander of the American Legion co-operated in ceremonies in front of the theatre on opening night. This one did such socko business, it was held over an additional three days in our other house. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 6-10.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

United Artists

GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Jack Oakie, Paulette Goddard—Very silly to most of the customers. Gave it my best in advertising which was not good enough to give the box-office what I expected. Will do for one day, but is not a repeater for me. Running time, 126 minutes. Played November 9-10.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ga-Ana Theatre, Georgiana, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

THAT HAMILTON WOMAN!: Vivien Leigh, Laurence Olivier—Played this in Navy Week, and it went over with a bang. Fine acting by Vivien Leigh and Henry Wilcoxon and whoever played Lady Hamilton's mother. Running time, 128 minutes. Played October 23-25.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

Universal

BADLANDS OF DAKOTA: Robert Stack, Ann Rutherford, Richard Dix, Frances Farmer—The kind of feature we enjoy showing. Business good and the feature didn't cost us a lot either. Was well received by all. I still say that if Hollywood will make shows for the people who support the theatres, rather than try to make pictures for those who never attend, that we won't be in any depression. Running time, 74 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

BURMA CONVOY: Charles Bickford, Evelyn Ankers—Slow, and business slower. A picture to pass. Running time, 60 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

FLYING CADETS: Edmund Lowe, William Gargan, Peggy Moran—Good action feature that pleased. Used on Friday-Saturday instead of a western and surprisingly, it did O. K. Running time, 60 minutes. —Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLD THAT GHOST: Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Joan Davis, Micha Auer—The best by these two and played to the poorest business. I believe the boys are on the way out already. Running time, 86 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLD THAT GHOST: Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Joan Davis, Mischa Auer—The very sight of Costello makes me and most of my customers laugh. That's what this world needs more of now, I think. They are still good at the box-office and I hope they will keep up the good work. This was better than their last one with me. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 8-9.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ga-Ana Theatre, Georgiana, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

IN THE NAVY: Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Dick Powell, Andrews Sisters—This one certainly kept the cashier busy and grossed a lot more than "Buck Privates." Universal was smart and it's a good cast and the public don't get too much of Abbott and Costello, so are ready for more. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 10-12.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

IT STARTED WITH EVE: Deanna Durbin, Charles Laughton, Robert Cummings—In our opinion, this was the best by Durbin, Laughton and company. Received many favorable comments and many expressed surprise at Laughton's ability to play a part that bordered so much on comedy. Would like to see him in this role again. Business slightly above average and not checked. Running time, 95 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

MASKED RIDER, THE: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight, Nell O'Day—Good western. Brown becoming popular here. Plenty of action and lots of comedy seems to be what my patrons want. Running time, 60 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

MOB TOWN: Billy Halop, Huntz Hall, Gabriel Dell, Bernard Punsly—Good draw. First by these kids here. Feature well received. Running time, 62 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

MOONLIGHT IN HAWAII: Johnny Downs, Jane Frazee, Leon Errol, Micha Auer—Just a mediocre musical that should be played on a double bill or passed. Running time, 60 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

SAN ANTONIO ROSE: Jane Frazee, Robert Paige, Lon Chaney, Jr.—Real good fan fare that did us business. Lots of entertainment for week-end billings.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SING ANOTHER CHORUS: Johnny Downs, Jane Frazee—Poor. Should be shelved by Universal as it will ruin any other musical by the same cast. Would advise playing "Moonlight in Hawaii" ahead of this if you're playing both. Running time, 64 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

STAGE DOOR BUCKAROOS: Johnny Mack Brown—A very good action western that was substituted for another feature in the last minute. So business was poor, but not due to feature. Running time, 60 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS: Irene Dunne, Robert Montgomery, Preston Foster—Good show to no good business. This type of feature dies after the first day in this situation. Running time, 95 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

WHEN THE DALTONS RODE: Randolph Scott, Kay Francis—This is the type of show that will go over in the small town. It is packed full of action, comedy and romance, and there is not a dull moment from the time it starts 'til the end. It is one of the best action pictures we have played. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 23-25.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Can. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

DEVIL DOGS OF THE AIR (RE-ISSUE): James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—Good re-issue.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson T8heatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

DEVIL DOGS OF THE AIR (RE-ISSUE): James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—Well received. Business good. Think it should take anywhere.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can. General patronage.

DIVE BOMBER: Errol Flynn, Fred MacMurray, Ralph Bellamy—Excellent color photography and well done in all departments, but unnecessarily long for its plot. Crowd was just average. It is very hard here this year to get people in to a show. I am campaigning against pictures where length is there simply for prestige. It is a bad sign when people jump the gun at the end of a picture; it shows they have been impatient waiting for the end. Running time, 132 minutes. Played November 14-15.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

FOUR MOTHERS: Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola Lane, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn—See review on "Richest Man in Town," Columbia.—N. W. Mason, Roseland Theatre, New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Can. Industrial and mining town patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SQUADRON: Ronald Reagan, James Stephenson, Julie Bishop—Roaring motors of the airplanes again take you up into the skies for an hour and a half of real entertainment. Location is R. A. F. in England. Ronald Reagan supported by an excellent cast give you their best. Technical work was very good. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 12-13.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

LAW OF THE TROPICS: Jeffrey Lynn, Constance Bennett—Good picture and fair business. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR BABY: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Ronald Reagan, May Robson—A nice program picture that did better business than I expected. Everyone that saw it was pleased with it. Warners very seldom send us a real bad one. Running time, 102 minutes. Played October 26-27.—Felix H. Tisdale, Ga-Ana Theatre, Georgiana, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

NAVY BLUES: Jack Oakie, Ann Sheridan—Played this one late, but we cleaned up on it. The combination of Sheridan, Oakie, Martha Raye and Jack Haley seemed to pull the crowds in like a magnet. The trailer was exceptionally good and did a lot to sell this picture. Running time, 108 minutes. Played October 26-31.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

OUT OF THE FOG: John Garfield, Ida Lupino—No entertainment value and no luck at box office. People can get enough gloom from papers without paying to see something of this type. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 19-20.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

SERGEANT YORK: Gary Cooper, Joan Leslie—Did the biggest business since "G. W. T. W.," with this one, in spite of running it single feature at advanced prices. No squawk on the price, either. One of the top pictures of the year. Running time, 135 minutes. Played October 3-9.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

SHADOWS ON THE STAIRS: Frieda Inescort, Paul Cavanagh, Heather Angel—Nice program picture

THIEVES FALL OUT: Eddie Albert, Joan Leslie—Good comedy. A change from the usual run. Well produced and directed. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 5-6.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

FRENCH FRIED PATOOTIE: Alan Mowbray—Real fine entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

KITCHEN QUIZ, THE: Quiz Reel—Different. Passable.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MASTER OF THE CUE: Willie Hoppe—Much to my surprise, great interest was shown in this one. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

YANKEE DOODLE ANDY: Andy Clyde—A very entertaining short. Play it if you're looking for a good comedy.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

HELPING HANDS: Our Gang Comedies—Good Our Gang comedy, which pleased. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LIONS ON THE LOOSE: Pete Smith Specialty—Always a good short with Mr. Smith at the mike. This is something different. Two lion cubs, a monkey, a lamb and python all on the same set. Very good short. Running time, 9 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

LIONS ON THE LOOSE: Pete Smith Specialties—Extra good.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: No. 206, Vol. 13—If something isn't done about this news before long, we will all go crazy. Put Milton Cross, Jean Paul King, or even Edwin C. Hill on to this reel and fire the other three. It will be a big improvement. Running time, 9 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: No. 208, Vol. 13—With three new good commenators and a good titled head and tail piece, with good music, then and only then will this news amount to a dam. Running time, 9 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

OFFICER POOCH: Technicolor Cartoons—Cute and fast-moving color cartoon. Any audience will like it. This series is getting around finally to more popular appeal. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Paramount

CHILD PSYKOLOJIKY: Popeye The Sailor—Popeye is still a great favorite here, especially with the youngsters. He brings more applause than any other cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

EUGENE, THE JEEP: Popeye The Sailor—Average Popeye cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GABBY GOES FISHING: Gabby Color Cartoons—Good cartoon in color. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SITTIN' PRETTY: Sportlights—Good one reeler dealing with horses and riders. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

VITAMIN HAY: Color Classic Cartoon—Very good color cartoon with Hunky and Spunky. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

VITAMIN HAY: Color Classic Cartoon—Only fair, but the best cartoon in a long time from Paramount. Running time, 8 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ART OF SKIING, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—The Goof demonstrates how not to ski in a very funny color cartoon. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE, No. 2: Howard Lindsay—Howard Lindsay is guest in this issue that is a little more low-brow in its questions. That is a help as it gives the audience a chance to do a little guessing on its own. We haven't missed one of this series yet and do not intend to do so for some time. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

POLO PHONEY, A: Leon Errol—Typical Leon Errol comedy will get the laughs if they like Errol, as they do here. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ONE MAN NAVY, THE: Terrytoons—Some very clever stuff for a color cartoon in this series. Hope they keep on improving. Running time, 7 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

SLAP HAPPY HUNTERS: Terrytoons—Good cartoon in color. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WONDERS OF THE SEA: Adventures Newscameraman—Entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Universal

A-HAUNTING WE WILL GO: Lantz Cartunes—This fell flat. Didn't even go over with the youngsters. Running time, 8 minutes.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

MUSIC A LA KING: Musicals—Entertaining where vaudeville appeals, and it does here. Running time, 19 minutes.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

BUG PARADE, THE: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Very funny and clever color cartoon. My crowd enjoys this series the best of all cartoons. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

CAT'S TALE, THE: Merrie Melodies—Very good Merrie Melodies. Running time, 8 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

CRACKPOT QUAIL, THE: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon, but not as good as "Bugs Bunny." Running time, 8 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

PERILS OF THE JUNGLE: Broadway Brevities—Very good two reel jungle subject. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ROBINSON CRUSOE, JR.: Looney Tunes Cartoons—Another belly laff from Leon Schlesinger. If they don't award him the Academy Award for the funniest cartoons, then it's stabotage! Running time, 7 minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

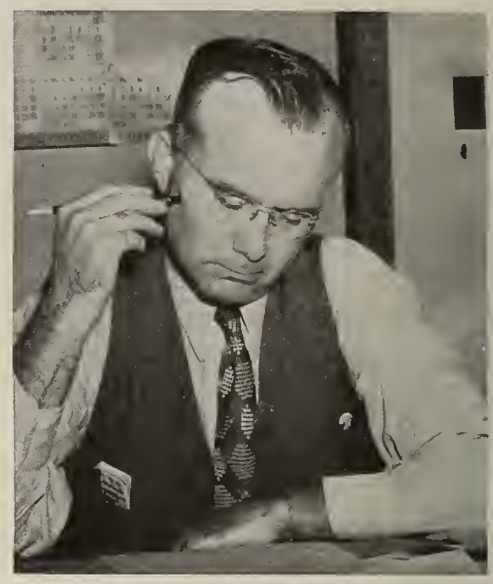
WATER SPORTS: Sports Parade—Good sport reel in color. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

IRON CLAW, THE, CHAPTER 10: Charles Quigley, Walter Sande, Joyce Bryant—We ran Frankie Carl piano records from track mark clear thru to the picture and close fader to zero on tail piece. In other words, the music is as bad as the picture itself.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

IRON CLAW, THE, CHAPTER 11: Charles Quigley, Walter Sande, Joyce Bryant—the chapter not so bad, in fact, it would have been half-ways good if they had left out that unreasonable music and silly fighting. It's still two against eight. Running time, 18 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.



Republic

JUNGLE GIRL: Frances Gifford, Tom Neal—Business getting better each week. Now on third episode and they like it. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex. Small town patronage.

Universal

RIDERS OF DEATH VALLEY: Dick Foran, Leo Carrillo, Buck Jones—Just completing this serial. It went over swell. The next one should be a honey.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

Projectionists Honor Rubin's 35th Anniversary

A testimonial dinner was given November 24th, at The Lobster, in New York, to Harry Rubin, director of projection for Paramount Theatres, on the occasion of the 15th anniversary of the Paramount Theatre on Broadway, and Mr. Rubin's 35 years in projection. The personnel of the Paramount projection staffs in New York were hosts to many of Mr. Rubin's associates in the industry.

Among the speakers and guests were Robert Weitman, managing director and R. Shapiro, house manager, of the Paramount; Dr. A. N. Goldsmith, of the SMPE; James Lynette, supervising inspector, and Bart Green, chief inspector in Manhattan, of the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity; P. A. McGuire, advertising manager of International Projector; Joseph Basson, president of IATSE Local 306; Paul Bracco, stage manager of the Paramount, and Jesse Hopkins, for many years assistant to Mr. Rubin.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Looking At It From This Corner

THIS year is to be the biggest yet for theatre tickets as Christmas gifts. From all over comes reports of high-power selling drives to make the ticket as acceptable a present as other holiday merchandise. Already, returns are terrific. Folks are being educated to the appropriateness, convenience, and low cost of the gift. Bringing happiness, it is truly typical of the Yuletide. For the theatreman, it nets an extra hunk of folding money, stimulates repeat business.

USED to be that theatres depended upon special events, giveaways, extra services and the like to bolster the December grosses. Much of this, noted on a following page, continues to be employed, aggressively. But no more are theatremen content to tag along to pick up what happens to be left after the holiday spending. They are getting around to getting their share. Right from the beginning.

MEBBE it proves that the manager is taking a lesson in merchandising from the store people. That would be in exchange for the lessons in showmanship the stores have taken from the theatres. The Macy Thanksgiving parade in New York, for instance. Millions of locals and out-of-towners crowded the three-mile route of the procession through the heart of the city. Traffic was re-routed. Newspapers gave the promotion pages of space. The store-showmen have demonstrated how to turn a ballyhoo into a national institution.

INTERSTATE does it again. This time, the Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell forces have concluded a contest for the best money-making idea for circuit use. Every employee was eligible. From top-man, to part-time usher, to janitor. Those Interstaters are smart enough to know that showmanship is neither a matter of position or situation.

CONTINUING contest-wise, the managers of Famous Players Canadian are pleasantly engaged in a nine-week circuit-wide competition to increase the net. Appropriately enough, it is tagged "A Profit Blitz—for Fitz," in honor of that grand guy, J. J. Fitzgibbons. Plenty of fat cash is to be divided among the winners. Which is well and good. In this instance, however, not all important. The drive will go over like a house afire. Because the boys are doing it for "Fitz." That's plenty of reason.

Managers concerned with industry goodwill find opportunities close at hand to do a job of building. Before organizations, for instance. Lunch clubs, especially, interested in learning some about what the other fellow is doing. Recently, "Kal" Kalberer addressed his Rotary Club on the part the industry is playing in defense, then took the club over to one of his theatres for a special program of patriotic shorts. The Rotarians were favorably impressed.

CHUCK SHANNON goes up again. The latest step is from the Whitehall, a Pittsburgh Warner "neighborhood," to the circuit's first-run State, in State College, Pa. Starting as cub usher—and still in his twenties—the Round Tabler has spent all of his theatre years in the Warner Pittsburgh division. His steady progress might point to the reasonableness of asking the manager to do the job he is expected to do, every day.

THOUGH the years have taught this doddering greybeard the futility of finger-pointing, we still refuse to accept as sound showmanship, the "want a date" telephone card gag inviting the boys to call a "certain" number—which proves to be the theatre's. The thing usually pulls a lot of returns. That's the bad part. Folks who fall for it often feel silly, get sore. Can't sell tickets that-a-way.

RECENT assignments in Cleveland bring a trio of stalwarts into the spotlight for the cause in that sector. For Warners' theatres, J. Knox Strachan comes in from Dick Wright's district as advertising and publicity head of the zone. For Loew's, Ed Fischer leaves off exploiting in the field to serve likewise, locally. And Al Buehrig, lately returned from Loew's foreign service in South Africa, is now manager of the State. Seasoned campaigners, sound showmen, long-time Round Tablers, the three will be doing a power of boxoffice promotion, of which the members will be duly informed.

ROUND TABLE IN PICTURES

Prop full-size plane suspended from roof attracted at the Boston Trans-Lux for Warners' "Target for Tonight".

Giant foyer display on "Yank" at the Strand, Portland, Me., by George C. Cronin featured over 400 toy soldiers, boats, planes to re-enact Dunkirk evacuation.

Ed McBride kept patrons at Loew's State informed of election returns in Boston with white compoboard screen on side of stage, figures flashed from booth.

Pressman in lobby of Warners' Avon, Utica, N. Y., mimeographing special newspaper for "Unholy Three" was used by Arnold Stoltz to spread the word. As usual, cost was promoted.

A J. C. Richards - Fred Curtice - Ken Purchase animated lobby for "Dive Bomber", Uptown, San Francisco, with whirling propeller on model of Navy bomber diving to attack "sub" which hit sinking ship. Special lighting was placed between the two sets of cloud cutouts.

Clergy Endorses 'Foot in Heaven'

Churches of various denominations were interested in Addie Addison's promotion of Warners "One Foot In Heaven" at Schine's Paramount, Glens Falls, N. Y., via a thorough campaign by the Round Tabler, initiated with a screening for members of the clergy, club officers, educators and civic officials. A benefit performance for the local Christian Endeavor Society also gave strong support to the date. Addie forwarded post cards to the clergymen present at the screening again requesting they call the engagement to the attention of their congregations.

Copies of letters addressed to women's clubs were placed in hotel key boxes and telephone calls made to all invited to the screening but who did not attend. Also planned was a cooperation with all lunch clubs to stage a "Father and Son" night at the theatre when each member would bring his own son or a junior male member of an underprivileged family. Other exploitation featured a walking book ballyhoo, used in the lobby in advance. Stair-risers were used on both sides of the lobby and a giant set-piece made up from the 24-sheet also contributed to the display.

Woman's Club Sponsors Date

In Kenosha, Wisc., Manager F. B. Schlax sold the date at the Kenosha with a screening for all of the clergy, reporting announcements of the engagement from many of the pulpits as a result. The benefit slant was covered with sponsorship by the woman's auxiliary to the county medical society, the members selling tickets to the various church congregations. Letters from Daniel A. Poling, of the picture's Advisory Committee, were mailed to clergymen, following the screening.

Newspaper advertising steered carefully away from any church emphasis, Schlax running a series of advance one-columns stressing the pleasing laugh elements of the attraction. He also put together a signed two-column type headed: "If I Were a Member of the Clergy", stressing the picture's worth and highlighting its many fine entertainment values.

Favor "Old Time Movie Night"

To tie in with the sequence in the picture showing old time movies, Fox West Coasters are working on an old fashion movie night, wherein plans are being made to have patrons attend in the spirit of the period pictured. Prizes would be given for the most interestingly costumed couples and also to those arriving at the theatre by methods best typifying the era of the picture.

The special screening with which Manager W. S. Perutz built up his date on the picture at the Warner Stanley, in Atlantic City, embraced clergymen of all denominations and heads of other organizations such as the Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., Y.M.H.A., etc. Invitations were followed by personal letters fro mthe head of the local Ministers' Union. Perutz also covered women's clubs, P.T.A. and schools to insure that the heads of these organizations were also on hand. In addition, the Warnerman made personal calls at leading churches and spoke with heads of Bible classes among others.

SOME LATE HIGHLIGHTS

One of his biggest publicity smashes, and one that started all by itself—he swears—recently came to Bob Russell, at Loew's Poli, New Haven, when someone lifted a rare mechanical dog, named "Asta" after the pooch in the picture, from the lobby display on "Shadow of the Thin Man". Exhibited before at the theatre on previous "Thin Man" pictures, the public had become acquainted with the dog; so, when Russell announced the theft, there was wide sympathy and interest.

Since the thing was borrowed for the exploitation, Bob tried to get off the spot with "reward" ads, and was immediately besieged with 'phone calls. Once the papers were convinced it was on the level, plenty of stories followed. "Every other patron at the theatre inquired about the search," says the Loewman, who kept the pot boiling with further reward ads and personals. The result thus turned out to be one of the biggest word-of-mouth campaigns Russell ever experienced, and definitely was reflected in the grosses on the date.

GLAMORIZES LOCAL GIRL FOR "SCREAMING" TIEIN

For "I Wake Up Screaming" date at Loew's Poli, Hartford, Lou Cohen followed the story of the picture by selecting a local girl, a typist in an insurance office, to glamorize, the process being noted with plenty of picture and story breaks in the papers during the period of the promotion. There was no contest slant to it, reports Cohen, a working girl being chosen at random to make the stunt more newsworthy and to prove that an average girl could be so glamorized.

As soon as selected, and the girl consenting, the promotion went into high, the schedule arranged in advance. Photos of the girl were taken at her desk, and the "works" followed. This included beauty parlor attentions, a suite in the best hotel for the girl and her mother, plus a personal maid, for four days. A press party was held for added shots. Leading stores "bought in" by supplying evening gowns, furs and such, the girl posing in these for co-op ads.

New model limousine, and chauffeur, was another promote to carry the "glamour" party about town to the various publicized stops and to the theatre on opening night. Formal dinner followed, with local celebrities in attendance, the girl posing with the Mayor for further publicity attentions.

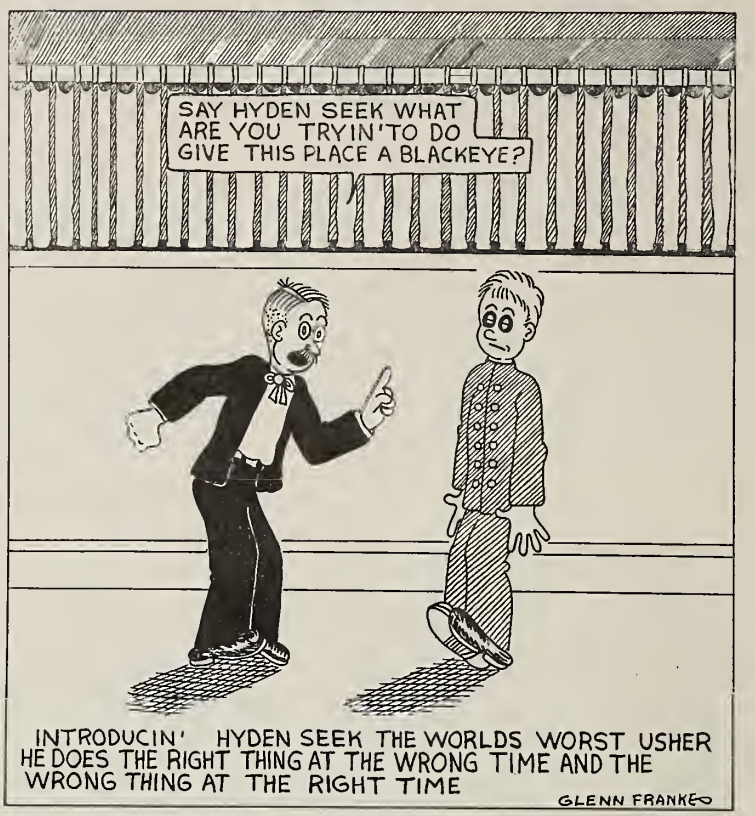
TIES ANNUAL STORE SALE TO "NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH"

With Loew's Palace, Washington, playing "Nothing but the Truth" coincidentally with an annual sales event at a nearby department store, Dan Terrell moved in with the store promotion with a number of tieins on behalf of the date, advertised prominently in the merchandising advertising.

Outstanding was a photo-identification stunt wherein customers in the store at certain hours, and snapped by a roving photographer, were eligible for theatre tickets. This was publicized accordingly, each day the store running photos in newspaper ads of those selected for the courtesies. In all, Dan reports, 1,000 lines of free space were so obtained. Other plugs in print included co-op counter cards, one side for the store reading: "Nothing but the truth. These bargains are terrific"; the other side: "It's a laugh bargain and that's Nothing but the Truth", plus theatre and date. Window and other inside displays were also had for the picture.

Radio was well covered with a number of programs paid for by the merchants from the store and the theatre. Spot announcements also were had, as were frequent plugs over the store's p.a. system. In addition, the regular chorus line at Loew's Capitol, in costume, appeared at the store on opening night of the sale to plug the stage show. Plenty of returns, thus, were had, says Dan, all at a cost of a few pairs of guest tickets each day.

Aviation Institute Attends "Keep 'Em Flying" Opening



Representatives of the Army Air Corps in Scranton, Pa., and the Junior Chamber of Commerce cooperated on the opening of Universal's "Keep 'Em Flying" at the Comford Capitol, when graduates of the local aviation institute and other students were guests of Manager Matt O'Keefe at the first matinee. The students were guests at a special hotel luncheon before the aviation and chamber of commerce heads serving as hosts. From the hotel, the boys were conveyed to the theatre in Army cars, headed by the local high school band and police escort. Working with O'Keefe was Milt Harris, Universal home office exploiteer.

Fitz Features Contests On "Sun Valley Serenade"

Ahead of "Sun Valley Serenade" at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., Round Tabler Ed Fitzpatrick sold three full pages of advertising on the picture. A full page of co-op ads was promoted for opening day with puzzle piece of a Henie still appearing in each ad, guest tickets offered to those assembling the pieces and submitting them.

In addition, a full page of art and news stories was promoted in prominent local weekly, highlighting the production's big number, appearance of Miller and orchestra. Romantic past contests was planted in two papers, while another paper featured a three column Milton Berle slogan contest.

May Plants Ad Banner Across Top of Page One

The unusual placing of a three inch ad banner completely across the front page under the masthead of the Maysville, Ky., daily, was accomplished by Ed May for "Whistling In the Dark", at Schine's Russel. Ed reports this as quite a concession since the paper gives up the space for advertising only for big community affairs.

Date on "Dr. Kildare's Wedding Day" was called to the attention of telephone subscribers with calls from the theatre by a girl especially selected for her pleasing voice. When phone answered girl said, "I called to remind you of the wedding day" and when subscriber answered "what wedding", the plug followed. On the streets, the Round Tabler had a big sedan with theatre and "just married" banners, plus the usual old shoes and tin cans.

Roxy 'Charm Girl' Wins Havana Trip

In line with the long list of successful nation-wide "Charm Girl" newspaper contests effected on behalf of Twentieth Century Fox's "Week-End In Havana", is the record promotion for the date at the New York Roxy, on a 10-day tiein with the Journal American, with over 5000 entries reported. Space was in keeping, the paper going all-out for the promotion in daily smash layouts and follow-up.

Handled by Eddie Solomon, of the Rodney Bush promotion staff, the tiein was sold to start three days ahead of the opening, the daily announced that, duplicating the story background, a seven-day all-expense vacation trip to Havana would be given the unmarried working girl selected as the most charming. Publicity continued with three and four-column photos of the picture's stars, followed with a seven-column smash of the 10 finalists run the day ahead of the final selection. Each day, an entry blank was run to be accompanied by a photo of entrant which best typified her charm. Eligibles were confined to those living in the metropolitan area and working in New York.

The judges were the well-known artists, McClelland Barclay, Arthur William Brown and Peter Arno, Rose Pelswick, the paper's film critic, and Irving Lesser, Roxy managing director. The winner they chose was spotlighted by the paper with a three-column full of photo and story.

Having scored with the contest idea for the date in Denver, Gabe Yorke, Coast exploitation representative, did a similar job in Salt Lake for the date at the Utah, working with Charlie Pincus to find the city's most popular sales girl to spend an all-expense vacation in Hollywood. Yorke started his promotion with the local Tribune on a tiein with the Exchange Club. However, the hookup became so big that the other two papers joined in. The finalists were judged at a dinner where the wives of the Exchange Club members acted as judges to pick the winner.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Feldman Features Contests On "International Squadron"

Through tieup effected by Dick Feldman of the Schine Paramount in Syracuse, the Post-Standard gave a 240-line contest based on "What would you design for your insignia if you were a member of the International Squadron?" Same paper also came through with a quiz contest called the "Famous Fliers Contest;" guest tickets went to winners in both instances. For his lobby, local airplane modelling club came through with six prize winning models which were on display week ahead, while for his marquee, Dick planted a model airplane on the box-office roof.

For "Badlands of Dakota," Feldman promoted book stores and circulating libraries on windows which featured scene stills and copies of the book, public library system coming through with mention on bulletin boards. Station WOLF cooperated by giving nightly plugs on their "Sandman's Serenade" during which they played one of the tunes from the picture.

TICKETS FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS FEATURE DECEMBER PROMOTIONS

Leading Circuits Concentrate on "All-Out" Staff Drives; Giveaways, Charity Shows Among Other Events Planned

Finishing up in a blaze of activity, the Fox West Coast six-week drive to sell tickets as Christmas gifts finds returns already exceeding previous seasonal endeavors in this direction. The special gift tickets are in three colors, six inches by three, illustrated with a cut of Santa Claus. They will be accepted up to December 27th in any Fox West Coast theatre, providing the admission price is the same as the amount on the ticket, which inducement has definitely increased the sales. Ten per cent commission is being paid to theatre staffs on sales as heretofore. Manuals on selling procedure distributed to the theatremen provided "heavy ammunition" to increase the sales. In addition to the ten per cent commission, district prizes in the form of cash and merchandise were also offered to members of the personnel making the best showing.

Offer Bonus on Sales

The Schine Theatres have also gone for ticket selling over the circuit with a decorative fold-over gift ticket measuring three inches wide by five. Cover carries circuit identification and space is provided for "Compliments of" copy, with blanks left for names of donor and recipient. Other half of the card is the ticket, perforated, for presentation at the boxoffie. In addition to the single ticket, there are also special folders for those who wish to give tickets in quantity. The Schiners are making a widespread drive to have organizations, companies with numerous clerical and other personnel, purchase quantities of the tickets as Yuletide gifts and results are far above expectations, according to Seymour Morris, advertising head.

In Texas, Interstate is pushing the ticket with a "Christmas Theatre Gift Book," the third year of this promotion and the biggest yet. Inducements are being given by offer of special discounts to group purchasers, which is aiding sales. Here too, a home office manual has been provided by Frank Starz' advertising department, with suggestions to increase this Yuletide distribution.

In New England, the Wesmas Theatres are calling their promotion a "Movie Check," sales quotas being assigned to each theatre, the personnel to receive bonuses for their efforts. Special trailers and lobby displays have been prepared and the circuit is also going after organizations, factories, etc.

Sixth Year in Canada

Among the pioneers of the ticket promotion, Famous Players Canadian, for the sixth consecutive year, is putting on an intensive campaign for the sale of the circuit's "Thrift Ticket" for Christmas gifts. The 10 per cent commission plan for theatre personnel is again in effect and as a convenience to buyers, orders will be accepted for tickets to be delivered in other towns where the circuit operates. As usual, Jimmy Nairn, ad head, has prepared a manual to aid the managers on sales. The theatremen are again contacting outside sources to sell tickets. These include stores whose type of business and locations prove good outlets for ticket sales, switchboard operators in hospitals to sell tickets to internes and nurses, etc. Junior Leaguers and other women's organizations are also selling the FPC tickets on commission. With many Canadians in war service, the circuit is pointing ticket sales to soldiers, sailors, etc.

Circuitwide Campaign for RKO

Now in circulation and advanced with a comprehensive circuit campaign, the RKO "Hours of Happiness" gift ticket book is rapidly selling. In two denominations, three and five dollars, both containing money saving bonus campaigns, the tickets are good the year round and as such are proving immediately popular. Suggestions for sales are emphasized in the manual made up by Harry Mandel, circuit advertising head, a number of the suggestions based on the effective use in previous similar campaigns.

From Cincinnati, zone head Arthur Freudenfeld reports good results in the sale of the tickets among business houses, with personal calls made upon the executives to give the employees books of tickets. In addition to trailers, lobby posters, etc., a tiein has been arranged with the Times-Star whereby in exchange for guest tickets, the paper will plug the benefits to be had from the purchase of gift books. Radio announcements are also being used.

In Lowell, Mass., Sam Torgan at RKO Keith's is sending out letters to all buyers of the 1940 ticket books who have not done so this year as yet. Torgan has also posted a pretty cashier in the lounge with a sample gift book and card to demonstrate to women patrons. He reports that these personal explanations have proven very effective.

Other slants suggested by Mandel include publicity shot of prominent civic official buying the first book In circuit theatres playing stage shows, the headliner can also pose for the same shot. Managers are urged to have their telephone operators answer with "RKO gift ticket books are now on sale." Mention of the tickets in Christmas shopping columns on women's page is another reminder as is mention on shopping news radio program.

Traditional celebration of the holiday planned by the Loew Metropolitan Theatres will spotlight kid shows where special giveaways and gifts will be in order. Charity shows particularly aimed for the entertainment of orphans will again be staged in Brooklyn with the Eagle as in former years. Some of the houses outside of New York which have set in dates for "Kathleen" are planning to tie this Shirley Temple picture to special holiday shows.

Promotions Tied to Stores

Aside from ticket sales, the giveaway again assumes importance, the Schine Theatres concentrating on three types—automobiles, cash and defense bonds. Since new cars this year are scarcer than usual, the Schiners were urged to make their tieins far enough in advance, in many instances selling their dealers on the fact that since there will be no automobile shows this year, the dealer can take up some of this "display slack" with the theatre cooperation. This will come about through exhibit of new models in theatre lobbies. Attention is also given to cash giveaways, the Schiners aiming for sizeable tieups of such amounts as five hundred dollars or more in cooperative promotions. In some situations the Chamber of Commerce has been invited to sponsor this activity.

Added cooperations stressed by the Interstate Circuit include "Christmas Look Around Night," wherein merchants are invited to feature holiday windows to coincide with displays of community Yuletide decorations along the main street. Climax of this event is to be a special Christmas fashion show featuring wearing apparel for the entire family. In the "family" category, is also suggested the "Christmas Cake Giveaway Night," wherein leading baker is promoted to donate some fruit cakes sufficient for each family attending the theatre on a specified night. This has been featured for some time by the Texans and has proven very successful.

Interstate Suggests Short Show

Another Interstate promotion is the "Santa Claus of Short Subjects Show," wherein complete programs arranged by the Besa Short department are available for the theatremen. Again the circuit is making much of the "Christmas Eve Midnight Gift Show" tied to local merchants who are invited to display the various gifts and other holiday merchandise in the theatre lobby two weeks ahead.

The merchants' holiday Christmas trailer is also given attention, wherein the local

ART SAYS "KNOCK WOOD" ON WOODEN POST CARD

Whittlers and luck-seekers in the Devil's Lake, N. D., sector were recently allowed to express themselves with a wood novelty sent out in the mails by Art Abelson, for "It Started with Eve" at the Lake. The gag was a piece of quarter-inch plywood, three inches wide by eight, supplied by a lumber company in exchange for credit in the copy.

Immediately under the heading, "Carve Your Sweetie's Name Here", was a blank panel, followed with "Then knock wood on it and you'll meet with good luck when you take her to see", etc. Other side was for mailing, with names and addresses lettered in pencil.

Layout of stills showing Greta Garbo in the dance she performs in "Two-Faced Woman" got a fancy break in the Boston press as planted by Joe Longo for the date at Loew's State and Orpheum. The Loewmen in Hartford, Conn., also cracked the Courant Sunday magazine section with a similar idea.

Rosalind Russell hair-styles prove an effective women's page feature, according to the space grabbed by Loewman Bill Elder and George Freeman. Bill got himself a six-column layout in Indianapolis, with Freeman duplicating the same in Springfield, Mass.

After many endeavors to plant publicity in the local daily, Manager Bill McClain finally cracked through on behalf of the Virginia, Carrollton, Ohio, for a page one item on his signing of Warner pictures. The theatreman followed this with one of the Columbia "Unusual Facts Revealed" mats, for his date on "Blondie In Society".

Giant birthday cake which he promoted and shared with the patrons marked the second anniversary of the Lex, Chicago, on Manager Ben K. Van Korn's campaign for the birthday. President of the cooperating business men's association, posing with the first cut of the cake, was one of the publicity shots obtained. Flowers to all women attending the first matinee were also featured, as were congratulatory co-op pages from the neighborhood merchants.

For "Sergeant York" at the Blair, Hollidaysburg, Pa., Manager Douglas W. Mellott tied in with a baker to make up special loaves of "defense bread" (enriched with Vitamin B1) which were plugged through window cards pepped up with giant cuts of Gary Cooper in uniform of the picture. Card also carried theatre copy. Imprinted bookmarks distributed in the schools also helped the cause.

When Ray Wheeler and Lige Brien visited Universal's "Tight Shoes" set last Spring as Quigley Awards winners, they posed with the stars, Brod Crawford and Leo Carrillo. Then, when Wheeler played the attraction at the Granada, in South Bend, Ind., he used the shot ingeniously to personalize his ads, as noted above.

Cards distributed in hotel key boxes, in rooms and in hotel coffee shops by H. W. Reisinger, at Loew's, Evansville, Ind., read: "In Evansville, our business is to make you comfortable while you are conducting your business. For an evening of laughs and entertainment, see "'Unfinished Business'", etc.

For "Whistling in the Dark" at Loew's Park, Cleveland, Ohio, Arnold Gates put out a young man on the streets, conspicuously dressed and wearing dark glasses, going about the town whistling. His talent was identified with a back banner for the date.

Tiein with the local flying school on "Parachute Battalion" at the Rialto, Beaver Falls, Pa., resulted in a seven-plane flight around the city, as engineered by George Pappas, the aviators dropping numbered cards. Those corresponding to the numbers posted in the lobby were good for free admissions, flying lessons and plane rides. For ballyhoo, Pappas had three boys in flying clothes with parachutes strapped to their backs, make the main streets.

Aimed at the stenographers in Lubbock, Tex., was the shorthand message distributed around town by Boyd F. Scott for "Sun Valley Serenade" at the Broadway. It proved to be a communication from Glenn Miller telling all about the picture and the stars. In advance, the idea was also employed for a two-column newspaper ad.

For "Hold Back the Dawn" at the Rialto, Morrilton, Ark., Al Crowder, Malco city manager, entered a colorful float in the County Fair parade. Constructed in the form of a rainbow and so decorated, the float was a frame built over Al's car. Cut-out lettering emphasized cast, feature, etc.

"Harmon of Michigan" at the Alpine, Punxsutawney, Pa., was greeted by Manager Andrew Gorzo with a pep rally for the high school students who turned out with school band and cheer leaders, the event hitting the sport pages. Playdate was announced in all class rooms and over the p.a. at local football games.

Recently checking in at the Colonial, Nashua, N. H., Pearce Parkhurst introduced himself to the public with a "personal message" letter, announcing himself as the new manager. Parky outlined what he had in mind for the house policy of entertainment and invited the folks to come by and say howdy. To make it more informal, Pearce planted a photo of himself at top of the page.

Astute showmanship displayed by Round Tabler William Walsh of the Comerford Theatre in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., tied in the coming showing of "Sergeant York" with the Armistice Day parade when Walsh placed two 24-sheets and a 6-sheet on a chartered bus and had it follow the parade over the entire route. It also toured the rest of the valley for several days before the film opened. The Round Tabler also sent messages by Western Union to all Legion posts in the valley, tying in York, as one of their most prominent members, and the film.

Quiz programs in Williamsport, Pa., took on a "Nothing But the Truth" flavor during the week that the Bob Hope comedy played at the Capitol Theatre, Manager Gregory Beck arranging to have a sidewalk broadcast during which pedestrians were requested to tell "nothing but the truth." Members of the Rotary and Exchange Clubs competed in a "Truth" contest over the regular weekly quiz program of a local lumber company. Beck also had a youth dressed up as George Washington and toting a hatchet parading the streets with suitable signs on his back.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE BOSS!

Dear Boss

I know you are going to write me to find out why there isn't any ad in today's paper on Nelson Eddy's new comedy "The Chocolate Soldier" which opens here on Friday I should try to give you a good alibi but the truth of the matter is that I haven't got any

Last night we previewed "The Chocolate Soldier" after the regular performance and then the whole gang went out for coffee and cakes We got to talking about the picture and how much there was to tell the customers about I was all hopped up about Nelson Eddy's clowning and the screwball comedy gags Say Boss that guy really parked his dignity in the ash can and went to town as a comic He is a natural born comedian And we have been advertising him as an opera star Then Milt Schosberg started raving about Rise Stevens You know Milt boss He has an eye for beauty and this Stevens gal really has IT Aside from the finest voice the screen has heard yet she is merchandising a high class variety of "oomph" And how she uses it on Eddy

Just as Milt and I get going good in walks Phil Brilling the maintainence engineer with a terrific plug for the Oscar Straus music in the picture When we asked Neil the operator how come he put the last reel in upside down he said it was on account of because he was laughing so hard at Eddy in a beard making wild Cossack love to Rise Stevens 'Believe me boss if I got a chance to pitch a little woo at that gal I'd wear anything Even a beaver

Well anyhow you can see how it was We spent so much time raving about "The Chocolate Soldier" that I clean forgot about the ad for today's paper and besides I don't know how to advertise it Shall I play up Nelson Eddy as a comedian? The picture is full of "belly" laughs Shall I play up Rise Stevens? She'll be a top flight star once the cash customers get a load of her oomph Shall I play up the music Oscar Straus wrote for "The Chocolate Soldier"? It's his best and that is going some You better let me know how I should advertise this show Please wire because it OPENS HERE AT THE PARAMOUNT FRIDAY and I want plenty of time

I have to close now and get the box office open a little earlier than usual so we can get the crowds in before "One Foot in Heaven" goes on Today and tomorrow are the last days and they really are flocking in stores are invited for a nominal fee to extend the season's felicitations on the theatre screen. The idea, also used sueeessfully last year by the Wesmas eircuit, covered 20 frames, one frame to eaeh loeal business firm, charged five dollars eaeh for the serviee. In towns where the eircuit has more than one theatre, the eharge is ranged from ten to fifteen dollars, the trailers being shown in all the theatres. This year, Wesmas is encouraging the individual managers with 10 per eent commission on gross sales.

Some of the highlights of last year's promotion whieh stand up again for use during the month aim at the various benefit shows put on with eooperation of loeal service elubs for charity funds. In Cleveland, the boys in Diek Wright's Warner zone have found this sueeessful in a combination of screen and stage attraetions, promoting the talent from leading night clubs.

The benefit slant was also used by "Kal" Kalberer, in Washington, Ind., last year in a two-day promotion with the loeal "Band Boosters Club," the organization taking 35 per eent on outside sales. Performanee was featured by eoneert of the 80 pieee boys' high school band making appearances on both nights in full parade dress.

Louisiana Purchase

(Paramount)

Lavish Musical Comedy

Based on the successful stage production of the same name by Morrie Ryskind and B. G. DeSylva, with an impressive array of star power headed by Bob Hope, Vera Zorina and Victor Moore, and with sparkling dialogue, pretty girls, and a happy combination of songs by Irving Berlin, dance and story, all done in beautiful Technicolor, "Louisiana Purchase" looms as one of the more conspicuous musical comedies.

The words "musical comedy" do not properly describe the picture; it is more than that. The plot here is of definite substance, and the songs and dances do not hinder its development but rather complement it, thus making a neatly balanced integration of all the factors involved.

The locale is a mythical "New Orleans," in the mythical state of "Louisiana," both of which are under threat of an investigation by a New England senator, played by Victor Moore. The real culprits decide to put the entire blame on Bob Hope, whom they had made president of the Louisiana Purchasing Company and elected to the State Legislature. In an endeavor to save his own innocent neck, Hope engages Zorina as a Mata Hari to entice the aged New England senator. After many complications, Hope starts a filibuster in the Legislature, word of his innocence is finally received by Moore, and the romances of Hope and Zorina, and Moore and Irene Bordoni are resumed.

Hope, fresh from plaudits in "Caught in the Draft" and "Nothing But the Truth," adds further to his screen Laurels in this production. His lines are amusing and he makes the most of them in traditional Hope manner. For example, when he commences his filibuster in the Legislature, he is told that he cannot do that, to which he replies, "I just got permission from Jimmy Stewart."

Victor Moore, better known to stage than to screen audiences, shares honors with Hope in his portrayal of the New England senator, for it is a memorable one. Vera Zorina parades her beauty and dancing ability as the heroine. Other members of the cast include Irene Bordoni, also of stage fame, Dona Drake, Raymond Walburn, Maxie Rosenbloom, Frank Albertson and others.

Too much cannot be said about the magnificence of the sets and the color, which reaches a climax in the Mardi Gras scene and in a fashion show sequence, which will be catnip to the women, the background of feminine pulchritude which will certainly be catnip to the men, and the sprightly dialogue, some of it of contemporary political significance, will just about be catnip to everyone.

Associate producer Harold Wilson and director Irving Cummings have fashioned a musical comedy calculated to thoroughly satisfy screen audiences and make them forget their troubles.

Go West, Young Lady

(Columbia)

Western-Comedy-Melodrama

Producer Robert Sparks and director Frank R. Strayer who have guided Penny Singleton so competently and successfully through her "Blondie" series for Columbia, again bring the actress to the fore, but this time without the aid of the "Bumpstead" family. Miss Singleton is cast in this as a prim school girl who ventures into the Indian country of the old west to be with her uncle.

Primarily a story of the west, the producer and director have incorporated many elements of romance, comedy, dancing, singing and general entertainment seldom found in this type picture. Ann Miller, who tap dances and sings in the hoopla of a cattle-town saloon, supplies much of the comedy and melodrama., while Glenn Ford, as the young sheriff, is more than capable in his characterization. Charlie Ruggles and Allen Jenkins are also seen, the first as the uncle of the school miss and owner of the town's saloon-hotel, and the latter as the deputy sheriff who always stands behind the sheriff in any emergency—way behind.

Between the scenes of Indian raids, outlaw holdups, fist and gun fights and thundering hoofs Miss Miller displays terpsichorean ability with a background of can-can dancers, and sings a few songs with the aid of Allen Jenkins. Miss Singleton also sings an amusing ditty.

Exhibitors who have found the exhibition of western films successful at the box-office will have little trouble in selling this picture to their customers. For other exhibitors it offers the names of Miss Singleton, Miss Miller, Charlie Ruggles, "Allen Jenkins and Glenn Ford as marquee attraction. For all exhibitors "Go West, Young Lady" is the kind of entertainment which even the most discriminating enjoy.

Old Mother Riley's Circus

(British National-Anglo American)

Comedy Extravanganza

The rise of Arthur Lucan ("Old Mother Riley") to fame is a keen object lesson for the British showman—and those who cater for him. In less than three or four years he has climbed from a slapstick "dame" comedian of provincial vaudeville to radio popularity,—(a Saturday night programme was devoted to him for some months recently),—to road show distinction and to one of the chosen Ten Best in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S British Star Poll. His pictures, made on a modest budget, have consistently returned their cost over and over again. His peculiar brand of electric, garrulous burlesque comedy is quite obviously suited to the tastes of the war tired masses of Great Britain. The laboratory of audience appeal may one day discover why.

In his "Old Mother Riley" garb, the tattered be-bonneted habiliments of the Dublin slums, he romps here through a completely extravagant and elementary business about a circus, which the old lady joins to discover that it belonged to her dissolute and deceased spouse.—Into the bargain she acquires the circus, after a game of poker, and recovers her long lost daughter.

All this, of course is just a peg on which Mr. Lucan hangs his gesticulating, gagging humours, posing as a Countess, doing a job as a cinema usherette, acting the fortune teller, and playing the role of a female clown in the ring. It is sheer clowning of the most primitive brand, entangled with an over generous and unceasing supply of puns and patter. Lucan has immense vitality and a sense of the grotesque and that element of daring which endears pantomime dames to the English audience.

Kitty MacShane, his vaudevillian partner, is in the cast and there are some capable circus acts photographed from time to time and squashed into one another.

Thomas Bentley, veteran of British directors has directed—like a veteran of British directors—and though the production is sound enough there is nothing to appeal to what are dubbed locally "discriminating audiences." Which is not so say that the film will not make much money with the indulgent masses.

A critically detached London trade show audience seemed more bent on assessing entertainment values than on personal enjoyment but the consensus of opinion was that this after all, was "the stuff to give the troops.".—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

UNIVERSAL RELEASING "QUIET WEDDING"

Paul Soskin's British production, "Quiet Wedding", is being released in this country by Universal. The picture was reviewed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, issue of February 15, 1941. Seen in London the review called the picture "a witty, infectious example of the English laughing at themselves . . . sheer lighthearted entertainment with the polish of the expert it is likely to be accepted by contemporary audiences as first class escapism from the sombre mood of the times."

Based on a play by Esther McCracken, the picture stars Margaret Lockwood and Derek Farr. Anthony Asquith directed.

Keep 'em Flying

(Universal)

Louder and Funnier

They're back again by public demand.

It was only last January that Bud Abbott and Lou Costello marched into the hearts of the public and exhibitors alike with "Buck Privates." They stayed there with "In the Navy" and "Hold That Ghost." Now they're on the spot again.

But enough of that. What you want to hear is that the boys are still terrific; still the answer to a box office's prayer. They are all that and more. If they have been funnier than in "Keep 'em Flying" then by all means get a repeat booking. For "Keep 'em Flying" is a laughfest, a great big dose of merriment designed to wear out the audience—but happily.

There are so many scenes that are so completely funny it is difficult to pick any for special mention. In one, a telephone booth sequence, Costello carries on a conversation with William Gargan that had the reviewers and guests at the screening clinging to their seats.

While the Abbott and Costello team consumed most of the footage, and naturally so, there are other embellishments which would do justice to any production about the air corps. The story has a romance and a songstress in Carol Bruce, a foil to Abbott and Costello in Martha Raye playing a dual role, the best thing she has done, a hero in Dick Foran, and some stirring aerial photography.

Songs are: "You Don't Know What Love Is," "I Won't Forget the Dawn," "The Boy With the Wistful Eyes," "Pig Foot Pete," "What Kind of Love Is This?" "Let's Keep 'Em Flying," "I'm Getting Sentimental Over You."

Glenn Tryon, the associate producer and Arthur Lubin director can take credit for a job well done.

ADVANCE SYNOPSES and information

THE VANISHING VIRGINIAN (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Romance-Drama

PRODUCER: Edwin Knopf. Directed by Frank Borzage. Based on the book by Rebecca Yancey Williams.

PLAYERS: Frank Morgan, Kathryn Grayson, Spring Byington, Natalie Thompson, Douglass Newland, Mark Daniels, Juanita Quigley, Scotty Beckett, Dickie Jones.

SYNOPSIS

This is the story of the Yancey family. Cap'n Bob Yancey (Frank Morgan) was undoubtedly the foremost citizen of his community. He didn't give a rap about ancestry, or what people wore, but he was mightily concerned about what they did, or didn't do, to make the world a better place for living. His wife, Rosa (Spring Byington), would often retire with a book, leaving the house neglected and with it the five children; but they prospered and were healthy and full of spirit. She never was able to suit him exactly, but he worshipped her. Came the day when Cap'n Bob, a Commonwealth Attorney for the City of Lynchburg for seven terms, was defeated. At home, walking in the garden with Rosa, he took defeat lightly and laughed. It was much the same as that evening years ago when he asked her to marry him.

MR. AND MRS. NORTH (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Comedy, Melodrama

PRODUCER: Irving Asher. Directed by Robert B. Sinclair.

PLAYERS: Gracie Allen, William Post, Jr., Paul Kelly, Rose Hobart, Virginia Grey, Tom Conway, Felix Bressart, Porter Hall.

SYNOPSIS

Jerry North (William Post, Jr.) and his wife, Pam (Gracie Allen) return to their home after a night away in a holiday spirit. That spirit evaporates when the body of an unknown man falls out of the liquor closet. The man is identified as Stanley Brent, the estranged husband of Carol Brent (Rose Hobart), a friend of Pam's. As the scant clues are unearthed, it appears that some member of the Norths' little circle, who knew they would be away, gained entrance to the apartment, asked Brent to meet him there, and murdered him. Pam in her own deviously efficient way tries to establish alibis for all her friends and in so doing inadvertently establishes the real murderer.

SPECIAL REMARKS

From the play by Owen Davis. Based on the stories by Richard and Frances Lockridge and produced on the stage by Alfred de Liagre, Jr., at the Belasco theatre, New York, January 12, 1941.

DR. KILDARE'S VICTORY (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Drama

DIRECTED by W. S. Van Dyke. Based on characters created by Max Brand.

PLAYERS: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Ann Ayars, Robert Sperling, Jean Rogers, Alma Kruger, Walter Kingsford, Nell Craig, Edward Gargan.

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Kildare (Lew Ayres) has returned to work with Dr. Gillespie (Lionel Barrymore) at the Blair Hospital. He takes a great liking to Dr. Winthrop (Robert Sterling) and Annabelle Kirke (Jean Rogers), pretty nurse with whom the young interne is in love. Dr. Winthrop is dismissed when he brings an injured society girl to the hospital because the accident occurred outside of the hospital zone. Kildare removes a splinter of glass from the girl's (Ann Ayars) heart and, recovering, the girl tries to vamp the young doctor. Kildare starts a campaign to abolish the hospital zoning system and with the able assistance of Gillespie and the society girl accomplishes his purpose.

THUNDERING HOOFS (RKO Radio)

Western

PRODUCER: Bert Gilroy. Directed by Lesley Selander.

PLAYERS: Tim Holt, Ray Whitley, Lee "Lasses" White, Luana Walters, Archie Twitchell.

SYNOPSIS

After a disagreement with his father, Bill (Tim Holt) chooses a life as a rancher instead of taking charge of his father's stage line. With his pals (Ray Whitley and Lee "Lasses" White) Bill interrupts a hold-up on a rival stage and when he learns that the owner and his daughter are being forced to abandon the line, he takes a job on the line under an assumed name. When the daughter discovers Bill's real name, she accuses him of spying and fires him. She undertakes to drive the stage herself in order to save a mail contract. Bill and his pals save the stage from an ambush and get the mail to its destination. Bill and the girl are reconciled.

RIDERS OF THE BADLANDS (Columbia)

Western

PRODUCER: William Berke. Directed by Howard Bretherton.

PLAYERS: Charles Starrett, Russell Hayden, Cliff Edwards, Ilene Brewer, Kay Hughes, Roy Barcroft.

SYNOPSIS

Charles Starrett here plays a dual role—a Texas Ranger and a bandit leader. Because of the similarity the Ranger is jailed and accused of the bandit's crimes. Russell Hayden, another Ranger, originally responsible for sending Starrett to prison, uncovers evidence that leads him to believe that Starret is innocent. On the day that Starrett is to be hanged, Hayden forges the governor's signature to a release and the two, along with a posse, start out for the bandit's lair. The bandit leader is captured and Starrett's innocence established.

LONE STAR LAW MEN (Monogram)

Western

PRODUCED and directed by Robert Tansey.

PLAYERS: Tom Keene, Frank Yaconelli, Betty Miles, Sugar Dawn, Glen Strange, Charlie King.

SYNOPSIS

A marshall is sent to Pecos to clean up the town but is wounded and left for dead when Tom Keene and Frank Yaconelli find him, on their way to town. The marshall appoints Tom deputy and later Tom is appointed sheriff of the town by the lawless element in control when Tom pretends to be on their side. When the gang leader announces plans for holding up the stage, Tom gets a posse together, leading it to the place planned for the holdup. But the gang leader, suspecting Tom, sets another place for the holdup. The gang leader later captures Tom and holds him prisoner. Tom is freed by Sugar Dawn, a posse is formed and the gang captured after a gun battle.

THE BUGLE SOUNDS (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Army Drama

PRODUCER: J. Walter Ruben. Directed by S. Sylvan Simon. Based on a story by Lawrence Kimble and Cyril Hume.

PLAYERS: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main, Lewis Stone, George Bancroft, Henry O'Neill, Donna Reed, Chill Wills.

SYNOPSIS

Sergeant "Hap" Doan (Wallace Beery), heartbroken that the Nineteenth Cavalry, with which he has served for so many years, is to be mechanized and replenished with twenty per cent draftees, goes on a drinking bout. He talks of leaving the army but he is there when the draftees arrive, ready to make soldiers of them. When his mount, Cantigny, is killed by an exploding sabotaged-tank, Doan goes AWOL and is court-martialed on his return. But Doan is under secret orders from his colonel to join the gang of saboteurs, who have every reason to believe they can trust the disgruntled ex-sergeant. Doan risks his life to kill the saboteurs and is reinstated in the army.

LAND OF THE OPEN RANGE (RKO Radio)

Western

PRODUCER: Bert Gilroy. Directed by Edward Killy. From the story, "Homesteads of Hate", by Lee Bond.

PLAYERS: Tim Holt, Ray Whitley, Janet Waldo, Lee "Lasses" White, Hobart Cavanaugh, Lee Bonnell.

SYNOPSIS

Tim Holt becomes a deputy sheriff to assist his uncle, the sheriff, who has been temporarily crippled in a gun battle with the most crooked man in town. The crook is killed but leaves a diabolic will in which he states that any man who has a prison record can enter into a homestead race for his land. The ex-convicts come pouring into the town. Tim learns that the shyster lawyer-executor of the will is planning on getting control of a certain section of the land to build a dam across the river and get a stranglehold on all the ranchers. Tim, with the help of his pals (Ray Whitley and Lee "Lasses" White), beat the lawyer and his henchmen at their own game.

COME ON, DANGER (RKO Radio)

Western

PRODUCER: Bert Gilroy. Directed by Edward Killy.

PLAYERS: Tim Holt, Frances Neal, Ray Whitley, Lee "Lasses" White, Karl Hackett, Malcolm "Bud" McTaggart.

SYNOPSIS

Tim Holt, as a Texas Ranger, is assigned to the task of arresting Frances Neal, suspected of being the head of a rustler gang. Tim, with his pals (Ray Whitley and Lee "Lasses" White), meet up with Frances. She tells them that she is being blamed for all of Karl Hackett's crimes. Torn between sympathy for her and his duty, Tim delays her arrest. When Hackett and the sheriff arrive to arrest Frances, Tim claims state jurisdiction over the prisoner. Tim breaks into Hackett's office to obtain evidence. He overhears Hackett confess to a murder. In a gun fight, Hackett and his gang are wiped out.

The unseen star of August 6th, 1926

Helping you to please the ears of the world — through finer sound recording and reproduction — has been Western Electric's privilege for fifteen years.

That night 15 years ago—when "Don Juan" had its world premiere —marked the first public acceptance of talkies. The great success of that night could not have been achieved without this little cone in the loud speaker. The cone made it possible, for the first time, to fill a theatre with high quality sound. This is one of many basic contributions Western Electric has made available to the industry.

Old Issue New Version

SOME eight years ago the motion picture industry of the United States met an accumulated state of crisis in public relations by the adoption of a course of self-regulation addressed at alignment with the mores of the land—meaning the generally accepted standards of common decency among the people.

There were years of success, marked success. More recently the self-imposed restraints have slacked and by process of diminuendo the movement appears to be approaching full cycle—and an eventuation, with the issue of morals precipitated by a picture called "Two-Faced Woman," emblazoned in the public press from New York to San Francisco.

That particular picture is only incidentally on trial.

There have been pictures of the like before, so long as two years ago, and other edgings-up, before.

Part of that has been from creative underlings who have not learned what executives know and feel, but do not transmit. And part of it, too, is merely trial of tolerances, by word-smiths experimenting with gauges, and neither caring nor concerned with responsibilities for the institution of the screen—just those little people of big salaries who work, not for the screen, but for "the boss," whoever he may be.

THE actual question is: How completely does the trend, from which that picture emerges, represent the over-all policy of Hollywood picture production today?

The answer will be had only in part from procedures with and about that picture.

Theatre showmen, and their customers, too, across the land will be listening for what comes out of the councils of Hollywood.

If this picture, and those akin to it, represent a purposefully evolved policy of production for the screen, that is one answer.

If this picture represents a decay of the policy of self-regulation, together with a new measure of the moral standards of the land, that is another answer.

If it is neither of these, some will ask: Who and what does it represent in the arena of relations between the motion picture and its public?

Mr. Howard Dietz of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, concerned with the picture in question, as merchandise, has been quoted as observing: "It is hard to make a comment on judging dramatic works by a series of set rules. The important thing is the intent and the result."

Those "set rules" are, in fact, the document known as the Production Code, to which the organized industry was signatory in the days when it sought, with considerable concern, procedure to adjust the product for solution of the industry's most poignant public relations problem since those trying days of twenty years ago when it formed its present trade association.

The "rules", or the Code, much discussed and little read, represent in truth nothing more complex or difficult than an agreement to keep the "Ten Commandments" in mind in the making of motion pictures and not to advocate the breaking of them, directly or by inference, or by subterfuge.

THE element of sheer commercial expediency has been touched upon by Mr. Edwin Schallert in the Los Angeles Times in the comment that:

"Under present circumstances, with rough and ready appeal at the box office most dictated, because of the kind of an audience that has money to spend, pictures are on the crude side. When this is slapstick, handled in a legitimate way, as with most of the Abbott and Costello films, it is okay. But if the comedy descends to the vulgarity of the pre-1934 period, it will be better if a few pictures are banned."

Among the most conspicuous manifestations in this current matter have been those of special interest on the part of the press. Mr. William Randolph Hearst in his daily column, widely syndicated, has remarked: "But in view of the bitter experiences the industry has had—and is now having—it would seem hardly believable that intelligent producers would resort to suggestiveness and immorality. . . . "

Mr. Hearst, who perhaps has not yet forgotten "Citizen Kane", makes comment on the treatment of newspapers and newspaper men by the screen, remarking: "Perhaps the screen might refrain from throwing stones while its friends and sympathizers are rallying to help it repair and protect the fragile facades of its own glass house."

For what is described as a "purely practical, business viewpoint" one discovers Mr. Mo Wax on the editorial page of the Film Bulletin of Philadelphia, in the issue of December 1, saying:

"Hollywood knows that the vast majority of American people will not buy smut. Nor are they being attracted in any large numbers by a cycle of stories about cheating husbands and cheating wives. . . . We believe that the Legion of Decency has performed a service for the industry by reminding the film makers that there are many other subjects which will entertain and stimulate the moviegoers of the nation."

AN incidental phase of the situation pertains to that special area of international relations and the Rockefeller-Whitney program of cultural relations in which the motion picture is expected to be so much of an instrument. The effectiveness of the motion picture as a medium in that endeavour must be expected to be subject to some effect from changes in its status in its land of origin. The Latins are largely a religious people.

It is earnestly to be hoped that the difficulties so precipitated may be dissolved without further impairment of the status of the motion picture and the American picture industry—which has been doing so well so long.

Pic Does It Again

WITH extraordinary timing Pic, Street and Smith picture magazine, came forth this week with a four-page pictorial display entitled "Bedtime Party," displaying, with brisk captions, what it describes as a Hollywood 2:00 A.M. party, and which Mitchell Leisen, Paramount director, and Billy Daniel, an actor, are credited with staging for Mary Parker, dancer and member of a night club dance troupe which Mr. Leisen conducts as a sideline.

"Where do you think the party was held? In bed—isn't that simply terrific? Doesn't that slay you?," Pic chortled. Miss Parker's birthday was celebrated, Pic reported, on a studio set where there was a "colossal bed covered with gifts" for Mary, and a cot, toothbrush, towel and old-fashioned nightgown for every guest.

The Hollywood captions, rewritten in Pic's New York office, did not point out that the "studio" was the rehearsal hall of Mr. Leisen's dance enterprise, which is in nowise related to motion picture production. The pictures were made last August when Mr. Leisen invited Paul Dorsey and two other free-lance photographers to the party for publicity purposes, in behalf of his Mary Parker-Billy Daniel dance troupe.

Director Leisen, who has managed the dancing enterprise as a sideline for five years, turned the pictures over to his personal publicity agency, headed by the usually conservative Cliff Lewis, with instructions to "plant them."

Frank Phillips, Pic Hollywood agent, submitted the stills to his New York office with the accurate information as to the scene of festivity. They were then recast, as now published, after photostats of the layout and captions had been submitted to Mr. Leisen in Hollywood for approval prior to publication.

Immediate repercussion was the calling of a meeting of Hollywood studio publicity directors for Thursday, to consider ways of controlling free-lance publicity men whose clients include motion picture personalities.

Pic, last year, was the magazine that offered Hollywood to the altars of newsstand sales after it had removed retouching from a picture revealing far too much of Jane Russell, until then, the unseen star of Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw."

Prima facie evidence of intent to mislead is to be noted in the fact that the same edition of Pic which tells the story of the party, without revealing that it happened last August and that it was not a motion picture affair, also presents, five pages further back, a pictorial layout featuring Miss Parker and Mr. Daniel as stars of the current Broadway revue "Let's Face It."

Goldwyn Likes RKO

SAM GOLDWYN likes RKO. The producer thinks RKO is "doing a swell job" releasing his films. Ned Depinet, RKO's general sales manager, is "a fine guy." Mr. Goldwyn, all in all, is "pleased at progress" of his films released through that company.

Mr. Goldwyn, on a New York visit, last week and this, at a Waldorf-Astoria "audience" made a special point of praising RKO —to counterbalance, he remarked, rumors he would return to United Artists.

United Artists' David Selznick is a "personal friend"; he will use the Goldwyn studio; the studio's name will be changed to Goldwyn-Selznick, and if United Artists, in its new career, wants to use Goldwyn studio space, it may.

But that is as far as it goes—the relationship between Goldwyn and United Artists —the producer emphasized.

Mr. Goldwyn, reminded that his latest, "Ball of Fire," is the last in the present distributing arrangement with RKO remarked that, above all, he was "not in a negotiating mood now."

He reminded his interviewers that, unlike many producers, he could make a picture, and then decide through whom to give it release, boasting: "I don't borrow money from the banks."

Mr. Goldwyn predicted next year would be one of his "most active." In January, he will produce "The Life of Lou Gehrig," for which he has signed Babe Ruth. In March, he will make one starring Bob Hope —"Treasury Chest." In June, he will make another to be directed by William Wyler, from a current stage play. In England, production is under way on "Spitfire," being directed by Leslie Howard, starring David Niven, and under sponsorship of Mr. Goldwyn and C. M. Woolf. He also has plans for "Hans Christian Andersen," to be made in conjunction with Walt Disney.

Fox Plea Stands

WILLIAM FOX still faces that year and a day jail term, and its accompanying $3,000 fine, for conspiring to obstruct justice "and defraud the United States" during bankruptcy litigation several years ago in the Philadelphia Court of retired and resigned Federal Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis.

On Monday, Mr. Fox's petitions to change to not guilty his previous admission of guilt, and to have sentence and fine reconsidered, were denied in Philadelphia, by Federal Judge Guy K. Bard. The denial leaves Mr. Fox still free on $50,000 bail, pending further decision by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Not even the intercession of the United States Attorney General's office, helped Mr. Fox Monday. Attorney Gerald A. Gleeson said the Government had information that Mr. Fox understood, during trial, that the Government would not oppose change of his plea, if Judge Davis and Morgan S. Kaufman, co-defendants, were acquitted.

Allied on the Air

A RADIO program designed to produce box office demand, will soon be on the air over one of Chicago's radio stations, in the promotional interests of members of Allied Theatres of Illinois, Jack Kirsch, president, announced.

"We plan to sell theatre seats, which are merely saleable merchandise, by using radio, the theatre's natural enemy," said Mr. Kirsch.

Under direction of Harry K. Smythe, associated with the Craig Dennison advertising agency, the show is planned for one hour a day, six days a week, over Chicago's newest radio station WAIT, with Bill Anson, radio entertainer, as master of ceremonies. It will have music, movie reviews, Hollywood gossip, and promotional features.

Members of Allied of Illinois will be able to participate in the show at their own discretion, but it is reliably reported that with the opening broadcast on or about December 15th, the new radio promotion will boast practically a 100 per cent representation of Allied theatres.

In Charge at RKO

RKO RADIO'S administrative course was decided Wednesday at a meeting of the board of directors at which George J. Schaefer was granted full operating authority over the company and Joseph I. Breen confirmed as production executive in chief. The board will constitute itself a working board, meeting weekly instead of once a month as heretofore. The decisions were recommended by a directors' committee comprising Fred E. Ehrman, Thomas P. Durell and W. G. Van Schmus, appointed to survey the company's internal situation.

He's Doing All Right

DAVID WARFIELD, who began his career as an actor at the Wigwam theatre in San Francisco in 1889, on November 28th, celebrated his 75th birthday. The New York press, sending reporters to his apartment on Central Park West and the nook at the Lambs Club where he spends his days idling, observed the occasion with an effusive series of "grand old man of the theatre" interviews.

Mr. Warfield, the New York Times reported, still has great faith in the entertainment of the legitimate theatre. "It will never die as long as there are good plays and actors," he told the Times reporter. Of motion pictures, Mr. Warfield, sitting behind his desk in his apartment living room, which, the Times said, is "filled with souvenirs—tapestries from Russia, statuettes from France," spoke less kindly.

Tickets to Broadway plays now cost $3.30, the actor observed.

"Compared to the movies, though, it's worth the price." Mr. Warfield said: "They are a mock turtle soup form of entertainment. Who wants to see animated photographs when they can see real actors and hear real voices on the stage? Not I."

Since May 28, 1923, Mr. Warfield, long a friend and participant in the cinema theatre ventures of the late Marcus Loew, has been a member of the board of directors of Loew's, Inc. He seldom misses a meeting of the board nor the little honorarium or whatever it is corporations give board members for meetings in place of the twenty-dollar gold pieces which went out with the lifting of the gold standard.

Mr. Warfield still owns some 7,000 shares of Loew common stock, which at the prevailing market price of $38.12½ a share means a little nest egg of $266,875 and from which he cashes dividend checks for about $14,000 a year.

For Freedom and Fun

THE Hollywood contingent of Fight for Freedom when not acting before cameras or creating film scripts, is busy these days donating time and talent to making radio talks, personal appearances and planning stage shows for Fight for Freedom meetings. Melvyn Douglas is chairman of the Hollywood group of the stage, screen and radio division of Fight for Freedom, which is headed by Helen Hayes and Burgess Meredith.

Currently, actor Douglas and his group are planning to send a Hollywood delegation to St. Louis on December 10th, where FFF will stage another version of "Fun To Be Free," the Hecht-MacArthur show which jammed Madison Square Garden at a rally in New York last October.

Rose Keane, secretary of the theatrical division for FFF, said in New York last week that Jack L. Warner and Spyros Skouras had been "very helpful" in cooperating with the division, whose sponsors number luminaries of the screen, stage and radio.

Without Bail

LANGUISHING in New York's Federal House of Detention this week, was Nick Circella, alias Dean, also known as "Nickelodeon." His lawyers scrounged about for $25,000 bail. And a United States District Attorney, Mathias F. Correa, had a Federal judge prevent Circella from using IATSE money.

On September 29th he was named, with Louis Kaufman, IATSE Newark business agent, as accomplice with Browne and Bioff in extorting more than $1,000,000 from the film industry.

The IATSE paid bail and some court expenses for Browne and Bioff; and so Mr. Correa asked Federal Judge Henry Goddard Tuesday to prevent it from helping Circella.

FBI men joined Circella at breakfast Monday morning, in Shorty's Place, Cicero Avenue, Chicago. They told him to continue eating, but, as one remarked, "He seemed to have lost his appetite."

The Federal agents flew him to Judge Goddard's court Tuesday, where he pleaded not guilty to the extortion indictment. He and Kaufman may stand trial January 6th.

Reportedly impelled by protests from locals, the IATSE will refuse to pay about $50,000 of the estimated $125,000 Browne and Bioff spent defending themselves against extortion charges, it was indicated by Richard F. Walsh, Browne's successor as union president. Mr. Walsh refused to confirm the amount, but said of the fees, "No matter what they are, we are not going to pay."

By Wireless

LITERALLY wireless radio networks again appeared this week as a working practicality and potential threat to the lucrative revenues which the American Telephone and Telegraph Company derives from leasing its long distance lines to radio chains. To salute the new Mutual Broadcasting System frequency modulation station at New York, W71NY, seven FM stations on Sunday evening joined in a four-hour dedication program. It was the most extensive linking of FM stations yet attempted, and was considered a test for the FM American Network, scheduled to begin operations in January. Linked with W71NY, New York, were W2XMN, Alpine, N. J.; W65H, Hartford; W43B, Boston; W39B, Mount Washington, N. H.; W53PH, Philadelphia; and W47A, Schenectady.

To keep the inaugural broadcast completely wireless telephone lines were even dispensed with between the Mutual studios at 1440 Broadway and the W71NY transmitter at Madison Avenue and 50th Street. A light beam carried the program from studio to transmitter, some 4,000 feet.

BAN ON "TWO-FACED WOMAN" STIRS NATIONAL ATTENTION TO STANDARDS

Catholic Bishops Follow Legion Condemnation with Pastoral Letters; Press Joins Attack on "Lowering of Moral Bars"

The status of "Two-Faced Woman," condemned by the Legion of Decency, banned by the authorities of Providence, R. I., and additionally condemned in a pastoral letter by Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York, and by other diocesan action, all last week-end, became this week a subject of nationwide attention from social and religious organizations and the press.

Hollywood, with many a picture now complete and in the can awaiting release schedules, was sitting officially silent and wondering, externally nonchalant. Most of the ranking executives of the industry were in Hollywood, where they had gathered the week before in connection with conferences pertaining to the Rockefeller-Whitney program of Latin-American relations and other matters related to war and defense, including, importantly, priorities of materials essential in production.

Meanwhile there were indications that there would be consideration of some readjustments and revisions of the picture with perhaps interpolations. It was also indicated as probable that a number of productions now ready and some in work would be getting careful examination before presentation.

Inevitably the subject of "Two-Faced Woman" widened into larger consideration of the whole state of the screen and its social and moral content, especially in considerations by the lay press, which became pointedly reminiscent of the conditions of 1933-34 when the motion picture industry set up its Production Code machinery of self-regulation as a foil against menace of various new governmental censorships, and national censorship as advocated by many militants.

Condemned in Pastoral Letter

In his pastoral letter, read in the churches last Sunday, Archbishop Spellman observed: ". . . This rating (by the Legion of Decency) means the picture is condemned as an occasion of sin and as dangerous to public morals because it is suggestive in its scenes, its dialogue and its situations . . ."

In behalf of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity, issued a statement to the lay press in which he said:

"We have read Archbishop Spellman's statement. It is regretted that the Legion of Decency has seen fit to condemn this picture. It has always been our endeavor to produce quality motion pictures which will not offend good taste or decency. There is no exact science in the production of motion pictures. People do at various times differ as to the effect of a given line or scene, particularly in a picture such as this, which is comedy and designed primarily to amuse.

"It is only fair to point out that the picture 'Two-Faced Woman' was presented to the Motion Picture Production Code Authority and received an approval seal from that organization. It has likewise been presented to all State censorship boards and, with slight alterations in a few cases, had been passed by every one for public presentation. Also, the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures has classified the film as 'especially worth seeing and above the average'."

LORD'S DAY GROUP HITS STAGE REVUES

The revues and variety shows on New York stages were denounced as "obscene, vulgar and perniciously poisonous" and a menace to national morale and defense by delegates to the 53rd annual meeting of the Lord's Day Alliance in New York on Monday.

The group of more than 100 churchmen, from all sections of the country, meeting at the Presbyterian Building in New York, drafted a resolution to Mayor F. H. LaGuardia calling upon him to close the shows.

Congressman Writes to Hays

Congressman Martin J. Kennedy (Dem., N. Y.), in a letter to Will H. Hays, MPPDA president, on Monday, demanded that distribution of the film be halted forthwith and charged that the motion picture industry was violating a promise to produce nothing offensive to good taste and morality. Mr. Kennedy immediately released copies of his letter to the press from his office at Washington.

He repeated in his letter the Legion of Decency's original reason for condemning the film —that it reflected "an immoral and indecent attitude toward marriage and the obligations of marriage; is impudently suggestive in its scenes, in its dialogue and in its situations, and in its costuming it is suggestive."

The Congressman referred to Archbishop Spellman's letter to the clergy and parishioners in New York, and said: "As a member of Congress, at several Congressional hearings on pending legislation affecting the motion picture industry, I listened to representatives of the industry state that it would not be necessary to pass legislation to compel the industry to 'clean house' and to refrain from the production of indecent and immoral pictures. We were assured by the representatives of the motion picture that 'the industry is determined to produce nothing offensive to good taste and decency.'

"The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, 'Two-Faced Woman,' contradicts those promises given at the Congressional hearings. I cannot understand how your reviewers could have approved this vile picture, so lacking in decency content. The production of this picture must be considered as an affront to the Congress of the United States.

"True Americanism requires clean thinking, clean living and clean pictures. As a representative of an industry made great by the American people, I call upon you, Mr. Hays, to immediately stop the distribution of this picture."

The New York State council of the Knights of Columbus on Monday wrote to Will Hays protesting issuance of a PCA code seal to "Two-Faced Woman" and stating that members of the New York council had been requested to "prevent its exhibition in communities in which they and their families and friends reside." The letter, signed by John F. X. Browne, said:

"It is with regret that we again find ourselves obliged to submit our vigorous protest of the approval by your office of a film which so flagrantly violates the standards of common decency as to merit a 'C,' or 'Condemned,' rating by the National Legion of Decency, namely, 'Two-Faced Woman' . . ."

Mr. Browne recalled similar K. of C. action on "This Thing Called Love" and "Strange Cargo" and urged that the Garbo picture be revised.

"We respectfully submit that the interests of the motion picture industry would be better served if your office were more careful to insist on the revision of these films before they are released, and thus eliminate the unfavorable publicity to both the particular producer and the industry as a whole which must necessarily follow when the Legion is compelled, as it has been here, to condemn the picture. . . ."

Such publicity, Mr. Browne wrote, cannot aid the "goodwill towards the industry which is the foundation of public patronage of movie houses."

Others Join Attack

The New York City chapter of the Knights of Columbus through the chairman of its Catholic Interest Committee, Thomas A. Madden, addressed a letter to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in California. It said members in New York "were deeply shocked and disappointed" at the release of "Two-Faced Woman" and cited a statement by Mr. Hays made last July 20th that the nation in time of national emergency needed "the highest possible standards of wholesome entertainment."

The American Civil Liberties Union, in New York, through its affiliate, National Council on Freedom from Censorship, sent telegrams this week to Will Hays and to Louis B. Mayer, MGM studio chief, offering the services of the Council to fight the Providence censors' ban.

Warning that the censorship of the picture could prove "fatal to the entire industry," Quincy Howe, chairman of the Council, said in his telegrams: "Providence censorship of Garbo film can become spearhead of drive on all films. More acts of this kind can prove fatal to entire industry. Urge you fight this strong case now if you would forestall further censorship later. Can we help?"

On Wednesday, Mr. Howe admitted that replies had not been received from either Mr. Hays or Mr. Mayer. He revealed, however, that the Screen Writers Guild, in reply to a similar telegram sent by the Council, had said a Guild meeting was called for Monday concerning the issue.

An Issue Across the Nation

"Unite in protesting against the showing" of "Two-Faced Woman," Archbishop John J. Glennon, St. Louis, told pastors, by letter, over the weekend.

The letter noted the Legion's condemnation and asked pastors to make it known to parishioners. It said the film "not only offended the moral law, but is an insult to the decent and fair-minded citizens of our city," and "tends to the destruction and degradation of the sacred institution of marriage and the family."

The picture was to open in St. Louis at Loew's Thursday. Rex Williams, manager of the theatre, insisted the church letter would "not alter our plans." He expressed regret over the incident, but said, "everyone has a right to his opinion about motion pictures."

Mrs. Jacob Lashly, president of the St. Louis Better Films Council, said it would not opine about the picture until its reviewing committee saw it Thursday at the theatre.

PRESS CALLS IT "POOR BUSINESS"

P. Finnegan, and civic leaders, saw the picture Monday, in private.

The church action was given front page mention by St. Louis newspapers.

In Buffalo, Shea's Theatre, MGM's outlet there, will not show the picture at the Great Lakes Theatre. Bishop John A. Duffy, of the local diocese, protested its showing "on information he had received," and, when apprised of the Shea action, expressed appreciation for the "valuable cooperation" of Vincent McFaul, the Shea circuit's general manager.

The Buffalo Bishop added: "The film has been condemned because of the language, situations, and the light treatment of marital relations, and, in general, as a demeaning picture violating the basic rules of ordinary acceptable morality. It was singled out as a specific instance of the violation of the code agreed upon by the prodcuers' association and Joseph Breen of the Will Hays office, several years ago. That code had been observed until this last year, when, I am sorry to say, there has been a distinct falling off in the moral caliber of pictures made."

Irwin Esmond, New York state censor, said Monday his board approved the production without making any requests for changes or deletions of any nature.

Boycott Asked in Albany

However, also in Albany, the Albany Evangelist, weekly of that diocese, asked editorially for a boycott. Father Kelly, diocesan director of the Legion, was quoted favoring the boycott.

Bishop of Syracuse, the Most Reverend Walter A. Foery this week appealed to the city's theatregoers to protest "most vigorously" against showing of the Garbo picture at Loew's State. Sunday, the Legion's condemnation was noted in all diocese pulpits.

Rochester's 150,000 Catholics were warned last Sunday by Bishop James E. Kearney, against the film which opened for a week at Loew's Rochester. He wrote a letter, which was read by all pastors at services.

Providence will definitely not see the film, it appears, inasmuch as the city's Bureau of Police this week upheld Police Inspector George Cowan's denial of an exhibition license; a denial which came after the Legion condemnation. Because other Rhode Island towns follow Providence's lead, it is unlikely the picture will be shown in that state.

Mr. Cowan admitted acting before seeing the film, but upon the Legion's opinion. However, after seeing it in a Boston exchange, he transmitted his opinion to the Bureau, which thereupon backed him. The Inspector's action had been criticized by local newspapers, the Journal and Evening Bulletin, and by the Brown Daily Herald, of Brown University.

Advertising Withdrawn

Meanwhile, Jack Simons, manager of Loew's State, Providence, was instructed to withdraw advertising, although an MGM spokesman in that city last week denied the action meant the company would not show the film there.

The Police Bureau action came after undisclosed discussion at a meeting of the state's Better Films Council, also last week.

The Journal later said there might be compromise between MGM and the Legion, pointing out the Legion condemnation of MGM's "Strange Cargo," which was revised so the Legion could re-classify it.

The right of the Police Bureau to ban films in Providence has been upheld by the State Supreme Court, in a fight over "Professor Mamlock," Russian film.

The Journal reported that Nate Yamins New England theatres would adhere to a policy of barring films decried by the Legion.

WARNERS CANCEL "TOBACCO ROAD"

The Warner circuit Midwest headquarters at Chicago last week cancelled scheduled performances of "Tobacco Road" by a traveling stock company at their Paramount theatre in Hammond, Ind. The action followed protests from Mayor Frank Martin and Indiana church and civic groups. Previously Federal Judge Thomas W. Slick had granted the "Tobacco Road" company an order restraining the city of Hammond from banning the show at the Paramount.

"We are in business 52 weeks a year and we're not going to defy public opinion. We can just about tell when the pressure is enough to warrant a change in our policy," Larry Stein, Warner theatres district manager, commented at Chicago.

In Hartford, Conn., Bishop Maurice F. McAuliffe advised pastors to communicate the Legion warning to parishioners.

Boston City Censor John J. Spencer barred the picture, explaining: "After giving careful consideration to the theme and content I feel that the film is objectionable, and permission will not be granted for any showing in the theatres of Boston."

Springfield, Massachusetts, ejected the film from Loew's Poli where it had played since Thursday, November 28th. The action was by police, after complaints and review by a policewoman. The ban went into effect Sunday.

Earlier, the city's Police Chief, John Fleming, had told reporters "Why should I give the film publicity by talking about it?"

Cut in Chicago

Cut some, the film was passed by the Chicago censors, and is to open Saturday at the Balaban and Katz United Artists Theatre. Two scenes cut show Garbo on a couch with a man, and her falling in bedroom in apparent intoxication as she is about to telephone.

Milwaukee's mayor Carl Zeidler, ordered deletions, after the newspaper, the Herald Citizen, headlined the Legion action on front pages. The picture opened at the Fox Wisconsin, in altered form.

The Kansas City censor passed the film and it was reported, with no confirmation at midweek, that the state board of review also passed the film.

The picture caused some controversy within the Ohio board; but they passed the picture, eliminating only the words: "We let the boys see the wheels go around."

Baltimore censors approved; but The Review, Catholic publication of that city, front-paged: The picture "is unfit to be seen by Catholics or non-Catholics."

Pennsylvania censors approved, with no cuts, and the picture opened at the Boyd, Philadelphia. However, four board members did protest to the Hays office on tendencies of "half-a-dozen" recent pictures,

Mrs. Edna Carroll, Pennsylvania board chairman, told the Hays office the board disapproved productions of that type.

Atlanta censors passed "Two-Faced Woman," with no cuts.

Catholic churches of Indianapolis Sunday took action on the film similar to action in other Catholic dioceses mentioned. Richmond, Virginia, Catholic churches did the same.

In Newark, the Archdiocesan Federation of Holy Name Societies asked members to protest to theatre managers in the city and area against showing of the film.

Virginia censors approved "Two Faced Woman" without change, and it had its first state showing last week in Norfolk.

The Omaha welfare board deleted a five minute divan scene, terming it "improper," its first such action. Ted Emerson, manager of the Omaha Theatre, where it opened Wednesday, said the cut didn't affect continuity.

Press Editoralizes

News-wise the Garbo matter received considerable space attention in the press across the land. Many newspapers turned editorial attention in this direction.

"In the News," a column appearing in the Hearst publications, on Monday, observed, "The pictures which have scored the greatest successes, and made the most money for their judicious producers during the past couple of years are neither propaganda pictures nor indecent pictures. . . . The Garbo picture is an example of insistent impropriety. . . . Why drag this distinguished lady from the pedestal upon which her talents have deservedly placed her and soil her record and her high reputation in the mud of suggestiveness? It is not good morality; and if that is not enough, it is not good business."

"In the News," though not signed, is generally understood to be personally written by Mr. Hearst.

In an editorial titled, "A Proposal to Handle Censorship," the Providence Evening Bulletin last Saturday, urged that "there be created in Providence a panel of representative members of the community drawn from the fields of the several faiths, education, medicine, business, labor, law and other branches of endeavor. . . . From the review of 'Two-Faced Woman' by our motion picture critic, printed elsewhere in this issue, it is obvious that there is justification for the condemnation classification by the National Legion of Decency."

National Decency Legion Classifies Ten Pictures

Of the ten motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, five were approved for general patronage and five were classified as unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Fighting Bill Fargo," "Marry the Boss's Daughter," "Secrets of the Lone Wolf," "Stage Coach Buckaroo," and "Underground Rustlers." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Double Trouble," "H. M. Pulham, Esq.," "Keep 'em Flying," "Miss Polly" and "The Perfect Snob."

At the same time the National Legion of Decency gave a "separate classification" rating to the John Steinbeck-Herbert Kline documentary, "The Forgotten Village." In classifying the picture the Legion announced: "The film with its materialistic emphasis is susceptible of contribution to the erroneous conclusion that religion is as futile as superstition and retards progress."

EXHIBITORS, DISTRIBUTORS GO TO CHICAGO TO TALK INDUSTRY UNITY

New Trade Practice Code May Evolve from "Industry Unity" Meeting, Allied Sponsors Feel; Universal, UA Stay Home

The industry is on the eve of a new "trade practice code," to replace that which failed of effect two years ago, and even possibly to replace the consent decree, if the Federal Court should end majors' obligations to it. It may also shortly have a working organization to combat the detractors and assailants of the industry in Congress, in the press, in clubs, in the homes, on the radio: a "solid front" to prevent the industry from being destroyed, or even hurt, by the interests which have sought to dictate its policies, and which, in the recent Washington inquiry, placed its leaders on trial.

All this is expected by the sponsors to evolve from the National Allied-all-industry meeting, Tuesday, in Chicago's Blackstone Hotel. In any event, acceptances of invitations to the meeting have increasingly poured in from all sectors of the industry, with indications the conference may last more than one day; possibly three or four.

Latest acceptance was from the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners which asserted a "platform of fair trade practices must be established." Previously, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America indicated its participation, as also did Harry Brandt's Independent Theatre Owners Association, of New York. Mr. Brandt, and other delegates from his organization, were expected to meet Monday in the Windy City, with those from the PCCITO, to discuss possible questions and points to be raised during the meeting.

Good-Will Is Asset

Meanwhile, Abram F. Myers, general counsel to the National Allied told the meeting of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio last week, in its journal, that producer-distributors "must be made to understand that the continued good-will and support of the independent exhibitors is the most valuable asset they possess."

But from Nashville, Tennessee, Edward C. Raftery, president of United Artists, and counsel for that company and Universal in the Government's anti-trust case against the two distributors and the Crescent circuit and affiliates, was represented as saying, Monday, that United Artists and Universal would not participate in the Chicago meeting. Mr. Raftery indicated he thought the meeting's main purpose was formation of a distribution system to use "after the consent decree is thrown out."

It was reported Nicholas Schenck, George Schaefer, Joseph Bernhard, Abe Montague, Felix Jenkins, William F. Rodgers and Henderson M. Richey would represent the distributors.

Announcing last week from Los Angeles, its participation in the Chicago meeting, the PCCITO at the same time said it would divulge, later, the names of its representatives.

"It is vitally important at this meeting, called to discuss national unity, for the establishment of a program insuring even the smallest independent exhibitor of fair and just consideration.

"The PCCITO has never receded from its 11-point program presented to Judge Goddard and the Hon. Thurman Arnold prior to the entry of the consent decree. This program was a major part of the trade practice code agreement and the PCCITO has always felt, and still feels, that if their 11-point program was incorporated in the consent decree that the relationship between exhibitor and distributor would be so perfected as to establish complete national unity."

The PCCITO delegates are: Robert H. Poole, executive secretary; Jack Y. Berman, Los Angeles; L. O. Lukan, Seattle; Robert White, Portland; H. V. Harvey, San Francisco.

That the Chicago meeting may last longer than one day was indicated by the required presence of Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, at the Oklahoma unit's annual meeting in Oklahoma City, on that day. He is expected to arrive in Chicago December 10th, Wednesday—and the unity plan cannot be successful without the MPTOA, observers noted.

How many of the country's exhibitor units will be at the meeting was not disclosed at mid-week. It was thought the acceptances would be tabulated and disclosed later this week.

Northwest Allied is expected to place before the conference the product and rental difficulties of its exhibitor members in Minnesota, home of the country's first anti-decree law.

Product difficulties have grown so acute, despite the fact all but of the majors had equipped themselves to sell under the block-five law, that a group of independent exhibitors have planned conferences with general sales managers.

TEXAS EXHIBITORS FORM NEW GROUP

Texas Theatre Owners, Inc., a new independent exhibitor organization, has been formed at Dallas. The group is without national affiliation and was formed from the old Theatre Owners Protective Association. Its recruiting slogan is "for the good of the industry". A membership drive is currently under way, and a meeting is set for April or May.

Henry Reeve, of Menard, is president of the new TTO. D. W. Sadler, of Weatherford, is vice-president, and Don C. Douglas, of Dallas, the secretary-treasurer. Other members of the board include Don C. Wooten, Canyon; J. C. Chatman, Marlin, and Bob O'Donnell, Dallas.

Myers Flays Decree As "Imposed Code"

The consent decree is a code imposed by government officials and film companies, and was forced upon the exhibitor who had no part in its writing, Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, charged at the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio convention in Columbus, that state, last week.

He added that exhibitors disliked the decree, unwanted and unworkable and that he had not heard one exhibitor yet voice approval.

Besides cussing and discussing the decree and pointing out its imperfections, Mr. Myers warned that the country was facing an unhappy economic situation and that the exhibitors should strengthen themselves against the tough sledding that lay ahead and by all means to unite to protect themselves against unfair taxation in the future. He expressed hope for the success of the all-industry unity meeting and said that if the exhibitors could formulate a policy acceptable to themselves and then persuade the film companies to adopt that method, there would be no need for the operation of the consent decree. He pointed out, that according to a clause in the decree, the film companies could choose their own selling methods after June 1, 1942, anyway.

If the meeting in Chicago does not succeed, he said, Allied would still do business at the old stand and be just as militant and aggressive as it had in the past.

Questionnaire Report

Pete J. Wood, secretary of the ITO, reported that 110 replies to questionnaires sent to exhibitors on November 10 stated that one or more distributing companies were violating the consent decree by forcing the sale of short subjects and newsreels before they would talk about features and that some of the companies refused to sell their second block of features unless the exhibitor bought the first block. H. M. Richey and Edwin M. Booth, manager of the Cincinnati MGM exchange, defended their company saying that such a thing might be possible by an over enthusiastic salesman and that the matter would be looked into and stopped immediately if such were the case. Other companies named in the complaints were to be notified of the alleged infractions by Secretary Wood.

Selling policies were discussed as was the question of raising admissions. Exhibitors in the Ohio territory are reluctant to increase their admissions unless forced to. A resolution was passed thanking MGM for holding the "Exhibitor Forum" during the convention.

All of last year's officers and directors were reelected by acclamation with the exception of director Henry S. Fickinger of Galion, Ohio, who was replaced by Leo Jones, Upper Sandusky, and the addition of a new director, Willis Vance of Cincinnati. Officers of the organization are: Martin G. Smith, president; F. W. Huss, Jr., vice-president; Max Stearn, vice-president; Hoy O. Simons, treasurer, and P. J. Wood, secretary. Directors are Henry Greenberger, John D. Kalafat, Nat B. Charnas, Harold Bernstein, R. S. Wallace, C. F. Pfister, L. F. Eick, J. W. Trunk, Henry Thomas, Jerome G. Steel, Leo Kessel, Leo Jones and Willis Vance.

South Dakota Attacks The Consent Decree

Consensus of the South Dakota Exhibitors convention recently at the Carpenter Hotel, Sioux Falls, that state, is that the consent decree is not working properly. Numerous complaints were heard; that there were too many percentage films, that allocations in the lower groups were too high, that film salesmen would not allow omission of one block and purchase of the next, that short subjects were being "forced," that, altogether, new contracts were costing the exhibitor more than he spent before the decree.

No action was taken, however, it being thought there might be a change, possibly termination of the decree, before a year passes.

If no change occurs, the organization's offi-

Paris Calling

(Universal)

Romance and Espionage

"Paris Calling," the title being the code words of an underground expionage movement of Nazi-hating Parisians, is a study in contrasts, in story, in casting and in settings, all hung on a couple of substantial pegs. The first is love; the second is Elizabeth Bergner. Whatever Miss Bergner is called upon to do she does with the complete confidence of an actress who knows how to live her role.

A good part of the plot's structure is a reasonable facsimile of past espionage stories, and can be passed over as typical of the times. It tells of a well-to-do Parisian girl, engaged to a high government official. She flees Paris with her mother when the Germans arrive, despondently returns when her mother dies on the road to Bordeaux as a result of the Nazi bombing, joins the underground movement and slays her fiance—who turned out to be pro-Nazi—for the traitorous state papers he is carrying.

Basil Rathbone, as the pro-Nazi Frenchman, is exceedingly competent. The contrasts come with the fortuitous arrival of an American member of the RAF, played by Randolph Scott, who is left stranded in France after the evacuation; the incompetence displayed by Gestapo agents, and a climax that verges on the fantastic. In that climax, a British seaplane puts down in a French port with a detachment of sailors who overcome the Gestapo agents and the Nazi soldiers gathered in a seaport cafe, and rescue Mr. Scott, Miss Bergner and sundry others. It is blood-brother to a serial.

Overlooking lapses, "Paris Calling" is an interesting, entertaining spy story with some really competent acting by an actress named Elizabeth Bergner.

Metropolitan Melodrama

Momentum and a multiplicity of complications which sustain suspense give this melodrama of metropolitan politics an entertainment value in excess of its production cost. Speed of narration tends to offset some defects of acting which dispel only momentarily a semblance of reality which producer A. W. Hackel and director Lewis D. Collins maintain without incurring expenses beyond the purposes of the enterprise.

Alan Baxter dominates the picture as the accidental hero of a police capture which results in his appointment by crooked civic leaders as special prosecutor assigned to smash a crime ring. Their efforts to escape detection by turning public sympathy against him are defeated when he adopts gangland's own methods of wringing a confession from their hired killer. Florence Rice portrays the usual newspaper girl in love with the hero, John Hamilton, the corrupt politician, and Wilma Francis stands out as the girl who supplies the necessary evidence in the case.

The story by Ben Roberts and Sidney Sheldon and screenplay by Earle Snell gave the production staff an abundance of material to work with.

Taplinger Assistant To Harry Cohn

Robert Taplinger, who was removed as Warner studio publicity head some weeks ago and came to the New York home office in a new publicity position, from which he resigned Tuesday, on Wednesday began preparation to return to the Coast as executive assistant to Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures.

Columbia announced his acquisition Wednesday, and that he would begin work December 8th, at Mr. Cohn's offices in the studio.

Mr. Taplinger had been director of studio publicity at Warners for four years. His position of recent weeks, at the home office, had been described as "national publicity and exploitation director." It was given him after Alex Evelove assumed his studio position, and after Mort Blumenstock, until then Eastern publicity and advertising director, became national advertising head.

Mr. Taplinger is 32. He has been in publicity 15 years. He has served the management of Atlantic City, and the Columbia Broadcasting System; and in 1935, he opened his own publicity firm in New York, then spreading to Chicago, Hollywood, and London. Selling out then to Tom Fizdale, Inc., he joined Warners in 1937.

Ben Kalmenson, Warner Bros. sales head, announced Wednesday, in New York, that Ralph L. McCoy had been named southern and mid-western division manager. He recently was appointed southeastern district manager in addition to his duties in Atlanta as branch manager. Mr. McCoy will make his headquarters in New York. W. O. Williamson, Jr., was appointed branch manager in Atlanta. Henry Krumm became branch manager in Memphis.

Industry Meets At Chicago for Unity Session

cers are expected to draw a bill for the legislature, for approval at next year's meeting.

No one company was criticized, but exhibitors present felt all were commonly at fault, in the new selling. Few exhibitors had tried MGM's "sliding scale." Those in smaller towns objected.

About 10 "jackrabbit"—16 mm—circuits were reported operating in South Dakota. Exhibitors were urged to compile information on these, for officers' use.

Opposition to the ASCAP tax was unanimous; however, more information was thought necessary before approaching the legislature.

E. D. Nash, Canton, was reelected president; Bert Johnson, Rapid City, vice-president; A. P. Sorenson, Beresford, secretary-treasurer. New directors are E. G. Sorenson, William Klein, A. E. Blakkolb, E. Keeninguer, D. C. Trippler.

Kuykendall Advises Oklahoma MPTO

The one-day annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, at Oklahoma City's Skirvin Hotel, Tuesday, will be headlined by Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the national MPOTA. Other speakers will be William McCraw, former attorney general of Texas, and now chief consultant for the Office of Production Management; Morris Loewenstein, president of the unit; Leonard E. White, its financial secretary; Governor Leon Phillips of Oklahoma; Ralph Talbot, head of the Talbot circuit; C. B. "Brownie" Akers, Griffith circuit supervisor of operations; Oscar Davis, tax expert; Louis Groves, who will talk about non-theatrical film "rackets"; Vance Terry, Woodward exhibitor, who will delineate "Advertising Gyps"; Lafe Pfeiffer of Dallas on "Coaxing Nickels from Customers"; Lou Chatham, Tulsa city manager for the Griffith circuit, on "Do Double Features Detract?"; Homer Jones of Alva; Ed Crew of Waurika; Max Brock of Lawton.

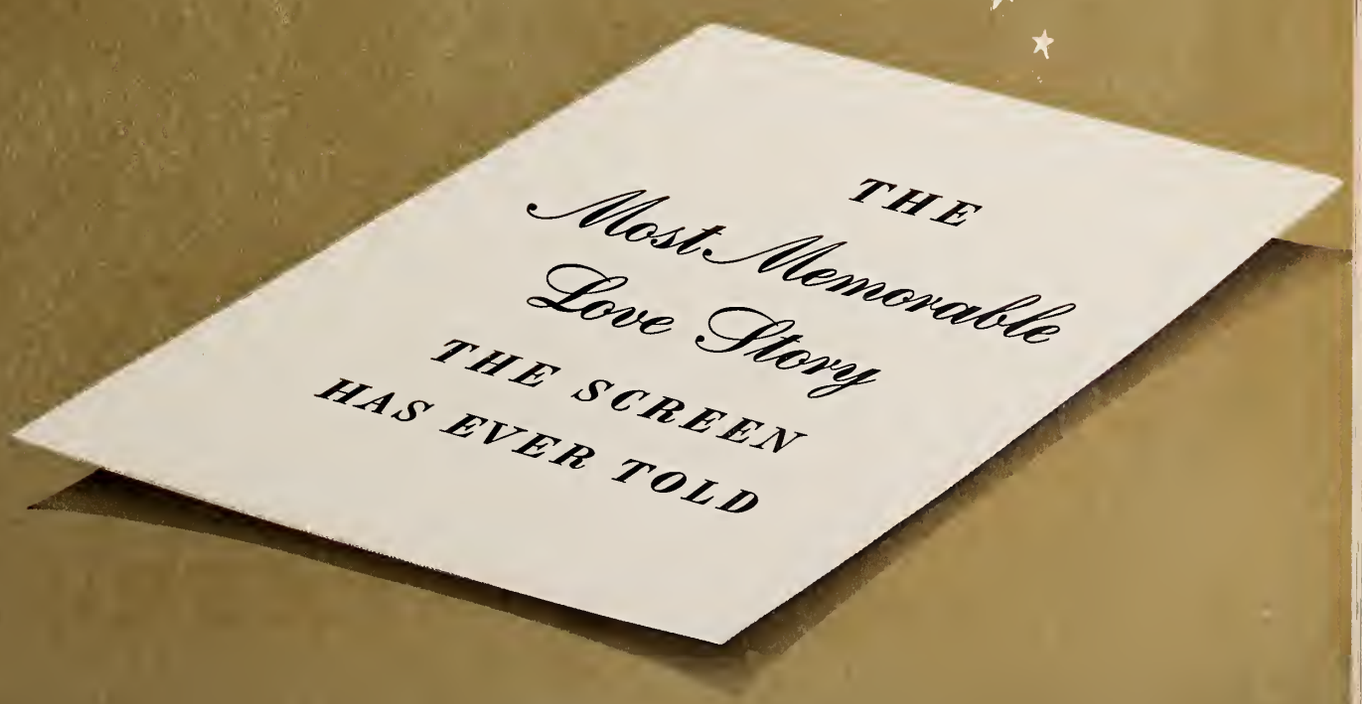
Mr. Kuykendall is expected to discuss unity, and MPTOA's relation to it.

Connecticut MPTO Annual Dinner Dance

The first formal annual dinner dance of the Connecticut MPTO will be held at the Taft Hotel, New Haven, Tuesday night. Over 300 are expected. Gus Myers' orchestra will provide music.

George H. Wilkinson, Jr., of the Wilkinson Theatre, Wallingford, is general chairman, assisted by Herman M. Levy, secretary, Sam Seletsky, treasurer, Harry F. Shaw, decorations, lighting and music, Maxwell Hoffman, tickets and seating, Lou Schaefer, entertainment, Lou Brown, publicity, Irving C. Jacocks, Jr., Peter Perakos, Edwin S. Raffile, Samuel Rosen, Adolph G. Johnson, Lawrence C. Caplan, and Joseph F. Reed. Admission for the entire event is $6.55, including tax.

Fred Guest Dead



Fred Guest, former theatre owner in Hamilton, Ontario, and in Vancouver, died at the first city Tuesday, aged 77, after three weeks' illness. In recent months, Mr. Guest sold his Stanley Theatre, Vancouver, to Famous Players Canadian circuit, and three houses in Hamilton to M. A. Milligan, formerly general manager in Canada for Paramount Film Service.

MAJORS MAINTAIN SELLER'S MARKET DESPITE DECREE, OWNERS COMPLAIN

Northwest Allied Unit Charges Violations of Spirit and Letter of New Law; Trial of Companies Starts Dec. 15th

Action of four majors affected by the consent decree in obtaining relief so they could sell according to terms of the Minnesota law has not made peace in turbulent Minneapolis, where independents this week charged the majors with still maintaining a seller's market, despite the U. S. consent decree.

Northwest Allied charged, through a statement issued by Fred Strom, its secretary, "There appears to be a gap as wide as the poles between the 'letter' and the 'spirit' with some of the distributors, in obeying the Minnesota law."

Meanwhile, it was reported that William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, would probably be the first witness in defense of three majors, charged with violation of the Minnesota anti-decree law, Twentieth Century Fox, RKO, and Paramount. Other sales executives will follow him. The trial opens December 15th in Ramsey County Court, St. Paul.

The Northwest Allied attack upon distributors' sales policies was amplified with the following comment:

"Columbia and Republic have for the most part received unstinted and universal praise from Minnesota exhibitors for keeping them in business. These two companies from the very beginning have willingly complied with the statute.

"Universal, of the non-consenting companies, has created for itself a whirlwind of exhibitor ill will. Angry and indignant exhibitors have flooded their office with their protests."

Grievances Listed

Allied's Mr. Strom named as grievances: Designation of "In the Navy" and "Hold That Ghost" in the top bracket when it had already been filled with poor boxoffice pictures; forced playing, or paying for, undated features before obtaining "In the Navy" playdates; requirements that features and shorts be paid for in advance of availability; requirement of payment for alleged delinquencies in past contracts before getting "In the Navy," the holdover of "Unfinished Business" despite announcement the picture was on 1940-41 contract; harsh terms exacted for three-year franchises on representation the "Big Five" would not sell in Minnesota; unappreciation of past good will; using Abbott & Costello pictures as a criterion of value for all Universal product.

In addition it was charged the company had written into contracts a clause requiring the exhibitor to confine the 20 per cent cancellations due him under the Minnesota law to the lowest price brackets. This, it was pointed out, is in violation of the law.

Mr. Strom said: "Warners, Fox, Paramount and RKO (as well as United Artists) are now selling under the Minnesota law. Maybe it would be more proper to say they are offering deals. Many exhibitors wonder why they applied for relief. They can see little difference or distinction between an out-and-out refusal to sell by noncompliance with the law, and indirect refusal to sell because of their terms."

He said exhibitors of the nation, as well as Minnesota "have the consent decree to thank for the present plight. . . . As long as the 'Big Five' can maintain a seller's market through the adoption of a common policy, the independent exhibitor appears definitely to be on the way out. It appears their policy, at least for the present, is to exact the last pound of flesh from the independent exhibitor, and, so far as Minnesota is concerned, to punish him for his continued resistance to the sales provisions of the consent decree, and for having exercised his right to enact legislation in his own behalf."

SAMUELSON'S UNIT ON SHORTS "FORCING"

No resolutions of any kind were passed at the November 13th Philadelphia meeting of the Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania, according to Sidney Samuelson, its business manager, who explains that there was a discussion of short subjects and that, according to the unit's minutes, "charges were made from the floor that short subjects are still being forced, and the business manager was authorized to write the consenting companies on the matter." Mr. Samuelson thus denied the published report that his unit had attacked a reported distributor agreement to withhold sale of one picture block until the exhibitor bought the preceding block.

"Immaterial" Which Comes First: Lynch

James F. Lynch, attorney in Ramsey County, Minnesota, in which are to be heard the state's criminal charges against Fox, Paramount, and RKO, and the majors' civil suit to test the constitutionality of the state's anti-decree law, was reported, last week, "not concerned" which case came first, although if given choice, he would prefer the criminal action. He thus disposed of other reports he would press for the civil suit first.

The criminal action is to go to trial December 15th, at which time first defense witness will probably be William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, to be followed by other executives of the majors' sales forces.

The companies are charged with booking pictures into several theatres of the St. Paul-Minneapolis territory, in blocks of five and ten, contravening the state law, which specifies they sell their entire season's product en masse, allowing the buyer a 20 per cent cancellation privilege.

The three majors and Warners, bound by the decree, have since relieved themselves of its selling provisions in New York Federal Court; United Artists, too, is selling in accordance with the state law.

St. Louis Triple Bills Increase

Triple bills have spread to four independent houses in St. Louis, bringing the total number of theatres now using this policy to six in that city.

Fred Wehrenberg, head of the MPTOA, who has led the fight against multiple features, said the theatres now using triple bills occasionally were the Osage, Ozark, Gem and Beverly. The Pageant and the Aubert of the St. Louis Amusement Company chain were among the first to have such programs. Mr. Wehrenberg said one of the pictures on a recent triple bill at these shows was "Sunny," one of RKO's top films.

Harry C. Arthur, Jr., Fanchon & Marco executive, recently announced he had no intention of discontinuing triple bills in the St. Louis Amusement houses. The Greater St. Louis Better Films Council sponsored a bill in the State legislature to restrict multiple features, but it never came up for consideration. Mrs. A. F. Burt of the council said the organization had not considered steps to check the spread, but was trying to stimulate interest in featurettes of the type of Hal Roach's "Tanks a Million."

Doubles in Cincinnati

In Cincinnati, the 1,400-seat RKO Lyric theatre, heretofore playing moveover weeks at 28, 33 and 42 cents, has inaugurated a double feature policy, with changes each Thursday. Matinee scale will be 25 cents, with a 25 and 36-cent evening rate.

The 1,200-seat Strand, in the heart of the downtown business sector in Cincinnati, recently purchased in bankruptcy proceedings for $380,000, by the 521 Walnut Corporation formed for the purpose by Associated Theatres, Inc., Detroit, of which Alex Schreiber is the head, reopened Thanksgiving Day, with a double feature policy, at a 15-cent matinee scale, and evening rate of 20 and 28 cents, including tax. Morton Maius is manager. The house will operate on a grind basis from 9 A.M. to 3 A.M. daily for the benefit of defense industry employees. The last show is scheduled at midnight. This is the first theatre in the Cincinnati territory to inaugurate "defense workers' shows." Although new screen, sound equipment and ear phones for the hard-of-hearing have been installed, new seats and other equipment have not yet been received.

In San Francisco, S. H. Levin, head of a San Francisco neighborhood theatre circuit, for the past six weeks has been experimenting with single and double bill policies to ascertain which program is the more popular and profitable.

From this he has found that business has been exceptionally good when the house has booked good "A" product and business falls off considerably when the house exhibits run-of-the-mill films. The Vogue's experiment will continue.

The Florida State Theatres, Inc., of Ocala, Fla., is dropping dual films for singles at the Ritz theatre. While in Willemete, Ill., Teatro del Lago theatre, under the direction of Sam Myers, is also trying out single features.

WARNERS DOUBLE NET, $5,429,302 FOR 1941

Costs, Operating Expenses Cut, Statement for Year Ending August 30, 1941, Shows

Almost doubling its earnings this year as compared with 1940, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., in its annual statement on Monday, reported a net profit of $5,429,302 after all charges and taxes, for the fiscal year ended August 30th, 1941, compared with $2,747,472 in 1940. Increased domestic income, lowered expenses and general adjustment to the decline in film rentals from abroad were reputed to be responsible for the improvement. Gross income showed a gain for the year and film costs, operating expenses and interest charges were down.

Gross income for 1941, after inter-company transactions, was $102,293,170, against $100,337,092 for the year before which covered 53 weeks as compared with 52 weeks in the last year. The net profit was equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to $1.36 a share on 3,701,090 common shares, comparing with 63 cents a share in the preceding year, showing a virtual doubling of earnings in the last fiscal year.

Regular dividends on the preferred stock, which had not been paid since March 2, 1932, were resumed on March 1st, 1941. Unpaid dividends on this stock amounted to $3,353,847, or $33.69 a share, at September 1st, 1941.

Write-Off Accelerated

Harry M. Warner, president, declared in his report that the company again had accelerated the write-off of negative film costs by revision of its rates of amortization on the basis of 85 per cent for domestic income and 15 per cent for foreign income. The application of new rates resulted in additional amortization charges of $206,469 for the year ended August 30th, 1941, with total amortization of film costs $25,453,985 for the fiscal year.

Improved earnings were due in part to the fact that taxes for the year were $700,000 less than expected. Deductions from taxable income made on account of the sale of the Brunswick Radio Corp. earlier in the year were responsible for this saving.

Current assets and current liabilities of all subsidiaries operating in foreign territories are shown as separate balance sheet items this year. The reserve for contingencies includes $1,600,000 in respect of net assets abroad, of which sum $1,264,000 was charged against operations in the last year.

At August 30th, 1941 current assets in the United States were $28,747,292, in the British Isles $2,643,652, and in other foreign countries, including Canada, $651,194. Current liabilities in the United States were $15,565,658, in the British Isles, $655,966 and in other foreign areas $715,658.

The annual statement reports that on August 8th, Warner Bros. Pictures, Ltd., a wholly owned subsidiary, purchased 2,007,000 ordinary shares of Associated British Picture Corporation, Ltd., or about 25 per cent of the ordinary shares of that company. The purchase price of £903,150 was borrowed from an English bank and was reduced to £528,150 during August, 1941. Associated owns or operates more than 400 theatres in Great Britain and is the largest British customer of Warner Bros., Ltd.

The parent company retired $600,000 of 6 per cent debentures due in 1948 during the last fiscal year and now holds $2,301,000 of these debentures in its treasury, leaving $15,399,000 outstanding.

Consolidated income account for 52 weeks ended August 30th, 1941, compares as follows:

Loew's, Ltd., To Show Gain

Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., ended its fiscal year on August 30th, 1941. The company's annual report which probably will be filed within the next week, will show at least a maintenance of business during the past year, if not an improvement over the previous year, it was learned in Montreal this week.

Due to increased corporation taxes, net profit may be slightly below that shown in the previous fiscal year. Net of $94,508 was reported for the year ended August 28th, 1940, which was below the $121,007 shown in the previous year.

Continuance of the payment on account of arrears for the final quarter of this year will permit Loew's, Ltd., to realize its objective of paying off all arrears on the 7 per cent preferred stock within two years—or by the end of 1941. After the last payment on September 30th, arrears had been cut to $1.75, and this is expected to be paid off with the usual quarterly dividend due December 30th.

The company paid $3.50 per share on account of arrears in the calendar year 1938, $24.50 in 1939, $7.00 in 1940 and $5.25 in the first nine months of 1941—$1.75 per share together with each regular quarterly payment of $1.75.

Loew's Ltd. owns two motion picture theatres in Toronto, one of which it operates alone and the other under lease by Famous Players Canadian Corp. Loew's theatre in Montreal also is operated by FPC.

United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., a Skouras affiliate, for the year to August 31st, 1941, reported a net income of $153,221, equal, after preferred dividends to 6 cents each on 600,000 common shares, against $300,633, or 29 cents a common share for year to August 31st, 1940, as reported in the New York Times last week.

The Roxy Theatre, Inc., has reported a net income of $36,934 for the 52 weeks ended last August 28th. This compares with a net loss of $42,289 for the previous 52 weeks.

RCA Plans New Company for Network

The Radio Corporation of America will establish a separate and wholly owned subsidiary corporation to control the operation of the Blue Network, leaving the National Broadcasting Company free to manage the Red Network alone, it was reported over the weekend.

The purpose of the move, it was said, is to facilitate the sale of the Blue Network, as required by an order of the Federal Communications Commission, the enforcement of which order has been suspended indefinitely by the commission. However, the order may be reinstated at any time, and if it is, NBC would be compelled to dispose of the Blue Network within six months thereafter.

The new corporation setup for the Blue Network is expected to make a sale easier, as all assets and liabilities of each network would be completely separated.

RCA has filed a certificate with the New York Secretary of State reserving the right to the name United Broadcasting Company, it was learned this week.

When the Columbia Broadcasting System disposed of its Artists Management Corp. recently, the fact that it was operated by a separate corporation made the sale much easier to handle, while NBC, which had no such separate corporation, encountered many difficulties, and to date has failed to dispose of the artists' bureau.

The Blue Network will be set up under a new corporate name, probably the United Broadcasting System. Operations will continue from the headquarters in Radio City, New York, and special activities such as television, short-wave services, including the South American network, and frequency modulation will continue to be handled by NBC. The two chains will be separately staffed.

Publisher, Not Composer, Enjoys Copyright Renewal

A publishing house has renewal rights to a song copyright, not the composer it employed. So ruled the United States Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday, in a test suit.

It upheld Federal Judge Grover C. Moscowitz's award of renewal rights to the song, "Come, Josephine" to Shapiro, Bernstein and Company. That company had been plaintiff. Defendants were Fred Fisher, Al Bryan and the Fred Fisher Music Company.

Bell Edits 'Reporter'

With the publication of the first issue of the Comerford Reporter, house organ of the Comerford Theatres circuit published in connection with the current annual Theatre Managers Drive as a salute to Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount official, it was announced that Harold Bell has returned as editor. He is assisted by William Graff and Mary Nealon.

Fire Damages Theatre

Fire caused when a film ignited in the Monroeville theatre, an 800-seat house in Monroeville, Ala., early Sunday night, November 9th, destroyed the building and resulted in water damage to a hardware store. It was reported $50,000 worth of damages resulted from the fire.

APPEAL BOARD UPHOLDS THEATRE FOR FIRST TIME IN CLEARANCE FIGHT

Affirms Fitzpatrick Decision in Raritan Action; Four Upstate New York Theatres File Cases; Awards in Dallas, Washington

An exhibitor won a clear-cut victory in an appealed clearance complaint for the first time Monday when the Appeal Board in its 11th decision upheld the award of Arbitrator Paul Fitzpatrick in New York City's 13th case.

Mr. Fitzpatrick on September 27th granted Selig A. Posner, operator of the Playhouse in Raritan, N. J., a reduction from 21 to seven days in the clearance held over his theatre by the Cort, operated by the Sompru Theatre Company at Somerville, a mile and a half distant. Loew's, Warners, Paramount and 20th Century-Fox were the distributors involved. The Cort theatre appealed the decision.

The "supreme court" award upheld all of the arbitrator's findings of fact and amended his decision only to substitute the word "clearance" for "availability." Despite interchangeable use by the industry the Appeal Board held the terms were not synonymous.

Clear Cut Victory

With the exception of one "some run" award, to the Earle theatre, New Castle, Del., this is the first Appeal Board decision to grant an unamended victory to the complainant exhibitor. In five appeal rulings on Section VIII complaints the board changed the arbitrator's clearance award in favor of the distributors. In four decisions it upheld the dismissal of clearance complaints.

The Appeal Board praised Mr. Fitzpatrick's award writing, in part, ". . . the Arbitrator filed an able analysis of the evidence. His findings are amply supported by the record. His conclusions from these findings are well reasoned and persuasive. We concur with him that seven days is a reasonable clearance between the Cort and the Playhouse."

Mr. Fitzpatrick, who is director of sales development of the motors holding division of the General Motors Corporation was the first nonlawyer to write an arbitration decision. His award in the Playhouse case scored "horse trading" by distributors in determining clearances. It was reported fully in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for September 27th, page 23.

Costs, including the stenographic record and the appeal transcript were divided equally among the four distributors and the intervenor.

The substitution of the word "clearance" for availability was made, the Appeal Board wrote, to conform to the provisions of the decree. They wrote:

"Under Section VIII the authority of an arbitrator is limited to an award 'fixing the maximum clearance between the theatres involved which may be granted in licenses thereafter entered into by the distributor defendant which is a party to the arbitration.'

"A proper demand under Section VIII should request relief in this form, and an award for the complainant in a clearance case should follow the language which gives the arbitrator power to decide the controversy. Owing to a confusion of terms prevailing in the industry, the arbitrator has, in his award, directed a reduction in 'availability' rather than 'clearance.' Availability and clearance are not synonymous.

"In some distributor's contracts the word 'availability' is used when 'clearance' is meant. It is this use of the word in the industry which undoubtedly caused the arbitrator to use the word 'availability' in his award instead of the word 'clearance,' as he should have done."

Dallas, Washington Awards

Milton King, arbitrator of Washington's eighth case on Monday dismissed the complaint filed by the Linden theatre, Baltimore. He declared that the complainant had failed to prove that the clearances granted by Warners, Paramount and RKO to the Metropolitan theatre were unreasonable. James V. Hayes and Robert Sher, former department of justice attorneys represented the complainant. Costs were assessed against the Linden.

The Dallas docket was again cleared this week when John B. Adone, arbitrator, dismissed the fifth case, a clearance action filed by B. R. McLendon, operator of the State and Texan theatres in Atlanta, Tex. The Paramount-Richards circuit's Strand and Paramount theatres at Texarkana were named as interested theatres. The case attracted attention among Texas independents when E. V. Richards head of the circuit refused to intervene.

AAA Promotes Executives

The American Arbitration Association this week announced that James J. Murphy, regional director for motion picture tribunals west of the Mississippi, will henceforth supervise the activities of all of the 31 film tribunals. He has been appointed an assistant to J. Noble Braden, Executive Director of the AAA.

Samuel S. Perry, formerly eastern regional director of the motion picture system, has been transferred to the Association staff as regional director of the AAA's defense arbitration program. He will supervise procedure in the general commercial and industrial arbitration cases which may use the facilities of the motion picture field offices after December 1st.

Harold D. Conners has succeeded C. W. Hudson as clerk of the St. Louis motion picture arbitration tribunal. Mr. Hudson recently resigned. Mr. Conners is a lawyer.

Following a decline in arbitration actions during November, when only nine new complaints were entered with the AAA six new actions were filed this week. Four cases were entered at Buffalo and one each in Philadelphia and Boston.

Buffalo

James, John and William Ryan, operators of the Ryan-Ithaca theatre, Ithaca, N. Y., have filed a combined some run and clearance case at Buffalo against the Big Five. They assert that distributors have refused product and that on such pictures as they have obtained unreasonable clearance and rental terms have been demanded.

A clearance complaint in behalf of the Cuba theatre, Cuba, N. Y., was filed at Buffalo Monday against the Big Five by a partnership consisting of Nunzio and Sara Tantillo and Rose M. Scura and Nina C. Montesano. They named the State, Haven and Palace theatres in Olean, N. Y.

The Astor theatre, Attica, N. Y., operated by Vincent Martina has filed a clearance demand at Buffalo against RKO, Warners, Paramount and Loews. It asserts that the clearance held by the Family theatre, Batavia, N. Y., is unreasonable.

For the Playhouse in Clyde, N. Y., Caroline Periello has filed a clearance action at Buffalo against the Big Five. The complaint names the Schine Capitol theatre in Newark, N. Y., and the Ohman theatre at Lyons, N. Y., operated by Ohman Brothers.

Boston

Boston received its seventh case on December 1st when E. M. Loew entered a clearance action for his Strand theatre, Boston. He asks that the seven-day margin held by the Rialto be eliminated and a reduction from 14 to seven days of the margin held by the Bayliss over the Strand. Paramount, RKO, Fox and Warners are named.

New Orleans

Philip E. James, New Orleans attorney, has been appointed by the AAA to hear the clearance complaint of the Ashton theatre, New Orleans, after interested parties failed to agree on an arbitrator. Hearings began December 2nd.

Philadelphia

Lewen Pizor, operator of the Tioga theatre has filed a clearance action for the second time. It is the tribunal's 15th case. Mr. Pizor, who is head of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners in Philadelphia asserts that the 14-day clearance granted by Paramount to the Strand theatre is unreasonable. Mr. Pizor's previous complaint, Case No. 12, against Warners, 20th Century-Fox, Paramount, Loew's and the Warner circuit was withdrawn early in November.

The sixth day of the hearing at Philadelphia of the clearance complaint, Case No. 11, of A. M. Ellis, in behalf of his Parkside Theatre, Camden, N. J., which had been postponed to November 28th, was again postponed to December 5th. Hearings on the complaint against

For the second time a complaint by John H. Taylor, operator of the Charles theatre, La Plata, Md., has been settled by stipulation. His action against Loew's and the Sidney Lust Marlboro, in Marlboro, Md., Washington's ninth case, was withdrawn November 27th. It was reported that Loew's and the Lust chain had agreed to eliminate clearance over the Charles. Mr. Taylor's first action (Washington's second case) against MGM, Paramount, 20th Century-Fox and RKO was similarly withdrawn last March.

Hearings on the tenth Washington case, a clearance demand by the Bayne theatre, Virginia Beach, Va., will begin in December 11th. The arbitrator is John E. Lasky, an attorney. distributors and the Marshall Square theatre.

Chicago

Withdrawal of Chicago's tenth case, the clearance complaint of Ben Cooney and Harold McFarland, operators of the Ogden theatre, was reported on Tuesday. An agreement was said to have been reached with the five consenting distributors and the Marshall Square theatre

Parties in the sixth Chicago case, Oriental theatre clearance demand have had the final date for briefs extended until December 22nd. The Department of Justice is preparing its first intervening brief to be filed in this case.

St. Louis

RKO-Radio attorneys at New York have appealed the award of John J. Nangle, St. Louis arbitrator who last week granted some run to the Ritz theatre operated by Mildred Karsch at Rolla, Mo. The distributor asserts it had offered Mrs. Karsch third run.

New Haven

After three days of hearing at New Haven the arbitration complaint of the Plaza, Windsor against the consenting distributors, asking elimination of the Windsor theatre 30-day clearance, has been continued to December 8th. It is the fifth New Haven case.

The Pequot theatre, New Haven, has filed as intervenor in the sixth complaint at New Haven, that of the Grand, New Haven, against Loew's, 20th-Fox, RKO and Warners. The Grand asks that Pequot clearance be reduced to seven days.

Fox Retitles "Hot Spot"

"Hot Spot," the Betty Grable, Victor Mature, Carol Landis film, will be released under its original title "I Wake Up Screaming," Twentieth Century-Fox has announced. Reportedly as a test, "I Wake Up Screaming" was used in opening the picture at the Wisconsin theatre in Milwaukee on Thanksgiving Day, and the day's business, which was big, prompted officials to revert to that title for national release.

Western with P. & S.

J. Richard Western has joined Photo & Sound, Inc., San Francisco, as production manager in charge of motion pictures, slides and slide films.

FROM READERS

Dear Mr. Ramsaye:

I heard a comment in our theatre this evening, which, I believe was the nicest plug any picture ever received, and the timeliness of this plug made me write this.

After seeing a trailer we are running on "Sergeant York," two old gentlemen while leaving the theatre spoke of it, one saying to the other: "Have you seen 'Sergeant York?'" whereupon the other replied that he hadn't. The first then said, "Don't miss it, it will give you the thrill of your 'American' life."

The originality and timeliness of this remark is the nicest thing I have ever heard said about any picture.

Incidentally, we are going to use this line in our advertising.

CBS Honors Murrow At New York Banquet

Edward R. Murrow, chief of the Columbia Broadcasting System's European staff, was honored Tuesday night by that company, and its president, William S. Paley, at a dinner in New York's Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, attended by more than 1,000 of the city's notables in radio, stage, screen, press and politics.

The program was on the network from 9:30 to 10 P. M. Mr. Murrow analyzed the European situation. Mr. Paley introduced him. Elmer Davis was toastmaster.

Among guests were Henri Bernstein, Dr. Artur Rodzinski, Herbert Bayard Swope, David O. Selznick, Tom Connors, Sam Shain, Richard Berlin, David Lawrence, Edward J. Flynn and David Dubinsky.

On the dais were: Albert L. Warner, CBS Washington analyst; Joseph V. Connolly, president, King Features; Major George Fielding Eliot.

B. & K. Leases Three Houses for $1,000,000

The Balaban and Katz circuit's acquisition of the Portage, Drake, and Admiral theatres from the GCS circuit, Chicago, will require the Paramount affiliate to pay $50,000 per year for 20 years, making this a million-dollar deal.

The houses seat 4,950. Balaban and Katz will spend $30,000 on their interiors. However, the GCS circuit will maintain the fronts during the 20 years, and is obligated to spend $15,000 in improving them before June 1st next.

Hanson Heads Canadian Pioneers for New Year

Oscar Hanson has been elected president of the Canadian Picture Pioneers. He succeeds Clair Hague.

Other new officers are: S. B. Taube, vice-president; Ray Lewis, secretary-treasurer. The new board of directors embraces Ben Cronk, Charles J. Mavety, Jack Arthur, Ed Wells, Harry Alexander, Leo Devaney and Archie Laurie.

Mr. Hanson was formerly associate of N. L. Nathanson, in the Odeon circuit. He now is independently operating exchanges and theatres.

Films Contribute to RAF Fund

Thomas H. Beck, president of the Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund of the U. S. A., Inc., this week announced receipt of a contribution of $15,000 from the motion picture industry through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. Since all expenses of the fund are borne by the trustees, the full amount will go to help the dependents of members of the RAF killed or disabled in action.

In a letter accompanying the check Will H. Hays, president of the MPPDA, explained that the money represented a portion of the proceeds from the distribution of the feature length motion picture, "Land of Liberty," made by the entire industry as a patriotic contribution and distributed without profit, net proceeds being devoted to war emergency welfare work.

The $15,000 contribution was made on behalf of the industry by the board of directors acting as a special committee representing the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and consisting of Barney Balaban, Nate J. Blumberg, Jack Cohn, Cecil B. deMille, E. W. Hammons, E. B. Hatrick, Arthur W. Kelly, Sidney R. Kent, Hal E. Roach, George J. Schaefer, Nicholas M. Schenck, Walter F. Wanger and Harry M. Warner.

Stars Aid Bond Sale

All motion picture stars currently making personal appearance tours will make an extra appearance in each city to stimulate the sale of Government defense bonds and stamps, it was announced this week in Hollywood following a meeting of the studio publicity directors' committee. Will H. Hays addressed the group, praising the work on behalf of the industry. It was decided also at the meeting to service foreign correspondents from the domestic publicity departments.

Charles C. Moskowitz, Loew's Theatres executive, and Harry Brandt, head of the Brandt circuit, who are co-chairmen of the Motion Picture Committee of the 1942 March of Dimes campaign, and Oscar A. Doob, Loew's Theatres advertising and publicity director, who is national chairman of publicity for the campaign, attended a meeting in Washington, D. C., Tuesday, of the 48 chairmen representing the general March of Dimes committees in each state.

The motion picture committee representatives will present a brochure to each of the state chairmen in which the campaign plans of the industry will be outlined. Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., is chairman of the Motion Picture Committee.

President Roosevelt attended the meeting and spoke with regard to the forthcoming campaign, which is in observance of the President's birthday and for the benefit of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and local institutional aid for paralysis sufferers.

The Film Industry Community Chest Committee for 1941, headed by Louis B. Mayer, met Monday night in Hollywood at the final session.

At that time the pledges secured by the Flying Squadron of 20 formed last week, were added to those already recorded. The Flying Squadron, composed of representatives of the artists' managers, directors, writers and actors Guilds, and studio executives, was empowered to contact all of those higher-salaried persons in the industry who have not as yet been approached due to being out of town or for other reasons.

Meanwhile it has been announced by Jack Kirsch that Chicago theatres have raised $25,000 for the Community Fund.

U. S. LIMITS STEEL FOR MOTION PICTURE AND OTHER PRODUCTION

Allocations of Metals, Chemicals, Other Materials To Be Substituted for Priorities Systems; Reuse of Sets Is Urged

A new system for the distribution to consuming industries of strategic materials is being ushered in by the Office of Production Management, affecting motion picture production and other manufacturing.

Allocations of specific quantities of steel, scarce chemicals and the many other materials of which the country is seriously short will be substituted for the present priorities system. Producers of motion pictures and members of other major industries already have been instructed to list their prospective needs for those items for the first quarter of 1942.

Initially to be applied to steel, the new system will be extended to other controlled commodities as rapidly as possible.

Under the allocations system, film producers will be able to plan their operations for three months in advance, at least, and will be relieved of the burden of making countless applications for priorities on individual items.

No Difficulty So Far

So far, the film industry has had little trouble in securing needed products. In a few cases, difficulties have been encountered and producers have applied to the priorities division of the OPM for relief, which has been quickly afforded. But as time goes on—and it is marching fast—more and more materials will be harder and harder to obtain, and it is with the purpose of assuring the most equitable division of what is available among those who are most entitled to it that the OPM is making the change.

The priorities system admittedly has about outworn its usefulness. Confronted with urgent demands from defense industries and big civilian producers of essential commodities, the OPM has granted priorities generously—so generously, in fact, that in some cases it is now discovered the top priorities alone call for more of a commodity than is available.

As a result, there has been competition among holders of preference ratings for the limited supply of materials, the very thing the Government sought to avoid when it imposed priorities.

Under the new system, each consuming industry will file reports showing its holdings of scarce materials and its requirements for the coming quarter. These reports will be studied and analyzed by OPM experts, who will figure up the probable available supply of a given material, the Army and Navy needs, the needs for other defense purposes and the amount left for distribution among the civilian consuming industries.

In cooperation with the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, then, a scheme will be worked out allocating to each industry its share of the amount left for civilian use, with essential industries coming first. While an effort will be made to see that the industries get all the materials possible, these allocations will not be absolutely unchangeable, but will be made with the understanding that they can be altered, up or down, if defense needs change.

Since the motion picture industry is acknowledged by the Administration to be highly important to the welfare, morale and recreation of the country, it will rank high on the list of industries entitled to materials. In fact, it is quite probable that an attempt will be made to meet all basic requirements, although the industry will be required to cut its uses of scarce materials to a minimum.

That may mean that studio sets will be less lavish and that sets and props will be used as many times as possible; that salvaging of materials that can be re-used or reworked will be intensive, and that conservation of materials and equipment must be made all along the line.

It is probable that the allocations for the industry will be made on an industry basis, and that the division among the various companies will be worked out by an industry committee.

Insofar as distribution and exhibition are concerned, general orders already issued will take care of needs for replacement and repair of equipment, although no more modernization programs will be permitted. There will, of course, be little new construction authorized by the SPAB, but no theatres now operating will be forced to close because of a break-down of projection apparatus.

FILM STUDIO SHOPS TO AID DEFENSE

Hollywood machine shops in studios soon may become national defense production plants, it was learned this week. OPM officials and studio purchasing agents discussed plans last week for using motion picture shop facilities for the manufacture of defense products. All studios have extensive machine and tool shops which could be adapted. It is understood the Government is considering the use of these shops at night for production of precision tools which in turn would be utilized in manufacturing fire control apparatus, bomb sights and other military and defense needs.

U. S. May Aid Television

Mortimer W. Loewi, executive vice-president of the Du Mont television company, disclosed in New York this week that Government priorities officials were considering priorities' grants to television manufacturers for supplies to build 25,000 receivers and 10 television transmitters during 1942. Mr. Loewi, who has appeared before OPM officials in Washington on several occasions in order to obtain priority ratings, declared that he was "more optimistic about the immediate future of television than I have been for sometime. All we need is a little Government backing to restore the public's confidence." He revealed that official reaction to the priorities request was "very hopeful." It is understood that OPM is desirous of aiding television during the national emergency.

The priorities plan proposed by television manufacturers provides for release of materials to manufacturers for about 2,000 sets each month. In addition, there is a plan under way to induce the Government to purchase outright 10,000 receivers and to place them in strategic points in New York and other localities which have television transmitters. This would facilitate activities of those telecasters who are cooperating in defense efforts by transmitting special defense programs for groups of civilians such as air raid wardens and other defense units.

War demands on the radio industry in Canada will make it difficult to supply even the reduced number of private sets allowed by the new curb on radio production, E. C. Grimley, president of the Radio Manufacturers' Association of Canada, revealed in a statement issued in Montreal last week.

Mr. Grimley stressed the industry's desire to give all-out co-operation to the Government in supplying radio communication equipment for Canadian fighting services. Due to scarcity of materials and the increasing demands for war communication equipment, he said, it is very doubtful if radio manufacturers could produce the quantity of home receiving sets actually permitted by the government control order.

To offset this prospective shortage, he said, every effort is being made to maintain service organizations to keep presently-owned sets in good working order.

Meanwhile, reports from Montreal this week, indicate that the Quebec Municipal Control Commission, in charge of Montreal finances, may abolish the current local city tax of $2.16 on each radio receiving set in that city. Set-owners, however, would continue to pay the Federal Radio license fee of $2.50 per year. It was estimated that if Montreal does abolish the tax, it will lose annually about $300,000.

Tinfoil Ban Off

Donald M. Nelson, director of priorities, announced in Washington last Friday, that the order of November 24th, banning the use of lead and tinfoil for wrapping films, cigarettes, chewing gum, candy and other products, had been suspended for 30 days. During this suspension period, Mr. Nelson said, an investigation would be made to get "all the facts on which the order was based."

Priorities are affecting numerous local deals in San Francisco for new neighborhood theatres plus several repair deals, it was reported last week, from that city. Aaron Goldberg, owner of a local circuit, cancelled plans to remodel the Egyptian. The Golden State circuit's house, Granada, has been without a marquee since July, due to steel priorities which were needed to complete the job at that time. The California theatre, a Fox West Coast downtown house, has a tornup lobby and half-completed marquee, for the same reason.

The Rains Came

Blackout restrictions now in effect in six Southeastern states affecting hundreds of theatres will be relaxed beginning December 15th, it was learned this week, and a pending 30 per cent curtailment of power over the year-end holiday period has been postponed indefinitely by OPM. Substantial rainfall during the last week over wide areas in these states resulted in the blackout-breathing spell. Water supplies have been built up sufficiently in the depleted reservoirs of the power companies to insure 119,000,000 kilowatt hours of reserve power. Theatre operators in Alabama, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Mississippi and Tennessee have been using kerosene lamps and candles for marquee and other house lighting.

Commonwealth Acquires Theatre

Negotiations have been completed between J. W. Davis of Higginsville, Mo., and C. A. Schults of the Commonwealth Theatres in Kansas City, whereby the Davis theatre in Higginsville, will become a Commonwealth unit. Roger Mann has been named manager at Higginsville.

MGM MEETS, PROMOTES, TALKS ABOUT PRODUCT

O'Shea, Flynn Are Moved Up After Connors Transfer; RKO Promotes Branson, Osserman

E. K. "Ted" O'Shea, who has been MGM central division sales manager since January, 1941, succeeds Tom Connors as eastern and Canadian sales manager, and J. E. "Jack" Flynn, Chicago district manager, has been appointed central division sales manager, William F. Rodgers, MGM's vice-president in charge of sales, announced at the company's midseason sales conference at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, last weekend.

The promotions are effective immediately and result from Mr. Conners' resignation of a week ago to become assistant to S. R. Kent at 20th-Fox.

Mr. O'Shea entered the film business in 1918 as a salesman with the old Metro company in Buffalo, where he stayed until 1924, when he became manager of the MGM branch at Albany. in 1925 he was manager of the Buffalo office and in 1936 was sent to Detroit as acting district manager for Mr. Flynn, when the latter was sent to Chicago to take over the duties of S. A. Shirley during his illness. In 1937 he succeeded William A. Scully as district manager, with headquarters in New York, and in 1941 was appointed central divisional sales manager.

Mr. Flynn's entire business career has been spent in the motion picture industry; he has been associated with Mr. Rodgers for 27 years, starting with the old General Film Company, later with Goldwyn, where he was Australian sales manager in 1923, and joining MGM when it merged, in 1924, as district manager in charge of the west coast. In 1925 he went to St. Louis as district manager and in 1927 went to Detroit as district manager, where he remained until 1940, when he moved to Chicago.

Canadian Manager Named

Henry Nathanson is MGM's general manager for Canada in a new dispensation which takes control of offices and personnel of Mr. Nathanson's Regal Films, Toronto, previous distributors of MGM films in Canada, Mr. Rodgers also disclosed.

Going directly to Chicago from the studios, Mr. Rodgers told the assembled division, district and branch sales managers and the home office delegation that new MGM pictures in final stages will set records. He singled out "Babes on Broadway." "The Vanishing Virginian," he said, would be given a premiere in Lynchburg, Va., on the same scale as was given to "Gone With the Wind" at Atlanta.

Besides discussing selling plans for the remainder of the year, a survey was made of the company's first several months of activity under consent decree selling. Mr. Rodgers said, "The sales under the present policy are more rapid than at any time in the history of our organization. After we had first established our basis of selling in offering our first group of pictures, and we were ready to offer the second group 1,054 theatres signed contracts the first week and 1,491 in the second week; 1,900 theatres signed for the third group in the first week, which to me counteracts rumors of any dissatisfaction of MGM policy, which is further refuted by the fact that in the first two weeks of selling the fourth group we signed 3,066 theatres, a record never before achieved by this company."

Commenting further on sales policies and results, he said that by experience he found that once the basis for percentage sales is established with the exhibitor he becomes easier to sell because the new MGM "sliding scale" plan makes the exhibitor a partner with MGM in the showing of a particular picture and it is up to the picture to make good, otherwise the revenue to MGM is lower.

He reported that sales on short subjects are well in advance of the corresponding period of last year.

A testimonial dinner was given on Sunday night to Mr. Connors and to welcome Mr. Flynn into the divisional manager ranks.

The sales meeting, presided over by Mr. Rodgers, was attended by division managers Tom Connors, E. K. O'Shea and E. M. Saunders; and by Howard Dietz, William R. Ferguson, Si Seadler and M. L. Simons, of the advertising, publicity and exploitation departments; and E. W. Aaron, J. Bezahler, A. F. Cummings, Charles Deesen, Tyree Dillard, Jr., Jay Gove, Irving Helfont, Irving Hirsch, William Madden, Harold Postman, H. M. Richey and Art Schmidt, of the home office.

Also district managers Rudolph Berger, Burtus Bishop, Jr., J. J. Bowen, J. P. Byrne, J. E. Flynn, G. A. Hickey, C. E. Kessnich, J. J. Maloney, M. N. Wolf and H. P. Wolfberg.

And branch managers Ben Abner, New Jersey; John S. Allen, Washington; Louis Amacher, Portland; Roy Avey, Atlanta; W. E. Banford and S. A. Shirley, Chicago; Leroy Bickel, Dallas; E. M. Booth, Cincinnati; C. J. Briant, New Orleans; T. J. Donaldson, Boston; F. J. Downey, Detroit; F. D. Drew, Cleveland; Henry Friedel, Denver; Sam Gardner, Salt Lake City; M. Goldstein, New Haven; Frank Hensler, Kansas City; D. C. Kennedy, Des Moines; Gordon Lightstone, Regal Films, Toronto, Canada; C. A. Lynch, Los Angeles; Robert Lynch, Philadelphia; Ralph Maw, Buffalo; Ralph Pielow, New York; John X. Quinn, St. Louis; Herman Ripps, Albany; B. H. Rosenwald, Charlotte, N. C.; Maurice Saffle, Seattle; Harry Shumow, Omaha; Sam Shurman, Milwaukee; B. D. Stoner, Pittsburgh; J. F. Willingham, Memphis; L. Wingham, San Francisco; W. H. Workman, Minneapolis; W. B. Zoellner, Oklahoma City, and S. E. Applegate, Philadelphia sales manager.

After the sessions at Chicago, which ended Monday afternoon, Mr. Rodgers remained for an additional two days for conferences with his district and division managers.

Capra and Ed Grainger Sign Producers Pacts

Frank Capra last week signed a three-year exclusive producer-director deal with Twentieth Century-Fox. He will have his own unit, which will be autonomous. The number of pictures he is scheduled to make has not been revealed, but it was announced that his films would be billed as "Frank Capra Productions released through Twentieth Century-Fox." He is now shooting "Arsenic and Old Lace" for Warners on a one-picture deal.

Edmund Grainger has been signed by M. J. Siegel, president of Republic Productions, to a three-year contract as a producer. He will join Republic at once. His appointment is in line with the company's intention to compete for "A" playing time, Mr. Siegel said.

RKO Makes Further Sales Staff Changes

Further changes and promotions in the RKO sales department were announced last week by Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of distribution, following last week's promotion of Jack Osserman, Chicago branch manager, to midwestern district manager, the post made vacant by the promotion of Walter Branson to Western division sales manager. Sam Gorelick, Chicago sales manager, was named to succeed Mr. Osserman, and Emmett Cashman, home office representative, has been promoted to the post of assistant to William Dahler, in charge of sales approval for the eastern division.

A. A. Schubart, manager of exchange operations, has announced a realignment of territories for other home office representatives. Jack de Waal will be in charge of New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Washington; Dan Nolan, Boston, New Haven, Albany, Buffalo and Toronto; A. F. Braeunig, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Detroit; John B. Wangberg, Charlotte, Atlanta, Dallas, Memphis and New Orleans; William A. Burke, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Louis, Kansas City and Denver; Elmer Sedin, Minneapolis, Sioux Falls, Omaha, Des Moines and Oklahoma City; and J. J. Schmitzer, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and Salt Lake City.

NED DEPINET DRIVE OPENS DECEMBER 20TH

RKO has announced that its annual billings drive will be held from December 20th to May 8th, 1942—20 weeks in all—and will be known as the 1942 Ned Depinet Drive.

Nat Levy, eastern district manager, whose headquarters are in Philadelphia, has been appointed drive captain, and, along with Harry Gittleson, editor of the company's publication Flash, will start on a tour of exchanges on Monday, December 8th.

Big pictures which RKO will have in general release as the drive opens include "Suspicion," now in its second week at the Radio City Music Hall; "Dumbo," playing its seventh week at the Broadway theatre in New York; "Look Who's Laughing," the Bergen-McCarthy, McGee and Molly comedy.

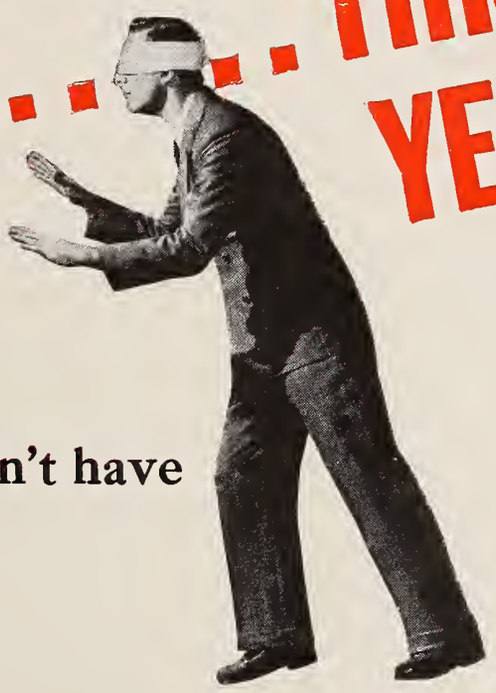
Paramount Partners Meet

A meeting of Paramount's northern and western theatre partners was held in Chicago Wednesday with Leonard Goldenson, head of theatre operations, presiding.

Operating problems and product were discussed. Among those attending the meeting were: Sam Dembow and Leon Netter, home office executives; John Nolan and J. J. O'Leary of the Comerford Circuit; Sam Pinanski, Harry Nace, Earl Hudson, John Balaban, Walter Immerman, Tracy Barham, Harry David, M. A. Lightman, A. H. Blank, Ralph Branton, J. J. Friedl and Jules Rubens.

National Theatre Meet Set

Division managers and film buyers of National Theatres will hold a meeting in Denver on December 9th. Home office executives headed by Spyros Skouras will attend. Eddie Zabel, head film buyer, and Aubrey Schenck were to leave Thursday for Milwaukee for meeting with Fox Wisconsin executives before going to Denver.



Republic Sets Product Deals

J. R. Grainger, president of Republic Pictures Corp., announced in Atlanta, Ga., on Monday that he had completed deals for Republic 1941-42 product with the Minnesota Amusement Company of Minneapolis, and the Lichtman Circuit in Washington and Virginia.

Gilbert Nathanson, Republic's Minnesota franchise owner, assisted the company president in negotiating the deals, with John Friedl acting for Minnesota Amusement. Jake Flax, Republic's Washington franchise holder, negotiated with A. E. Lichtman.

Mr. Grainger is in Atlanta this week completing final details for the company's recently announced purchase of Arthur Bromberg's Republic franchise in the southern territory.

Mexican Theatres Protest Taxes on Potential Gross

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Taxes have become one of the greatest problems of all the 1,009 theatres in Mexico. It is understood that many exhibitors intend early next year to petition for a modification of the amount of the taxes and a drastic change in the method of applying them.

Tax troubles of the exhibitors, it is explained, are not so much because of the amount—15 per cent for the municipal governments and nine per cent of the remainder for the Federal administration—but in the fact that the taxes are calculated on potential rather than actual receipts. This calculation is based upon the government's certainty that each theatre is able to sell a number of tickets every day corresponding to the number of seats it has. A theatre with 3,000 seats and a price of 50 cents is counted upon to have a daily revenue of $1,500 and the tax is taken on that basis, seven days a week, even if the exhibitor is only able to fill a few seats at certain shows and on some days. The exhibitors contend that this way of calculating their taxes is unfair and works a big hardship upon them.

In some cases, this method means that exhibitors must pay as high as half their gross receipts to the government. On the average, this method signifies payments of 25 to 35 per cent of the exhibitors' income in taxes.

New Theatre Opened

There are now 69 active cinemas in Mexico City with the opening of a new one, the Cine Insurgents, a select first-run theatre accommodating 4,000, owned by Miguel Quintana and Juon Horcasitas, and the resumption of operation of the Cine Palacio, key theatre of the Jose Echeverria & Co. chain of seven. The Palacio, one of the oldest theatres here, underwent modernization and enlargement to 4,500 seats.

Orders for six of the new season Mexican pictures have been placed by distributors in Madrid and some other Spanish cities. Negotiations are on for five other new films for wide exhibition in Spain, which has taken a fresh fancy to Mexican film fare. Due to war condition difficulties, these pictures are to be sent by Clipper from New York to Spain.

Records of the Association of Mexican Picture Producers reveal that this country has made 273 feature films since the modern phase of the industry began in 1930 with the production of the first "talkie." These records are from the end of 1930, a year in which only two features were made, to last August 31st.

The demand of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, Mexico's most powerful labor organization, for a minimum daily wage of $1.40 for the Federal District, which includes this city, for 1941 and 1943, will not affect the picture business, for it already pays a minimum much higher than that. This minimum daily wage would be the highest in Mexican history. The present minimum day's pay the law allows in the Federal District is 53 cents.

Ramon Pereda has completed preparations for the promotion here of the first Mexican picturing of the life of Christ, for release next Easter. "Jesus" is the title of the picture. Jose Cibrian is to enact the Saviour and Adriana Lamar will be the Magdalene.

Three features are to be started in February by Felipe Mier, former Warners' manager here. Sr. Mier plans to make about eight features in 1942.

Production has started on the first of a series of pictures by the Mexico-España Films, S.A., the newest Mexican producers, which was organized here by Gen. Juan F. Azcarate, ex-chief of the army air service, just before he returned to Berlin, where he is the Mexican minister. The picture is "La Isla de la Pasion" ("Island of Passion") and concerns Clipperton Island in the Pacific, at a strategic distance from the Panama Canal, that was the bone of contention between Mexico and France until 1931, when the King of Italy, arbiter in the case, gave possession of it to France.

Emilio Fernandez is directing the picture, most of which is being made at Acapulco, historic Pacific coast port and tourist resort. The film is to be released in the winter. It is the first of the six that Mexico-España will make during the 1941-42 season.

"SCARFACE" OPENS NINE YEARS LATE

Banned by the Chicago Censor Board for over nine years, "Scarface," formerly distributed by United Artists, is being shown to the Chicago public at last. The picture opened Thanksgiving Day, November 20th, at the downtown Woods theatre and has been doing exceptional business. The approval for a general showing permit was given by Mayor Edward J. Kelly following a private screening for the Mayor and Police Commissioner Allman. The picture is being distributed in the Chicago territory by the Monogram exchange.

Minnesota Circuit Shifts Personnel

A number of changes have been made by John J. Friedl, president of the Minnesota Amusement Co. They include:

Frank Sohmer, from treasurer, State theatre, Minneapolis, to assistant manager, Paramount, St. Paul; Howell Kadrie, assistant manager, St. Paul Paramount, to manager, Grand Forks, N. D., Paramount; Cecil Thompson, from Uptown, Minneapolis staff, to assistant manager, Minneapolis Rialto; Bud Schmid, from assistant manager, Rialto, to assistant manager, Uptown; Robert James, from assistant manager, Uptown, to assistant manager, Minneapolis Century.

Four Latin-American Papers Take "Superman"

Four new newspapers have been added to the number of Latin American publications taking on the "Superman" cartoons, according to the Paramount home office foreign publicity and promotion department.

Publications buying the feature since mid-November include El Heraldo of Caracas, Venezuela, and La Prensa of Mexico City, both of which will run the syndicated cartoon daily and Sunday, whereas La Union of Valparaiso, Chile, and El Tiempo of Bogota, Colombia, have purchased the daily strips. This brings the number of publications carrying the "Superman" cartoons to 12.

Paramount is cooperating with the McClure Newspaper Syndicate and Editors Press Service, the two syndicates which together handle "Superman" feature sales in all of Latin America, by arranging local tieups on the twelve issues of the Max Fleischer "Superman" Technicolor short subject series with newspapers publishing the Siegel and Shuster daily strips and Sunday pages.

Actors Guild Reports On Finances, Members

According to a report from the Screen Actors Guild which was printed in the group's house organ, the surplus on August 31st, 1941 was $232,505.56—an increase of $56,516.35 over the figure of a year ago.

Porter Hall, treasurer of the Screen Actors Guild in announcing the financial report, said:

"Income from dues last year (period ending Aug. 31, 1940) was $200,563.79. This year (period ending Aug. 31, 1941) it was $194,802.99—or $5,760.80 less. (Guild's effort to reduce Class B membership causes decline in dues.) Keeping that fact in mind emphasizes all the more our economy of operation. I am very happy to present the saving attained."

Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the organization, in a report on membership announced:

"During the year ending October 1, the Guild handled 87 claims, on which it collected for the members $67,907.15. During the preceding year, claims collections totaled $64,563.29. The range of claims is interesting—showing that the Guild serves the lowest and the highest paid performers."

Baseball Figures Show Competition

The extent of theatre competition from national baseball in Cincinnati and elsewhere during the spring and summer months is seen in figures released at the annual meeting of the Cincinnati Baseball Club Co. The combined home and road attendance at the Cincinnati Reds' games was 1,237,537 for 1941. The attendance figures for 1940, were 1,517,064.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

A transatlantic telephone interview with George Bernard Shaw, in his English home, was a promotion worked by United Artists and the World Theatre in Minneapolis.

On the eve of the opening of "Major Barbara" at the World, Arthur Catlin of United Artists placed a call for Shaw cold, explaining for the benefit of British censors that two Minneapolis newspapermen wished to interview him.

After an hour and a half the call was completed, and Robert E. Murphy, motion picture editor of the Minneapolis Star-Journal, and Cedric Adams, columnist for the same paper, talked to Shaw for five minutes. The result was an eight-column spread in the newspaper on the day of the film's opening.

Murphy and Adams, in their interview with Shaw, learned that: He had never seen the film "Major Barbara," but knew it was undoubtedly good (he wrote it); he would be glad to tell what he thinks of Hitler but at a price of $50,000; he would be glad to analyze England's prospects of invading the continent if commissioned to write a 20,000-word article which would be syndicated to all American newspapers.

Typical Shavian reactions to questions:

"What do you do for recreation these days, Mr. Shaw?"

"What would you expect a man of 85 to do?"

"Have you had a blitz today, Mr. Shaw?"

"You ought to know better than to ask a question like that by telephone."

The call cost $42.65 in transatlantic tolls.

Hollywood may find some significance in this:

At a Bundles for Britain auction last week in St. Louis, Lou Costello's hat worn in "Keep 'Em Flying," brought $6; Bud Abbott's hat worn in the same film fetched only $2; a perfume bottle contributed by Lucille Ball got only $1; a La Corona cigar donated by Charles Laughton, $1; pair of lace gloves worn by Irene Dunne in "Unfinished Business," $1; monogrammed handkerchief of Richard Arlen, 75 cents; original shooting script of "How Green Was My Valley," autographed by stars of the picture, $6, and movie-set canvas chairbacks stenciled with names of Robert Benchley, John Barrymore, Hugh Herbert, Gloria Jean, Deanna Durbin, Virginia Bruce and Charles Ruggles, $4.

Photographically related to motion pictures is this little tale about a carrier pigeon:

The next time Walter Rosser, head of the photographic department of the Birmingham News, picks a carrier pigeon to speed home a picture of a touchdown play he will be sure it is not henpecked or pigeon-pecked, whichever it might be.

It seems Walter took along a male pigeon, considered the best trained and most reliable in his flock, to the Alabama-Georgia football game. The game was not three minutes old before he snapped an Alabama touchdown, fastened the film to the pigeon's back and dispatched it on its way. In a few minutes the office boy went to the pigeon retreat on the roof to get the film, but no pigeon. Rosser later came in himself with other shots and still no pigeon. When Rae Norman, custodian of the feathered friends, came in and checked up he found the papa pigeon setting on a nest of eggs. On his back was strapped the tiny cylinder with the film. Nobody had thought to look in the nest, figuring that was a job for lady pigeons.

It happened to Sam Rosen, Monogram branch manager in Philadelphia. After sending the film, "Sergeant Mulligan," to Indiantown Gap, Pa., to be shown to the soldiers there, he wired the customary instructions to the army officials: "Have checked baggage, Sergeant Mulligan to Lebanon. N.Y. CENSOR BILL IS $316,095 FOR 1941; CUTS ORDERED IN 68 FILMS

by DICK CONNERS
in Albany

Eight pictures of the 1,702 reviewed by the Division of Motion Pictures (censorship) of the State Education Department of New York during the 12 months' period ended June 30, 1941, were rejected in their entirety, according to the report filed in Albany on Monday and released Wednesday by Irwin Esmond, director of the Division. Elimination of 503 scenes, subtitles and dialogue, was ordered on statutory grounds in 68 films as contrasted with 926 eliminations the year before in 111 of the 1,762 pictures reviewed in 1939-40.

The drop of films reviewed from 1,762 to 1,702 was due to a decline of foreign-made picture submissions from the preceding year.

Statutory reasons for the eliminations of 503 scenes were: indecent, 241; inhuman, 35; tending to incite to crime, 18; immoral or tending to corrupt morals, 195, and sacrilegious, 14.

The reduction, Mr. Esmond pointed out, was due in part to the frequent conferences held between the Division and applicants for licensing, as well as with producers and exhibitors, resulting in a suggestion of revisions of pictures to relieve them of statutory objections.

"Frequently, these suggestions were worked out by the applicant or producer," Mr. Esmond said, "without seriously interferring with the continuity of the story, with the result that we were able to license the pictures after careful review."

At the same time, the natural decline in submission of foreign-made films submitted for review and license was from 488 in 1939-40 to 311 during the 12 months ending June 30th, 1941. Mr. Esmond explained that this was due to the war. However, he noted, films made in 22 countries were reviewed, including: Great Britain and its possessions, Germany, France, China, Mexico, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Sweden, Hungary, Russia, Italy, Finland, Ireland, Spain, Austria, Argentina, Norway, Cuba, Greece, Palestine, Puerto Rico and Siam.

Biggest Gross Since 1921

The Division had its biggest gross since its inception in 1921, the report indicated. The 12 months' period, ended June 30th, 1941, coincident with the State's fiscal year ending, resulted in an income of $316,095.50, Mr. Esmond reported, as against $311,800 for the previous year.

Since organization of the Motion Picture Commission August 1st, 1921, the State of New York has received $4,710,170.15 and expended a total of $1,446,521.37, with a net revenue of $3,263,648.76 to the state.

Expenses last year increased from $63,877.76 the previous 12 months to $68,418.03, with the net revenue for 1940-41 being $247,677.47 against $247,922.24 for 1939-40.

Revenues accruing to the Division of Motion Pictures, which is within the Department of Education, are mainly derived from a state-imposed tax of $3 per reel on original films submitted and $2 per reel on all copies or prints thereof.

The Division of Motion Pictures is charged with the duty of reviewing and licensing motion pictures, except news releases, previous to exhibition in New York state. It is also charged with the duty of inspecting theatres.

Naturally, since "The Forgotten Village" was submitted since June 30th, 1941, its rejection and subsequent licensing after the Board of Regents had upheld an appeal by distributors by a close vote is not included in the 1940-41 fiscal period. Applicants for licenses are privileged to appeal rejections by the Motion Picture Division, their recourse taking them to the Board of Regents, whose sub-committee screens the films in the New York office of the Division and later makes its recommendations to the Board of 12. At the present time, the sole censorship action on record is that of the German-made newsreel, "Seig Im Westen" or "Victory in the West, on which Richard R. Rowland is the appellant. Director Esmond and the Motion Picture Division could not ban this picture under their interpretation of it as a newsreel, which is not subject to review under Section 1082, Education Law, which governs censorship.

Rowland, assisted by the Anti-Nazi League, contends the film is prejudicial to democracy and should be banned. His appeal, which came after the Division had ruled it was unable to censor the picture due to its newsreel classification, is now before the Appellate Division, Third Department, Supreme Court in Albany. An opinion is shortly to be rendered.

BALL OF FIRE BIG FOR NEW YEAR'S

RKO SERVICE CORPORATION

RKO BUILDING — RADIO CITY

November 19, 1941

OFFICE OF THE
VICE-PRESIDENT IN CHARGE OF THEATRE OPERATIONS

Mr. Sam Goldwyn
7210 Santa Monica Blvd.
Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Sam:

Having gone to Hollywood for the express purpose of looking at BALL OF FIRE and having seen it twice before audiences at sneak previews I want to repeat that I expect it to be one of the year's biggest box office attractions.

To back up that confidence I am happy to tell you that I have arranged for BALL OF FIRE to open in a large number of our theatres New Year's week. I cannot imagine a more suitable or profitable picture for that preferred playing time.

BALL OF FIRE has everything a fine picture should have - marvelous comedy and glorious romance. Gary Cooper is just as the public likes him best. Barbara Stanwyck has the best part in her brilliant career. In fact every member of the cast is perfect and needless to say the whole production reflects the good taste and high quality that we have come to expect in every Goldwyn picture.

I am glad to have seen you again and to have had the opportunity of looking at BALL OF FIRE. It is a grand show and great entertainment. I know that RKO can look forward to one of its biggest New Year's weeks.

Kind personal regards.

Sincerely yours,

Charles W. Koerner

CRESCENT CASE AT AN END, GOES TO JUDGE

Government and Defendants Argue Final Briefs; Companies Defend "Commercial Deals"

Nashville Federal Court Judge Elmer Davies is expected to begin final consideration of the Department of Justice's long anti-trust suit against the Crescent circuit, its affiliates, Universal, and United Artists, this week. All briefs but one were filed; final arguments were heard Monday.

The case had seven weeks of trial during the Summer. Followed then filing of briefs and counter briefs, and appearances of lawyers on small points.

On Monday, Robert L. Wright, special assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, filed the Government's reply brief to the defendant exhibitors' brief, and announced a Government reply brief to defendant distributors' brief would be filed next week.

Judge Davies announced hope of giving decision by the month's end.

During the trial, numerous independent exhibitors told of Crescent deals with distributors, which, they contended, deprived them of proper product, and they also told of Crescent's, and its affiliates' acquisition of theatres in the Middle South.

Called "One Way Deal"

Mr. Wright, Monday, called a "'one-way proposition" the alleged distributor practice of negotiating for contracts with independent exhibitors while discussing with Crescent deals which included the towns in which those independents operated.

He added: "The distributor has everything to gain, nothing to lose, by holding out the hope of a film contract to the independent, when actually there is no hope if the distributor and the circuit get together."

On the same day, Edward C. Raftery, United Artists president and counsel, defended the institution of the film franchise.

The franchise, he noted, assured the distributor an outlet; it also helps it establish one exhibitor against another. He added the distributor also naturally desired to sell more than one year's product.

The Government's attitude, in essence, was an attack upon the right of a distributor to select his customers, Mr. Raftery argued.

Of UA's participation in alleged conspiracy, Mr. Raftery noted its output was only five per cent of the total of the majors. He asked: "How could we be a party even to substantial restraint of interstate trade?"

J. D. Mosby, of Nashville, attorney for Universal and United Artists, asserted that "time and again," the independent exhibitors on stand during the trial admitted the two companies sold product to them satisfactorily; and he added that the 63 and 71 situation blanket deals with Crescent were made "for perfectly proper commercial reasons."

Of two cases of alleged discrimination by UA and one by Universal, he claimed that they were not sufficient to establish proof of conspiracy. He added they were isolated, sporadic, and doubtful cases, and they could not even be used to show intent to conspire.

Allen A. Dobey aided Mr. Wright in presenting further Government arguments. Of the defense contention some of the deals to acquire theatres for Crescent were mere "Tennessee horse trading," Mr. Dobey remarked:

"They were not horse trading—because Crescent could afford to operate at a loss in any situation, up to three years. The defendants possessed circuit buying power in the contracting for films, and the independents could get only those pictures the defendants did not want."

The Government's reply brief also contended that the exhibitor defendants conceded they "have intentionally monopolized exhibition in a wide area." It also charged that the result of this "elimination—a collection of affiliated theatre operating monopolies in over 55 towns—is not open to dispute although the defendants seriously urge that this method of arbitrarily fixing the price and character of the only motion picture entertainment available to more than a quarter of a million people, is outside the reach of the Federal anti-monopoly statute."

Pleads on Jurisdiction

Pleading for defendants Louis Rosenbaum, Mrs. Nettie Sudekum, and the Muscle Shoals Theatres, W. C. Mitchell, Florence, Alabama, lawyer, said Tuesday that the Government's entrance into a consent decree with the organized industry placed the industry outside the scope of the judiciary. He also maintained independent exhibitors could buy against circuits, regardless of Government contentions, and cited Mr. Rosenbaum, who succeeded in a substantial Arkansas town against a circuit theatre, and another independent.

Universal and United Artists Tuesday filed a supplement brief, declaring, in part, that the Government had not confuted defendants' findings of fact, filed October 15th.

The majors want to examine, before trial, Jacob Unger, president of the Hillside Amusement Company, Newark, and plaintiff, in a $900,000 anti-trust suit against them in behalf of his Mayfair Theatre. They so indicated on Monday.

Chilean Distributor Set for Monogram

Norton V. Ritchey, vice-president of Monogram Pictures in charge of foreign operations, at present in Santiago, Chile, announces that he has entered into a contract with Alros Distributors, Chilean film distributors headed by L. Alberto Robles Sotomayor, whereby they will undertake to distribute Monogram's product in Chile and Bolivia effective immediately.

According to Mr. Ritchey, this deal calls for Alros Distributors to handle 24 Monogram pictures during the coming season.

Electrical Committee Set

Darryl F. Zanuck, chairman of the research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has announced the appointment of a committee to consider possibilities for standardizing studio electrical equipment and to establish, where necessary, standards for the design of newly developed equipment. Membership of the committee consists of: Bryan Carter, Alexander Franklin, Fred Geiger, Felix Gouaillardon, Paul Guerin, Jack Kremple, Earl Miller, Ray Moore, Harold Nye, Walter Strohm and Gordon S. Mitchell.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

"Woman" Trouble Down East Gives West No Worries

ESTEEMED EDITOR:

Those developments in your part of the country provoked by "Two Faced Woman" received slight immediate notice here.

There was some talk about them, naturally, as there is talk about such an incident as that 'quake last week which had its epicenter somewhere in mid-Atlantic but cracked no windowpanes in Beverly Hills.

The analogy will hold good if, as seems not beyond coincidence, the local opening of the picture on Thursday is accompanied by a seismic disturbance epicentering at Grauman's Chinese.

To be sure, the matter was discussed by resident and visiting executives at a regular monthly meeting of the Producers Association, but it is not on the record that anything more fundamental than an admonition to exercise caution in selection of future subject material eventuated.

Correspondents of Eastern newspapers and press associations were given a couple of bad days by editors who, wiring them for quotes and getting none, couldn't seem to comprehend that nobody in authority was going to do any public speaking in connection with a matter which, in all candour, they knew little or nothing about and cared substantially less. (Specimen studio quote, unofficial, "It's a New York matter; we just make 'em; it's up to them what they do with 'em when they get 'em.")

An Awkward Situation

What with local papers cutting to a stick, the dispatched accounts of the developments, the correspondents were placed in the awkward position of having to tell their interviewees the little they knew of what had transpired and to hope for a break. Add to this the fact that most of the resident pressmen have never succeeded in getting it quite straight whether the Legion of Decency and the Production Code are one and the same thing or two and different, and you have a reasonably complete explanation of the apathy.

You may be interested to hear that a number of these journalists whose attention has been called to the complete text of the Code printed in the current edition of your International Motion Picture Almanac have expressed themselves to your correspondent as agreeably enlightened and completely surprised by its contents.

Edwin Schallert of the Times gave the "Two Faced Woman" matter its single studied consideration in print, declaring in his Sunday article, "First gun in a bitter battle of censorship against the films may have been fired."

Going on from there to connect the incident with the Legion's recent special bulletin on "Life Begins with Andy Hardy," Mr. Schallert summed up his observations with, "The trend of entertainment has become more daring in many departments, and once the fire of antipathy starts burning about this it may attain the proportions of a real blaze.

"Duplication of 1934 conditions is not perhaps actually to be foreseen, but it might be approached. One thing sure, the movies themselves will discount the changing tides as long as money is to be made at the box office."

Edwin knows his Hollywood.

Town talk of the week included, mayhap by means of stimulation, comment on the granting of a Production Code Authority certificate to "Shanghai Gesture."

Fantastic tales were being told of the number of producers who, adown the years, have tried to whip this bit of stage sensationalism into a shape that would fit today's screen standards.

Most of the talking tended to convey the implication that Arnold Pressburger and Josef von Sternberg, producer and director of the film, had managed in some way to triumph over established order somewhat as the late Houdini used to slip handcuffs.

The actuality is that producer and director set something of a record in point of cooperation with the Code Authority, starting more than a year ago in a preliminary canvassing of the possibilities with the then Administrator Joseph I. Breen and continuing steadfastly in compliance with every suggestion advanced by his successor.

The MGM Technicolor short filmed for local Chest uses, "Dr. Kildare's Baby," achieved a perfect score of 246 playdates out of a possible 246 and is credited with stimulating notably the flow of donations.

No provision has been made for circulating this film in other areas, but there is no reason to assume that exhibition privileges would not be granted to exhibitors requesting them.

Chest Drive Report

Certain aspects of the Los Angeles Community Chest Campaign and the industry's participation in it may be of interest and possible use to exhibitors cooperating in kindred undertakings elsewhere.

Due to increased employment Paramount's 1941 contribution, first to be delivered in full, topped 1940's figure by 10%, representing the individual donations of 2,223 employees, which compares to 2,050 last year. Similar circumstances prevail in most studios.

Possibly also pertinent to campaignings undertaken elsewhere is the official observation that, "There has been a slowness on the part of some higher paid workers to repeat their subscriptions of previous years."

Your circulation executive's son, Ray McDonald, moved into the front rank of the screen's dancing men when his solo number in "Babes on Broadway," filmed in one of the longest takes ever shot on a dance set, collected three bursts of applause from an impartial preview audience, two during and one after. Have we got his autograph on a subscription blank?—W. R. W.

STUDIO STATUS

Paramount held top position among the studios for a second week with nine productions on its stages. Total count for the area was 43 pictures shooting, 26 preparing and 68 in various stages of editing.

NETWORKS' BANNING COST ASCAP $4,300,000

Gene Buck Reports That Yearly Operation Cost Increased $600,000, But Expects $500,000,000 Revenue Next Year

The radio networks' ban on ASCAP music for the first ten months of this year cut the Society's distribution to publisher and writer members by $4,300,000, a report submitted at the annual meeting of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, held at the Hotel Astor in New York on Monday showed. Gene Buck disclosed that the Society's total distribution to publisher and writer members for 1941 would be approximately $2,700,000, as compared with $7,000,000 for 1940.

Mr. Buck also reported that operating expenses of the Society increased from a yearly average of about $1,000,000 to $1,600,000 in 1941. The $600,000 rise was attributed by Mr. Buck to the cost of the radio feud. ASCAP's president declared that settlement of the 10-month fight would bring $2,500,000 to $3,000,000 from radio in 1942, with other revenue sources expected to bring the total to $5,000,000.

About 550 ASCAP members were present at the meeting and contrary to advance reports which indicated dissension, they gave Mr. Buck a rising vote of confidence, following his explanation to the audience that he had rejected a $35,000 annuity offered to him by a publisher group on the board of directors as an inducement to retire. He reiterated that he would not retire unless writer-members urged it. Billy Rose, producer, supported the ASCAP president and urged unity between ASCAP ranks and board members, while Saul Bornstein, president of Irving Berlin, Inc., commented that the publisher-members wanted a "business man" administration for the Society. Election of officers was postponed until April.

New Payment System

Culminating one of the chief sources of dissatisfaction among ASCAP's writer-members, two committees were named during the meeting to investigate proposals for setting up a new system of payment to songwriters. The committees will hear all suggestions for reclassification of membership and the method of fund distribution, and will formulate recommendations for the board of directors. Several reclassification plans already have been suggested and will be studied, including the one known as the "Edgar Leslie Plan," a method which provides that payments to writer-members on the basis of ratings be cut 50 per cent, with the other half paid on the basis of the number of radio performances of the tunesmith's songs.

The writers' committee consists of three board members, Otto Harbach, Geoffrey O'Hara and George W. Meyer, and Edgar Leslie, John Redmond, Harvey Enders and Stanley Adams.

The publishers' committee comprises 12 ASCAP board members, plus Sam Fox, Buddy Morris and Carl T. Fischer.

Meanwhile, it was reported in New York last week that an ASCAP claimed 100 new radio stations have signed local license agreements since the settlement of the network dispute, with 25 more ready to sign. These 100 stations, it was said, were in addition to the 300 which ASCAP maintained stayed with the Society during the radio feud. Of the 100, 90 per cent were said to have taken out blanket licenses. A spokesman for the Society indicated that by December 1st, stations signed with ASCAP will represent "60 per cent of the dollar volume of the industry."

In New York on Tuesday, meanwhile, Broadcast Music, Inc., the network music publishing company, announced that songwriters Mort Greene and Harry Revel formed a publishing firm in partnership with BMI, known as Greene, Revel Incorporated. Purpose of the new company, it was said, is to aid radio exploitation of songs from Hollywood films.

Opposition to the proposals of the Canadian Performing Rights Society, Ltd., and Canadian BMI, Ltd., for substantial increases in licenses fees for 1942 to broadcasting stations, got under way last week, in a move from the Musical Protective Association of Canada in Toronto.

Meanwhile, Harry Sedgwick representing the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, announced on Tuesday in Toronto that a settlement had been reached with Canadian Performing Rights Society and BMI of Caanda for continuance of the 1941 license fees next year.

Canadian Performing Rights Society recently applied to the Dominion Government for approval of its proposed schedule of increased license fees for use of its musical works in 1942 on radio; and also asking for permission to impose a $10 fee for every juke box and a $20 semi-annual license charge for sound projection machines

The Musical Protective Association has organized for the opposition to be presented before the Copyright Board in December. The following are among its officers: President, E. L. Hughes, general manager of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto; chairman of the board, T. J. Bragg, of Odeon Theatres of Canada; vice-president, Col. John A. Cooper, of the Canadian Moving Picture Distributors Association; J. N. Thivierg, director representing the Canadian Association of Broadcasters; Jack Connell of the Hotel Association of Ontario, and T. G. Dalglish, secretary.

Court Rules in BMI Case

The Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court last week upheld the right of Broadcast Music, Inc., to act as a co-plaintiff with the E. B. Marks Music Co., in a test suit against ASCAP

TRADE, ALL INDUSTRY AFFECTED BY INFLUENCE OF FILMS:—GOLDEN

Commerce Department Consultant Outlines Effect of Screen on War and Peace Economy; Worldwide Influence Seen

Externally and internally, Hollywood's motion pictures are of great and little realized importance, concerning manifold factors involving all other industries and all individuals; they use materials at stupendous rate; they are trade trail-blazers in foreign countries; they stimulate manufacturing; they maintain morale; they create, and influence, public opinion, here, and in other countries; in short, they play a "World Role in Time of Crisis," according to Nate Golden, formerly in charge of the Department of Commerce motion picture division, and now its motion picture consultant. Mr. Golden develops his thesis in an article of that title in the December 6th issue of Foreign Commerce, a Government weekly.

Noting the amounts of material used by the studios, Mr. Golden says, in example, that they need, in one year, more than 20,000,000 feet of lumber and wallboard panels, in addition to 5,700,000 feet of composition boards; that the annual requirements of iron and steel, in rounds, flats, shapes, cold-rolled and tubed is 850 tons; and that the industry uses in one year more than $250,000 worth of hardware—"the scope of these things ranging from carriage bolts to piano wire, from solder to screws.

"Aluminum, brass, and copper and their alloys (in sheets, rounds, flats, and shapes) account for nearly 36,000 pounds of the material needed by Hollywood studios in the course of a year—along with almost 100,000 pounds of foundry metals, new and scrap aluminum, brass, copper, lead, zinc, tin and babbitt. Vital to the work of making, repairing, and operating the studios' precision machinery, and of devising countless props and pieces of equipment for the settings, are the 350 gross of tools—drills, taps, reamers, and comparable utensils—which the motion picture industry needs every twelvemonth.

"More than 2,000,000 feet of electric wire and cable are needed yearly for production purposes, together with about $137,000 worth of electric motors, batteries, and accessories—the batteries being absolutely essential for the cameras and for the operation of the entire sound-equipment system.

Other Commodities

"Paints used annually in the industry (95 per cent for actual production) reach the formidable totals of 158,000 gallons of one type and 254,000 pounds of another type. Ropes and fiber used come to more than 360,000 pounds a year. Photographic supplies for "still" pictures alone attain the impressive figures of $235,000 yearly, and the annual value of the laboratory chemicals used (such as acetone, carbon tetrachloride, sulphuric and oxalic acids, chrome alum) is not less than $283,000."

Drop backgrounds and set dressings use more than 500,000 yards of canvas, burlap, muslin, webbing, denim, and cotton tape yearly, he said. Ammunition, fireworks, liquid smoke, used for special effects, account for $45,000 per year. The industry also needs, for that period, 277 tanks of helium, for the balloons that float over sets warning aviators to keep away.

And he added:

"Nearly $75,000 worth of rubber goods are used by the motion picture industry in the course of a twelvemonth—comprising such items as fire hose, sponge rubber, ordinary hose and tubing, latex, matting, rubber cement. An arresting use of latex is in the construction of artificial animals such as elephants or crocodiles. In a recent big picture, not less than $10,000 was spent in the single cast of fabricating an artificial, mechanical octopus."

The foregoing materials not only come from this country; they come from overseas, he reminded remarking: "So, back of the scenes in the film that one sees at his neighborhood theatre lie countless real-life pictures: of brown men in Malayan forests making herring-bone cuts to tap rubber trees—of tung oil for paints coming perilously out of war-rocked China—tin ore being shipped to the South American coast from the Andean heights of Bolivia—bauxite being mined far up the Cottica River in Surinam (Netherlands Guiana) to make the aluminum needed in Southern California—workers busy growing hemp on the sides of extinct volcanoes on the island of Mindanao, to make, eventually, the ropes used often in the settings that Hollywood devises for the creation of illusion."

The industry, he said, realizes the extent to which it depends upon international commerce, and therefore supports the present Administration's foreign policy. He then outlined the forms assumed by that support: The Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, responsible for short subjects and features for army training and public exhibition; maintenance of morale of the armed forces, and distribution of U. S. films to neutral nations.

Of the committee's efforts, he remarked upon its slogan: "A Defense Film with Every Program", and noted the short subjects produced for recruiting, for placement of skilled workers, for training of armed men, and the features made on stories based upon the tank and parachute forces. He recalled the 50 films being made under the auspices of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, and that the film industry had distributed and exhibited in more than 12,000 theatres, "with no cost to the Government," ten Government-produced short subjects; that the industry, too, has helped the Government's Defense Savings Bonds and Stamps program, its efforts to conserve gasoline and oil, and collect scrap aluminum, the U.S.O. drive, and the State Department's goodwill policy in Latin America.

Of the industry's contribution to maintenance of morale in the armed forces, Mr. Golden said:

"The U. S. Army Motion Picture Service operates 555 theatres at 277 army posts, with a total average attendance of 277,500 men in uniform daily. Every week there are, on an average, 2,120 separate programs—each containing one feature picture and at least two short subjects. At all of the new Atlantic bases, at tent shows during Army maneuvers, at the Navy's shore stations and on board ship, motion pictures are playing their role in morale-maintenance today. And the pictures themselves are being supplemented by a great many personal appearances of celebrated stars, headlining or contributing to the stage entertainments arranged at camps and other bases of this nation's armed forces."

Finally, of the distribution of American films to neutral countries, as part of the U. S. film industry's support of the current foreign policy, Mr. Golden found "great significance" in the fact that Europe's war beleagued neutrals still insist on enjoying American films. He cited Sweden: it still gets more than half its screen fare from this country. And he cited comment by a Swedish circuit film booker: "In these days, it is of common interest to the United States and Sweden that the Swedish public maintains its contact with the Anglo-Saxon world, and its ideals, that American films transmit."

Films Are "Silent Salesmen"

American films not only transmit our mental attitudes to foreigners; they transmit our material culture, Mr. Golden remarked:

"'Silent Salesman' is the term that has been frequently, and justly, applied to the setting and pictorial background of Hollywood's motion pictures. What is really displayed here is an 'animated catalog,' with goods used by living people about whom there is unquestionably more romantic glamor than there is about any other group of persons in the world. Everywhere, people imitate the Hollywood stars and follow with keenest interest their activities, feelings and preferences. As a result, the articles that they handle in their films, the merchantable commodities by which they are surrounded on the screen, are rendered alluring to the audiences in every part of the world—and the influence on foreign trade is noteworthy

SEES ENTERTAINMENT FACTOR IN DEFENSE

Harry C. Arthur, Jr., president and general manager of Fancho & Marco in St. Louis, linked the motion picture industry with the national defense effort in a recent statement.

"If America's national defense is to be brought up to the high standards and high-speed production schedules necessary, keen minds, capable hands and happy hearts to accomplish this are virtually as necessary as raw materials," he said.

The theatre executive continued, "To keep those minds keen and the hands capable, workers now toiling daily in defense plants throughout the country must have entertainment to ease the strain of hour-after-hour top-speed production effort. Motion pictures, because of their widespread distribution and low admission prices, constitute more than ever the standard form of entertainment for the average family."

Harry Buxbaum, Twentieth Century-Fox New York exchange manager, has compiled three reels of the highlights of the most important football games played this season from Fox Movietone News Clips. These will be shipped to Army advance outposts in Iceland and Bermuda for screening for the troops.

Variety Tents Name Officers In Five Cities

Variety Clubs this week elected 1942 officers in Minneapolis-St. Poul, Dallas, Cincinnati and Buffalo. Elections were also conducted by the Cincinnati Cinema Club and the Milwaukee Reel Club.

In Albany, the Variety Club has completed plans for its testimonial, on Monday, to M. A. Silver, of Warner Theatres, at the local Ten Eyck Hotel, where James J. Walker, of New York is to be toastmaster. Chairman of the Variety Club testimonial committee is Si R. Fabian, head of the Fabian Theatre Circuit, New York, and a long-time friend of Mr. Silver's.

About 500 diners are expected to greet Mr. Silver on his return to Albany next Monday night, with more than 300 reservations on hand to date. Among the early out-of-town reservations received are those of Neil Agnew, Paramount vice-president; Tom Connors, 20th Century-Fox; Joseph Bernhard, Ben Kalmenson and Harry Kalmine, Warner Theatre Management; George Schaeffer, Ned Depinet and Andy Smith, RKO; J. Meyer and Louis Schine, Schine Circuit, Gloversville.

Mr. Silver will shortly resign as chief barker of Variety Ten Nine, to be succeeded by Louis R. Golding of Fabian Theatres.

Rubin, Manente Dinner Held

With more than 250 in attendance, Nat Rubin, new manager of the Lyric theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., and Frank Manente, new assistant at the Globe theatre, in the same city, were feted at a testimonial dinner-dance Monday night at the Seven Gables Inn in Bridgeport. Each received a purse.

Morris Mendelsohn, attorney for Loew-Poli, was toastmaster, and Harry F. Shaw, Loew-Poli division manager; Lou Brown, publicity chief, and Robert E. Russell, manager of the Loew-Poli, under whom both men worked until recently, presented greetings.

Variety and Other Elections

Stanley Kozanowski, managing director of the Rivoli theatre on Tuesday was elected president of the Variety Club of Buffalo, N. Y. He was chosen by the new board of directors at the annual meeting.

Others elected are Elmer F. Lux, Buffalo branch manager for RKO, assistant chief barker; Andrew Gibson, second assistant; and W. E. J. Marther, secretary-treasurer for the seventh consecutive year.

With the four officers other members of the board are Murray Whiteman, Matthew V. Sullivan, Jr., Syd Samson, Dewey Michaels, Ralph W. Maw, Irving Fried and Nicholas J. Basil.

In Minneapolis, Baitland Frosch was named chief barker of the Variety Club of the Twin Cities, which announced that in the first ten months of the year it had distributed 95,000 quarts of milk through the Minneapolis Milk Fund and expected to hit 120,000 by the end of the year.

Mr. Frank McCormick was named first assistant chief barker; Arthur Anderson second issistant, Charles Rubinstein treasurer, and Lowell Kaplan secretary.

Other directors are Max Torodor, William Elson, W. A. Steffes, Ben Blotcky, retiring chief barker, Eddie Ruben, Ben Berger, Roy Miller and Paul H. Mans.

In Dallas, Tex., R. E. Griffith has been elected chief barker of the Variety Club, succeeding Paul Short. Other officers are: Claude Ezell, first assistant; W. G. Underwood, second assistant; Ted Deboer, dough guy; John Q. Adams, property master; Ed Rowley, S. I. Oakley, Ben Ferguson, Herman Biersdorf, Joe Jack, Justin McInaney, R. J. O'Connell and Mr. Short, canvasmen; J. O. Cherry and Burt King, clowns; Jacob Lutzer and B. C. Gibson, alternates.

F. W. Huss, president of Associated Theatres, Inc., Cincinnati, was elected chief barker of the Cincinnati Variety Club this week, to succeed William Onie. Andrew J. Niedenthal and William Devaney were elected first and second chief barkers, respectively. Saul M. Greenberg was re-elected property master, and Peter Niland was named dough guy.

Canvassmen, in addition to Arthur Frudenfeld, Allan S. Moritz, Joseph J. Oulahan, Harry J. Wessel and Mr. Onie, past chief barkers, are James J. Grady, Harris Dudelson, Nat Kaplan, Albert Kolitz, Albert Weinstein, Mr. Huss, Mr. Niedenthal, Mr. Devaney, Mr. Greenberg and Mr. Niland. Mr. Moritz, who was reelected national canvassman, also was chosen delegate to the national convention, together with Mr. Niedenthal. Mr. Onie and Mr. Devaney were named alternates.

The installation dinner was held Monday.

Cincinnati Club Elects

Rudy Knoepfle, Republic salesman, has been reelected president of the Cinema Club of Cincinnati, and Peter Niland was reelected as secretary and treasurer. Al Kolitz was named first vice-president, succeeding Marc Cummins, and Leg Bugie was chosen second vice-president, replacing Joseph McKnight. Trustees selected were: Irving Sochin, Milton Furian, William Devaney, John Eifert, Ross Williams and Mr. McKnight.

The Reel Fellows Club of Milwaukee, an association of motion picture film salesmen, working in the Milwaukee district, was formed October 4th, 1941. At a meeting held November 22d, it was announced that 100 per cent of the men eligible for membership had been enrolled.

Officers for the year 1942 were elected as follows: R. W. Baker, president, and G. W. Edgerton, secretary and treasurer.

One of the highlights of the forthcoming sixth annual banquet on December 14th of the Philadelphia Variety Club will be the presentation of a check in the amount of $4,000 to be presented by the retiring Chief Barker Earle W. Sweigert to Dr. Herbert Stoddard, superintendent of Philadelphia public schools. The money is to be used to expedite and partially support medical work among spastic cases of infantile paralysis.

On Wednesday, the Ladies Auxiliary of the Philadelphia Variety Club, at a luncheon session, presented a check of $1,000 to the Willis Martin Orthopedic Hospital to be used in spastic work for paralytics.

AMPA TO HONOR VARIETY CHIEFS

John H. Harris of Pittsburgh, national Chief Barker of Variety Clubs of America, and Bob O'Donnell, of Texas, first assistant Chief Barker, will be guests of honor at the AMPA luncheon next Thursday, December 11th, at the Hotel Edison in New York.

The testimonial is expected to be attended by AMPA members, who will hear the story of the Variety organization, from Mr. Harris, founder and inspiration of the clubs, and from Mr. O'Donnell, whose home tent—Number 17—has conducted many philanthropic endeavors for the children of Texas.

Joseph Lawrence Acquires Salt Lake City Paramount

Competition for Intermountain Theatres' single feature showhouse in Salt Lake City, the Centre theatre, developed during November when the Joseph L. Lawrence Enterprises leased the old Paramount theatre, which had been operated for several years by Intermountain, and opened on Thanksgiving a remodeled, renamed "Paramont" theatre, as a single feature playhouse, playing first run films.

The old Paramount, under control of Intermountain, was closed for a considerable portion of each season, opening only at the height of the season and for outstanding road show attractions. However, the theatre has an excellent location in the state capital and is in the ranks of first-class showhouses.

David K. Edwards, assistant to Mr. Lawrence, and new manager of the Paramont, said RKO films would be run at present, although probably not as a permanent policy. The outstanding road shows will play the Paramont, and he announced that the "Man Who Came To Dinner" would play in the theatre December 19 and 20.

The Lawrence circuit operates the following theatres in Utah cities: Murray and Iris in Murray, the Holladay in Holladay, the Academy in Provo and the Rialto, Southeast, State in Salt Lake City.

"Fantasia" General Release At Popular Prices

General release of Walt Disney's musical, "Fantasia," through RKO, is near, according to Roy Disney, business manager of Disney Productions. The probable time is late January. The policy will be continuous run, at popular prices.

The picture will contain the same music, but Disney engineers, it was reported, have prepared the film for showing with a single sound track instead of the Disney-RCA "Fantasound," which required special theatre equipment.

The picture has played only a few key cities. It is now playing in England, South America and Canada.

In its general release, it will be shortened to approximately 85 minutes. In present form, it runs 135 minutes.

Mark N. Y. U.'s New Film Department

New York University's new motion picture department was to be recognized Friday with a reception to which film industry executives have been invited.

Scheduled to speak for the industry was J. Robert Rubin, vice-president and general counsel for MGM; for the University, Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor.

Expected to attend were Barney Balaban, Austin Keough, Joseph Hazen, Bertram Bloch, others.

William Mason Promoted

William Mason, ex-district manager in Eureka, Calif., for a statewide Mann Circuit, has been promoted to assistant general manager of the chain, under owner, George Mann, with headquarters in San Francisco. He succeeds D. P. Isabelle, who resigned to operate his own house, the Vacaville in Vacaville.

Exhibitors continue to say what they like and what they don't

EXAMINATION of the flow of exhibitor comment in response to Motion Picture Herald's invitation to "say it all," reveals most especially a desire for a certain elasticity of relations between exchange and theatre, which does not today exist, if one is to take the expressions of the retail showmen at par.

The evidences are many that distribution offices tend, as is perhaps inevitable, to routine their relations and to seek to make all and sundry, big and little customers alike, conform to national forms and patterns.

The exhibitor makes it clear in these expressions that he is engaged in running his own business, and that devices which seek to ordain how he shall do it are resented. It is obvious, as one reads, that the exhibitor does not want to be told what to buy, and how to buy. His theatre is his castle. His enthusiasm for his own enterprise which so shines through these lines of comment, is one of the industry's greatest assets—perhaps its greatest. THE EDITOR

¶ The price of pictures is still the principal difference between the producer and the distributor. It is my idea that more flat prices should be set, thereby giving the distributor more chance to realize a little profit from the top pictures from which the producer receives so much. If the present policy of charging 70%, 60% and 40% by some of the majors is kept up they are going to help drive many of the small distributors from business.—Texas. (Circuit)

¶ All pictures should be rated or classified A, B, C, etc., by impartial persons not associated with industry, instead of each film company saying that such and such picture was an "A" when it really rated about "C." The exhibitor needs and wants to get "A" pictures. He is glad to pay "A" prices for "A" product, but is disgusted with those rated "A" that turn out to be "C" or "D." Rogue Theatre, Wheeler, Texas. (Independent)

¶ A smaller number of pictures made and more thought given to them. This would bring about single features eventually, which would be good for the industry.—California (Circuit)

¶ Being a woman, and a very belligerent and irate theatre owner, there was not room to express my opinion on this subject in the space allotted, so used a separate page. My pet annoyance is jack rabbit shows and I would like to see them eliminated (or exterminated, preferably in a not too humane manner). For 11 years I have operated a picture show in a small town, fast growing smaller, in the middle of the dust bowl. We are just two miles from the geographical center of the U. S.

For the last three summers I have been practically surrounded by that bane of legitimate theatre, the free show. This summer I gave up the uneven struggle and closed for the summer, and, just as I expected, the free show moved in, so I spent the summer praying for rain on Wednesday nights.

A legitimate theatre must pay a high film rental, transportation, rent, light, advertising, music license, help, buy tickets, pay taxes, subscribe to everything that comes along and spend his money, if any, in the home town.

The jack rabbit operator can get complete programs of feature and shorts or double feature for seven days for as little as $13.50 to $17.50. His only overhead is transportation from one town to another, as the town furnishes light, seats, etc. If a free show operator buys a cup of coffee and a hot dog in a town he thinks he is a philanthropist. A free show is no benefit to a town, because those who patronize a free show are quite likely to expect everything else free, yet the towns fall for them.

There is only one way blitzkrieg these fifth columnists off the map and that is for the exhibitors to boycott every firm that sells them film, no matter how old. No doubt this competition does not interfere with city theatres, but out here, where the tall corn has ceased to grow, it is a very serious menace and has almost put Michael (he's my dog) and me in the bread line. Put my name to this in Neon lights, if you wish.

Thank you for the opportunity to say what I think of free shows. GLADYS E. McARDLE, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. (Independent)

¶ More down to earth performances—good comedies. Cut down running time on features not more than 92 minutes. Could stand more new stars. Not to exaggerate impossible musicals. Consent decree abolished. Clearance clauses eliminated. Eliminate as many war scenes as possible from news reels, as people come to theatre to forget and not be reminded of conditions. One reason for dropping attendance. More newspaper and radio advertising. Make best features possible and eliminate low bracket pictures. People do not pay just to witness fillers. (Independent)

¶ Do they have to drink liquor in every scene in every picture? People go to movies to get entertainment and send their children, too, and all they see in nearly every picture is people making a silly fool out of themselves, guzzling beer all over the place. I guess it's supposed to be funny, but I'm afraid my sense of humor doesn't lean in that direction. Ohio (Independent)

¶ Kansas exhibitors are finding that they can't buy the second or third groups without buying the first or second—prices prohibitive. What's the difference, then, between the old and new way of buying? For my part, give me block buying with a 20 per cent elimination, so that we won't have to buy film 24 hours a day. Kansas (Independent)

¶ Fifty per cent pictures are getting too plentiful, and not one in 10 so sold are worth it. Should be an exhibitor's unwritten law agin 'em. Missouri (Independent)

¶ Elimination of pictures made primarily for double bills! Fewer pictures based on the present war situation. Nebraska (Independent)

¶ Get rid of the drove of producers and relatives at the studios and employ capable people to handle productions. Get rid of these Mathematic Brains of a certain few companies who try to set up a set of figures and terms for contracts that are crazy. Ohio (Independent)

¶ This is a town of 1,000 people, 250 seats. Two changes a week. Make the distributors buy what we want. I can only play 110 pictures per year. Let me buy what I want. B.C.D. pictures won't and can't pay. L. E. BURKEY, Deshler, Nebraska. (Circuit)

¶ One of the fundamental weaknesses that I am unable to understand is why the producers have overlooked the vast male audiences that we are forgetting want entertainment too; that want more than just westerns. It seems that the obvious fact that only 51% (recent poll) of our audience is women should imply to Hollywood that they cannot go on making pictures only for the feminine taste. It has often been stated that it is the women that bring the men to the theatre. After 18 years of theatre experience (and this is actually being on our floor when the patrons are coming in, a religious duty with me) I find that this is far from a fact. Men, too, look for entertainment in our theatres but with the many pictures aimed at women appeal only is it any great wonder that they are drifting away from the theatre. If the men don't get any entertainment you won't often find the women going alone. She tries to get her friend or neighbor to accompany her, where there should have been two couples going. Take shows like "Knute Rockne," "Northwest Passage," "Boom Town," the Cagney-O'Brien pictures, "Buck Privates," "Caught in the Draft," they were all big hits and they had men-appeal as well as women-appeal. Let's hope Hollywood recognizes the fact that men also are potential theatre patrons and let's have some attractions that they too will want to be sure and not miss and bring along their feminine companions.

This is only one of my pet peeves . . . space doesn't permit some of my others. Poor ad mats in press sheets are another! (Independent)

¶ B pictures will always be made so make them short (50 minutes). Make over fewer pictures. Producers should spend more selling the public instead of broadsiding the exhibitor. —Ohio (Independent)

¶ Why not let John Sutton star in an "A" picture? Why not make the "Life of Christ" in Technicolor with good sound. A company could do a good thing and have a large gross this way. I wish more companies would think about the exhibitor's mortgage when they make these "dead duddy" pictures.—Oklahoma (Independent)

¶ We want all the good pictures depicting everyday life, such as the Hardy Family; we also welcome pictures like the Dr. Kildare pictures. Any good "down to earth" stories go over best in the small towns. Musical extravaganzas are well received if not played too often. Too many war stories are being made . . . most people come to the show to take their minds off troubles . . . especially national troubles. War stories, unless staged with top stars, will lose money for the exhibitors from now on. They can't all be Sergeant Yorks! Film producers also must not expect much enthusiasm over back-stage plots. The public knows that that type requires less money and effort to produce and feels like it is being "gypped" by these. NEWK, Burlington, Kansas (Independent)

¶ Selectivity on this decree selling of blocks-of-five for the small town exhibitor making 3 changes per week and not playing any double features. Better pictures by producers. Ohio (Independent)

¶ The possible chance to book a few good "A" pictures without taking the rest of the alphabet. Elimination of the "if and when available" clause from all contracts. (Montana independent)

¶ More good program pictures for mid-week showings. Too many pictures that the distributors think should be used on your best days and you cannot afford to use them for mid-week in small towns.—Arkansas (Independent)

¶ If they must be percentage pictures. Make 'em straight percentage from first dollar, and give the exhibitor a chance for house expenses, before he is forced to pay 40%—start at a fair percent and work up.—A. J. SIMMONS, Lamar Plaza, Lamar, Mo. (Circuit)

¶ If producers could only get together and stop giving an avalanche of the same type stories at the same time. As is we get an overdose of glorified westerns, airplane, army camp stories—all at the same time. (Circuit)

¶ I think today the producer should take into consideration the overhead of the small independent exhibitor, the same as he does the chain. I am in a town of 3,000, with a modern theatre in every respect, including high intensity lamps, but still the distributor wants the same percentage for this town as when it had Mazdas and hard seats, and won't even take my overhead into consideration.—Jefferson City, Mo. (Independent)

¶ Why do the Hollywood producers spend thousands of dollars on an extravagant set, which probably will show on the screen sixty seconds or perhaps will never get out of the cutting room? In many instances, thousands of feet of film are photographed, out of which is selected enough film for a ninety minute feature. Why is it not possible for them to plan their pictures so that needless waste of time, material and salaries can be eliminated. Where would the exhibitor be if he ran his business in such a wasteful manner? The extra expense the producer incurs because of wasteful production methods is passed along to the exhibitor in unreasonable film rentals and the exhibitor must sell the costly extravaganza at the same admission price as pictures in the lower allocations and it usually turns out to be only mediocre box-office. Because of needless waste in production, the producer has a million dollars tied up in a feature and insists that the exhibitor pays and plays or at least pays.—BILL SIMON, Mgr. Grand and Rex Theatres, Rocky Ford, Colo. (Circuit)

¶ I don't favor propaganda films but worse than ever I feel that such injection as "Making peace with a Dictator" from "That Hamilton Woman" are uncalled for. Double features are still the exhibitor's headache but must admit that my public wants them when all theatres have doubles. Cut them every place at the same time and all will be as well pleased, as cheap program pictures to fill in only keep customers away.—Illinois (Circuit)

¶ No peeves except when producers force exhibitors to raise prices and pay increased percentage rentals on certain special pictures.—California (Circuit)

¶ Intelligently designed publicity campaigns that will fit the needs of small exhibitors with small budgets; that is, press books that are really written as if the writer had seen the picture, mats that do not require 3 col. 7 in. spreads to sell the pictures, original 1 sheets, 11 x 14's, and similar lobby accessories, ballyhoo that does not look like ballyhoo, that does not insult the average man's tastes and intelligence. —New York (Circuit)

¶ I believe that the motion picture industry should unite and carry on a back to the theatre advertising spree with slogans like: "It's Showtime." This also should show what the industry has done for national defense and uniting peoples of the world.—BRYAN TURNER (Circuit)

¶ Distributors know how much an exhibitor can pay for film rental and operate . . . their own accountants have set up a figure for their theatres . . . yet they try to get more and more from the exhibitor every year. It's a cinch the producers and distributors need the theatres for outlets and vice versa. The public—the "yokels" as some of the wise guys in Hollywood prefer to call them—do not give one continental dam about our inter-industry squabbles; all they want is to see a good picture when they attend the theatre.

Our whole trouble is that there is too much greed on both sides of the fence. Some distributors charge a fair rental; some exhibitors pay the distributors a fair price. But in between there are the others who are trying to gyp each other on every deal. And 'tis sad to say that the latter are in the majority.—Texas (Circuit)

CIO MAKING PROGRESS WITH N.Y. FILM UNIONS

Department Store Local Makes Bid for Jurisdiction Over Home Office Clerical Workers

The CIO "invasion" of New York's film industry is making new progress.

The Paramount Office Employees Association last week voted affiliation with the CIO's Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, of the United Professional and Office Workers of America.

It is the seventh film union in New York to join. Other chapters of Local 109 are at the home offices of Loew's-MGM, Columbia, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox, National Screen Service; and the Screen Readers Guild is affiliated.

It appears too, that the Congress of Industrial Organizations is still determined to enlist advertising and publicity workers in the majors' home offices; and that rejection of affiliation with 109, by the Screen Publicists Guild, two weeks ago, was but a setback.

Store Union Makes Bid

This week another CIO union was suing for the affections of the Guild—the United Retail, Wholesale, and Department Store Employees of America, which, says its supporters, embraces more "white collar" workers than does the CIO's Guild.

The department store workers' union last week announced it shortly would form a Cinema Workers Organizing Committee—"to organize all unorganized workers in the distribution end of the cinema industry." It also announced it would not interfere with the jurisdiction of any "legitimate" union with "honest contractual relations."

Meanwhile, the Guild, in meeting Thursday night, November 28th, voted "full approval and support to a complete campaign of action" to force the majors to satisfactory negotiation of the closed shop contract so long sought by the Guild under its certification by the National Labor Relations Board. What the campaign would be was not divulged. Action had been threatened by the Guild two weeks ago, when it broke off negotiations with the majors, charging "stalling."

The Hollywood unit of the Guild telegraphed, Friday, "hearty accord" with New York Guild efforts to obtain a contract. It had been reported, previous to the meeting, that CIO affiliation would again be discussed. However, no information on this was available.

In Hollywood, the Screen Office Employees Guild is claiming office workers at film exchanges. Los Angeles film bookers met last week and discussed terms for a basic contract. They indicated exchange managers would soon have their demands in Guild contract form. Other exchange workers are to come under the organizing drive.

In Hollywood, too, studio workers are to have those back salary and wage increases retroactive them under the terms agreed, and due shortly before Christmas pact renewal. The salaries and wages to report to hundreds of thousands of run to hundreds

In the basic studio agreements are retroactive to the increases

Local B-51 exchange workers two-year contracts for a new

In New Haven, Local 74, stagehands' union, will elect officers Sunday.

John Andrews, president of the Detroit exchange workers' union, has begun negotiations for a new pact.

In New York, Laboratory Technicians Local 702 is asking a contract from National Screen Service, and recognition of Paramount's Long Island laboratory.

The Omaha Musicians Union, Local 70, has reelected all officers except Ernest Nordin, Sr., succeeded as vice-president, by Harold L. Black. Reelected officers are: Peter J. Christmas, president; Harold Pace, recording secretary; Mike Chaloupka, treasurer and financial secretary; Fred Borghoff, sergeant-at-arms. Arthur Randall, Ted Kowalski, Emil Hoppe, George Johnson and Charles Christensen were named to the board of directors.

K. M. McDaniel, Jr., operator and owner of the Lamar Theatre, Lamarque, Texas, has organized a union among employees in accordance with the CIO, and called the United Motion Pictures Local Industrial Union 1162.

After roofing nails were thrown on his parking lot and in front of the theatre, a picket from the longshoremen's union of Texas City paraded up and down with signs, "Unfair to Labor."

A sign was prepared by the theatre: "Paid Pickets—all employees on the job." Mr. McDaniel then formed his own organization, naming it "Lamarque Motion Picture Operators Protective Association No. 1. A "counter" sign stated, "This Theatre Is Fair."

Contact was made with the CIO for recognition and the union became known as the United Motion Picture Employees Union No. 1162. Picketing by the longshoremen ceased.

The Richmond, Virginia, projectionists' union has received a five per cent boost in wages, terminating September 1st, 1944. At that time, it will receive an additional increase of two and one-half per cent; and on September 1st, 1945, another increase of two and one-half per cent.

New Pittsburgh Contract

Pittsburgh projectionists, signing a new contract with circuits have received an increase of seven and one-half cents per hour. The contracts are retroactive to August 31st.

The American Guild of Variety Artists is attempting to organize all cafe, tavern, and night club entertainers in the Seattle and Portland, Oregon, districts. Vince Silk, the union's national representative on the Coast, said last week he found some entertainers in Seattle paid as little as 50 cents a night.

Another stockholder's suit, again an aftermath of the Browne-Bioff trial, was filed in New York Supreme Court last week. It is this time against Warners, by Gertrude Pelham, who owns 100 shares of its common, and asks an accounting of the monies paid by the company's officers to the two convicted labor leaders after they had threatened nation-wide theatre and studio strikes.

Fawcett Publications, owners of several movie "fan" magazines, is giving a bonus of half a month's salary to nearly 300 employees. It has had the best year in its history, it announced last week.

For the seventh year, Harry Gossage is president of Ottawa Musicians Local 180. Other new officers are Don Lyon, vice-president; Fred Muhlig, secretary; Vivian Snowdon, treasurer. Executive members are Albert Mittlestadt, Dirk Keetbass, Charles Wimperis.

Fox Signs Preston Foster

Twentieth Century-Fox has signed Preston Foster to an exclusive term contract.

HERALD PEOPLE

By Staff Photographer

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, associate editor of the Managers' Round Table, corresponds with theatremen from Calcutta to Maine and in all the intervening states and climes. Every mail brings her messages of woe and inquiry which have established her as the exhibitors' own "Goodwill Hour". And not all her advice is confined to exploitation and Round Table contest matters, grateful exhibitors frequently testify when they drop in at the Herald office in Rockefeller Center.

Miss Merriam first became involved with the cinema on the staff of Pathe. Later she joined the Managers' Round Table Department on the Motion Picture News and when that publication was absorbed by the Motion Picture Herald she became a QP staff member.

New York City is her native heath. She studied at Wadleigh High School and Columbia University and did a turn at social and organization work for the Committee of Fourteen and the American Women's Association. Experience as an aide to Professor Irving Fisher, Yale economist who sought to stabilize the dollar, was recently applied by Miss Merriam to unravelling her youngster's football pool.

Gert's hobby is a collection of theatre passes from all over the world for which she will welcome contributions from theatremen whose houses are not already represented. Pending a visit to all their theatres "one of these days", the Oakleys repose in her scrapbook at the Managers' Round Table office.

Warner Building Leased

The Crescent Amusement Co., in Nashville, Tenn., has leased the 12 story Warner office building from Warner Brothers Pictures at $25,000 annually for ten years, with an agreement calling for the construction of a theatre adjacent to the building as soon as conditions make construction materials available.

"Valley" Opens; Plans Set for Other New Films

Twentieth Century-Fox's screen adaptation of the best-selling novel, "How Green Was My Valley," was given a dual premiere in Scranton and Wilkes-Barre on November 26th. Metro Goldwyn Mayer has announced plans for the world premiere of "The Vanishing Virginian," which will be held in Lynchburg, Va., on the same scale as "Gone With the Wind." Universal will preview the short subject "Cavalcade of Aviation," on December 11th, as the first step in the planned feature selling campaign for its featurette. Warners, at a special cocktail party in New York Tuesday, previewed the Ballet Russe short subjects for the press and invited guests. And other companies have announced plans for their feature pictures.

In addition to the world premiere of "How Green Was My Valley" at the Rivoli theatre in New York, the only other showing this year is the dual engagement in Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, which opened Wednesday night, November 26th. The pre-release engagement was set with the Comerford theatres within 24 hours, as a result of local newspaper interest in this picture with its Welsh mining background which makes it a natural for this Pennsylvania district with its large percentage of Welsh miners.

The Hal Horne Organization's field men, in preparing a large scale ballyhoo campaign for the film's opening, lined up the Mutual Broadcasting System for a dual broadcast from the Strand theatre in Scranton and the Comerford in Wilkes-Barre.

The Comerford Theatres, through J. J. O'Leary and John Nolan, donated $100 to each Welsh Society in the two cities as a gesture of appreciation for their official sponsoring of the premiere.

"Virginian" Opening

William F. Rodgers, Metro Goldwyn Mayer's vice-president and general sales manager, announced at the company's sales meeting in Chicago, Monday, that "The Vanishing Virginian" would be given a premiere in Lynchburg, Va., on the same broad scale as was given to "Gone With the Wind" when it opened in Atlanta.

"The first step in the planned feature selling campaign that will be put on by Universal for its special featurette 'Cavalcade of Aviation,' will take place on December 11th, when the short will be previewed at a luncheon tendered by the Banshees to Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker," said Bernard Kreisler, short subjects manager for the company.

This will be followed up a week later by simultaneous word-premieres in Dallas and Dayton, home of the pioneer aviators, the Wright brothers. These premieres will have intensified campaigning. The Aviation Clubs of America and several of the leading commercial airlines have already indicated their desire to cooperate in the festivities attending these openings, and have promised nation-wide cooperation in the exploitation of the subject.

"Cavalcade of Aviation" traces the history of aviation from the time of the first flight by the Wright brothers through to the development of the flying fortresses.

Newspaper editors, columnists, magazine writers, civic leaders, trade paper reporters, and leading socialites attended the world premiere and cocktail party for the two Warner short subjects starring the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, Tuesday, at Fefe's Monte Carlo in New York. The two films screened were "The Gay Parisian" with Leonide Massine, Milada Mladova and Frederic Franklin, and "Spanish Fiesta" with Massine, Tamara Toumanova and Mr. Franklin. Both subjects were produced in color and directed by Jean Negulesco.

As a result of experiments with still photography on the two special short subjects, Warners has purchased five Kodatrom speed flashes, thus becoming the first studio to use this newest development. New lights, which are synchronized with the still camera, freeze action on one thirty-thousandth of a second, and now are being used to film action shots of dance routines by James Cagney and other principals for "Yankee Doodle Dandy." Each bulb is good for 2,500 shots before burning out. Warners intends using this new equipment on all action scenes in addition to dance routines of other productions in the future.

"Dumbo" in Los Angeles

Walt Disney's feature cartoon, "Dumbo," will have its Los Angeles premiere at the Carthay Circle on December 9th.

It has also been announced in New York that seats are now on sale for a special midnight show New Year's Eve for the picture at the Broadway theatre. The entire house is to be reserved for the late show, and the management is planning to utilize full Fantasound equipment for a special holiday program.

The world premiere of MGM's "H. M. Pulham, Esq," based on the novel of the same name by John P. Marquand, was held at the Loew's State and Orpheum in Boston Wednesday evening. Both Robert Young, the star, and Mr. Marquand made personal appearances at the theatres.

The Newspaper Enterprise Association has completed negotiations with Warners for the serialization of "Kings Row," recently completed at the studio with Ann Sheridan, Betty Field, Ronald Reagan and Robert Cummings.

Deschenes Retires

F. E. Deschenes, owner of the Park theatre, Preston, Ont., since 1921, has retired from the industry and will live in Florida.

Press Calls for Balancing of Raised Admissions by Cutting on Poor Films

A report on what the folks "back home" in rural America think of special, preferred run and advance price pictures, is contained in the columns of the Livingston Republican, published weekly at Genesee, up in New York's Finger Lakes district. Editor Ray Sherman in his column dated November 20th treats of Sergeant York and other advanced price films, and motion picture entertainment in general, at Hollywood's local outlet, the Riviera theatre. He wrote:

"Our gripe is not that we had to pay more to see Sgt. York or some of the other pictures which have come along at special prices but that we do not get a refund on some of the worthless films that we have paid regular price to see.

"It is, of course, not the fault of the local theatre or its chain owners that the special price has been started. It was the smart idea of some Hollywood publicity man and it is reaping in the cash on these pictures.

"However, it seems to us that if we attend the theatre regularly we see some good pictures, some that are just average and some that we should be paid to go to see. Yet we do not get any reduced price pictures which certainly some of these should be if there are to be others which are specially priced.

"We movie goers are easily pleased. We go for entertainment and relaxation and are willing to pay for that luxury. However, this writer at least is beginning to feel gyped at paying a special price to see a good picture when perhaps only the day or so previous we have paid full price to see a picture that was far inferior and not worth the money.

"As far as we are concerned we would be just as happy if the Hollywood Moguls would throw their poorest pictures in the junk heap, send out only the good ones and then charge a little more to make up for what is lost on the junking of the poor picture.

"Of course, as they say, that is only one man's opinion but somehow we do not think we are alone in this thought."

Grierson Under 3-Year Contract

Having previously served temporarily as head of the National Film Board with a term concluding December 1st, John Grierson has received an appointment as Canadian Film Commissioner in the Department of National War Services in Toronto on a three-year contract basis.

Mr. Grierson has been assigned to make a survey of the motion picture business throughout Canada and report to the Government regarding prospective developments understood to be in relation to closer Government control of the field.

Herbert Lash is reported reliably ready to resign as Director of Public Information and Mr. Grierson's duties have been enlarged to include screen propaganda. Leonard W. Brockington, former chairman of the Canadian Broadcasting Company, has already resigned from his war publicity post in the Government and is leaving for England shortly.

J. T. Thorson, war services minister in Canada, announced last week that Justice T. C. Davis, associate deputy minister of National War Services, would succeed W. P. Zeller of Montreal as chairman of the reorganized and extended advisory committee on travel and tourist industry in Canada.

Bands for All Shows

The Municipal Council in Bogota, Colombia, has approved a resolution of Councilman Rafael Miranda that requires motion picture theatres to employ orchestras for all shows.

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN WASHINGTON: Herbert Marshall, Virginia Bruce, Gene Reynolds—A nice little picture that registered well at the box office and the audience seemed to be entertained with the doings of the Page Boys inside the U. S. Senate. Running time, 84 minutes. Played November 19-20.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Penna. General patronage.

ELLERY QUEEN, MASTER DETECTIVE: Ralph Bellamy, Margaret Lindsay—This series seems quite popular. Most suitable for a dual bill.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HARMON OF MICHIGAN: Tom Harmon, Anita Louise—I was afraid of this one, but had to date it for lack of something bigger. To my surprise, it did quite well and we actually made some money on it. That is quite unusual this season for me. Tommy Harmon goes through his part really quite well, none of that embarrassing amateurishness that one often finds. The picture is quite ordinary but no one criticised it. Running time, 66 minutes. Played November 17-18.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

OUR WIFE: Melvyn Douglas, Ruth Hussey, Ellen Drew—Played this with "Belle Starr" to surprisingly good business considering the fact that college was closed for "Thanksgiving" recess. This is not a riotous comedy as one might suppose. However, there are some clever moments and dialogue. The last two reels contain practically the whole plot. The first three seems rather aimless, although not overlong. My bunch liked it and said so. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 22.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

SWEETHEART OF THE CAMPUS: Ruby Keeler, Ozzie Nelson and his Band, Harriet Hilliard—Excellent musical. Better than a lot of the specials. Played November 5-6.—Raymon Paul, Sea Breeze Theatre, Beaufort, N. C. Small town patronage.

TEXAS: William Holden, Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor—This is a good picture of its type. Better made than "Arizona," but will not gross as well. Don't overlook the possibilities in the middle west, especially Kansas and Texas, where there is considerable local interest. Considerable interest in the fighting scene, but is not meant to be authentic, but rather as a comedy break. Played preferred time, but not satisfactory gross. Running time, 94 minutes. Played October 26.—D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kan. Small town patronage.

TILLIE THE TOILER: Kay Harris, William Tracy —Light entertainment that showed box office increases. —Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: Jean Arthur, Lionel Barrymore, James Stewart, Edward Arnold—Old, but plenty good. Business good. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 13-14.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

YOU'LL NEVER GET RICH: Fred Astaire, Rita Hayworth, John Hubbard—High class musical comedy that went over nicely with the audience and attracted a fair crowd. I played it a little too previous before people realized its real worth. Place this on your best dates and give it your personal endorsement. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 5-6.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Penna. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN, THE: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Too bad. Too bad. We could rely on any one of these stars to bring them in, but am afraid this did it. If your patrons like one of these stars, don't play "The Bad Man." Let them be remembered as they were before this one was made. Played November 7-8.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

BARNACLE BILL: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main, Virginia Weidler—Fair picture, but not quite up to Beery standard. Business fair, but not outstanding. Played November 8-10.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

BARNACLE BILL: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main, Virginia Weidler—This was a very good Wallace Beery production, but he just does not put the shekels through the ticket window for me anymore. It's not like the Dressler-Beery combination of old. It may be the younger generation are unappreciative of his style and never saw "The Big House" or "Tugboat Annie." Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 7-8.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

BIG STORE, THE: Marx Bros., Tony Martin—Double featured along with RKO Radio's "Along the Rio Grande" to a fair gross business. I am not doing so well with the Marx Brothers and therefore afraid to let them stand alone. This offering, however, was not half bad and the audience seemed to enjoy them immensely. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 14-15.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Penna. General patronage.

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy, Ian Hunter—It was not the original story that my patrons expected, but the beautiful color, Robert Taylor, and the action well made up for it. Every one seemed to enjoy it and had some comments on it. Played week after "G. W. T. W." and business was fair. Running time, 93 minutes. Played October 19-21. —Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST: Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon—One of the best pictures of this type ever made; and I had the best Sunday-Monday-Tuesday gross of any '40-'41 picture. Played November 16-18. —Raymon Paul, Sea Breeze Theatre, Beaufort, N. C. Small town patronage.

COME LIVE WITH ME: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr—Excellent. Enjoyed by everyone. Stewart and Lamarr never better and Adeline de Walt Reynolds' portrayal of "Grandma" will live long in the memory of those who saw this picture. Here is a star who will really go places. Played November 10-11.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE: Spencer Tracy, Ingrid Bergman, Lana Turner—Spencer Tracy has always been a great favorite here. Why MGM stuck him in a story like this is beyond me. I tried to put this one over, but failed dreadfully. Just ran this three days and managed to pay Metro a big price and will have enough left to pay the admission tax. Twenty years ago, I could fool the people once in a while, but not now. Played November 2-4.—Sam Brooks, Liberty Theatre, Haily, Idaho. Small town patronage.

DOWN IN SAN DIEGO: Bonita Granville, Ray McDonald—The picture had a lot of action, with some comedy, and the kids were known well enough so that my patrons got quite a kick out of this picture, allocated in the low group and plenty good enough for bargain night or the companion feature on a bargain night double-feature. Played November 14-15. —Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FEMININE TOUCH, THE: Rosalind Russell, Don Ameche, Kay Francis—This is about the world's worst, for me anyway. Almost lost my shirt. Few came and many didn't stay to see the finish, and did they look mad at me when they left. We have an up-to-date theatre and I have a good job, so may be able to pay my taxes and insurance. But I feel sorry for you small town boys who have to pay rent and don't have an extra job.—Sam Brooks, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho. Small town patronage.

HONKY TONK: Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Claire Trevor—Romantic drama and the answer to a showman's prayer. Without a doubt, Gable is the outstanding male star at the box office throughout the country today. This rates with "Sergeant York" as to box office value. Running time, 105 minutes. Played November 9-10.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Penna. General patronage.

HONKY TONK: Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Claire Trevor—See review on "Sun Valley Serenade," Twentieth Century-Fox.—Sam Brooks, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho. Small town patronage.

HONKY TONK: Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Claire Trevor—This is just what the doctor ordered for good business. It is right down Gable's alley and the exhibitors' too. Trevor shaded Miss Turner, who seemed to be a little too immature for the role she played.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HONKY TONK: Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Claire Treavor—A very good picture that drew exceptionally well in this small town, proving conclusively that movie patrons don't want the goody-goody kind of picture in this situation. Gable is right in the correct role, one that fits him like a glove, and with the support of Turner and Trevor, gives a real performance. It is one of Metro's graduated percentage things, but hardly worth more than flat rental. Played November 16-18.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

I'LL WAIT FOR YOU: Robert Sterling, Marsha Hunt, Paul Kelly—Double billed with "Hello Sucker" on a bargain night for one day. Receipts were disappointing. Besides, strong opposition with the U. S. Marine Band near by, a strong attraction at the High School Auditorium, and because it rained, failed to break even. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 4.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

LADY BE GOOD: Ann Sothern, Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, Lionel Barrymore—I can't say this wasn't a good picture, but it could have been improved a lot by cutting out about twenty minutes of slow and draggy scenes. Had several walk-outs and one place the crowd thought the picture was over and they started to leave. Some never came back. There was about twenty minutes of the show left when this happened. Played November 15-17.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Ann Rutherford, Lewis Stone —O. K. Played late. It may have been their best as MGM trailer said, but my people didn't think so. O. K. for Sunday change, however. Played November 23-24.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

LITTLE NELLIE KELLY: Judy Garland, George Murphy, Charles Winninger—Made to order for small situations and everyone who saw it praised it highly. We played it with the worst blizzard here in ten years so didn't get any of our rural crowd. Just made rental on film but glad we played it. We're going to bring it back when roads open. Played November 21-22.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town patronage.

MARRIED BACHELOR: Robert Young, Ruth Hussey—Rather thin material in this one. It just gets by as a program picture and that is all. They won't rave over it nor will they pan it, they just accept it as a date filler. However, let me do a little cheering for this miniature Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey, attractive and one of the best voices for recording we have had in some time.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THEY MET IN BOMBAY: Clark Gable, Rosalind Russell—I don't know why this didn't go over. Not up to Gable's standard. It starts out all right, but gets lost about half way. My patrons said that the story seemed impossible. Box office was way down. Running time, 93 minutes. Played November 16-18.—Peter Kavel, Campeau Theatre, Hamtramsk, Mich. General patronage.

WHEN LADIES MEET: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Herbert Marshall—Fair picture. We have had better from Metro. Miss Crawford has been up a long time, but she has no drawing power here any more.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WHEN LADIES MEET: Joan Crawford, Robert

Taylor, Greer Garson, Herbert Marshall—Thank goodness for Greer Garson, one bright spot in another MGM cocktail and innuendo flop. Not to mention the allocation. Pass it if you can. Played November 16-17.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

WHEN LADIES MEET: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Herbert Marshall—Not much to this, but a lot of gibberish. So another flop. I am afraid to advertise a picture these days. If something doesn't happen to help this business, I for one will be ready to close our house and get a few nights' sleep. Played November 9-11.—Sam Brooks, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Lynne Overman—This is a beautiful picture, well made, and will please all that see it. Vivid South Seas scenes are captivating and will compensate for lack of story material or plot. Overman splendid support in this type of picture. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 9.—D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kan. Small town patronage.

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Lynne Overman—Another dandy small-town picture for Paramount, who has really "dun right by our Del." this season. This is the kind of picture I hunt around for when the temperature, business and my enthusiasm have to stand on each other's shoulders in order to touch bottom. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 6-8.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

BUY ME THAT TOWN: Lloyd Nolan, Constance Moore—This comedy gangster pleased average business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Lynne Overman—Has everything that a showman would want to attract business, good cast, good performance, and a wonderful title. In fact, it did outstanding business and everyone pleased, including the checker. Running time, 82 minutes.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

FLYING BLIND: Richard Arlen, Jean Parker, Nils Asther, Marie Wilson—O. K. action picture. With good shorts, made a good program change. Played November 18-19.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

FORCED LANDING: Richard Arlen, Eva Gabor, Nils Asther—Program offering with a fair title. Double billed with "Raiders of the Desert," Universal, carrying the same male lead, and to my surprise, did a nice business, at least my audience did not complain, so who knows show business? Running time, 62 minutes. Played November 11.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

HOLD BACK THE DAWN: Charles Boyer, Olivia de Havilland, Paulette Goddard—Very fine. Did extra business. Give it all you have. Running time, 110 minutes. Played November 16-17.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

HOLD BACK THE DAWN: Charles Boyer, Olivia de Havilland, Paulette Goddard—This is a very good picture and the story told in such an unusual way is very interesting. All who came were well pleased and did not hesitate to voice their approval. Some of the most severe picture critics came out to see this one and the school teachers thought it very educational. Running time, 116 minutes. Played Novemmer 12-13.—Mrs. H. A. Proulx, Au Gres Theatre, Au Gres, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLD BACK THE DAWN: Charles Boyer, Olivia de Havilland, Paulette Goddard—Good love story which pleased the women but not the men. Business was above average. Running time, 115 minutes. Played November 19-20.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

I WANTED WINGS: Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Veronica Lake—One of the best in air pictures. This one takes you to Randolph Field, the flying school of the U. S. Army. You will enjoy it even though it is too long. Congratulations to Paramount for another top hti. 100 per cent entertainment all the way. Running time, 135 minutes. Played Novemhber 9-11.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

I WANTED WINGS: Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Veronica Lake—In spite of excess footage, picture would have gone over until the producer during his nightmare thought up the idea of injecting Veronica Lake, thereby effectually ruining the entire story. Running time, 132 minutes. Played October 29-30.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

LIFE WITH HENRY: Jackie Cooper, Leila Ernst, Eddie Bracken—See review on "Jungle Cavalcade," RKO Radio.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

MAD DOCTOR, THE: Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew, John Howard—MONSTER AND THE GIRL, THE: Ellen Drew, Robert Paige, Paul Lukas—We tried this double bill on Hollowe'en, but it didn't break any house records, proving a contention that most film salesmen are full of something. Our patrons evidently don't like their horror in double doses, and illustrated their dislike by staying away.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard, Edward Arnold—This was budding into a prosperous run but it wilted under a snow-storm. The majoriy of the few who came seemed to think it was better than "Caught in the Draft," but this is the opinion of only the "town-folks"; the rural patrons may have found all the dialogue a bit boring. There are plenty of laughs in it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 13-15.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—One of Bob Hope's funniest pictures and the business was good. That's about enough to say on any Bob Hope picture right now. He's hot! Played this with "Buy Me That Town," Paramount, with Lloyd Nolan, and the second feature was enjoyed as much as the first. The public likes Lloyd Nolan and he deserves a break in bigger parts. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 1-5.—Stanley Lambert, Venetian Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

ONE NIGHT IN LISBON: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Patricia Morison—A few patrons, including some ex-residents of Portugal, paid to see this. Every one departed without getting very excited over the juvenile antics of two performers who could do better work. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 5-6.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

PARSON OF PANAMINT, THE: Charlie Ruggles, Ellen Drew, Phil Terry—Above average western played to big bargain night crowd. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 18-19.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

PARSON OF PANAMINT, THE: Charlie Ruggles, Ellen Drew, Phil Terry—Did nice week-end business. Well worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PARSON OF PANAMINT, THE: Charlie Ruggles, Ellen Drew, Phil Terry—We certainly didn't knock them dead with this western, even with a campaign based on the Peter B. Kyne name. It was a good picture and we had no complaints, but it must have been the title that kept them away because the weather was perfect. Worth a date, if you can buy it right. We didn't.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SECRET OF THE WASTELANDS: William Boyd, Andy Clyde—Well received here. A little different from the ordinary run of westerns, but for the good. Running time, 66 minutes.—Al Eliason, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

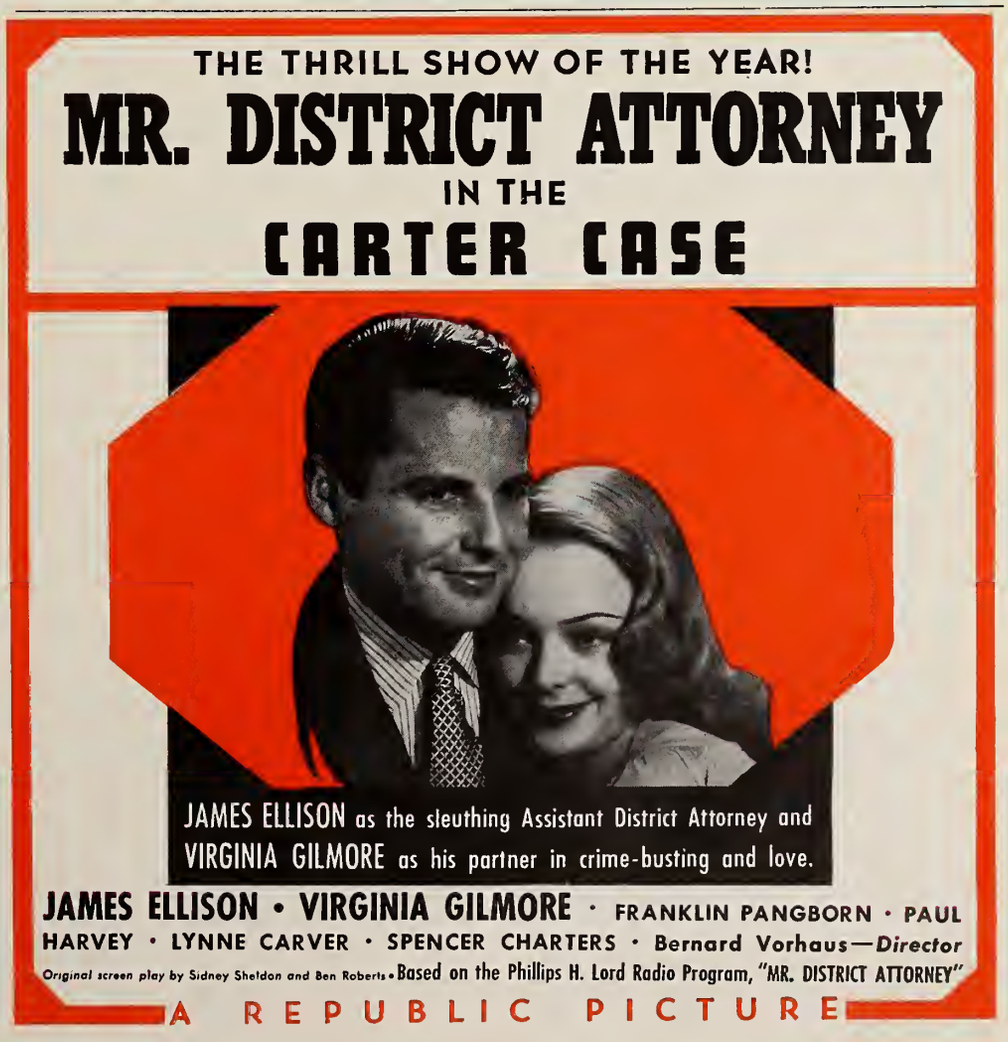
SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—A very fine picture that did business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WORLD PREMIERE: John Barrymore, Frances Farmer—John Barrymore is washed up as far as my clientele is concerned, and especially so after viewing this one. He has not done tnything of consequence in his last four pictures and why any company would keep bringing him out in this calibre of stuff is beyond me. If you show me this one on a double bill like I did, you only make them both appear bad. Running time, 67 minutes. Played November 12-13.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Penna. General patronage.

Producers Releasing

LONE RIDER IN GHOST TOWN, THE: George Houston—Houston well liked here. Al (Fuzzy) St. John carries comedy well. Prints from P. R. C. are terrible. Business better than average. Running time, 62 minutes. Played October 21-22.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

SOUTH OF PANAMA: Roger Pryor, Virginia Vale—Good program feature. Played November 21-22.—Raymon Paul, Sea Breeze Theatre, Beaufort, N. C. Small town patronage.



Republic

APACHE KID, THE: Don "Red" Barry—The best Barry picture we have played in some time. Good action, good story. The dog added some to this picture. Played November 14-15.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

ARKANSAS JUDGE: Weaver Bros. and Elviry—Did O. K. on one-day change. Beat several of the "A's" we have had this year. Played November 22.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

COUNTRY FAIR: Eddie Foy, Jr., June Clyde—My patrons evidently like corn because they came to see this picture and "Badlands of Dakota" on a double bill. We can sell a picture, if it has some well-known radio names in it and just a semblance of a story. It's okay for bargain night or week-end doubles.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

ICE-CAPADES: Dorothy Lewis, James Ellison, Jerry Colonna—The best one to come from Republic. Nice story, good cast, comedy and excellent skating scenes. Everyone enjoyed it. Jerry Colonna kept the patrons in a continuous uproar. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 14-15.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES AT BAY: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—Good western drama which pleased the week-end trade. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Nov. 21-22.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RIDIN' ON A RAINBOW: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee—All of Autry's pictures draw. I don't know why. Little Mary Lee stole this one. Played October 14-15.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

SUNSET IN WYOMING: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Gene Autry is picking up here and his last two pictures have drawn better than average Friday and Saturday business. Patrons like him with Smiley Burnette, and while they are not masterpieces, there is a lot of entertainment that satisfies the small towners and farmers who make up our audience. Book it and play it; you can't go wrong. Played November 14-15.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ALONG THE RIO GRANDE: Tim Holt—Not the draw "Cassidy" is, but satisfied our western lovers. —Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

ALONG THE RIO GRANDE: Tim Holt—A western that was used as the second feature along with "The Big Store" and seemed to satisfy a fair-sized crowd. No complaints and few comments. Running time, 64 minutes. Played Novemher 14-15.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

ANNABEL TAKES A TOUR: Lucille Ball, Jack Oakie—Very mediocre entertainment. A lot of adverse criticism on this one.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GIRL, A GUY AND A GOB, A: George Murphy, Lucille Ball, Edmond O'Brien. Played second run to satisfactory week-end business. Opened it up with Sea Cadets hand.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SUNNY: Anna Neagle, Ray Bolger, John Carroll—Played it second run. Think it very fine piece of entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

THEY MEET AGAIN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett, Rohert Baldwin—Double featured with "Affectionately Yours," and did not gross film rental. The "Dr. Christian" series has done fair in the past, but they did not turn out for this one, and the title was poor. Running time, 67 minutes. Played November 18.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

TOM, DICK AND HARRY: Ginger Rogers, George Murphy, Burgess Meredith—This is about the screwiest picture I've ever witnessed. Plenty of laughs, but no point to it. Man, is that Burgess Meredith an actor? Average business. Played October 16-17.—E L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BELLE STARR: Randolph Scott, Gene Tierney, Dana Andrews—Good business when considering the fact that college was closed. This is not as wild and woolly as the ads might have you believe, hut it is a good picture that my crowd liked. Ran it with "Our Wife." The color is okay in "Belle Starr," but why waste it on a production in which three-quarters of the action takes place in dark rooms or outdoors at night? Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 22.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

BELLE STARR: Randolph Scott, Gene Tierney, Dana Andrews—A good picture that did average, maybe a little better, on our hest time. The color was very good, the cast did some fine work and my patrons seemed to enjoy the picture immensely. It can be bought within reason and will prove profitable, unless you cater to the high-brows. They wouldn't like it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BELLE STARR: Randolph Scott, Gene Tierney, Dana Andrews—Suitable for preferred time, but best adapted to two-day run of three changes; in other words, second-class playing time. Will not gross as well as "Western Union," but is fair entertainment. Theatres in the middle west can exploit this one because of the locale and the historic interest; others will find it hard to do. Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 19.—D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kan. Small town patronage.

NEW CONTRIBUTOR TO DEPARTMENT

A new contributor reported to the What the Picture Did For Me Department this week, and five others resumed after a lapse of some time. The new contributor is:

PETER KAVEL, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich.

The conrtibutors who resumed after an absence are:

A. E. ANDREWS, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Penna.

PAUL T. MITCHELL, Mitchell Theatre, Barbourville, Ky.

IRA SMITH, Breeze Theatre, Beaufort, S. C.

SAM BROOKS, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho.

D. E. BURNETT, State Theatre, Larned, Kan.

Read the reports from these and other contributors in the adjoining columns.

MAN AT LARGE: Marjorie Weaver, George Reeves—I got just what I expected from this one. No business; lost plenty. Why did I play it? I had to. Couldn't get rid of it nohow. Many regrets for letting my patrons down on Thanksgiving. I wouldn't even consider this feature good for double billing. If I had to do over, I'd pay and not play it. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Novemher 19-20.—Mrs. H. A. Proulx, Au Gres Theatre, Au Gres, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

SLEEPERS WEST: Lloyd Nolan, Lynn Bari, Mary Beth Hughes—A lot of fine comments on this one. Played on a dual hill with "Sunny."—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SUN VALLEY SERENADE: Sonja Henie, John Payne, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra, Milton Berle—Very good. In fact, we have had two good pictures in the last six months, namely, "Honky Tonk" and "Sun Valley Serenade." When we get a good picture, I don't seem to have any trouble getting people in the house.—Sam Brooks, Liherty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho. Small town patronage.

SUN VALLEY SERENADE: Sonja Henie, John Payne, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra, Milton Berle—A good picture that took an awful whipping on account of roads and weather, hut Fox says I can have it back, so will have a chance to recover some of the loss. "Sun Valley" gets lots of advertising and your railroad will help you sell this picture. Buy it, sell it and you won't he sorry.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WESTERN UNION: Robert Young, Randolph Scott, Virginia Gilmore—We used this re-run in place of one we didn't want to play and did average or hetter on our mid-week bargain nights. The print we got from Kansas City was in excellent shape and we were satisfied with the return engagement.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WILD GEESE CALLING: Henry Fonda, Joan Bennett, Warren William—Business was pretty good. Picture seemed to please the majority. Don't expect too much as the story seems somewhat disconnected at times. Played November 20-21.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

YANK IN THE R. A. F., A: Tyrone Power, Betty Grahle—You can put out the SRO sign on this one if you play up the title and stars properly. Don't over-estimate the pre-sold theory, but get out and sell the public that this isn't a war picture, but a fine romance with a splendid cast. John Sutton will cause a few flutters in the audience, and here's predicting that he will cause more as time goes on in future pictures. This picture will please all and will help make up that deficit.—D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kan. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BROADWAY LIMITED: Victor McLaglen, Marjorie Woodworth, Dennis O'Keefe—Another from United Artists that did not come up to expectations and not worth the rental asked. Double featured with "World Premiere," a Paramount picture that should never have been released. Business was at a low ebb and thoso that did come resented it. Can you blame them? I for one do not. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 12-13.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP: Martha Scott, William Gargan—Another late run on a great show. Miss Scott's portrayal was classical and the picture itself is tops in every department. But from a financial standpoint, it was a total loss and then some. But it's a pleasure to run a picture like this. Just once in a while. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 17-19.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Jack Oakie, Paulette Goddard—If your patrons don't like dictators (and who does?) then this picture is right in the groove. Comprised of a cast of Hollywood's super-funnymen, Charlie Chaplin, Jack Oakie, Billy Gilbert, et al., as well as the refreshing beauty of Paulette Goddard, the film sets forth a humorous version of the dictatorships. Yet, there is also a poignant appeal to humanity in general, which balances the picture and makes it most timely. Should he a big hit with the Chaplin fans. Running time, 126 minutes. Played Novemher 22.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

TANKS A MILLION: William Tracy, James Gleason, Noah Beery, Jr.—Just a glorified two-reel comedy. This is the first of Hal Roach's streamliners, but there will have to be more meat to the halance of them if they are going to do any good at the box office. The cost of the shots to make a schedule is more than the feature.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THIEF OF BAGDAD, THE: Conrad Veidt, Sahu, June Duprez—In spite of beautiful color and great photography, the attendance for this was only fair. The adults found it too far-fetched, and the kids just weren't interested. Maybe I played it too late. Running time, 109 minutes. Played November 10-12.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alherta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

APPOINTMENT FOR LOVE: Charles Boyer, Margaret Sullavan—No husiness on this one. A good feature, but the ladies just wouldn't come. We drew mostly men. Why, I don't know, as it's a woman's picture. Could it be the wives sent their husbands to get a little of the Boyer technique? If so, the poor gals are out of luck, as there wasn't any. Running time, 89 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

BADLANDS OF DAKOTA: Rohert Stack, Ann Rutherford, Richard Dix—If you want a picture that has a good cast of outdoor favorites and that really travels, with just lots of action, then huy and hook this picture. Advertise the outlaws and the gunmen who act as law enforcement officers, then sit back. You'll do husiness.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BLACK CAT, THE: Basil Rathhone, Hugh Herhert, Bela Lugosi—Played on special Owl Show. O. K. chills and murder and "woo-woo laughs." They liked it. Played Novemher 15.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

FLAME OF NEW ORLEANS, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Bruce Cahot, Roland Young—I have yet to see Dietrich make us money.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HELLO, SUCKER: Hugh Herhert, Tom Brown, Peggy Moran—Failed to draw on a double bill with "I'll Wait for You" at bargain prices. Opposition might have had something to do with it. Business way below normal. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 4.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

IT'S A DATE: Deanna Durbin, Kay Francis, Walter Pidgeon—Fair picture which failed to draw here. Print old and on inserted replacement film sound terrible and picture out of focus. This is common fault with the older pictures and one that is impossible to correct at the theatre. Played November 14-15.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN-MADE MONSTER: Lionel Atwill, Lon Chaney, Jr., Anne Nagel—The kind the parents will give you Billy H. for running, and yet dates have to be filled, but it would be better to he dark than run this type. Universal can't forget "Frankenstein." They are always trying to repeat, and they show dumbness for doing it and I was dumb for running it, so that evens up.—A. E. Hancock. Columhia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

NEVER GIVE A SUCKER AN EVEN BREAK: W. C. Fields, Gloria Jean—Gave away turkeys to get them in to see this turkey. The last 10 minutes were far better than the first 60 minutes. Running time, 70 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

RAIDERS OF THE DESSERT: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—See review on "Forced Landing," Paramount.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

SING ANOTHER CHORUS: Johnny Downs, Jane Frazee, Mischa Auer—Did not draw and neither did it please. Jane Frazee was not liked. The entire production was too amateurish. Played October 12-13.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

SOUTH OF TAHITI: Brian Donlevy, Broderick Crawford, Andy Devine—Had a nice run on this. This Maria Montez gal will give Lamour a run for her sarong any day now; she's good in this. This type of show always appeals to my farm trade and they always like 'em. A good mid-week or Friday-Saturday show in any league. Running time, 75 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Jaynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

THIS WOMAN IS MINE: Franchot Tone, John Carroll, Walter Brennan, Carol Bruce—Mediocre fare, marred by Bruce, who is decidedly not ready for starring parts. She is very amateurish. It would not hurt to let it lay. The reaction to it here was unfavorable.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Wainwright-DuWorld

CRIMSON CIRCLE, THE: Noah Beery—Played with "Design for Murder," World Pictures. Horror shows go over big here. The patrons eat this kind of stuff up. As far as the story goes, there isn't very much to say. Neither one of them makes any sense. But it isn't story that they want; it's murder and mystery. So they come by the dozens. If they go for horror, book it. Played October 5-7.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

AFFECTIONATELY YOURS: Merle Oberon, Dennis Morgan, Rita Hayworth—Cannot say that I enjoyed this one very much. Used it as the top offering on a double bill with "They Meet Again," and business was way under par. My public did not go for this combination or the titles, which mean nothing. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 18.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

BAD MEN OF MISSOURI: Dennis Morgan, Jane Wyman, Wayne Morris—A good action picture that got them in on Friday and Saturday. Good title and good story. Played November 7-8.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

BRIDE CAME C. O. D., THE: James Cagney, Bette Davis—A swell comedy that pleased everyone. Business good. Played November 1-3.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

BRIDE CAME C. O. D., The: James Cagney, Bette Davis—Played this one a little late; however, it showed to a fair-sized crowd and most of the patrons were satisfied. Personally, I did not think it was any too hot and could get little enjoyment out of it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 16-17.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

DIVE BOMBER: Errol Flynn, Fred MacMurray, Ralph Bellamy—A good picture that was much too long and could have been helped by the use of a sharp pair of shears. The color and the cast were very good—in fact, exceptional—but we had quite a few complaints because the picture went 'round and 'round and the only favorable remarks came from the kids, who were aviation-minded. We did a very good business on the picture and would recommend it for box-office grosses.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SQUADRON: Ronald Reagan—Good picture and good business. Will please the airplane fans. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 16-17.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MALTESE FALCON, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor, Gladys George—Finest mystery ever made. Lots of action. Enjoyed by good crowd. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 20-21.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

MANPOWER: Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Dietrich, George Raft—A very strong drama about the daredevils of the power line, and with a strong cast who put it over beautifully. While it did not register too outstanding at the box-office, it was fair and the audience enjoyed it. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 21-22.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

MEET JOHN DOE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Edward Arnold—A swell picture that missed at the box-office. It is hard to explain why this picture missed fire, unless it was the title. Played November 4-6.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

ONE FOOT IN HEAVEN: Fredric March, Martha Scott—This is no doubt one of the finest pictures that I have ever played on the screen. I was greatly surprised in this picture, as I don't care much for Martha Scott after seeing her in "Our Town" and "Cheers for Miss Bishop," but she is 100 per cent O. K. in this fine picture. As for the acting of Fredric March, you had better watch out for the time to pick the Academy Winner in 1942. If Fredric March keeps up this fine work, then I don't see how they can overlook him. This is a picture that I recommend everyone to see. It looks like Vitagraph just won't quit this year. Well, I say more power to them, because they are certainly making 100 per cent better features this year than they did last year. Played November 23-24.—Paul T. Mitchell, Mitchell Theatre, Barbourville, Ky. Small town and rural patronage.

SERGEANT YORK: Gary Cooper, Joan Leslie—As far as quality is concerned, it is a top-ranking picture and the cast are all good. Sold for extended playing time at advanced admissions, with a 50-50 split, and the same reaction as when we played "Gone With the Wind." Business preceding was down, also afterward. You check your same preferred playing time that was given to "York," and you find that it has not made any money, over what the same three days have done preceding, on a good program picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SERGEANT YORK: Gary Cooper, Joan Leslie—A natural for our little town, but, in my opinion, will do excellent business anywhere, any time. Did about 400 per cent business here and pleased 100 per cent. Many came back to see it the second time. Running time, 133 minutes. Played November 17-19.—Ira Smith, Breeze Theatre, Beaufort, S. C. Small town patronage.

SERGEANT YORK: Gary Cooper, Joan Leslie—Outstanding in every department. The increase in price of admission made no difference; consequently, business was way above expectations. Should be another 'G. W. T. W." Don't be afraid of it. Running time, 134 minutes. Played November 2-3.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

SHINING VICTORY: James Stephenson, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Donald Crisp—A very fine piece of entertainment. No big draw, but entertaining. Contacted the doctors on this.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

STRAWBERRY BLONDE, THE: James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland, Rita Hayworth, Alan Hale—An all-around picture for enjoyment. Rita Hayworth, Olivia de Havilland, James Cagney, Alan Hale, George Tobias and Jack Carson are featured in this entertaining romance of the Gay 90's, and the customer gets his money's worth, you may be sure. Really a fine picture for all the folks. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 20.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

World Pictures

DESIGN FOR MURDER: Manning Whiley, Barbara Everest, Michael Drake—See review on "The Crimson Circle," Wainwright-Du World.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ACHE IN EVERY STAKE, AN: Stooges—This is one of the funniest of the Stooges comedies, especially where Curly is shaving the ice. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

COMMUNITY SING, NO. 2: Current Hits—Well received. Got a few songs started.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FROM NUTS TO SOUP: Cinescope—Professor Oakes demonstrates some of his wacky inventions. Not bad. Running time, 9 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

IT HAPPENED TO CRUSOE: Fables—A good cartoon.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LOVE AT FIRST FRIGHT: El Brendel—Very entertaining.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 1: (Series 21)—Well received. Always popular.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WILL DEMOCRACY SURVIVE?: International Forum—Although well done and thought-provoking, the students around here claim they have serious study all day and want straight entertainment when they come to the movies. That idea will have to influence future dating of this series, good as it is. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BATTLE, THE: Miniatures—Too many like it in the news and shorts. Very short on interest to my patrons.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

FLYING BEAR: Technicolor Cartoons—Good cartoon.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

FOOTBALL THRILLS OF 1940: Pete Smith Specialties—Plenty O. K. Ran it when high school team was present and they ate it up. Even football haters would get a kick out of it.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

FOOTBALL THRILLS OF 1940: Pete Smith Specialties—Very good, but the local high school had this on 16 mm. about 10 days before we could get it dated and that hurt business because we featured this short in our ads.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

GOOSE GOES SOUTH, THE: Technicolor Cartoons—Pretty fair color cartoon with a few laughs.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town patronage.

HOBBIES: Passing Parade—A good short that was worth a playdate.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

HOME ON THE RANGE: MGM Cartoons—Here is a color cartoon that will delight everyone.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town patronage.

LITTLE CESARIO: Technicolor Cartoons—One of the best cartoons in color to come from MGM. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

LITTLE MOLE, THE: Technicolor Cartoons—Nice little color cartoon with a moral.—Walter R. Pyle. Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town patronage.

MRS. LADYBUG: Technicolor Cartoons—Good color cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OLD NEW MEXICO: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—This one up to usual high standard of FitzPatrick Traveltalks.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

TRIUMPH WITHOUT DRUMS: Miniature—Entertaining one-reeler tells of the efforts of Harvey Wiley to get the pure food act passed, and his ultimate success. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WHISPERS: Passing Parade—Another excellent reel by John Nesbitt's Passing Parade. The story of how a whispered untruth can upset a whole nation. Play it.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

BEAUTY AND THE BEACH: Headliners—Not just another fill-in, but a real addition to any program. Good music in a quaint setting.—D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kan. Small town patronage.

BREEZY LITTLE BEARS: Paragraphics—Here is something different! If you haven't made the acquaintance of these three mischievous cubs before, then do so now. Their antics are almost human and your patrons, both young and old, will get many a hearty laugh from these inquisitive bears. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

IN A PET SHOP: Speaking of Animals—Another of the "Speaking of Animals" series. Good entertainment; will please them all and will build as a series. Play this one.—D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kan. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE, THE: Fascinating Journeys—One of the finest color reels I have run this year. One you can advertise and not have to hide when they come out. —C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Still the best newsreel on the market and still giving us sports, fashions, etc., not all war and speeches everyone heard a month ago over the radio.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre. Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town patronage.

POPEYE MEETS RIP VAN WINKLE: Popeye the Sailor—About on a par with the other Popeye cartoons. Not worth the price that Paramount sticks on them, in this spot.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

PROBLEM PAPPY: Popeye the Sailor—Average Popeye cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SUPERMAN: Color Cartoon—This runs true to form with the comic strips, and with a little plugging will bring in the young 'uns. Wonderful cartooning and sure fire box-office for kids. Don't play on preferred itme, but build up weak dates with this extra. It's worth the extra dough. Running time, 11 minutes. —D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kan. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

DONALD'S VACATION: Walt Disney Cartoons—They all like Donald and in this one he really is good. He goes out into the woods and it makes a good cartoon. Running time, 8 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

FIRE CHIEF: Walt Disney Cartoons—These are O.K., but don't let anyone tell you they will bring a dime extra to your box office. Running time, 8 minutes.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE, NO. 10: Louis Bromfield—This is the last of this subject I will run, definitely and finally. Imagine RKO allowing Bromfield to pull a crack like he pulled in this short. It seemed that Bromfield was familiar with the photos of all the old time movie stars whose pictures they were showing. Fadiman remarked about this. Bromfield said "Yes, I knew all the old movie stars. I used to go to the movies when they were good." Did my patrons give me the Haw-Haw. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

IT HAPPENED ALL NIGHT: Edgar Kennedy—Some laughed, some didn't, so use your own judgment.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, No. 3: "Sailors With Wings" Very good, but we got it with "Dive Bomber" and there was just too much of the same thing and this short had everything in it that the feature claimed. Book it away from an aviation feature, or suffer like we did.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre. Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, No. 13: "Peace—By Adolf Hitler" Very good and very interesting. It fits in with the daily news events. Draws extra business. Running time, 19 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre. Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

MR. DUCK STEPS OUT: Walt Disney Cartoons—This cartoon is just what the younger folks go for. Comedy and jitterbugs. Donald and his girl friend are good. Running time, 8 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

PICTURE PEOPLE SERIES: Have played three of this series and they seem to get better with each issue. First one was a little slow, but the second and third have made up for it. Running time, 10 minutes. —Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

QUAIL QUEST: Sportscopes—Here is a very fine hunting short. We played it a week before the season and had some comments on it. Some stayed to see it twice and some asked what time it was on, so they wouldn't miss it. Running time, 9 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ICE CARNIVAL, THE: Terrytoons—A good cartoon.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

ICE CARNIVAL, THE: Terrytoons—Not so hot. This goes for about 90 per cent of Fox shorts.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

ONE MAN NAVY, THE: Terrytoons—Fair color cartoon.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

SOLDIERS OF THE SKY: Adventures Newscameraman—This will be very reassuring to the masses of people who think the U. S. cannot defend itself. Should be seen by all Americans and will be appreciated by all who see it.—D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kan. Small town patronage.

Universal

NORTHERN NEIGHBORS: Variety Views—Very good subject. Beautiful color. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CARIOCA SERENADERS: Melody Masters Bands —This one-reeler has good dancing and rhumba music. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HENRY BUSSE AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A short that will please. Henry Busse, king of the trumpet, and his boys collaborate to produce a tuneful reel of old-time numbers, "Hot Lips," "Wang Wang Blues," etc. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HERE COMES THE CAVALRY: Technicolor Specials—The best yet of this series. Advertise it.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

ROOKIE REVUE: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Very clever color cartoon that failed to draw the laughs here that it should. I do not know why as this Merrie Melodies series is a favorite in this town. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

TANKS ARE COMING, THE: Technicolor Specials —Very good two reeler in color, with George Tobias furnishing good comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WHITE SAILS: Hollywood Novelties—Just a filler. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous
Dazel Roadshows

IN THE BANK: Charlie Chaplin—This is one of the old timers. Reprinted and sound added, it is brought back for the enjoyment of today's patrons. It's good and they like it. Not as bad as you might think. Running time, 13 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

FIRST LINE OF DEFENSE: U. S. Navy Recruit —We had first run on the newest navy reel and I think it's the best. It tells about our two ocean navy and has some good battle scenes. This reel is gratis from the Navy Dept. Running time, 11 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

Serial
Universal

SEA RAIDERS: Dead End Kids—First chapter got off to a swell start. Nothing like serials to boost my week-end business. Universal has the best.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

The Award—All Things to All Men

Now that the eigth consecutive year of the Quigley Awards is winding up, and the ninth all ready to spring, this is as good a time as any to reproduce, in part, a letter from one of the newer members about the Competitions, to follow it with some observations of our own. Sez he:

"Too often for my patience to contend with (but not uttered by the majority) I hear the repeated insinuation, 'What the hell is a Quigley Award? Does your boss raise your salary every time you get one?' And that insinuation, Mike, is what prompts me to write this letter.

"No, I don't recall a manager getting a raise for receiving a Quigley Award. But, believe me, even citations help the progress of a manager immeasurably. Everyone knows that a Citation follows a campaign and, for each campaign sent in to you, an alert manager or publicist is behind the campaign.

"I don't mean that a manager is not alert just because he does not inform MOTION PICTURE HERALD of his activity. What I do mean is that the Awards are given for outstanding work, which shows ability and activity. And to have your name placed above other managers through these Awards means plenty, believe me.

"Most managers and publicists know this. That is why you are continually bombarded with campaigns. . . ."

The sentiments of the member are gratifyingly in accord with the important segment of Round Table opinion that has made the Awards so influential a factor in managerial progress. These men cherish the significance of the Competitions. They know of its true values. Let us then address ourselves to those less informed.

"What the hell is a Quigley Award?" A Quigley Award, gentlemen, is a state of mind, an expression of temperament, an opportunity to get from where you are to where you want to go.

"Does your boss raise your salary every time you get one?" The Awards were not conceived to bring about immediate raises. The Competitions were not built that-a-way. They were meant, first, to spotlight the go-getter who was not going. They won him a deserved recognition. And by that token, they did win him raises, promotions. That seems to have come about naturally, if not immediately.

It came about because the Award carried no strings, because the man in the field adopted it for his own. It came about because his work was judged impartially by neutral industry heads far removed from his boundaries. It came about because his efforts were hailed by leaders in New York and Hollywood. And it came about because so many of the winners proved their fitness to be listed among the ablest of showmen.

"What the hell is a Quigley Award?" It is—all things to all men.

To some, it is a personal incentive to consistent effort, to a self-measured goal. To others, it means pure joy of competition with brother-managers. Another group sees in it an honest and unequalled chance for advancement. To those who shout "What's in it for me?"—a Quigley Award means nothing at all.

ABOUT HOUSEKEEPING

Dropping into one of the nicer "neighborhoods" of an evening to catch a show, your reporter was slightly dismayed to note a lapse in the theatre's otherwise efficient servicing—in this instance, the men's room. First, it was the towel machine that was not functioning. Then, and worse, tissue containers were empty. Whoever was supposed to be in charge of the routine checkup just fell down. To which effect some of the inconvenienced customers spoke up.

It makes little difference to the ticket-buyer that these things occur infrequently. He has been educated to a high degree of theatre service and any deviation from perfection becomes occasion for complaint.

ROUND TABLE IN PICTURES

Artie Cohn, Warners' Roosevelt, Philadelphia, meets Fredric March and uses photo in special screen trailer, lobby display and local papers ahead of "One Foot in Heaven".

For Tarzan's Secret Treasure" at the Madison, in Peoria, Len Worley arranged special screening for MGM's travelling King Tarz, as noted.

With the University of Chicago one block from the Frolic Theatre, Ben Cohn creates attractive Majorette display ahead of "Harmon of Michigan".

Tied to local Fire Prevention Week, Mel Blieden at the State, Anderson, Ind., promoted lobby display of various fire-fighting equipment.

Buck Jones, Monogram's Western star, inaugurates the Hollywood season of Christmas festivities when he greets Santa Claus as the latter arrived at the Lockheed Airport. Tieup was between TWA, Monogram and one of Hollywood's leading department stores.

Mine Towns Honor "Valley" Opening

For the dual opening of "How Green Was My Valley" in Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, at the Comerford Theatres, Managers Tom Killeen and Bill Walsh working with the Hal Horne forces organized a comprehensive campaign aimed at the big percentage of Welsh miners in that area. The fact that the double date was a pre-release showing was made much of by the newspapers, especially with editorials in the leading dailies, in addition to their advance publicity for a solid 10 days. Other press attentions were had in the Anthracite News, leading miners' union paper.

Headed by the Mayors and including community leaders was the sponsoring committee which opened up many avenues of promotion to make the openings a civic event. These proceedings included a dual broadcast from both theatres over Mutual, the Mayors greeting each other and a concert given by the famous Welsh chorus. Another featured promotion was a search for the "Angharad of the Valley," based on the Maureen O'Hara character in the picture. Success of the stunt stemmed from the fact that there are many Welsh girls in the area, the winner being the guest of the Mayor at the opening.

"Father and Son" Angle Stressed

Cooperation from the "Cambrians" and "Junior Cambrians" local Welsh societies was concentrated on telephone calls to their friends throughout the area. Sunday schools and churches in the district were urged to use the theme of the picture for Sunday school lessons. The Kiwanis Club dedicated their weekly luncheon to the "father-and-son" angle emphasized in the picture and bannered buses cruised the area within a 50-mile radius.

The openings were in Hollywood style, choruses of singers in Welsh costume singing outside the theatres, and giving added concerts inside before the picture started. Theatre banners covered the public squares and further attention was brought to the premiere by a series of trailers in all Comerford theatres throughout the area.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Burke Ties Flying Club To "Parachute" Stunt

Members of the Branford, Ontario, Flying Club worked with Bill Burke to advance his advertising on "Parachute Battalion" at the F P C Brant, the aviators dropping imprinted card parachutes all over the city during the rush hour the day ahead. In exchange, Burke plugged the Club on reverse side of parachute. Further attention was directed to the showing with a street parade to the theatre of the local boys' band, the procession spotted with theatre banners. Music of the band in front of the house was picked up on a lobby quiz program. Burke announcing the event to the audiences.

For the initiation of his "Captain Marvel" serial, Bill reports the successful formation of a kid club, distributing regular membership cards to be punched at each Saturday matinee showing. Those showing a perfect attendance at 11 sessions are to be admitted free of charge on the twelfth, and last.

SOME LATE HIGHLIGHTS

What with the power shortage in that sector and resultant rulings by the O.P.M. restricting theatre display lighting, Gus Coats, of the Tiger, Auburn, Ala., tells how he got from under, especially for the information of others similarly affected. He writes the theatre is allowed only 150 watts under the marquee. Upright and attraction signs must be darkened. So the Round Tabler dug up a Delco lighting system, put it out front where it could be seen, built a little house around the juicer as weather protection.

The Delco goes "chug-chug" out loud and folks come running to see what goes on. On the house they see: "Gus Coats' Power House—There's A Better Show Inside". The curious accept the suggestion. The result is a smart ballyhoo, and a solution of a problem that threatened to affect business. The local paper told about it in a page-one box.

HARMON MAKES "PERSONAL" FOR WHEELER ON "HARMON"

Getting the great Tom Harmon to make a personal appearance with "Harmon of Michigan", for the opening day of the engagement, and for expenses only, is currently reported by 1940 Quigley Grand Awards winner, Ray Wheeler, at the B & K Granada, South Bend, Ind. Working with Jack Thomas, Columbia exploiteer, the Round Tabler called the star in Detroit and persuaded him to come over. Upon his acceptance, the showmen got busy and rigged up quite a publicity schedule in the papers and on the radio.

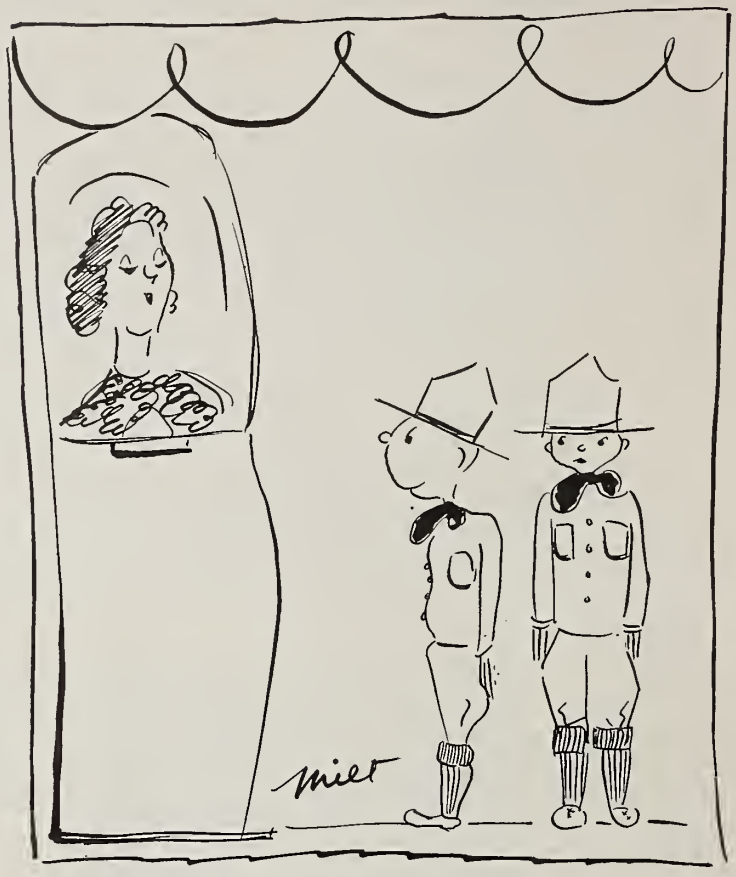
Feature of the promotion was attendance of the Notre Dame football team to meet the star and view the picture, a first-time, reports Wheeler that the team turned out in a body to help the buildup at a local theatre. Stars of the Irish pigskin squad took a bow with Harmon from the stage. Another highlight of the event was a banquet in honor of the visitor by the local Michigan Alumni Club to which were also invited the coaches and captains of the South Bend high school teams. The press, of course, gave the promotion a lot of space in the drama, sports and radio pages.

"DOC" TWEDT STAGES UNEXPECTED BALLYHOO FOR "TEXAS"

Out in Manly, Iowa, where the corn grows tall, and his beard grows long, "Doc" Twedt, the effervescent operator of the Lido planted on old-fashioned hitching post out front with a sign: "All Cowboys riding in to see 'Texas' Sunday matinee, admitted free". He then arranged with a father-and-son combination of expert riders from nearby to come on down, dressed in their go-to-meetin' cowboy outfits. The original idea outgrew itself, when to Twedt's surprise, the duo turned up with four additional riders, all in costume, and put on a ridin' show in front of the theatre.

Within a half-hour, one of the biggest crowds ever noted locally gathered to take in the show. And immediately after, packed the house for the matinee. "Doc" notes the entire cost was six passes for the riders, 15 cents worth of nails for the hitchin' post. He did the sign himself.

PORTRAIT PAINTER WORKS IN WINDOW FOR "SUNDOWN"



Chancing upon a portrait painter, lately from Hollywood, Manager Rodney Toups, working with Bob Wood, United Artists exploiteer, engaged the artist to paint an oil of Gene Tierney in a prominent window, as a buildup for the "Sundown" date at Loew's State, New Orleans. The portrait was of the star costumed as in the picture, and since the painter worked on for three days ahead of the opening, about everyone in town had a peek at it and the theatre poster alongside. When completed, the oil was framed and planted in another prominent window for added attentions, which was duly noted in the press. Style accessories named after the picture were featured in windows of leading shops and the recent "Life" cover of the star was displayed with credit snipes on newsstands.

"Honky Tonk" Co-op Herald Attracts on Anthony Date

Using the love scene stills from the press-book showing Gable in previous of his pictures, Bob Anthony used the photos to tie in eight of his leading merchants on a co-op herald contest for "Honky Tonk" at Schine's Piqua, Piqua, Ohio. Cost was shared by the stores, the heralds were distributed house-to-house by the participating merchants.

Contest was on window-shopping, each participating store displaying one of the Gable stills. Entrants were requested to visit each window and in the numbered spaces provided on the herald, set down the titles of the pictures represented and name of the woman star in each close-up. Merchant copy bordered the herald and guest prizes were awarded first 20 winners.

Lou Hart Turns Reporter, Lands His Own Story

Continuing his success on military promotions tied to local boys in the various services, Lou Hart hits the jack-pot again, this time for "Parachute Battalion" at Schine's Hippodrome, Gloversville. Hart has developed a fat publicity medium for these dates by digging up locals serving in the different branches, using them for lengthy news stories in which the theatre also bows in, of course. When the staff reporters are not available for this extra work, Hart takes over on his own, as he did recently.

The Schiner discovered that three Gloversville boys were "para-troops", attached to parachute battalions which worked in the picture. Sensing the news value of the slant, Hart tried to sell it to the publisher and was turned down for lack of reporters to cover. So Lou went to work, interviewed the soldiers' folks, borrowed snap shots, scrap books of their army adventures, wrote the yarn and well enough so that the paper ran it "as is" and to more than a half-column including the proper theatre credits. Tied in with the publicity was a series of teaser one-column ads.

For outside attentions, Lou swung a giant parachute and dummy from one of the tall buildings, then tried to sell the authorities on permitting a parachute jump between halves of a high school game. They wouldn't go, so Hart promoted the show into the football program to provide for this extra coverage for the coming date.

"Golden Years Party" Aids "Smilin' Through"

Twenty Evansville, Ind., couples married 50 years or more, accepted invitations to a "Golden Years Party" put on by Harry Reisinger for the date on "Smilin' Through" at Loew's, the guests rounded up through a three-day newspaper promotion. Coupon was run daily for those eligible to fill out with names and addresses and to note whether or not they would need transportation, which the Loewman had promoted through Yellow Cab.

Brought together for lunch, also promoted at a downtown hotel, the guests afterwards were taken to the theatre to see the picture, which was the reason for the gathering.

USE 'POST' PROMOTION FOR "NEVER GET RICH"

Extra aids employed by theatremen on Columbia's "You'll Never Get Rich", and put through by the David Lipton ad forces, are magazine promotions on Rita Hayworth, principally a full-color page in a recent Saturday Evening Post showing the star in a beauty drill series of six poses. Tie-ins for the date are being made with drug stores and cosmetic counters using reproductions of the layouts for display.

Towns Compete In "Amateur" Series

Having staged amateur shows successfully in other situations where he had served before coming to Rock Rapids, Ia., Roy H. Metcalfe of the Rapids Theatre in that spot recently instituted the same idea not only to stimulate immediate grosses, but to call attention to his coming attractions. The Round Tabler's situation at first was a bit difficult, since his admissions were higher than theatres in the area from which he drew. Then, too, the schools, PTA and similar organizations had scheduled many activities which were competing with the theatreman's endeavors.

Metcalfe's persistence finally got him a majority of the school superintendents in the 15 surrounding towns, to cooperate in a 15-week series of amateur nights. It was agreed that each of the nights would be named for a different community and that the prize monies would go for the various club funds of other participating organizations. In addition to the preliminary awards, the three best acts of each show were offered a further opportunity to appear in the finals.

Competitive Spirit Engendered

The idea has taken on, building with each week, the various communities vying with each other to do something bigger and different. As an instance, the theatreman reports one town putting on a program with 25 locals, feature of the act being 16 members of the women's club, some dressed as men, executing an old-fashioned square dance. Another night drew a big crowd with a men's fashion revue, the participants displaying late styles from bathing suits to formal wear. Included in the programs by the theatreman were acts that would call attention to the following week's program. At the men's style show, for instance, one of the performers was costumed as "Charley's Aunt" for that date. On another occasion, to publicize "Lil' Abner," Roy promoted one of the clubs to organize a "Dog Patch" quartette, dressed in the comic strip style.

The draw thus obtained from the surrounding communities was stimulated by publicity in the local papers, who from time to time used photos of the various stage activities which featured their eitizenry. The buildup has been steady, Metcalfe having the assistance of his wife to act as commentator at the fashion show and other stage presentations. Roy recommends the idea for adaptation in situations with many smaller towns in the drawing area. He finds the competition thus engendered between the communities, brings satisfactory box-office results.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Tickell Gathers Bottles

Hearing a broadcast asking for medicine bottles for the Canadian army medical corps. Manager F. Tickell, Princess, Edmonton, Can., contacted the local officer in charge to discover that returns were slow. So the Round Tabler immediately threw together a free show with an admission charge of four medicine bottles. Program was donated by the exchanges. Result was a packed house, and a vanload of bottles, the theatre, a suburban subsequent-run, also benefiting through publicity and free radio plugs.

Silver Ties Anniversary To Campaign for "Meet"

With "When Ladies Meet" booked during the week of the theatre's twenty-fourth anniversary, Nat Silver put on a strong campaign for the double celebration at the M & P Strand, Lowell, Mass., starting with an offer of free admission to couples celebrating their twenty-fourth wedding anniversary in the same period. Those eligible were requested to register in the lobby.

Newspaper publicity was in keeping with the event, Silver working with one of the papers for a co-op page tied to the title, merchants also running congratulatory copy. This was tied to a scrambled-word contest. Special anniversary ads from the stores were obtained by another daily for run-of-the-paper. To encourage attendance among women's organizations, Nat invited their presidents to be his guests on opening day. Opinions on the picture and quotes were used over the radio.

Carnations to the first 500 women at the opening matinee were promoted for the usual credits and a bit of swank added with a lobby demonstration by beauty shop of the hair-dos worn by the stars in the picture. Beauty shop paid for the colored heralds in exchange for back page copy.

For the tenth anniversary of the Skouras Forest Hills, Forest Hills, Long Island, Manager Irving Ludwig put together a distinctive 16-page program, the bulk of which was made up of congratulatory advertising from local stores and organizations. Prestige of the houses is indicated in the advertisers which numbered the American Legion and the local hospital. Inside first-page was given over to greetings by Ludwig, with center spread for the anniversary program.

Asks Patrons for Answers On "She Knew All" Date

Tied to popular Shoppers Guide was contest planted by Manager George D. Irwin on "She Knew All the Answers" at the Paramount, Grand Forks, N. D., readers being invited to write 50-word expressions on "What you think love is." Guest tickets were offered for the 10 best answers and the paper pushed the stunt along with cuts of the stars in addition to contest details.

Irwin also sends along copies of monthly calendar, the cost of which was obtained through advertising of a few leading merchants. The Round Tabler has contracted with the main advertiser for a period of a year to assure wide distribution. The calendar printed on cardboard carries full month's attractions with theatre masthead on top.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Manager Robert Morgan of the Hollywood Theatre in Pottsville, Pa., received unusual cooperation from the local high school and sporting goods store for his campaign on "Harmon of Michigan." One of the high school youths, attired in a football suit, toured the city and the Pottsville High School football team was guest at the picture. High school officials granted permission for Morgan to place exploitation material on the school's bulletin board. The sporting goods store which handles Tom Harmon football equipment devoted window displays to the film.

With the local high-school band trying to raise funds to purchase new uniforms, E. M. Jennings of the Strand Theatre, in Atmore, Ala., sold the school authorities on the idea of the students selling tickets to a special show on an off-theatre night, with one-third of advance ticket sale going to the school. Taken up on the offer, Jennings reports the kids going to work with zest and putting the show over with a bang. As an added incentive, the theatreman offered guest tickets to the student selling most tickets. Afternoon of the show, band paraded through town led by state patrol car bannered with copy to the effect that the band would make its appearance on the stage that night.

Effective was the "Road Show" setpiece created by Max Phillips of the Royal, in North Bay, Ontario, through use of cutout figures of stars on horses from six-sheet set on beaver board. These were mounted with good size copy on homemade merry-go-round with canvas top and bottom attractively painted, appropriately spotlighted. Directional arrows reading "This way to Road Show" were distributed throughout the city.

For a week ahead of "It Started With Eve," the team of George French and Bill Morton at the RKO Albee, in Providence, distributed red apples as a gift from Deanna Durbin. Morton stationed at mike interviewed pedestrians who accepted the fruit. Fifteen-minute musical program on the Brown University program featured selections by Durbin with liberal plugs for the picture, through tieup with chain druggist and luncheon spots, menus were imprinted and readers were landed in suburban papers.

Gag stunt which he reports as catching on for "Charley's Aunt" was Chris Chamales' ad in daily to which he invited as his guests the first six Charleys coming to the theatre with their aunts as advance publicity for that picture's opening at the Roxy, in Delphi, Ind. For "Typhoon," Chris procured a few yards of printed material which was hung in lobby and labelled as one of Dorothy Lamour's sarongs.

Injecting humor into his three-day newspaper contest on "Cracked Nuts," Harry Rose at the Globe, in Bridgeport, Conn., offered guest tickets to those submitting the best letters on the subject "Are people who enter contests Cracked Nuts?" Rose further promoted nuts which were distributed to patrons.

WHY DO WOMEN CRY AT A WEDDING?

They even cry at "Quiet Wedding," which is just a movie, although it's also true that they laugh and giggle inwardly a lot.

It was just like the English to film a lovely story like this, one utterly unconnected with war, while bombs were raining down on them from the Heinkels overhead.

And it was like them to get their loveliest star, Margaret Lockwood (of "The Lady Vanishes" and "Night Train"), and their best director, Anthony Asquith (who made "Pygmalion"), to collaborate and assure the proper kind of wedding.

It was all for morale, of course, and they succeeded. Hundreds of thousands of English men and women have attended "Quiet Wedding" and lost their hearts to it. The women cried, proving it was a good wedding.

Then the picture came to Washington. And Nelson Bell of the Post, and Jay Carmody of The Star, and Don Craig of the News, and C. H. B. of the Times-Herald, Washington's value-minded film critics weighed its appeal and said nice things that ran from "It will steal your heart!" to "The comedy treat of the season."

So if you're a woman, come and cry; and if you're a man, come and enjoy "Quiet Wedding," now in its third week at the Pix Theatre, 13th and H Streets N.W.

(Because of the demand for the continuance of "Quiet Wedding," the next attraction, "Philadelphia Story" has been postponed.)

ABOVE is reproduced one of the two-column layouts of the Washington, D. C., campaign for Universal's "Quiet Wedding", at the Pix, created by Lou Pollock, Eastern ad head, and credited by Manager Sam Cummins for the sensational long-run of the picture. The entire series followed the same approach—of modest, beguiling selling-appeal, in which critics quotes were cleverly incorporated.

To attract his juvenile patronage to his date on "The Reluctant Dragon," Stan Andrews at the Royal Theatre, in Guelph, Ontario, distributed blotters with copy reading: "Hey, kids, Look." This was followed by picture title, playdates and cut of the dragon. In addition, tinted heralds were also distributed.

For his double horror show "Chamber of Horrors" and "King of the Zombies" at the Kenosha Theatre, Kenosha, Wis., Francis Schlax had man dressed in skeleton outfit appropriately bannered tour streets distributing tinted heralds. Chill and thrill copy was used in all ads with numerous readers landed in papers.

One of the most important youth organizations in Calgary, Alberta, is the Safety First Club, under the supervision of the school board and headed by the Mayor. Each year awards are made to the schools who do the best work in their district during the year and as a goodwill gesture, Pete Egan of the Palace Theatre has offered his theatre stage for the presentation ceremonies. Event is covered by local dailies with art and stories.

The modern Eve angle was played up by Mel Lawton and Hermann Flynn for their date on "Lady Eve" at the Prince Edward Theatre, in Sydney, Australia, with numerous stores coming through with window displays tied directly to the picture. Particularly effective was the tieup with the Australian Gaslight Company which featured a display of modern ranges, using stills and cutouts of 24-sheet posters in their showrooms. Display was planted six weeks ahead and created much comment. Posters were also sniped throughout the city and on front aprons of street cars in addition to two-colored stickers inside the cars.

Eerie lobby was featured by Eddie Selette ahead of his double-horror show "The Terror" and "Mystery of Room 13" at the Warner Albany, in Albany, N. Y., with glass case containing first-aid supplies, operating table with dummy and hanging cardboard skeletons hanging in strategic spots with green lights overall. For street bally, boy dressed in skeleton costume with back banner proved stopper and one sheet pasted to sidewalk also attracted. Entire front was hung with skeletons and scare copy. For "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," Eddie distributed promoted candy kisses to men folks.

For "Nothing But the Truth" at the Paramount, in Hot Springs, Ark., Clyde Smith opened his date by tying in with the Pepsodent Company on their nationwide exploitation campaign for Bob Hope, securing gratis 20 large standees of the star. These were used as the basis of merchant tieups on window displays, in which the picture was prominently mentioned. To celebrate the theatre's sixth anniversary, Clyde promoted birthday cake from local baker, each patron entering the theatre receiving a slice. Also promoted was a double truck of congratulatory ads which was landed in both dailies.

With the aircraft carrier H. M. S. Furious being repaired and overhauled in the Philadelphia Navy Yard, Ev Callow of the Warner publicity department arranged for a preview of "Target for Tonight" ahead of opening at the Stanley Theatre there. Motor cops escorted a chartered bus loaded with critics; commentators and club heads to the preview where the picture was unreeled in a huge hangar. Commander Michael B. Lang, veteran of many encounters with the Axis ships hosted the affair.

To usher in his new season, Sid Scott at the Capitol, in Sudbury, Ontario, set three gals to work calling telephone subscribers and giving spiel on the new product and current attractions.

"WHAT GIVES"—HERE AND THERE ON PROMOTIONS IN THE CIRCUITS

Representative Exploitations Noted to Give Cross-Section On Box Office Activities as Reported by the Theatremen

Ticket-selling campaigning continues "in high" these past few weeks in the various circuit situations, as judged by the numerous contributions from the members telling about it. Highlights of the featured promotions are thus set down to indicate the emphasis on consistent exploitation, particularly as follows among the members in Loew's, Warner and Schine situations.

Numerous approaches were used effectively, not the least of which was the world premiere of a short subject, Twentieth Century-Fox's "Highway of Friendship," staged by Dan Terrell, at Loew's Capitol, with cooperation of the American Roadbuilders Association. Since the short has to do with the Pan American Highway, Latin-American diplomats, State Department officials, U. S. Senators, etc., were among the guests of Carter Barron, division head. The lobby was decorated in keeping and the press gave the unusual premiere a sound send-off.

Terrell also moved into the papers with a yarn plugging Lana Turner. Discovering that the students of nearby American University were voting for their "favorite air-raid siren," the Loewman did some electioneering to have the M-G-M star selected as the collegians' "most desirable air-raid shelter companion."

Murphy Holds Milk Charity Show

In Syracuse, Frank Murphy got plenty of attention with a charity show at Loew's State, which was tied in prominently with the girl scouts. Admission was a tall can of Carnation Milk, the "gross" turned over to orphan and infant homes. The milk company paid for heralds distributed by grocers, who also advertised the benefit in the papers and plugged it in window displays. Radio announcements were contributed and further cooperation was had from the public and parochial schools.

Among the smart ideas used by Ed Fitzpatrick for "Lady Be Good" at Loew's Poli, Waterbury, Conn., was a dog-doubles contest. Kids were invited to bring along their canines to the early Saturday morning show and those closely resembling "Buttons," the pooch in the picture, saw the show on the house. Leading pet store was behind the promotion, Fitz blanketing the town with posters and heralds, following through with window and lobby displays.

"Fitz" Lets 'Em Rhumba

On "Weekend in Havana," Ed put on a stage rhumba contest, lining up the prizes from jewelers and clothiers. Entry blanks were distributed around town by the house staff and much was made of it in the papers. Hotels, restaurants and other popular spots were visited by a couple in costume, singing songs from the picture and passing out heralds with all the dope. For the same date at Loew's State, Memphis, Maurice Druker plugged the hit numbers with a lobby music box, the central display in an elaborate setpiece. "Warning" doorknob cards were also used, the copy reading: "Look both ways before crossing the street. Memphis is full of cars with people going to see," etc.

Coincidentally or otherwise, the convention of the Hardy Family Association of America met in Boston during the date of "Life Begins for Andy Hardy," at Loew's State and Orpheum. So Joe Longo moved in, first having Lewis Stone elected as an honorary member, and then inviting the convention to see the picture. A raft of publicity was the result. For "When Ladies Meet," Longo planted the newspaper serialization and promoted a full-page co-op with one of the department stores, the advertising taken up with the new women's styles, copy crediting Joan Crawford for the inspirations. Banner head read: "When Ladies Meet. They Talk About——."

Schiners Also Show Speed

Moving along at a consistently high pace, Schine theatremen are doing their proper share of promoting. From Ohio, Frank Nolan, district manager, reports an unusual quarter-page promotion by Ed Mott, on "Manpower" at the Wooster, in Wooster. As the result of an invitation to employes of the local power company to see the picture, the company ran a 60-inch ad, headed: "Thanks for the invitation, Ed. We'll be there." Immediately below was a cut of Mott and a group of the electricians, copy explaining the invite and plugging the picture.

For "Tille the Toiler" at Schine's Strand, Lexington, Ky., Harry Stearn used a girl dressed as the cartoon character to ride the buses, reading an opened newspaper, the outside lettered in color with the title and theatre. Girl would seat herself next to the driver facing the passengers, then spread the sheet so that all would read. Lettered "the warmest show in town," Stearn tricked out a barrel stunt for "Flame of New Orleans," barrel painted a bright red and peephole cut in the top, labelled "Look." Poster inside was lighted with a candle to spot the inside was lighted with a candle.

ALLOR GIVES KIDS PREVIEW OF SANTA

Nate Allor, manager of United Detroit's Alger, scored at the box office, in addition to giving twelve hundred kiddies the thrill of their lives, when he presented Santa Claus in person at a special Friday show, three weeks in advance of the usual holiday matinees.

Observing the huge success of the Santa Claus parade given annually by a local department store, Allor decided to have Santa "in person" at his theatre far in advance of the usual holiday season. As a result, he tripled his average kid business.

The midnight spook show put on for Hallowe'en by Clayt Cornell, at the State, Tupper Lake, N. Y., was plugged ahead with giant ghost and black cat cutouts pinned to the stage traveller. Pumpkins at each end were worked with the footlights and lobby appropriately decorated in orange and black. Cornell stimulated attendance through a contest of the staff for advance ticket sales

Circuit Observes Armistice Day

Armistice Day over the circuit was celebrated with programs of patriotic shorts and cartoons in addition to the feature attractions. The Schiners, encouraged by home office cooperation, got behind the holiday with other promotions, Addy Addision, for instance, having an organist in to play patriotic numbers and lead the community singing. Mass pledge of allegiance with appropriate stage ceremonies conducted by veteran associations also was planned, the local daily getting behind the observances to spread the word.

In Maysville, Ky., Schiner Ed May opened his "Movies for Pleasure" new season campaign with "Sun Valley Serenade," promoting the Mayor for a proclamation to inaugurate the event, the paper planting this on the front page. A full-page co-op was another promotion, and for outside attentions, May got the community band to give a concert on the afternoon of the opening day. Advertised ahead, the event drew a lot of folks from out of town, Ed reports.

Warnermen in the Van

Keeping well up with the pace-makers, the Warner boys are getting their share of the hits, Dave Bachner, from the Cleveland zone headquarters, sending along a couple of nifties for "Suspicion" at the Hippodrome. One was a tiein with the Plain Dealer's annual charity football game wherein Bachner arranged to have Cary Grant purchase a box of seats for the orphan children. Paper went strong for the slant, crediting the star and picture. Dave also hit the Cleveland News with a plug for the classified section, paper giving over a quarter-page house ad, head reading: "Are you suspicious of results? Proven facts remove Suspicion," the copy going on to tell about the want ad returns. Layout was illustrated with scene cut of the star, properly captioned.

For "R. A. F." in Racine, Wis., Stan Lambert tied the date at the Venetian to a local "Miss Yank" contest, worked with the Red Cross drive. Winner was taken to the local airport and posed in an airline-hostess uniform. Girl also posed in the lobby of a leading hotel, receiving a Red Cross contribution, the shot breaking locally and in the Milwaukee papers. On the opening night, Lambert staged a street parade, sound truck leading a torchlight parade around town. In line were "Miss Yank," escorted by guard of honor of local fliers, the Mayor, American Legion commander, boy scouts and others. Parade ended at the theatre, where the Mayor greeted the girl, presenting her with gifts from the stars.

Managers' Drive Topped by Bailey With Teaser Plan

Quite a job of showmanship is the complete report on his activities in the recent Managers Month Drive for the Harris Theatres, forwarded here by Earle H. Bailey of the Warren Ohio, the Round Tabler garnering considerable attention with a series of teaser promotions around the letters "Y. H. T. M. M." Eventually explained, the letters revealed Bailey's campaign slogan, "You Have to Merchandise Magnetically." This he did, indeed.

For example, window cards were spotted in 14 stores asking the public if they knew what the letters meant. Stores cooperated by giving out entry blanks which those interested were urged to ask for. When the "snapper" was made known, Bailey initiated another contest inviting the public in the same manner to make up sentences of the letters. Prizes were script books, good for theatre admissions.

One of the promotions regarded highly by Bailey for the teaser campaign was an electrical sign, five-foot high, outlining the teaser letters with a giant question mark immediately below. Placed on the face of a prominent building, the sign stopped traffic during the day as well as at night. The newspapers of eourse were in on it, furnishing steady publicity to keep the pot boiling.

Lobby Decorations Featured

Lobby attention was called to the Managers Month with frequently changed lobby decorations and fresh flowers supplied by different florists each week through a tieup with the local floral association. Wall posters were used to announce the contest angle and that the Round Tabler was striving for one of the circuit prizes. Cards distributed by the personnel to patrons plugged the managers' contest urging attendance to help Bailey finish in the money.

During the month, many events were put on to stimulate attendance. Among these was a series of amateur "Opportunity Nights" strongly plugged in the advertising and publicized by the papers. Monday nights were given over to special programs by various lunch clubs and organizations such as the Lions, Kiwanis, Rotary, Moose, etc., the clubs cooperating by announcing this at meetings.

"Laff-O-Meter" Attracts Patrons

Individual attractions were publicized accordingly. These included a 1926 Ford ballyhoo for "Andy Hardy," the car painted in typical Rooney fashion and filled with boys and girls carrying signs. For "Charley's Aunt," Bailey had constructed a "Laff-o-Meter," the work done by assistant manager James Goddard. The contrivance was placed on a platform with a spring in each corner, and under which was a hot-water bottle filled with colored water attached to a glass tube running up the center of the display. When patrons stepped on platform, as invited, the weight on the hot-water bottle forced the liquid up the tube to one of the graduations on the meter. Lights behind the glass tube showed the course of the liquid. (Cut above shows "Laff-o-Meter and Goddard at work.)

For "Ringside Maisie" a portable boxing ring, colorfully decorated, was hauled around town carrying two girls in athletic costume and wearing regulation boxing gloves. Special ice effects for lobby decoration made of papier mache highlighted Bailey's displays for "Sun Valley Serenade." That week was also distinguished by stage ceremonies for the presentation of colors by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Organized especially for the purpose and aimed for the kid trade was a "Junior Defense Club" wherein the youngsters were invited to take out membership in the organization, the Round Tabler supplying buttons, membership cards and special military caps to wear at the regular meetings. Outstanding in this promotion was permission obtained from the county commissioners to spot one-sheet frames around the county courthouse plaza.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Peffley Dedicates "Dive" Date To Local Boys in U. S. Navy

For "Dive Bomber" at the Kentucky, Danville, Ky., Dick Peffley got the Mayor to issue a proclamation for a "V for Victory and V as in Dive Bomber Week," His Honor urging the folks to see the picture as evidence of the fine equipment possessed by the Navy. The proclamation also said that Peffley had dedicated the date to the county boys enlisted in the Navy, their names and residences carried in the statement.

The Round Tabler expanded the dedication idea to a giant herald tiein with one of the leading furniture stores which had paid costs in exchange for copy, a part of which was given over to the endorsement of the Victory week. Extra publicity was gained by Dick with a gag "time-bomb" delivered to the city's leading columnist, which the byliner in print admitted opening to find an alarm clock—brand new and streamlined with tag reading: "As mighty as a bomb, Dive Bomber coming to the Kentucky."

Tie Service Units To 'R.A.F.' Dates

Stimulation of recruiting and military public relations continue to advance as theatremen cooperate with the various services on campaigns for "Yank in the R. A. F." as herein noted. Lately, in Greenfield, Mass., Jerry Jerauld for the date at the Garden tied in with officers at two nearby Army flying bases and borrowed enough stuff for a lobby display to stop a bit of traffic. The exhibit included propellers, altimeters, compasses, plus a number of model planes that flew, one of which was eight feet across.

Jerauld had some extra big exploitation ready for opening night, persuading the chief of police to allow the space in front of the theatre to be roped off. Center of attraction was a "jeep" car driven to the theatre by officers dressed in fur-lined flying suits, bringing along a load of yellow and blue bombs, set off during the demonstration. Recruiting cars and other Army transportation were in the procession, the proceedings broadcast from the lobby over Station WHAI. On this, the Army officers discussed various aspects of flying. During the evening, the officers gave demonstrations of how to get into and out of the flying suits, offered rides in the "jeep" and demonstrated how it worked.

American Lads Broadcast to Parents

Featuring his eampaign on the picture at the FPC Orpheum, in Vancouver, B. C., was a stunt arranged on opening night by Manager Ivan Ackery, who rounded up 10 American boys in the Canadian Air Force, training at a local air field, to broadcast to their parents in the States from the foyer of the theatre. Ackery reports a lot of red tape to go through before the idea was sold to the censors, but when it did the papers went for it strongly, the wire services also picking up the stunt for mention up and down the west coast.

The Des Moines Chapter of "Bundles for Britain" was tied into his "Yank" campaign by Bob Fulton at the Tri-States Des Moines, the manager arranging a dinner to honor Iowans serving in the Royal Canadian Air Force and their parents. Other guests included local flyers and prominent citizens serving on the committee. Tickets were sold to cover the reserved seat opening at the theatre, a percentage of the returns going to the "Bundles" unit. For extra attention, Fulton obtained the services of a junior drummer bugle corps which paraded to the theatre accompanied by boys bearing theatre banners.

Dunkirk Lobby Display Attracts

The Fairbury, Neb., engagement at the Tri-States Bonham was stimulated by Jimmy Redmond in a hookup with the local "Sod-Busters," an organization of air-minded boys, who wore R. A. F. pins, distributed by the theatre and aided in spreading the word about the date. Ten days ahead the house staff wore R. A. F. caps. For outside attention, Redmond featured a "street blitz," using four cutout bombs, which were pulled by a boy dressed as an air mechanic. Windows were obtained on the book and a giant display depicting the evacuation of Dunkirk topped the decorations at the theatre.

IN COURTS

Fox Fights Use Of "Valley" Title

Edwin P. Kilroe, copyright attorney for Twentieth Century-Fox, declaring the company is ready to make a test case of the "pernicious activity" of using the titles of popular pictures as titles of songs, has written the Lincoln Music Corp., concerning the song "How Green Was My Valley." Mr. Kilroe's letter follows:

"1. To cease immediately from stating that the song, 'How Green Was My Valley,' lyrics by Benny Davis, music by Abner Silver, has been officially accepted by 20th Century-Fox Pictures and Richard Llewellyn, the author of the book. This is contrary to the facts. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. has not granted you permission to use the phrase 'How Green Was My Valley' as the title of a song, nor has it granted you permission to tie in your song in the exploitation of our picture, nor has permission been granted by Richard Llewellyn, the author of the novel 'How Green Was My Valley,' to use the title of his novel as the title of a song.

"2. To cease from making any reference to our picture 'How Green Was My Valley' in the exploitation of your song.

"3. To discontinue immediately the use of the phrase 'How Green Was My Valley' as the title of your song.

"4. To discontinue immediately the statement in the exploitation of your song that it was published by special arrangement with the author, Richard Llewellyn, and inspired by the 20th Century-Fox production, 'How Green Was My Valley.'

"You are requested to return immediately to 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. the still from our picture 'How Green Was My Valley' which came into your hands some time ago and you are further requested not to use the said still in any way in the exploitation of your song. If you have used the still as part of the cover design of your song, all copies of your song containing this still should be destroyed immediately."

Bergen Asks Damages

Iowa Slot Machines Illegal but Taxable

The operation of slot machines are illegal in Iowa but the internal revenue office records at Des Moines indicate that Iowa operators have paid a federal tax of $45,675 on 1,218 slot machines or $37.50 each to cover the defense tax for the period from October 1st to June 30th, 1942. The records report that Iowa taxpayers have paid the government about $80,000 in new levies on slot machines, pin ball games, bowling alleys and billiard tables.

A section of the Iowa state law makes it illegal to possess various types of gambling equipment including "any slot machine or device with an element of chance attending such operation." A fine of from $50 to $300 or a county jail sentence up to one year or both for keeping a place where slot machines and other gambling operations are permitted, is contained in another state law.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Babes on Broadway

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Music and Mimics

Here is a picture in the best traditions of show business which has just about everything needed to bring crowds to the theatre and joy to the hearts of patrons of all ages, and to the exhibitor.

For names there are the Money Making Stars, Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, both performing as well or better than ever. They are capably supported by Fay Bainter, Virginia Weidler, now quite grown up; Ray McDonald, the young dancer; Richard Quine, Donald Meek and Luis Alberni, in a small part. Alexander Woollcott, as himself, introduces the story.

For music and song there are several numbers sung very pleasantly by Miss Garland. Songs include "How About You," "Anything Can Happen in New York," "Hoe Down" and "Chin Up, Cheerio, Carry On." Mickey Rooney also sings a bit. There are also large-scale dancing numbers and some fine tap dancing by Ray McDonald. The finale is an elaborate production number done in the manner previously made famous by Busby Berkeley, the director.

For novelty there are imitations of the character that "would stop the show" on a stage by both the stars. Of special note is Rooney mimicing Carmen Miranda. But his versatility and that of Judy Garland is indicated by the range of the persons imitated: Sarah Bernhardt, Fay Templeton and Blanche Ring by Miss Garland and also Richard Mansfield, Harry Lauder and the Yankee Doodle Boy by Rooney.

The only possible criticisms that could be advanced against this splendid production by Arthur Freed is that, even though the action is kept moving practically all the time, some may find the two-hour running time long and a few others may think that there is too much talk in the first half of the film.

The basic story is simple: "The Balls of Fire," a three-man dancing and singing act are looking for their "chance" on Broadway; their leader achieves success for all by staging a show which is seen by a Broadway producer. But Fred Finkelhoffe, the writer, included a number of new twists and the plot material is ample for any musical. The show is staged for the benefit of children at a New York settlement and topical material is included with a broadcast to their parents by British children during a preliminary "block-party" entertainment. It is at that point that the British Tommies are inspired to "carry on" by a song. Lester White created some attractive photographic effects.

Ball of Fire

(Samuel Goldwyn—RKO)

Farce Comedy Drama

Sam Goldwyn told trade press reporters last week that the theme of his latest, "Ball of Fire," was unusual. He also told them he thought they'd be pleased with it. Well, it's not an unusual theme—the collision between the intellectual and commonality—but the boys were pleased, and so was the case-hardened audience which viewed the picture at the RKO Proctors Theatre in New Rochelle Monday night. So pleased were they, in fact, that the reviewers lost many lines of dialogue in the laughter.

The film is a collection of gags and elongated sketches which will carry by word of mouth and, without doubt, transmitted to reviews by the newspaper film critics. There is the one in which Richard Haydn tells the seven other professors of his only love, his lost wife, the golden-haired Genevieve; one in which the English professor, Gary Cooper, carries his research into night life, and boogie-woogie; and one in which the eight professors and other assorted hostages of the gangster friends of Miss Stanwyck contrive to counter-balance the tommy-guns in the hands of those gangsters.

The plot has Cooper and seven other professors compiling an encyclopedia, under a foundation grant; which will occupy three years of inhibited seclusion. The labors are violently interrupted when Cooper, compiling slang terms, discovers from garbage man Allen Jenkins' city argot, that his compilation is outmoded. Straightway, Cooper goes to the newsboys, the barroom drunks, and then to the night clubs, in one of which drumbeater Gene Krupa and orchestra bat out frenzied tympany to Stanwyck's boogie woogie. Enter slang, crime and love. Stanwyck's gangster lover, suspected of murder, requires her to hide from the "DA." So she pretends interest, and offers aid, to Cooper's slang research, and also upsets the bachelorhood of the professors in their tottering "Totten Foundation." She titillates their minds and tortures their inhibitions, especially Cooper's.

Draping his neck nape with cold water doesn't douse his agitation; so Cooper buys a ring, proposes, confesses life's new meaning. Simultaneously, Dana Andrews, Stanwyck's gangster fiance, requires her for marriage; a possible witness in murder charge against him, as a wife she may not testify. Using Cooper and the seven old men as blinds, she has them drive her near Andrews' hideout. They think the trip precedes a wedding between her and Cooper. Andrews arrives, and departs with Stanwyck, but having tasted the better life and liked it, she refuses to marry Andrews. His uglies then threaten Cooper. In a suspenseful sektch, the latter and his friends fool the hoodlums, descend upon the Andrews-Stanwyck forced marriage ceremony with the hoodlums' tommy-guns. And Cooper belts Andrews, but good.

The picture has the usual Goldwyn touches: smooth direction by Howard Hawks; finished photography by Gregg Toland; fast dialogue by Billy Wilder and Thomas Monroe; a marquee cast, and minor characters every one of which the spectator tastes again and again in memory. The Monday night audience, in New Rochelle, city of "sneak" previews, gave Krupa recognition when he was billed, prolonged applause when he demonstrated his drumming.

The open use of the slang common in the larger cities is unusual in thoroughness, length and number and types of words used. It seemed to cause surprised pleasure, and will certainly make at home the patrons who come specially to see Krupa.

The undertones in the scenes in which Stanwyck's shimmering presence disturbs the professors and Cooper, and, the overtones in much of the picture, put this in adult classification.

Previewed at the RKO Proctors, New Rochelle, Monday night, to an audience expectant of a surprise, but notably not new to such. They liked this one, however, Laughs were frequent, extensive, loud; and they interferred with appreciation of gags, which came rapidly at times.

Dr. Kildare's Victory

Kildare Carries On

Exhibitors and fans of the "Kildare" pictures will remember that Laraine Day was adroitly removed—by character death—from this series in "Dr. Kildare's Wedding Day," following her election as the Number One Star of Tomorrow in MOTION PICTURE HERALD's poll so that she might be free for other commitments. From that point the story now continues with Lew Ayres in the title role pursuing his work at the "Blair General Hospital." As the new romantic interest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer introduces Ann Ayars, herein portraying a dashing young glamour girl whose life is saved through an emergency operation performed by "Dr. Kildare," and who during her convalescence flirts with the young doctor.

This latest production also concerns the zoning system under which two hospitals in one city operate; the strict enforcement of the zoning rules despite the loss of life, and the efforts of "Kildare" and his aides to correct the situation. His success in working out his solution of the problem confronting the hospital boards is arrived at by way of a series of incidents which have the result of dispelling prejudice against the system.

Lionel Barrymore, in a role from which he derives the utmost, is again cast as the invalid "Dr. Leonard Gillespie." Jean Rogers, a comparative newcomer to the screen lends warmth, beauty and charm as the nurse engaged to the hospital interne, Robert Stirling, both of whom have featured roles necessary to the development of the plot.

Direction by Major W. S. Van Dyke II is of the usual perfection identified with the previous "Kildare" ventures. The film's only drawback is dialogue where "Kildare" comments on how well the patient looks with her clothes off.

Previewed in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange projection room in New York where a late afternoon audience of five found the picture on a par with previous "Dr. Kildare" films, and generally decided that it was nice entertainment.—GEORGE SPIRES.

You're in the Army Now

(Warner Bros.)

Durante Joins the Parade

Army misfits are sure-fire comedy even if the changes that can be rung are necessarily limited, and Jimmy Durante in Uncle Sam's new army should keep the customers laughing.

With Durante it's the enthusiasm that counts, whether he's selling vacuum cleaners to gaslighted farms or tanks to cavalry colonels. And the spirit has been caught by Director Lewis Seiler and transmitted to an engaging company of players.

The story itself is often lost in the succession of comic situations, or perhaps it is recovered occasionally to hang them together. At any rate, it concerns the attempts of two former vacuum-cleaner salesmen, accidentally recruited into the army, to convince a cavalry officer of the Old School that mechanization has come to stay, and thus to further the romance of his daughter and a mechanical engineer. Jane Wyman is charming enough for anyone's heart interest, and Donald McBride keeps the Colonel plenty tough. But Durante is the show, with his hapless side-kick, Phil Silvers, his unbounded self-esteem, and his magnetic attraction for the guard house.

The Navy Blues Sextet appears briefly at a U. S. O. entertainment which affords "Jeeper" an opportunity to do an Apache dance and spike the lemonade with alum and feature the song, "I'm Glad My Number Was Called," which somehow doesn't seem to strike the right note.

Ben Stoloff produced the film, which should more than satisfy Durante fans.

The Vanishing Virginian

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Comedy-Melodrama

With the competent direction of Frank Borzage guiding the characters, "The Vanishing Virginian" has emerged from the pages of the Rebecca Yancey Williams book as an engrossing and compelling story in pictures. Throughout there is an undertone of simplicity and home-spun humor, all the laughs and tears that color the lives of nearly all American families. It is a picture that showmen may present to any discriminating audience and be sure that this audience will urge their friends to see it since it is a production which contains all the comedy, romance, tragedy and pathos that makes for an entertaining evening.

Frank Morgan, after appearing in only innocuous films or minor roles, returns to his rightful position as a star and displays his histrionic training and years of acting experience. Kathryn Grayson, who was brought to the attention of the public in "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary," again sings a number of songs including a Strauss waltz and a Negro spiritual, and Spring Byington, in a role from which she derives the maximum, ably support the star. Others in the cast include Natalie Thompson, Douglass Newland, Mark Daniels, Juanita Quigley, and Scotty Beckett. Also worthy of mention are Leigh Whipper and Louise Beavers who distinguish themselves in the roles of the Negro servants of the household.

Against a background of Lynchburg, Virginia, in the year 1913, the story concerns "Robert Yancey," district attorney, his family, their affairs and complications and experiences. Production by Edwin Knopf and screen adaptation of the book by Jan Fortune are of the best.

Previewed in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer projection room in New York where the assembled trade press found the picture much to their satisfaction and audibly expressed their liking for Miss Grayson's singing.—G. S.

All Through the Night

(Warner Bros.)

Metropolitan Melodrama

Stocked with marquee names and packed with more action and complications than half-a-dozen garden variety melodramas, this Humphrey Bogart vehicle opens with a murder and ends with a mass brawl between New York mobsters, rallied to protect their American liberties, and a band of Nazi saboteurs plotting the sinking of a U. S. battleship. In between these points occur battles, shootings, escapes, pursuits, fisticuffs and a few passages of declaratory dialogue which don't impede for long a fast flow of causes, effects and crises.

Mr. Bogart, portraying a racketeer of sorts who is not quite a gangster, is on the scene of a murder, leaves a glove, is sought by the police but pursues his own theories as to the cause of the crime and traces it, circuitously, to a band of fifth-columnists. After many switches of advantage, he assembles his own and a rival's following from the underworld and they capture the saboteurs.

Jerry Wald served Hal B. Wallis as associate producer and Vincent Sherman directed from a script by Leonard Spiegelgass and Edwin Gilbert which highlights snappy action with snappy slang. Leonard Q. Ross collaborated with Mr. Spiegelgass on the story.

Sing for Your Supper

(Columbia)

Bandleader Meets Debutante

"Sing For Your Supper," featuring Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Jinx Falkenburg, Bert Gordon and Eve Arden, is another picture to be added to the increasing list of musicals and musical comedies.

The dominant feature of the plot is "boy meets girl, boy loses girl, boy gets girl," with band leader (Charles "Buddy" Rogers) the boy, and debutante (Jinx Falgenburg) the girl. The debutante landlord becomes interested in the plight of one of her tenants, a band leader, to the extent where she becomes a dance hostess and subsequently a songstress in his band, all done incognito. The two quarrel when there is a splurge of publicity in the newspapers about her identity, but eventually come together.

The romance is routine, the musical background is a potpourri of swing, boogie-woogie and Russian music, but the antics of Bert Gordon as "The Mad Russian," seemed to be the focus of interest for the audience.

Because of its unpretentious quality, and its lack of star names, "Sing For Your Supper" must depend on audiences with whom musicals are popular.

More About Invisibility

This is another treatment of the invisibility idea used in "The Invisible Man," "The Invisible Woman," "Topper Takes a Trip," "Topper's Return" and, to go way back, in those first, fascinating half-reelers which introduced your parents to the wonders of trick photography.

This treatment is different from the others of recent vintage mainly in setting, dialogue of course, and in that not only one but four persons, and a monkey, are made invisible and restored to visibility during the seventy minutes of the exhibition.

Steel Against the Sky

(Warner Bros.)

Romantic Melodrama

Warner Brothers have taken an original story by Maurice Hanline and Jesse Lasky, Jr., and have produced a motion picture that contains many moments of spine-tingling suspense. It is a story of three brothers and a father produced against the background of large scale bridge construction; it is a story of action, romance, adventure and comedy—the comedy of which, however, ofttimes overreaches for sprightliness. Produced under the aegis of Edmund Grainger and directed by A. Edward Sutherland, "Steel Against the Sky" is a picture which, properly exploited, should attract audiences who enjoy this type of film fare.

Heading the cast are Lloyd Nolan and Craig Stevens as the brothers who vie for the affecton of Alexis Smith. In supporting roles are seen Gene Lockhart as the construction company president and father of Miss Smith; Edward Ellis, the father of the three boys, who tries to keep the feminine wiles of Miss Smith from breaking up his home and family; and Walter Catlett and Edward Brophy, who supply the comedy interest as the broken-down inventor, and the third brother of the family, respectively.

Interspersed between the story of romantic intrigue and overdone comedy there are many convincing and realistic scenes of the perils and dangers the builders of bridges undergo and endure from their precarious position atop the highest spans. It is scenes such as these which keep the audience on the edge of their seats in nervous anticipation of the inevitable.

Previewed in the Warner projection room in New York, where a trade-press audience watched with interest the film's progress upon the screen, but had little comment to make otherwise.—G. S.

Tuxedo Junction

(Republic)

Social Drama and the Weavers

The Weavers return here in another bucolic drama that combines a story having to do with a social theme and the well known Weaver comedy and music. It isn't the best thing the Weavers have done, but their trade mark is all over the picture and for those who enjoy them for their particular forte, this should please. The picture builds slowly to a rather stirring climax, much the best thing in the film.

The Weavers ("Abner," "Elviry" and Cicero") run a truck garden farm adjacent to a rich man's estate. Needless to say, since the rich man is a snob, the Weavers are not neighbors socially speaking. Matters are further aggravated when the Weavers take migrant youths off the streets, feed them, bed them and employ them in their gardens. From here on in the rich man-Weaver feud becomes secondary to the reformation of one migrant youth (Frankie Darro), who requires a good deal of convincing before he can accept the idea that the Weavers are not going to exploit him and his fellows.

The climax comes with the annual Pasadena Tournament of Roses parade and the migrant boys' winning first prize with a Lincoln Memorial float they made themselves from flowers nurtured by them in the Weavers' gardens.

Clayton Moore as a juvenile probation officer and Lorna Gray as the daughter of the rich man, provide the film with one romance and Sally Payne teams up with Darro in another. Thurston Hall is the rich man.

The musical score includes "Tuxedo Junction," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Silent Night" and "Auld Lang Syne." Armand Schaefer was the associate producer and the picture was directed by Frank McDonald.

Sealed Lips

(Universal)

Criminology with a Twist

Here they are again, the crook, the detective and the little girl reporter, but this time, thanks to writer-director George Waggner, they figure in a story that stems from an idea which has novelty and appeal for the customers.

The film opens with the warden of a California prison suspecting that a New York gangster about to complete his term in the jail is in reality a double for the criminal, despite finger prints and other evidence to the contrary. The detective assigned to the case ultimately establishes the accuracy of the warden's suspicions, a process which involves many adventures and a couple of murders, also the routine romance.

It is in the working out of the details of the plot that the film succeeds in providing an hour of entertainment strong enough to offset some lapses in the acting department.

Laburnum Grove

(Anglo Films-Classic)

Comedy and Crime Psychology

"Very English" describes this film version of J. B. Priestly's stage play of crime and English suburban life. It is a psychological study of a mild and amiable suburbanite, played by Edmund Gwenn, whose chief delight, apparently is his greenhouse tomatoes. What happens when he tells his family that their money all comes from crime is unfolded in the direct narrative pattern of Carol Read's direction.

The audience does not discover until the very end whether the suburbanite is really an international counterfeiter or just a family man whose only problems are to marry his daughter off and evict the brother-in-law, who lives with him. Cedric Hardwicke makes the brother-in-law a comic, and typical bore.

Development of the story depends considerably on the literate dialogue, taken directly from the Priestly play. There is a scene in which Gwenn and a Scotland Yard detective match wits. It is an entertaining study of criminal psychology. However, the picture is not a detective story, nor an action picture, although Mr. Reed manages to carry the plot without deviation through alternate comedy and psychology.

The humor of the film is of that somewhat obtuse type referred to as "British." It is sometimes funny, sometimes very obvious and sometimes very obscure. The slang and dialogue may also puzzle American audiences. Distribution here would seem to be aimed at the "art theatre" circuit and certain anglophile areas.

Basil Deane produced the film for Anglo from a screen play by Anthony Kimmins. John W. Boyle photographed the film, but not with his usual Hollywood finesse.

Tonto Basin Outlaws

(Monogram)

Western

Set during the Spanish-American War, this Range Busters western is above average fare. The story has the Range Busters, Ray "Crash" Corrigan, John "Dusty" King and Max "Alibi" Terhune, enlisting in T. R.'s Rough Riders and being promptly mustered out to clean up the cattle-rustling situation in Wyoming, affecting the Army's meat supply.

"Crash," posing as a cowboy out of work, seeks a job with Tristram Coffin's outfit in an attempt to develop a clue on the rustling. Coffin is tipped off to the latter's identity. Terhune and King, meanwhile, go their separate ways to round up the rustlers. The climax is King's stampede of a herd of wild cattle through the town as "Crash" and Coffin shoot it out.

Feminine interest is blonde Jan Wiley as a newspaperwoman sent to the Tonto Basin. A featured song is "Cabin of My Dreams." Robert Cline's photography is good, as is the direction of S. Roy Luby. George W. Weeks was the producer.

Riding the Sunset Trail

Western

Here is satisfactory action fare with Tom Keene starred. Robert Tansey, producer-director, has made some minor alterations in the casting setup which improves this western over its predecessors. Frank Yaconelli has been added to the cast.

The plot is routine with Jib Aubrey, supposedly murdered by his half-brother so the latter could cash in on a fake will, and Aubrey's eventual return to convict the half-brother. Betty Dawson as Aubrey's daughter is the feminine interest and Sugar Dawn, another daughter. Keene and Yaconelli outwit Ken Duncan, the half-brother, and his hirelings, Earle Douglas and Tom Seidel, at every meeting. Duncan finally hires Gene Alsace to ambush Keene, but Alsace turns out to be a crook gone straight.

Mr. Tansey's production and direction are good and the photography by Marcel LePicard is fine.

ADVANCE SYNOPSES and information

PANAMA HATTIE (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Musical Comedy

PRODUCER: Arthur Freed. Directed by Norman Z. McLeod. Based on the play by Herbert Fields and B. G. DeSylva.

PLAYERS: Ann Sothern, Red Skelton, "Rags" Ragland, Ben Blue, Marsha Hunt, Virginia O'Brien, Alan Mowbray, Dan Dailey, Jr., Jackie Horner, Carl Esmond.

SYNOPSIS

Hattie Maloney (Ann Sothern) is a night club entertainer in Panama, out of Chicago and way points. She says "dese" and "dose," but has a heart of gold and is adored by Dick Bulliett (Dan Dailey, Jr.), scion of an old Philadelphia family and an army sergeant about to get his commission. Habitues of the cafe where Hattie sings are her close pals and protectors, three sailors, Red, Rags and Rowdy (Red Skelton, Rags Ragland and Ben Blue). Dick's seven-year-old daughter (Jackie Horner) comes to visit him and nearly breaks Hattie's heart by laughing at her getup. Hattie sails secretly for the States but Dick takes the plane and catches the ship when it docks at the other end of the canal. While all this is going on, the three sailors become involved in one spy plot after another.

SPECIAL REMARKS

The musical score includes "The Son of a Gun Who Picks on Uncle Sam," "Salome," "Good Neighbors," "Fresh as a Daisy," "Make It Another Old-Fashioned, Please," "Hattie from Panama," "Let's Be Buddies."

WEST OF CIMARRON (Republic)

Western

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Louis Gray. Directed by Les Orlebeck. Based on characters created by William Colt MacDonald.

PLAYERS: Bob Steele, Tom Tyler, Rufe Davis, Lois Collier, James Bush, Guy Usher.

SYNOPSIS

The Three Mesquiteers (Bob Steele, Tom Tyler, Rufe Davis), traveling to Texas shortly after the close of the Civil War, find political affairs in a hopeless upheaval, with the "carpetbagger" waging vicious war on the "bushwhackers." The Mesquiteers sympathize with the cause of the "bushwhackers" when they realize that certain officials connected with the army troops are robbing the Texas ranchers under guise of levying taxes on them. They join the troop in order to bore from within. The colonel commanding agrees to investigate the conditions on the Mesquiteers' recommendation but before he can act he is murdered and the Mesquiteers are imprisoned. They escape and expose the murderers.

NORTH TO THE KLONDIKE (Universal)

Melodrama

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Paul Malvern. Directed by Erle Kenton.

PLAYERS: Brod Crawford, Lon Chaney, Jr., Andy Devine, Evelyn Ankers, Dorothy Granger, Willie Fung, Keye Luke, Lloyd Corrigan.

SYNOPSIS

It is 1911 and Johnny Thorn (Brod Crawford), a young mining expert and his friend, Klondike (Andy Devine), travel to the settlement of Haven to prospect for Nate Carson (Lon Chaney, Jr.), a trader. Before Thorn's arrival, Carson discovers a mine and now is sorry he has sent for Thorn. Carson attempts to get rid of Thorn and the settlers by burning the winter's supplies. They send Jim Allen (Stanley Andrews) for more supplies but Allen is killed by Carson's henchmen. The settlers are all for leaving but Thorn convinces them that it is all a plot to get rid of them. Thorn confronts Carson and bests him in a fist fight, making Carson confess. New supplies arrive and Thorn settles down with his bride, Mary (Evelyn Ankers), and becomes a dirt farmer. The mine turns out to be a shallow pocket.

THE GREAT MAN'S LADY (Paramount)

Drama

PRODUCED and directed by William A. Wellman.

PLAYERS: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Brian Donlevy, Katherine Stevens, Thurston Hall, Lloyd Corrigan.

SYNOPSIS

Here is a human-interest saga of the early west and the part a woman plays in helping her man achieve a greatness which will last through the ages. Barbara Stanwyck's role runs the gamut of emotional acting and ages from 16 to 100. Joe McCrea has a frontier role—a hero in buckskins—and Brian Donlevy has a sympathetic part. The story is from the short story by Vina Delmar.

ROAD TO HAPPINESS (Monogram)

Drama

PRODUCER: Scott R. Dunlap. Directed by Phil Rosen. From the story, "First Performance", by Matt Taylor.

PLAYERS: John Boles, Mona Barrie, Billy Lee, Roscoe Karns, Lillian Elliott, Paul Porcasi, Sam Flint.

SYNOPSIS

Returning to New York after four years spent in Europe, studying voice, Jeff Carter (John Boles) learns that his wife Millie (Mona Barrie) has divorced him eight months before, and placed their ten-year-old son, Danny (Billy Lee), in a military school. Demanding custody of the boy, Jeff moves with him into an inexpensive boarding house. Jeff tries to pursue an operatic singing career but is forced by need to accept a menial character part on a radio program. Jeff, with an assist by Billy, takes the place of the baritone whose program precedes Jeff's when the baritone is taken ill. He is a success and his operatic career is assured.

FORBIDDEN TRAILS (Monogram)

Western

PRODUCER: Scott R. Dunlap. Directed by Robert N. Bradbury.

PLAYERS: Buck Jones, Tim McCoy, Raymond Hatton, Tristram Coffin, Charles King, Glen Strange.

SYNOPSIS

Buck Jones, as a retired U. S. Marshal, is attacked by two ex-convicts recently released from prison, and manages to escape from them only after he has been wounded. Tristam Coffin, big boss of the town, is trying to force Dave O'Brien into a contract for the hauling of high grade ore. Buck is friendly to O'Brien. Buck and O'Brien walk into a trap set by Coffin and are captured. He escapes, however, and, with the aid of Tim McCoy and Raymond Hatton, surprise Coffin and his henchmen, capturing the whole gang.

THE JUNGLE BOOK (United Artists)

Kipling Legend

PRODUCED by Alexander Korda. Directed by Zoltan Korda. From the story by Rudyard Kipling.

STARRING: Sabu.

SYNOPSIS

This is the story of Mowgli—of how a child, stolen by wolves, lived among them, brother to the wild animals of the jungle—and, of how, after many moving accidents, he joined the tribe of Men. Here he learns again the ways of men, without forgetting the ways of the animals he loves and who love him. Many lessons he learns and only through his superior knowledge is the village saved from great disaster.

SPECIAL REMARKS

"The Jungle Book" continues Mr. Korda's explorations in the realm of mysterious India. Exhibitors will remember "Elephant Boy" and "Drums" of kindred subjects.

JAIL HOUSE BLUES (Universal)

Comedy, Music

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Ken Goldsmith. Directed by Albert S. Rogell.

PLAYERS: Nat Pendleton, Anne Gwynne, Robert Paige, Samuel S. Hinds, Horace MacMahon, Elisabeth Risdon, Warren Hymer, Cliff Clark.

SYNOPSIS

Sonny McGann (Nat Pendleton), in prison, has been pardoned but prefers to stay in jail to produce the big prison musical show, "Stick 'Em Up." Charlie the Chopper (Ralf Harolde), who was to play the feminine lead, escapes so Sonny gets permission from the warden to go after him. Sonny encounters Doris (Anne Gwynne), her father (Samuel S. Hinds), a singing teacher, and Cliff (Robert Paige), an ambitious singer. After helping his mother (Elizabeth Risdon), who has organized a panhandlers association, combat a rival group, Sonny takes Cliff back to prison with him to sing in the show.

SPECIAL REMARKS

The musical score consists of the tenor aria from "Martha," "The Prologue," "Amazon" and "Stick 'Em Up."

HOLT OF THE SECRET SERVICE (Col.)
Serial—15 Episodes (3120)

Jack Holt, U. S. Secret Service agent, is assigned to track down counterfeiters, who are flooding the country with bogus money. With Kay Drew (Evelyn Brent), another operator, he joins the gang under the name of Nick Farrel, posing as a desperate criminal.

He is present when the gang kidnaps Severn (Ray Parsons), chief engraver of the Treasury Department. Holt is separated from the rest of the crooks when the police start chasing them. The criminals continue to their mountain hideout, where Valden (Tristam Coffin) is their leader. He in turn takes orders from Lucky Arnold (John Ward), who filters the counterfeit currency out from his gambling ship.

Learning that one member of the gang, Crimp Evans (Joe McGuinn), is in a police hospital, Holt has himself checked in as a patient. Kay, posing as his wife, calls the next day with a plan for escape. Crimp begs to go along, telling Holt he will lead him to Valden's hideout. They escape. En route, Crimp discovers Holt's true identity. They start fighting in the canoe Crimp has provided. The canoe plunges over the rapids and is dashed to pieces. Holt escapes with Kay's help, but Crimp disappears. Holt and Kay stumble upon Valden's camp.

From that moment on, they try to get enough evidence to convict Valden and Lucky. Before this is accomplished, however, the detectives are trapped in flaming automobiles, poisoned with deadly gas, kidnapped aboard a gambling ship, and finally forced to battle for their lives against a tribe of savage natives in a wild jungle.

GEORGETOWN, PRIDE OF PENANG (MGM)
FitzPatrick Traveltalk (Color) (T-313)

James FitzPatrick takes his color cameras to the little island of Penang, off the coast of Sumatra. At Georgetown, its capital, he shows the principal industry, fishing, and depicts the picturesque waterfront shacks in which the fishermen live. From there the action moves to Main Street which is similar to most small town main streets. Thence, to the better section of the city to show how customs of the natives, the Chinese and the English have become mixed through the years.

THE GREAT CHEESE MYSTERY (Col.)
Fable Cartoon (3751)

Two mice plot the theft of a piece of cheese. In the kitchen a lazy cat is fast asleep guarding the ice box where the loot is kept. The mice sneak into the kitchen burdened with their burglar tools and go to work. Finally the cat is awakened. The mice run away with their big hunk of cheese, with the cat in hot pursuit. The cat gets back the cheese but the elusive mice escape.

THE MIGHTY NAVY (Par.)
Popeye Cartoon (*E*1-2)

Popeye joins the U. S. Navy and finds that sailoring has changed considerably since he became a gob. Popeye, assigned to the controls of the gun turrets, is lost in the maze of modern machinery. Claiming he can fly a plane, Popeye takes off in a dive bomber, executes a swan dive, a jack-knife, a full twist and comes to rest in the water when the plane does a belly-flop. An enemy ship is sighted and when the outlook is bad, Popeye handles a giant gun like it was a machine gun. Swallowing his spinach, Popeye slides into a torpedo tube and is loosed in the direction of the enemy ship, sinking it.

Color Cartoon (6244)

It's night in a big department store. All the toys are asleep, including everyone in the toy army camp. The elephant wakes up and blows reveille. The army band plays the popular hit tune, "$21 a Day Once a Month," while the toys improvise many solo interpretations of the number. At this point the Andy Panda doll finds a bugle and blows the "pay call." What happens then is something like the rush at a bargain-basement counter.

POLO CHAMPIONS (Col.)
World of Sports (3804)

This is a story of polo from the training of ponies to the playing of championship matches. George Oliver, an eight-goal player, sportsman and trainer, shows how the ponies are taught their part of the game. The mounts are first taught obedience and discipline, speed, fast turns and abrupt halts—it sometimes taking as long as five years to train one properly. Big-time players usually bring 15 to 20 ponies to each game. A national tournament game at Long Island's Meadowbrook Field rounds out the subject. Bill Stern is narrator.

THE COPACABANA REVUE (Par.)
Headliner (*A*1-2)

Featured in this subject are Juanita Juarez, popular Latin-American song star; Pancho and his orchestra; the six Samba Sirens, from the New York cafe, the Copacabana; Don Loper and Maxine Barrat, artists of the dance, and Los Hermanos Williams, acrobatic aces. The musical score includes "Americonga," "Bim Bam Bum," "Jardinera" and "Aurora."

THE FOX AND THE GRAPES (Col.)
Color Rhapsody (3502)

A crow attempts to steal Mr. Fox's lunch but the wary fox gives the crow a hot-foot. The crow decides to use strategy. He hangs a bunch of grapes on the branch and offers them to the fox in return for the lunch. The fox turns over his lunch to the crow but the crow holds on to the grapes. Late that night the fox comes back to the tree with a rocket tied to his back. He lights it and is catapulted into the tree. A battered and burned fox gets the grapes—but they're sour.

The Film Industry Responds

Within days of Pearl Harbor, President Franklin Roosevelt commissioned Hollywood to "emotionalize" the conflict and mobilize public awareness by continuing to do what it did best--produce and sell motion pictures. The front page of the December 13, 1941, issue of the Motion Picture Herald left no doubt that the industry would stand foursquare behind the government's efforts. The reaction to September 11 was more muted and introspective, with most studios scrambling to delay the premiere of films and television programs featuring terrorism themes.

M-G-M NEWS IS GOOD NEWS!

"Vanishing Virginian" Surprise Triumph

More later! Take our tip now! Keep your eye on this "sleeper"! Rich with humanity, packed with power, it will enthrall every man, woman and child in the nation. Epic performances by Frank Morgan, Kathryn Grayson and a superb cast. Directed by Frank Borzage.

"H. M. Pulham, Esq." at Radio City Music Hall

While the sensational Boston World Premiere continues to pack them in, the announcement of "H. M. Pulham, Esq." at Radio City Music Hall opening December 18th, gives thrilling evidence of the importance of this widely acclaimed production. Hedy Lamarr, Robert Young, Ruth Hussey, Charles Coburn head a perfect cast. King Vidor, director.

"Shadow Of Thin Man" Business 172% Nationwide

Hold-overs are a habit! Mr. and Mrs. Paying Public agree that Mr. and Mrs. Thin Man are a happy national institution and that Bill Powell and Myrna Loy are just what the box-office craves. Major W. S. Van Dyke, II, directed.

"Johnnie Eager" Will Make Film History

It's in the air! When you see it, when you watch Robert Taylor and Lana Turner, your pounding pulse will tell you it's the most exciting drama that Mervyn LeRoy has directed since "Fugitive From A Chain Gang." Edward Arnold's in the powerful cast.

Raves For "Babes On Broadway," New Year's Hit

Now you KNOW! Now the trade has SEEN it! Wherever you go, whatever trade paper you read, the news is Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland in "Babes On Broadway" for a Happy New Year! 400 prints are ready to welcome 1942 with bulging bank-accounts! Director, Busby Berkeley.

Motion Pictures and the War

FOR the second time in his career as a motion picture trade journalist the writer of these lines finds himself contemplating the prospect ahead as the nation enters upon a world war.

In the April 28, 1917, issue of Exhibitors Herald, an ancestor of Motion Picture Herald, the writer then being somewhat more youthful and therefore somewhat more practical, made this observation in an editorial, entitled "War and Films":

> "There is every indication that the motion picture industry is on the eve of the greatest era of prosperity in its entire history. The nation at war will not only not tend to depress conditions within the business but it will have a contrary effect. . . . Because of the peculiar nature of the motion picture business, because it offers to the public first-rate amusement and diversion at a very low price, its popularity cannot be stilled by the extraordinary business and social conditions which will prevail with the United States actively engaged in the war.
> "People must have entertainment and diversion whatever may be the stress of the times and it is certain that they will turn to the motion picture theatres in greater numbers than ever before. The motion picture amuses, entertains and educates and the price is within the reach of all. It is therefore but natural that it should be the leading wartime amusement."

This observation of 1917 has its application today, but the intervening years, and especially these recent years, have brought experiences to the nation and to the industry which cause to arise many new and many different considerations.

TWENTY-FOUR years ago the motion picture was far from its present institutional stature. While it was then, as now, the most popular form of amusement, it was during the ensuing period that it attained a maturity in its technical capacities and in its subject matter and treatment which eventually assured its present status as an incomparable influence in the life of the nation and a power of first rank in the field of public opinion and both public and private action.

The tragic events of last Sunday, growing out of the war lust of a militaristic power, have obviously accomplished certain things not contemplated in the aggressor's blueprints for conquest. At once they united and activated the spirit of the American people to the end that the whole of the American people, regardless of previous views and counter-views, are commonly dedicated to a single ideal, the service of which automatically embraces the devotion of every personal and material resource to the nation's defense and to the triumph of a decent international order.

This turn in the affairs of the nation, bringing as an accompaniment the traditional American spirit of unity, determination and whatever sacrifice the government needs or is willing to accept, instantly accomplished many things, including, for the industry of motion pictures, that desirable status under which it will no longer be plagued by parties of controversy and dispute, seeking to draw the motion picture into one partisan position or another. The motion picture is now the recorder and reflector of the American way about which there is no longer controversy or dispute.

The motion picture will establish in this war, as it did in the last, a record of patriotic devotion unsurpassed by any other agency in the life of the nation. This is preordained and predetermined because America is the homeland of the motion picture and the spirit of America has been an essential ingredient in its nurturing and in its eventual rise to dominance.

OUR cause in this war and in the total of all of the issues of the day that go with the war is, in the larger sense, an effort in behalf of the whole of humanity and of civilization. Therefore, it inevitably follows that we have particular occasion in this world of the motion picture to be concerned with making this art and industry, as completely as may be, a token of that civilization we are called upon to save.

Ships and tanks and guns can do no more than give us an opportunity to preserve and extend the civilization we are fighting for. Its preservation and its extension depends upon what we do with the opportunities that will be won upon the field of battle.

The motion picture has been a recent factor in determining the character of our civilization and it will be increasingly influential in the social stresses that will arise as the tide of war sweeps across America and around the world. Our civilization and our American way of life require that the motion picture be kept as an agency of free expression. But what is done with that freedom will be a determining factor upon the character of our civilization and our American way of life.

IF the motion picture is what we think it is and what we represent it to be it obviously has responsibilities beyond those which are inherent in merely a commercial operation—in all times and especially in times of national and international emergency. To serve the profit motive alone would be grave dereliction to high responsibility. To allow the powerful medium of the motion picture to be an influence in the direction of deterioration of the ideals of honor, justice, faith and decency for which the nation is fighting would be treachery. That will not be permitted to happen.

The present emergency only highlights the fact that in these times and in all times there is no way for the motion picture but the American way—that way which is the way of good intent and honor in all things—a record of and a reflection of the American way which is worth fighting for, at home and abroad.

Unity and War

A NEW spirit of unity for industry and country was rising imposingly at midweek in that spacious conference room of the Blackstone Hotel on Chicago's South Michigan, where many minds of both distribution and exhibition had assembled for the purpose of effecting better relations between them.

Called originally by exhibitors, and quickly winning the interest of distributors, Chicago's meeting started virtually in its very first hours, on Tuesday, to move toward a community of interests, for the first "all-out" roundtable to effect harmony in this industry in some 15 years. It moved so because terse flashes reaching the conference room told that at the very hour of the first gavel pounding air raid sirens were screeching in home towns of many a delegate on coasts both east and west. Many a delegate from opposite sides of this industry had common thought: the safety of family back home.

Many an anxious exhibitor and anxious distributor rushed to long line phones; many a delegate tried worriedly to make quick connection on distance circuits which had been jammed and on delayed schedules since the Japs so ruthlessly bombed our lands last Sunday. Those rumors of blackouts, of enemy plane invasions, of evacuations flew thick and fast—welding a common feeling unlike anything seen in this industry before. William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Loew-Metro, was heard to remark he had not seen anything in his long career in this business like the interest of so many from frequently heretofore widely opposing forces. The meeting itself is reported on pages 15, 16 and 17.

"We are at War!" And the motion picture industry awaits its orders on its functions in war—see pages 12, 13 and 14.

Schaeferizing RKO

GEORGE J. SCHAEFER, RKO president, was given the green light last Wednesday in New York by the company's board of directors to set in motion realignment of activities, with full operating authority granted to him, and this week it would seem the treatment process under Mr. Schaefer is intended to coordinate all operations of RKO under his direct authority and supervision in order to effect a more closely knit organization. This is in line with Mr. Schaefer's new deal with the company.

Joseph I. Breen whose managerial rein over studio production had, until last week, been subject to RKO's directorate, will now have full authority over that phase of operations, it was said, subject, of course, to Mr. Schaefer's approval.

About Face

"TWO-FACED WOMAN" was again aboard an eastbound train from Hollywood this week, arriving in New York Wednesday night, after undergoing a face-lifting operation at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio over the weekend. Company doctors, who employed both amputating and grafting techniques in their ministrations, were hopeful of persuading the Legion of Decency, after an inspection of their work, to reclassify the condemned attraction as "unobjectionable for adults." The picture had been withdrawn from circulation by Metro.

The Legion had condemned the Garbo picture, and New York's Archbishop Spellman had then decreed it "an occasion of sin and dangerous to public morals . . ." Condemnation stirred nationwide attention from social and religious organizations and the press.

Amputations by MGM studio doctors included certain lines of dialogue and footage which had been indicated as offensive from the Legion's viewpoint.

The grafting process, which required recall of Greta Garbo and Melvyn Douglas for filming of added scenes, supplied the picture with a sequence in which the husband in the story is depicted as learning his masqerading wife's identity early in the picture and pretending thereafter to be tempted by her to the verge of illicit dalliance. He didn't detect the fraud until near the close of the original version.

Steps thus taken by the studio bring the story of "Two-Faced Woman" into parallel with the story of the company's "Chocolate Soldier" — which used the plot of "The Guardsman" — save for reversal of the husbandly and wifely roles. That film portrayed the husband as masquerading to test the wife's fidelity, but audiences were told early in the picture that the wife was aware of the attempted deception.

Studio opinion is that the changes made alter completely the attitude towards marriage expressed in the film. It is MGM's intention to effect these changes in all prints of the picture if the Legion of Decency authorities concur in this view and reclassify the production.

First War Orders

POLICE Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine of New York City on Wednesday summoned all exhibitors, circuit executives, theatre managers and their assistants to an emergency meeting on Friday morning. The meeting to be held at Loew's Ziegfield theatre at 10 A.M. was called to issue information and instructions on their duties in the event of an air attack during theatre hours. Blackout regulations were to be handed out.

Commissioner Valentine and police and fire officials were to outline the correct methods of handling audiences and to describe methods of dealing with bomb damage, incendiaries and other emergencies.

Also on Wednesday, as New York City experienced air raid alarms in the morning for the third time, Governor Herbert Lehman decreed test blackouts in all communities in the state. He ordered that the public be informed in advance, however. New York City, with its own air raid defense administration, was also considering an early test blackout of its bright lights.

Repercussions to "Pic"

SHARP rebuke for freelance Hollywood publicity and photographing stunts tending to reflect unfavorably on the industry was contained in a resolution passed by the Studio Publicity Directors Committee in Hollywood, last Thursday.

Subject of the extraordinary session of the studio publicity heads was a four-page layout purportedly showing a rather Rabelaisian "Hollywood bedtime party" in the December 9th issue of Pic, the Street and Smith fan magazine. As reported in Motion Picture Herald last week, the pictures were full of the antics of night gowned dancers, male and female, and the captions intimated that the photographs had been made at a film studio, that the participants were film personages. Such was not the case, the party actually having been a publicity stunt in behalf of a night club dance troupe managed as a sideline by Mitchell Leisen, Paramount director.

The publicity directors' resolution condemned "publicity practices in behalf of individuals without regard to effect upon industry goodwill." Direct reference to the Pic spread was omitted, but the resolution was generally accepted by Hollywood press agentry as a warning against the recurrence of free-lancer's stunts reflecting on the industry's good name.

Telecasters Hope

TOTAL suspension for the duration, the wartime fate that befell the British television industry does not immediately threaten American television, executives hope. On the contrary they express the belief that U. S. visual broadcasting will be utilized fully for defense instruction and as a news and morale medium.

Alfred H. Morton, NBC vice-president in charge of television on Monday recalled plans submitted to defense officials for television's part in civilian defense and expressed confidence that they would now be used. They were described in Motion Picture Herald's November 15th issue.

Television stations were close behind radio Sunday and through the week with special news programs and analyses. Augmenting radio bulletins they transmitted maps, personal interviews with the "war experts," pictures and much film. The latter included on NBC, March of Time material, films of the Pacific war area just brought back by Mrs. Carveth Wells and newsreel and library footage showing the battle area and the forces involved. CBS was on the air Sunday in a special broadcast arranged by Gilbert Seldes and map reports and news interviews are scheduled at regular intervals. Interviews with ace foreign newspaper correspondents were featured by WCBW.

Theatre television, however, is definitely tabled for the duration. Even before the outbreak of hostilities, Thomas F. Joyce, vice-president of the RCA manufacturing company, in a luncheon address to the St. Louis Managers Bureau admitted that the RCA large screen television system demonstrated at New York last spring had been called off indefinitely because of the demands of defense on RCA personnel and plant.

Entertaining the Army

FIVE times a year, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, in Hollywood, puts out a casting directory, in a program in which the studios cooperate. More than 2,000 pictures of players are used, and the books are distributed to studios on a non-profit basis. As each new edition is out, the old ones are collected, much on the same basis as the telephone books.

Last week, the Academy found a new use for the old casting directories.

More than a half ton of them was contributed to the Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy which will distribute them to the recreation rooms of military camps of the 12th Regional Area, which includes all the Pacific Coast. Plans are under way to distribute others to Eastern camps.

In Hollywood, it's a casting directory; in the encampments, it's a movie fan book of pretty gals.

Tilting the Scale

ADMISSIONS continue to rise. Theatres in Milwaukee and St. Louis, and in other cities, have advanced them to eliminate handling of pennies, under the Federal tax, joining exhibitors in scores of cities who had previously acted similarly.

Other news of generally increased admissions comes from Seattle, where for the first time a first run theatre, John Danz's Palomar, is charging a higher rate weekends.

An Oscar for Charlie

ELEANOR Roosevelt thinks Charles Pettijohn rates an "Oscar" all for himself.

Mr. Pettijohn, prominent Democrat, and general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America," has been preaching all over the country freedom of expression—and, therefore, freedom of production for the stage and screen," Mrs. Roosevelt remarked Saturday in her syndicated column "My Day"; and she agrees with a friend's suggestion that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award the Hoosier diplomat one of the bronze figures handed each year to actors.

Moreover, the panegyric continued, "He has emphasized as well, that all freedom brings responsibility; that, if the stage and screen are not to be censored then they must not abuse the privilege, and must use their mediums for better education, and for a general raising of standards, and moral values."

Who's Buying What

THE large circuits are winding up their purchases of the early new season product. Thus, the Paramount and Loew chains this week bought Paramount's first two blocks. So did the Fanchon and Marco circuit, in St. Louis, and the Griffith circuit, Texas, Kansas, Missouri, Arizona, and New Mexico.

The Minnesota Amusement Company, Paramount circuit affiliate, has bought Republic's 1941-42 output. So has the M. A. Lightman circuit in Washington, D. C., and Virginia.

United Artists' Minneapolis branch reports deals with the Minnesota Amusement Company, the Franklin Amusement Company, E. R. Ruben's theatres, the Berger Amusement Company, the Baehr Brothers, Henry Greene, Ben Friedman, and the Miner Amusement Company.

War's Grim Pictures

NAZI film propagandists are losing the cock-sure tone of their early blitzkrieg "terror films," John Grierson, Canada's film commissioner, has told the Canadian Press Association.

The latest German films seized by the Allies and studied by Mr. Grierson, he said, no longer conceal the agony of war as did the German screen documents of the French and Norwegian campaigns. The new films are evidence of an important change in Nazi thinking, according to Mr. Grierson, who last week signed a three-year contract to head Canadian film propaganda.

"In the early pictures they showed no dead . . . and tried to glamorize the German soldier, making him appear a man engaged in a crusade," Mr. Grierson said.

INDUSTRY 'AWAITS ORDERS' ON ITS FUNCTION IN WAR

Early Excitement Cuts Grosses Up to 70 Per Cent as Nation Clears for Action; Leaders Pledge Cooperation in Effort

War, bursting forth in mid-Pacific on Sunday without preliminary warning this week gripped the motion picture industry as it did all life, all business in the United States. All plans, business and personal became suddenly contingent on the grim problem of a quick national readjustment.

In the west coast production center, in exhibition and distribution the industry concentrated at once on rendering national service and adapting its routines to new wartime problems.

The probable effect of hostilities on attendance, censorship and government control of newsreels and other branches of the screen, blackouts, power shortages, the fate of Far-Eastern representatives and a score of other questions remained unanswered. The industry, like many others, awaited orders. But there was general certainty among executives, in New York and elsewhere, that the screen would be called upon to make important contributions, through entertainment and instruction, to the national morale.

Newsreels were the branch of the industry most immediately affected by the outbreak of hostilities. The story was big. Staffs gathered hurriedly at New York Sunday afternoon and by Monday afternoon war extras were on their way to theatres from all five companies.

Pledges of full cooperation and reports that the industry was at the instant ready were flashed to the President on Monday by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture producers and Distributors of America and by George J. Schaefer chairman of the committee cooperating for national defense. Many other screen organizations volunteered their talents, and energies too.

Attendance Slumps Amid First Alarms

Attendance dropped first on the Pacific Coast, and then through the rest of the nation as film patrons remained at home to follow a constant succession of alarms and bulletins on their radios. Only among the newsreel theatres was patronage maintained, and some of them, too, reported attendance much less than anticipated.

Estimates on the percentage of decline placed it as high as 70 per cent of normal in some instances. It was certain that the President's message to Congress on Monday and his radio report Tuesday evening reached the largest number of listeners ever to gather around American radio receivers.

Officials in Washington who had observed the behavior in other countries under war conditions expressed the belief that for a few days the motion picture theatres would feel the effects of our entry into the war and of any blackout programs that might be instituted but that thereafter the people would return to their normal way of life.

SHELVE FILM PROBE AMID SENATE UNITY

One immediate example of the unifying effect of the Japanese attack was the abandonment of Senate film hearings launched in September to investigate "war propaganda in motion pictures and radio." The political unity was manifested at Washington with isolationist, interventionist, labor, conservative and all other political groups amalgamating in a solid war front almost as soon as word of the attack had been published.

Senator D. Worth Clark of Idaho, chairman of the subcommittee which in September and October made a Roman holiday out of its hearings of film industry witnesses said that his first interest, and that of all other committeemen, was America's victory. He said they had no time to think of the investigation and indicated it was permanently shelved.

Until the situation shakes down the country will follow developments as they occur; after things shake down the routine will reassert itself, as it has in England, modified only by the exigencies of war and, as in England, motion pictures will become an outstanding medium for recreation and, momentarily, forgetfulness of a strife-torn world, they predicted.

Dropped Sunday Night

Metropolitan areas along the nation's two seaboards suffered the largest decline in theatre patronage starting on Sunday evening. Declines were registered in the midwest and in rural areas, but, generally were slighter and behind the dip in New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and other major cities. Blackouts were an important factor in keeping people at home.

New York's business was said to have dropped almost 30 per cent by Tuesday evening with first run and neighborhood houses reporting dropoffs. Air raid warning tests on Tuesday also hit film attendance. Only theatres to hold up to normal were the newsreel houses.

Broadway business returned to a more normal state Wednesday with good matinee attendance reported following depletion on Tuesday night as people listened to the President. Wednesday evening managers said they saw indications that the big city public was resuming its entertainment habits.

In New York most first-run theatres maintained news ticker or radio wires in their lobbies and lounges, but managers had generally agreed not to interrupt programs with bulletins unless they involved local safety or were of the utmost importance.

Theatres in Hartford and other New England industrial centers reported that Sunday, Monday and Tuesday were among the worst days in their business history. Matinee attendance held up fairly well, however.

From San Francisco on Tuesday came the reports that marquee, exit and front lights in motion picture theatres were out during two hours of blackouts on Monday night, and that grosses were down at least 60 per cent during the blackouts. The local radio stations were off the air from six to nine o'clock that night and again at two o'clock Tuesday morning and at noon.

In Seattle and in the entire Pacific Northwest territory, theatre business hit its lowest point in many months, it was reported, as a result of the Monday night blackout. It was expected that box offices would suffer similar drops on Tuesday and Wednesday. All theatres and public places closed at 10:30 P. M., complying with Army and Navy requirements. Radio stations in the territory with the exception of IRO, the 50,000 watt Columbia Broadcasting station in Seattle, were off the air from 7:00 P. M. Monday until 7:00 A. M. Tuesday. Station IRO was chosen by Army officials as the official station for dissemination of news. All nightly commercial broadcasts were banned until further notice.

Canadian Precautions

Canada took air raid precautions on Monday, including total blackouts, affecting motion picture theatres in the Pacific West Coast territory of the Dominion Government.

Vancouver, Victoria and other cities on the lower British Columbia mainland have undergone complete blackouts from dusk to dawn since the Japanese attacks on the U. S. on Sunday. There was no indication of what the exhibitors' position is in this new situation, but business undoubtedly will be adversely affected, it was said.

Latest statistics issued by the Canadian government indicate that of the 116 theatres in the province of British Columbia, 37 are in the Vancouver district and five in adjoining New Westminster. A total of 45 theatres are currently being affected by the blackout in that district.

In Oakland, theatre grosses for Sunday and Monday were off about 15 per cent. Oakland had a partial blackout when rumors spread that an attacking force was in the vicinity of San Francisco harbor.

In Los Angeles, theatre attendance remained below normal on Sunday with many patrons fearing an air attack or sabotage at aircraft plants.

Reaction to war news in Detroit brought a drop of 33⅓ to 50 per cent in theatre busias patrons turned to the radio for news instead. Exhibitors in that city believe that actual war will result in immediately increasing employment and steady business as workers turn to film theatres for relaxation. It is expected that many houses will adopt matinees or unusual hours to meet the demands of workers on different shifts in defense plants.

Chicago Loop theatres reported business off seven per cent on Sunday, with the exception of the Oriental, which said it had one of its biggest Sundays in history.

Less in Midwest

Cincinnati, Dayton and Columbus motion picture theatres suffered only a slight decrease, reported on Sunday. St. Louis first-run house receipts dropped 15 to 20 per cent. Bulletins of the Japanese attack were announced to matinee audiences on Sunday.

Tri-State's circuit headquarters in Des Moines reported grosses off about 33 per cent on Sunday. First run houses broadcast spot news bulletins. Most suburban theatres reported business at average levels.

Box office receipts on Sunday night and Monday in downtown Atlanta theatres slumped

Studios, Theatres Plan for Wartime Operation and Aid

because patrons remained at their radios. Dallas reported no noticeable change either day. Managers of Indianapolis theatres said business was not affected. A few houses reported that attendance dropped slightly.

Minneapolis houses' Sunday business was moderately off with many managers attributing the slight decrease to a heavy snow and sleet storm in addition to war news reaction.

Theatres in Washington, D. C., experienced a marked setback on Sunday with business continued slack until late Monday afternoon. The city was placed on war footing with partial blackouts, military guards on all war offices and augmented working schedules.

In Providence, only one theatre reported business off, and from Utica, word came that first reaction to the war brought a holiday spirit in restaurants and theatres.

Hollywood Studies Wartime Routine

War conditions, which came to Southern California with a shock accentuated by the region's long held belief that this area, with its concentration of aircraft plants, would be the first attacked, had been rationalized and adjusted to by midweek so far as picture making was concerned.

Plans to coordinate the efforts of studios to cooperate with the government and local officials in any and all possible way, were to be discussed by studio managers on Thursday at a meeting called by Fred W. Beetson, vice-president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers. Cooperative police and fire protection, air raid precautions training for employes and other matters of community protection were to be discussed.

First physical manifestation of war's impingement on industry came four hours after the first radio flash of hostilities when the army requested a loan of 20 studio trucks, was furnished 35 and was told 100 more, with drivers, were on 24-hour availability.

The psychological effect of news of the war was to clarify attitudes of diversified groups towards the immediate future and long-range objectives as reservists, potential selectees, individuals in all branches of industry found certain obligation and procedure abruptly established for them. Company as well as personal plans which had been hanging fire, conditioned on developments, became definite to general satisfaction and relief of tension.

Led by Will H. Hays, who telegraphed an industry pledge of cooperation and service to the President, executives of studios and organizations put Hollywood on record in a succession of messages to White House.

Labor organizations promptly adopted a no-strike policy to be observed throughout the emergency. Guilds did likewise.

An anticipated rush of studios to announce plans for pictures pointed at the enemy had not materialized at midweek, although there were scattered reports of intention to revise some scripts in preparation, which had previously assigned no national identification to spies, saboteurs and foreign agents in their plots.

Some studios were also believed registering titles for possible use, which is a customary procedure for taking advantage of news-trends.

No overnight scripts of anti-Japanese character had been submitted to the Production Code Administration for approval up to midweek. Inquiry as to the stand PCA would take with regard to this type of material elicited a reply that each would be considered on its merits, checked against the text of the Code and dealt with accordingly. The preliminary attitude is that filming of war material is a policy matter rather than a code matter. No expression as to the organized industry's position with respect to this type of film has been enunciated and no government wish has been heard.

Direct cooperation with military authorities included the turning over of studio machine guns, side arms and rifles to the army, which collected them in trucks. Studio technicians promptly assured producers they would be able to provide ersatz weapons to satisfy camera requirements and sound track to accompany non-exploding firearms with realistic reverberations.

Schedules Rearranged

Shooting schedules have been rearranged to avoid night location work. Sea exteriors have also been curtailed as the navy restricted harbor and coastwise shipping.

The only location crew reported at work in the war area is a 20th Century-Fox group of five headed by James Havens which was photographing background for "To the Shores of Tripoli." The studio had not heard from them at midweek.

The grounding of private planes caused some shifting of exterior production schedules and inconvenienced some units on location. Authorities assured studios special permits for necessary flights would be forthcoming in the near future.

Tightening of guards around studio premises and intensified credential inspection was a normal result of new conditions.

A survey of studio technicians made by military authorities a year ago was expected to be the basis of a possible draft of specialized mechanics, machinists and other personnel. Unions have been operating on a spread-the-work policy, and are in position to cope with any immediate drain upon this type of manpower.

Augmentation of the army training film program was seen as Lieutenant Colonel Richard Schlosberg and Captain Sy Bartlett arrived from Washington Tuesday. Colonel Schlosberg said plans were under way to commission top Hollywood talent.

The Academy Research Council currently has 10 army pictures in work, at various studios. Secrecy has surrounded all of them and only citizens are permitted to work on them. The productions and those handling them are subject to the Espionage and Military Secrets Act.

Ten IATSE business representatives began an immediate survey of the technical talents of their members to determine special qualifications for civilian defense. Many thousands of studio employes have already joined Los Angeles warden units.

RKO this week moved forward the starting date for "Bombadier," high budget army air corps picture, from January 15th to December 15th. 20th Century-Fox became the first company to announce a war title when it reported that "Secret Agent of Japan," an original screenplay by John Larkin, would go before the cameras on January 2nd. Sol Wurtzel is producer.

Representatives of Japanese press agencies were dropped from the accredited lists of studio correspondents Monday. Many members of the coast Japanese colony were detained by officials. Paramount, followed by several other film studios, discharged Japanese janitors and maintenance employes. A number of film personalities were reported to have lost their Japanese household servants when police confined all Japanese to their homes.

Newsreel, Radio Controls In Effect

Censorship of newsreels and radio became effective almost at once. The 1917 Espionage Act was invoked Sunday night and the army and navy censorship of news pictures and radio news in effect semi-officially for some time was implemented by law.

All newsreel companies reported that their Hawaii correspondents had filmed the Jap raids on Honolulu and that they had films ready for shipment to the statements. Transportation of the reels was still impossible late Tuesday, however, with clipper service suspended. Newsreel companies sought permission to charter a plane. Pictures were to be submitted to army and navy censors at Washington before release and none of the newsreel executives would even guess at how soon the pictures would be available for theatres.

The first newsreels on the war rushed to theatres Monday showed the last visit of Japanese envoys to the State Department on Sunday,

Hays, for Organized Industry, Schaefer, for War Committee, Pledge FDR Support

Immediate response from the industry followed the U. S. declaration of war on Monday.

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, acting for the organized industry, wired the president a resolution passed Monday by the association's board of directors, the heads of all major companies, pledging their support and service. They said:

"The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America hereby pledge our service and support to the President and the Nation, and reiterate our resolve to maintain the continued flow of wholesome entertainment as an essential contribution to military and civilian morale and to national spirit."

The board of directors participating include: Barney Balaban, Paramount; Nate J. Blumberg, Universal; Jack Cohn, Columbia; Cecil B. deMille, deMille Productions; E. W. Hammons, Educational; E. B. Hatrick, Cosmopolitan; Arthur W. Kelly, United Artists; Sidney R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox; Hal E. Roach, Roach Studios; George J. Schaefer, RKO Radio; Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew's; Walter F. Wanger, Wanger Productions, and Harry M. Warner, Warner Bros. Pictures.

George J. Schaefer, chairman of the all-industry committee which has been cooperating in defense plans, on Monday also wired the President, as follows:

"The Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, representing more than 12,000 theatre operators and the artists, producers, distributors, newsreels and trade press, reaffirms pledges of all possible service to you, the national government and the people of the United States in this emergency."

OFFICIAL FILM OFFICE EXPECTED

the burning of papers in the Jap embassy yard, scenes in the White House press room as first war bulletins were released, the roundup of Japanese residents here, first enlistments in the armed forces after war started and the presidential message to Congress.

Pictures of the Hawaiian islands, Philippines, the Japanese forces, United States army and navy and air corps and defense activities here and overseas were combined in special footage from recent news film and library material. Several of the reels traced the history of the development of the Pacific crisis. The March of Time announced release on Thursday of a special edition to be titled "Your America at War."

There was no immediate indication of what plans the government might have for control of films during wartime. Among the government agencies seen as potential administrators of a wartime film program are Office of Information headed by Colonel William Donovan, the film sections of the army and navy signal corps, and John Hay Whitney's films section of the Office of Latin-American Affairs were seen as possible nuclei for the foundation of a wartime official film office. It was also considered probable that the activities of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, which has been supervising production of government training films in Hollywood, would be greatly augmented.

There was no indication at Washington that the censorship proposals now under consideration would go further than to control military news—already under the strict hand of the War and Navy Departments. There is a possibility, however, that the military departments will ask for the shutting down or transfer of any coastal radio stations which are operating on frequencies interfering with military or naval traffic, particularly over the Pacific.

Navy control of international communications was evident after 5 p.m., Sunday, when the department completed its job of taking over the consorship of military news from the Pacific possessions. While up to that time there was considerable information coming in to the United States from Hawaii, thereafter there was a marked diminution in the volume.

See Government Films

Some newsreel men also foresaw government news films, although not immediately. They pointed out that there are a number of specially trained camera crews in the various signal corps, including units which were stationed at Hawaii. Their pictures may be edited for public consumption, it was said. Army, Navy, and Marine officers and men have studied newsreel techniques with the commercial companies recently.

Control of radio broadcasting was more immediate.

The Defense Communications Board swung into action Monday, and the Federal Communications Commission immediately accepted a recommendation to cancel all monitoring schedules which have heretofore been maintained by broadcasting stations after midnight so that frequencies could be monitored. This action was taken in order that full use may be made of broadcast stations for defense purposes.

Wednesday the President gave the Defense Communications Board full control over radio. Its defense orders will be administered through the FCC.

Radio stations along the entire Pacific Coast were silenced Monday night and Tuesday by reports of approaching enemy aircraft and eastern seaboard stations were also notified that they faced similar measures at any moment.

The Navy, however, already had taken over control of international communications, including stations in the Philippines, Hawaii and other Pacific possessions, and "several agencies," Chairman James L. Fly reported, were discussing censorship, the FCC standing on the sidelines with no censorship recommendations of its own but ready to place its information and facilities at the disposition of any agency which took over the work.

The Navy also is expected to need some communications properties, Mr. Fly said, but is understood to have worked out arrangements with the owning companies. There is no present indication that the Navy or any other Government agency will need broadcasting properties, which the President is empowered by the Communications Act to take over in war-time.

Machinery for the prompt silencing of broadcasting in areas threatened with air raids was set up Tuesday by the FCC whose field inspectors will act as liaison between the interceptor commands of the Army and radio stations. Silence orders of the Army will be transmitted through the inspectors and, it was warned, such an order "carries with it the authority of the FCC."

The set-up placed inspectors at the interceptor command headquarters at Michell Field, New York; Seattle, Tampa, Fla., and Riverside, Cal. Arrangements will be made for a method of signaling all stations in an area at one time. Additional inspectors will be placed on duty in 19 more cities.

Orient Film Business Ends for Duration

The war with Japan virtually closes American film distribution in the Far East, with the exception of the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand and India, in the opinion of foreign department officials of major home offices. In Japan itself, most of the majors have withdrawn their representatives over a period of a year, following governmental monetary and quota restrictions. The Far East market, exclusive of Australia and New Zealand, is estimated to represent an annual revenue of $5,000,000 to the industry. Approximately 10,000,000 yen due American film companies is frozen in Japan.

Foreign managers, however, foresaw no immediate loss of the large markets in Australia, New Zealand, Java, Burma and the Dutch East Indies. It was expected that even Manila theatres would remain in operation barring actual invasion of the Philippine capital. The Massee-Barnett Company, film shippers at New York, reported yesterday that they were still handling films for many far east cities. They foresaw delay in shippings, but doubted that trade routes would be closed down completely.

Outbreak of the war found few film representatives in Japan, but a great many in the war danger zones of the Far East. Lewis Pepperman, United Artist manager in Tokyo, was in communication with his home office last Friday from that Japanese city. Harold Dunn and M. Shathin of Warner Bros. were last heard from in Tokyo.

Other Far East foreign department representatives are concentrated mostly in Manila, including I. Cohen, MGM; Charles Core, United Artists; Dan Lederman, 20th Century-Fox; Cliff Almy, Warner Bros.; George Kollman, RKO; Ed Goldman, Columbia; Floyd Henry, Paramount and L. DePrida, Universal. Others, last heard from in Shanghai, are J. D. Berman, MGM; Floyd Crowder, RKO; A. L. Kaplan, Warner Bros., and Robert Perkins, Universal. Al Daff of Universal and Sidney Albright of Fox are in Batavia, Java. James McIlhenny of Fox and Robert Lury of Universal are in Singapore. Fox's Far Eastern supervisor, Arthur G. Doyle, is believed to be en route to the United States. A. Swemmelaar of Warner Bros. is in Hong Kong. Others reported to be in the Singapore zone are Max Baker, United Artists; E. Moses, Warner Bros.; A. C. McIver, RKO; J. A. Groves, Paramount; K. H. Tann, Universal, and Nonee Sen, Columbia.

Some concern for the safety of Maurice Silverstein, heading Metro's South Seas division with headquarters in Singapore, was expressed at Loew's early this week. Mr. Silverstein, a native of Syracuse, sailed from San Francisco on the S. S. Mariposa on November 14th, with his bride.

Morey Marcus of United Artists and Charley Mayer of 20th Century-Fox sailed for the Far East on the President Polk from San Francisco last Saturday. The ship was called back to port on Sunday and arrived there safely the following day.

Will Tighten Priority Curbs

Because of the fact that the government for more than 15 months has been moving steadily toward a war economy, it is expected in Washington that there will be few major changes in the immediate future.

Already, control had been exercised over vital materials and plans had been put under way to continuously expand the military production of the country. Priorities already were applicable to the film industry, as exampled by the restrictions on the use of steel and certain other commodities and the ban on non-essential construction which had practically halted all theatre building.

The first indication of a wartime policy of theatre operation appeared from Philadelphia on Tuesday when the Warner circuit management announced that there would be no change in its Philadelphia zone policy of presenting entertainment only at all its theatres.

A meeting of circuit officials decided that newsbroadcasts or press wires will not be announced inside theatres and only the regular newsreels and scheduled feature films and shorts will be shown. While news flashes may bring extra patronage to the theatres, circuit officials said, they feel that their houses can do much to bolster public morale "by providing uninterrupted entertainment."

Many Screen Groups Offer Their Services

Theatre, production and distribution organizations in every section of the country responded to the war emergency with almost immediate offers of assistance in any way, shape or form to the Unted States.

In Hollywood studio unions and guilds, including the writers, actors and publicity groups, offered their talents to industry defense committees and to the President and military and naval officials.

The Screen Publicists in New York on Monday notified Washington that it was ready to apply in any way requested the radio screen publicity and advertising talents of its members.

At Chicago the MPTOA offered the government the use of its theatres and screens in any manner which will aid defense or morale.

From the National Association of Broadcasters came a telegram signed by Neville Miller, president, that "the broadcasters of the United States place their services at your command. We stand ready to serve in every way possible."

EXHIBITORS AND DISTRIBUTORS WRITE A PROGRAM FOR UNITY AT CHICAGO

"Coordination of Policy, Action" on Five Points in Industry Relations, Including Trade Practices, Taxation, Priorities

by MARTIN QUIGLEY, JR.
in Chicago

Five prongs pointing to industry unity and a solid front to outsiders were formed Wednesday, at the all-industry meeting in Chicago, disturbed, but united, by the war.

Wielder of the prongs will be the Motion Picture Industry Conference Committee, which held its first meeting Wednesday under the chairmanship of Jack Hirsch, after approval of the new united film industry program.

That program, in brief, provides for unified action on taxation; for the same, to protect the industry's good name; for manifold good-will activities; for obtainment of priority ratings; for a program to adjust or modify policies objectionable to any sector of the industry.

Organizations represented at the Chicago Unity meeting will now call meetings to ratify action taken. Reports will be made to Jack Kirsch in Chicago. After approval is received the MPICC and its five subcommittees will begin to function officially.

The meeting adjourned at 3:20 P.M. Wednesday with many of the delegates hurrying to catch trains.

The executive committee of the MPTOA approved the unity resolution.

Thus, came results from the first all-industry meeting in over a decade and a half. Delegates, at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, had struggled desperately and with apparent sincerity, to achieve "unity," that word so long used with but small meaning.

The fact that almost everyone had a different idea of exactly what "unity" should mean was overshadowed by the determination of the delegates to take steps which would improve relations between exhibitors and distributors and which would promote cooperation on general subjects.

The blackouts on the West and East Coasts naturally turned exhibitor organization officers and company executives repeatedly away from industry problems to the welfare of families in the threatened areas. But the international situation tended to reemphasize the need for cooperation in the motion picture industry.

"For Peace, Not Disarmament"

The keynote of the meeting, from the exhibitors' point of view, was expressed in the words of Abram F. Myers, chairman of National Allied, "this is a peace parley—not a disarmament conference."

William F. Rodgers, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and one of the chief distributor spokesmen, commented: "In all my 32 years in the business no other meeting compared with this one in importance and in number of industry leaders present."

The meeting is a "last chance to regain lost ground before we get more legislation and more lawsuits," Sidney Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox president, warned, in a letter read by Mr. Myers.

Although the conference had been announced for Tuesday only, preliminary steps were taken then. Tuesday afternoon, following shorts talks by many on unity and cooperation, a committee was formed to plan an organization to consider the various concrete proposals submitted by individuals, and exhibitor organizations. The members of this committee were: for the exhibitors, Col. H. A. Cole and Sidney Samuelson, Allied; Ed. Kuykendall and Max A. Cohen, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; Robert H. Poole and Leo F. Wolcott, the exhibitor groups without national affiliation (the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, several of its members'; the Intermountain Theatre Owners Association, Allied of Iowa and the Independent Theatre Owners of New York. And for the distributors, Steve Broidy, the non-consenting companies; Tom Connors and Neil F. Agnew, the consenting companies.

A five-point program of some specifications was presented to the Wednesday session, by Mr. Connors, for the committee, which spent most of Tuesday night in discussion, and also reported through Mr. Connors that of "unique importance" was the prevalence of "complete harmony" and that "in all its discussions and debates, it found a complete understanding in every direction."

With "unanimous approval," echoed immediately by the delegates, the committee presented, for Wednesday consideration, the following program:

"1. Co-ordination of policy and action in reference to taxation.

"2. Co-ordination of policy and action in protecting the good name and integrity of the industry as a whole.

"3. Formulation of plans for institutional advertising and other goodwill activities.

"4. Protecting the necessary supplies of the industry by securing proper priority ratings.

"5. Formulation of a program providing, if possible, for the adjustment, or modification of the policies or practices of one branch or member thereof which are opposed by any other branch or a substantial portion thereof.

"It is the recommendation of this committee," it added, "that the forming of a Motion Picture Conference Committee shall be constituted as follows: five members of Allied States Association; five members of M. P. T. O. A.; five members of independent exhibitor groups; distributor companies—Columbia, MGM, Paramount, Producers Releasing Corp., RKO, Republic, Monogram, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Bros., United Artists Corp. and Universal Pictures.

"Further, it is the recommendation of this committee that inasmuch as the MPICC is a designated body drawn from the entire industry it may proceed to set up such rules of conduct as it may deem proper and further, it may appoint such subcommittees as it feels may be necessary to carry out to fulfillment this industry's unity program. In the forming of MPICC (Motion Picture Industry Conference Committee) your committee took into consideration the all-embracing inter-industry program and recommends that voting power therein be excluded. Unity must be the aim and purpose of the MPICC for the benefit of all."

Members Named

Immediate members of the MPICC are: for the MTOA, Fred Wehrenberg, H. V. Harvey, Max A. Cohen, Lewen Pizor, Edward Kuykendall; for the Allied, Colonel H. A. Cole, Roy Harrold, Sidney Samuelson, Martin G. Smith, Jack Kirsch; for the "independents," Robert Poole, Bob White, John Rugar, Leo Wolcott, Harry Brandt; for the distributors, William F. Rodgers, Tom Connors, Neil Agnew, Abe Montague, James R. Grainger, Steve Broidy.

Permanent members will be named after delegates have reported to parent organizations.

Mr. Kirsch was named chairman of the main conference committee. The subcommittees to work on each of the five points in the resolution adopted at the unity meeting were:

Point 1—Messrs. Cole, Kuykendall, Brandt, Vogel, Spyros Skouras, Schaefer and Kalmine.

Point 2—Messrs. Kent, Schaefer, Balaban, Poole, Kuykendall, Cole and Brandt.

Point 3—Heads of advertising and publicity departments of all distributors; Leo Brecher, Lionel Wasson, Fred Wehrenberg, Lewen Pizor, Leonard Goldenson, Pete Wood, Don Rossiter and Moe Rosenberg.

Point 4—Joseph Bernhard and members of

"LAST CHANCE," KENT PREDICTS

"This is our last chance to regain lost ground before we get more legislation and more lawsuits," warned Sidney Kent, president of Twentieth Century Fox, in a long and pregnant plea for cooperation, read to the Chicago "unity" assembly by Abram F. Myers, National Allied general counsel. Mr. Kent's letter also introduced Thomas F. Connors, formerly of MGM, now Mr. Kent's executive assistant, and his representative at Chicago.

Labor was in public favor for many years, but now it faces "the most drastic laws against any class, ever intended in our country," said Mr. Kent, drawing a parallel with the film industry. "We face the same thing if we continue our internal agitations—we will earn just what we get," he warned.

Mr. Kent reminded that although exhibitors typically have asserted they faced ruin—"We have all survived, and gone ahead." He also asked the distributors to realize that the independent exhibitor "is an economic necessity, not a hardship."

He deplored the agitation of recent years—"taking the place of good-will, and cooperation"; and he noted that, before then, "while the results which we obtained in the past were not always perfect, we kept together."

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, was praised by Mr. Kent, as an exemplar of cooperation, adding that if others had done as much to preserve cooperation, the industry would already have unity.

WAR HELPS PROGRESS TO 'UNITY'

his priorities committee: Sidney Samuelson, Carter Barron and William Crockett.

Point 5—The entire MPICC of 15 exhibitor representatives and 11 distributors.

First detailed consideration of unity plans and proposals began with the arrival of the first delegation in Chicago. Sunday afternoon, members of the Allied Committee, including Mr. Myers, Mr. Cole, Mr. Samuelson, Roy Harrold, Martin G. Smith, and Jack Kirsch, of Illinois Allied chairman of the conference, met to form plans. The session lasted into the night; but, as Col. Cole remarked, "almost as much time was spent listening to the radio war news as was spent considering plans for the meeting."

Monday, the exhibitor groups to be represented at the meeting, held separate discussions on positions they could adopt on unity proposals.

Although special groups held small meetings the chief business was transacted at the Congress Hotel by the Allied Committee, and by the various non-affiliated groups at a round table discussion in the Drake Hotel, sponsored by Harry Brandt of the ITO of New York.

Individuals Confer

The PCCITO delegates reported planning to press their 11-point program included Mr. Poole, executive secretary; L. O. Lukan, Jack Y. Berman, H. V. Harvey, Robert White. The PCCITO men also conferred at length with Mr. Brandt and members of other exhibitor groups not affiliated with National Allied or the MPTOA.

E. L. Feaslee leader of the Northwest Allied, discussed with the whole Allied Committee the product difficulties in Minnesota following the anti-decree bill. They persuaded the group to appeal to MGM, for the Minnesota theatres not able to obtain that company's product since the state law was signed.

In addition to the PCCITO group those present at the meeting Monday called by Harry Brandt included Leo F. Wolcott, William F. Crockett, Harry C. Arthur, Jr., John Harris, John Rugar, Myron Blank, Robert Barton.

Tuesday morning several exhibitor organizations held last-minute conferences to further their plans for the main unity meeting. The Allied committee again met at the Congress and the MPTOA delegates talked at the Blackstone. H. M. Richey, MGM exhibitor contact, was liaison between exhibitor groups and the distributors.

Shortly after 1:30 P.M. Mr. Kirsch called the unity meeting to order in the Crystal Ballroom of the Blackstone where about 75 delegates and 25 local exhibitors were assembled. The chairman introduced Mr. Myers, principal speaker.

Harmony is "Necessity"

Mr. Myers said, commenting on the war: "the dislocations of production and labor, the calling of millions of men to the colors, the mounting public debt and the ever-increasing demands for higher taxes, the need for still closer cooperation with the Government—all these will gravely affect an industry even so far removed from the manufacture of guns and tanks and ships as is the motion picture industry. There is no person too great or too small to escape the impact of world events. Harmony among persons having a common interest is desirable at all times; it is a necessity in times like these.

"It seems inevitable," he continued, "that there will be increasing pressure for stricter regulation of industries by the Government. The motion picture industry, always in an exposed position, may again feel the heavy hand of an inept bureaucracy on its shoulders. Possibly there is nothing we can do to prevent this. The most certain way to invite burdensome regulation is for the industry continually to demonstrate its inability to govern itself. I am convinced that the assembled trustees of the motion picture industry realize as fully as I do the need for putting its house in order."

"ABANDON DECREE FOR CODE": LEO WOLCOTT

One of the first resolutions at Chicago, Tuesday, came from Leo Wolcott, president of the Iowa-Nebraska Allied. He proposed the industry abandon the decree, and operate under a fair trade practice code. He also asserted the decree's arbitration system was inordinately expensive, and had failed to give exhibitors satisfaction. His resolution was tabled.

The Allied position was explained by Mr. Myers. He noted that it was not offering a concrete plan and called attention to the policy declaration of the board, October 22, 1941, outlining a seven-point program for an all-industry group, covering taxation, industry goodwill, competitive forms of entertainment, institutional advertising, priority ratings, plans for post consent decree operation and discussion of mutual problems and objectionable practices.

Mr. Myers asserted the Allied board was unwilling to sponsor a complete program now because: 1) the industry has too little experience with voluntary cooperation; 2) the organization refuses to lose its identity now; 3) it cannot assume the new organization's financial burden.

The delegates were mildly amused by the remark: "Exhibitors, like cows, function best when they are contented."

Recalls 5-5-5 Meeting

A letter from Sidney Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, was then read by Mr. Myers. Mr. Kent was sorry he was unable to make a direct contribution to the meeting but pointed out that Tom Connors represented him.

Three questions were put by Mr. Kent:

"Does any man claim that bickering has led to anything but further trouble?

"Does any man not admit that the old system was better than the new?

"Has each of you come to this meeting for personal gain or for the welfare of the industry and seeking his reward only out of the improved situation?"

The 5-5-5 program drawn up in Atlantic City in 1931 was, "killed by our own people—we were accused of giving away the distributors' shirts," Mr. Kent said. He continued, "Let's look a great mistake squarely in the face. Until that time the industry had kept together. But then each went his own selfish way and agitation replaced cooperation."

Mr. Kent urged the delegates to act before it was too late. The consent decree is generally "distasteful," he said. But, he pointed out, "the majority of us have done better in this industry than we could in any other."

Mr. Kent warned that if steps towards industry unity were not taken unfavorable legislation might result. He remarked that labor had stumbled into trouble by "refusing to clean house."

Mr. Rodgers introduced the first definite note to the meeting by announcing that, despite MGM's belief there was a principle at stake, nevertheless, in the cause of unity, the company acceded to the requests of the Allied Committee that it resume selling in Minnesota. He said that the legal steps to make this possible would be taken.

"With the war overshadowing everything," Mr. Rodgers said, "it is more important now, than ever before, that the industry work together for now, above all, the eyes of the nation and the world are on the motion picture industry." He reminded the delegates that show business was always called in national crises.

"There is nothing that can not be ironed out at a round table," he concluded, adding, "if we don't straighten out our own problems, someone else will in a way which will not be to our liking."

Mr. Poole read a resolution pledging cooperation to the President. Copies of the resolution of "wholehearted, patriotic and loyal support" were sent to the President and to the Secretaries of War and the Navy.

Nicholas Schenck Speaker

Nicholas M. Schenck spoke briefly. He said: "the exhibitors and the distributors should adjust all problems amongst themselves. All problems should be met by unity. Out of that unity will result strength, security and friendship in our industry."

A long succession of well-known industry leaders next briefly expressed approval of unity. Speakers were Mr. Kuykendall, Barney Balaban, president, Paramount; George J. Schaefer, president, RKO; J. Robert Rubin, vice-president, MGM; Austin Keough, vice-president, Paramount; Felix Jenkins, general counsel, Twentieth Century-Fox; Tom Connors, assistant to the president of Twentieth Century-Fox; Neil Agnew, Claude Lee, Paramount; John Balaban, Balaban and Katz; Jack Cohn, vice-president, Columbia; Abe Montague, its general sales manager; James R. Grainger, president, Republic; Steve Broidy, sales manager, Monogram; Mr. Brandt, ITOA; Joseph Bernhard, vice-president, Warner Brothers; Ned Depinet, vice-president, RKO; Charles Reagan, Paramount; Mr. Poole, Eddie Reubens, Max A. Cohen, Sidney Samuelson, Col. H. A. Cole, Harry Arthur, others.

Mr. Kuykendall asked the industry leaders to "stop acting like schoolboys."

Mr. Bernhard suggested that a demonstration of unity recently was the cooperation of 11,000 theatres in national defense effort.

"Public Relations Planning"

Barney Balaban commented that, with the country at war, "we can contribute to national unity by achieving unity within the industry."

Maurice Bergman, representing the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, proposed that the meeting appoint a committee to plan public relations. AMPA's support was pledged for an industry public relations program.

Several other resolutions were submitted, and at this point the delegates decided further action could not be taken until a committee reported on organization to study the unity proposals, and to recommend action.

Late Tuesday afternoon all distributor representatives met with Mr. Connors, Mr. Agnew and Mr. Broidy, committee members, to formulate their position. In the evening the whole committee met, and the exhibitor and distributor delegates exchanged views on a plan for establishing an all-industry group to explore unity and cooperation.

Others at the meeting included Nathan D. Golden, U. S. Department of Commerce; O. C. Lam; Ben Berger; Arthur Lockwood; Pete Wood, secretary of Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio.

REVISE THE DECREE OR DROP IT, KUYKENDALL SAYS IN NEW BLAST

Charges No Benefits Have Accrued to Exhibitors from Present "Mess"; Asks New Selective Contracts, Cancellation

On the eve of industry unity discussions at Chicago the most bitter and specific denunciation of the consent decree voiced to date was issued Monday by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Ed Kuykendall, president, lashed out at almost every aspect of the consent decree. The MPTOA called for its revision or suspension.

"The consent decree is a mess," Mr. Kuykendall clarioned. Exhibitors in every section have told him of its failure, he said, adding "The benefits promised to exhibitors have completely failed to materialize; the hardships and disadvantages to exhibitors that we predicted are now only too apparent."

The decree selling system, blocks-of-five, short subject sales, arbitration and the additional costs of operating under the decree are analyzed in the letter to the MPTOA membership. Additional copies of the message were rushed to Chicago for distribution to other exhibitor groups and distribution leaders assembled there for unity discussions.

"No noticeable improvement in product or box-office has resulted. The industry is carrying the burden of the decree on its back and will realize more and more the blunders and mistakes imposed by it. The war boom makes it easier to carry now, but look out for the crash when business sags again," Mr. Kuykendall warned. Distributors, he added, "may benefit by the increased film rentals they can squeeze out under the new system, but this is entirely at the expense of exhibitors."

Selective Contract Sought

Proposed to the industry in the bulletin was a plan to substitute a selective contract for blocks-of-five selling. Mr. Kuykendall urged that a 20 per cent cancellation contract be tried voluntarily rather than through legislation similar to the Minnesota law. Big circuits, he pointed out, now have this privilege. He asked an equal right for the small exhibitor.

"The pictures we don't want are tied up tighter than ever with the ones we must have to stay in business," Mr. Kuykendall said, in discussing decree solutions to the block booking. He attacked the blocks-of-five provision as giving "less selection to the theatre owner than he had before on the meagre and highly conditional cancellation clauses plus his ability to trade out pictures on a season contract."

Blind selling was eliminated by the trade show. It never was an important problem, nothing more than a political issue for a noisy faction of professional organizers. "Now that they have it they don't like it," he observed.

Predictions that the decree would improve the quality and boxoffice value of pictures have not been borne out, the bulletin continued. "If you refuse to buy a poor picture you don't get the good one," Mr. Kuykendall charged.

Costs have mounted sharply, the MPTOA was told. The exact amount, Mr. Kuykendall said, is not known to anyone. "We do know that the extra costs are a dead expense. They don't improve the product, increase its advertising or pay dividends," he continued.

WHAT CAN BE DONE ABOUT THE DECREE?

Exhibitors are anxious for a change in the consent decree, according to a bulletin from Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president. In his discussion of possible changes, and methods of making them he said:

"There is reason to believe that agitation leading to the government's lawsuit which produced the consent decree has dragged the motion picture industry into government regulation so far already that it will have great difficulty in extricating itself. Even if the cooperation and backing heretofore withheld can now be secured, it is a question whether self-regulation and self-discipline can be undertaken by the organized industry at this time.

"Whether the consent decree can be rewritten during its three-year period, how long it would take to get it modified (even if everybody agreed upon the desired changes), and whether legislation (such as the Minnesota law) is the only way it can be changed, are questions that require careful examination.

"In the meantime, the number of exhibitors who would like to see the consent decree busted up, for a variety of reasons of their own, is steadily growing."

He further charged that the new release system delayed availability of pictures, reducing their novelty and early release values. Subsequent exhibitors are experiencing great delay in getting product in many cases, he asserted.

Mr. Kuykendall's proposed remedy is a selective contract. He said:

"All of this grief could have been avoided by a simple and honest option to cancel a reasonable minimum number of pictures in every contract, without impossible conditions and restrictions on the exercise of the option by exhibitors as in the past.

"This proposal has never been given a fair trial by the distributors, although it has been urged by exhibitors for years. Such a trial may be forced upon the distributors by law in Minnesota. The big circuits who can compel the use of selective contracts through buying power seem to find it solves their problem, but small theatres can't get such selection by bargaining for it, as they are too weak in buying power."

Denies 20 Per Cent Loss

Mr. Kuykendall rejected arguments that the 20 per cent cancellation clause meant a 20 per cent loss to distributors. He asserted that the option would seldom be used either in full, or in substantial part by the majority of exhibitors.

"The same number of pictures will be exhibited and paid for by the same theatres, the same gross film rentals (or more) will go to the same distributors from the same exhibitors. If it results in an unbearable loss of revenue, why do the big theatres who pay big film rentals get selective buys and an option to reject pictures without paying for them?" he asked.

Such a system would further provide the "hoped for incentive to Hollywood to turn out more good pictures and less 'B' pictures of inferior quality," the bulletin asserted.

Forcing of short subjects has not been solved by the decree, Mr. Kuykendall continued. He expressed doubt that it could ever be settled by regulation so long as picture sales remained a matter of bargaining between each theatre and distributor. "There is no substitute to careful and shrewd buying" to combat forcing tactics, Mr. Kuykendall told his fellow theatremen.

The arbitration system was assailed by Mr. Kuykendall as complex, too costly, and affording scant relief to exhibitors. He said that the relatively small number of complaints filed bore out his predicions that exhibitors would have scant confidence in the method of settling disputes before non-industry arbitrators. He said exhibitors were becoming more and more critical of arbitrations and asserted that while the AAA complaints declined in November there was an increase in law suits against the distributors.

The method of airing film disputes before arbitrators who are not familiar with the business was attacked in particular by Mr. Kuykendall. "Highly technical and restricted decree arbitration before outsiders (frequently lawyers) . . . removed one of the principal advantages of commercial arbitration over litigation," he charged.

Arbitration Attacked

The ignorance of arbitrators about film trade practices, employment of counsel at hearings and the appeals to New York for final decision were hit by Mr. Kuykendall. He suggested the need for an organized system to conciliate complaints before they enter the formal hearing stages.

The cost of arbitration is large, he declared, calculating a total of $2,413.45 per complaint. The figure was obtained by dividing the $300,000 administration fund of distributors on a per case basis, plus a filing cost of $87.87 per case to exhibitors, exclusive of attorneys fees.

He said the average time for an award was 86 days. On seven appealed cases the average time was 176 days.

Theatre acquisition by unaffiliated or partly affiliated circuits has not been affected by the decree, Mr. Kuykendall said. Further, he expressed doubt on whether it had curbed the theatre expansion of the distributors. The fact that no large scale acquisition has taken place for a number of years "reduces the importance of the issue in most localities," the MPTOA president observed.

Careful examination of means of supplanting or revising the decree was urged in the bulletin. Whether self regulation can supplant the legislation and court rule started by the U. S. antitrust actions remains problematical, Mr. Kuykendall observed. Nevertheless he said it was a problem the industry should consider.

"Through all our trials and tribulations, however, the inherent strength and vitality of the American motion picture industry" stand out, Mr. Kuykendall concluded. He cited the need for good entertainment and expressed conviction that the industry could survive all onslaughts.

"Organized effort can improve the business by establishing fair and just standards of business conduct. Such efforts deserve the personal backing of every responsible theatre owner," the MPTOA president wrote.

Wolf Man

(Universal)

Werewolf Again

That tale about the werewolf, filmed every now and again as a contribution to the chiller-diller school of entertainment and sometimes to the box-offices of the nation, is told again here without much change.

Strength of the attraction is in the names of the cast, which add up to promise more than the picture supplies in satisfaction.

Weaknesses are familiarity of the subject and inadequacy of dialogue. Photography, settings and some performances worthy of distinguished purpose fail to cope with these.

Producer-director George Waggner owes more to his players than to Curt Siodmak's script, which falls far short of the Universal standard of effectiveness in the field of the horror film. The picture is for the inveterates in the audience sector to which it is pointed, and the wolfman's makeup is something to test the credulity of the willing addict.

Previewed at the studio for a press and professional audience which displayed no enthusiasm for the enterprise.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Bahama Passage

(Paramount)

Carroll and Hayden in Technicolor

One thing for showmen to do by way of promoting attendance for "Bahama Passage" may be to stress the presence of Madeleine Carroll and Stirling Hayden in the leading roles, by way of reminding the customers of the news-reports of a Carroll-Hayden romance.

Another thing to do might be to mention that much of the footage was shot in the Bahamas, which also have had a lot of newspaper publicity lately, and in Technicolor.

A thing not to do, on grounds of audience satisfaction, would be to link the picture with Producer-director Edward H. Griffith's several previous productions starring Miss Carroll, for that proceeding would engender expectations of entertainment which this film does not fulfill.

The story told is about a "girl who has been around," to quote the introductory title, who arrives with her father to take over business management of an island in the Bahamas owned by a young man, descendent of many ancestors who have handled it to the satisfaction of its 250 native residents, married to a wife who stays away from the place because she's lonely when there. He doesn't want her or her father there, and they don't want to be there, but proximity breeds mutual attraction for the young folks and, when his wife conveniently divorces him and their respective parents conveniently die, they decide to get married and stay.

Not much happens on the screen. Four or five episodes of violence and tragedy which figure in the narrative occur offstage and register only in dialogue. Many, many scenes between Miss Carroll and Mr. Hayden which the dialogue suggests are intended to depict his scrupulous resistance to her desire lack conviction to such an extent that the preview audience haw-hawed them. Some individual stretches of dialogue which seem to have been intended to leave hearers their option of extracting a clean interpretation or the other kind miss both ways and impede such progress as the story is making at the time. The script belies the credit line attributing it to the experienced Virgina Van Upp, who based it on a story by Nelson Hayes which may have been better reading than seeing.

Scenes of the Bahamas are pictorially fascinating.

Riot Squad

(Monogram)

Melodrama

Monogram's "Riot Squad" starts out with a well founded promise and premise, but fall far short in both screenplay and thespian departments. The dialogue is stilted and unnatural; the actors show visibly their struggle with it.

Richard Cromwell as the young doctor who plays along with a gang in order to trap them for the police, Rita Quigley as his sweetheart and hospital nurse, John Miljan as the head of the gangsters, and Mary Ruth as a youngster who supplies some of the motivation of the plot but whose part is not made indispensable, head the cast which in addition consists of Herbert Rawlinson, Mary Gordon, Donald Kerr, Jack C. Smith, Richard Clarke, Novel Cravat, Arthur Space and Sparky, the dog.

Ed Finney produced and directed the film, which had good melodramatic potentialities, but his work, too, is hampered by the inept script. Al Herman was associate producer.

The story, the title of which has no apparent connection, has a young doctor joining the forces of the gang in order to bring them to justice. Sworn to secrecy, his romantic attentions to his fiancee, a nurse, are misunderstood by her. However, all turns out right in the end.

Seen in a studio projection room in Hollywood by a press and professional audience which raised its eyebrows.—V. K.

Iowa Fire Marshal Scores Portables

Fire Marshal John Stohm of Iowa, issued a warning last Thursday in Des Moines, that Iowa theatre exhibitors would be faced with a licensing law for fire regulations unless the situation is "cleaned" up before the state legislature meets in 1943.

Mr. Strohm emphasized that newer and larger theatres were not guilty of fire violations, but that smaller houses and portable circuits offered a serious problem because fire prevention methods were lacking.

Mr. Strohm included distributors in his charges, saying they were as much to blame as exhibitors; that they could control the rental of films to portable circuits and see to it that operators with fire hazards were not allowed to function. He also discussed the situation with some of the "jack rabbit" operators themselves and pointed out the necessity of eliminating hazardous houses.

The fire marshal has been advocating stricter fire regulations for Iowa theatres because of the serious fires during the past two years. A bill was introduced in the last legislature to set up definite regulations but was defeated.

Warners Make Changes In Philadelphia

In line with his policy of making promotions from within the ranks, Ted Schlanger, Warner Theatres zone manager in Philadelphia, announced the following managerial changes effected in the territory: George Kemble, formerly manager of the Orient theatre, Philadelphia, transferred to the Levoy theatre, Millville, N. J., replacing Harry Orlow, who shifted to the Clementon theatre, Clementon, N. J., who filled the post held temporarily by assistant manager John Wolf. Harold Brason, returned from Army service, resumed his former post as manager of the Diamond theatre, Philadelphia, with Gerald Weissler moving to the Columbia theatre to fill the spot left vacant by John Sassenroth's move into the managerial post at the Orient theatre.

Fred Montgomery, former manager of the Clementon theatre, Clementon, N. J., went to Red Lion, Pa., to manage the Lion theatre. In York, Pa., Nickie Gentile was advanced as assistant to manager Gil Fradeneck at the Rialto theatre, replacing Mike Althoff, who left the service for a job in the defense industries.

Seckler to San Juan

Ned S. Seckler, RKO Radio's manager for Puerto Rico, has left New York City for San Juan, Puerto Rico, after closing a deal with Rafael Ramos Cobian, president of the Cobian Theatres. The deal includes the exhibition of 1941-42 product in the first-run Paramount theatre and in eighteen other houses owned by the Cobian firm.

Lewis Resigns Morris Agency

E. Henry Lewis has resigned from the William Morris Agency's legitimate theatre department in New York and plans to enter the motion picture talent field. He will leave for Hollywood shortly.

Chapman with RKO

Sid Chapman, salesman for Warners with Headquarters in Detroit, is now affiliated with RKO, covering the West Side of Michigan.

ARBITRATION MAY CURB CLEARANCE OF ANY THEATRE, APPEAL BOARD SAYS

Apply Award to Non-Intervenors, Modify Squire Clearance Cuts; Ellis Wins Phila. Case; 2 New Actions in N. Y.

Any theatre may find its clearance changed by an arbitration award, whether or not it intervened in or was party to the action, the Appeal Board ruled at New York on Friday. It passed on the status of non-intervening theatres in the same competitive area as a complainant for the first time.

The board's 12th decision amended the arbitrator's award in New York's second case, the complaint of the Squire theatre, Great Neck, N. Y., against the Big Five and the Skouras and Great Northern circuits.

Following its own precedent in the Garbose (Boston No. 2) case the "supreme court" of arbitration again held that an arbitrator does not have the power to entirely eliminate clearance between theatres competing with each other. George A. Spiegelberg, New York lawyer who arbitrated the case, cut the 30 days held by Skouras Playhouse in Great Neck over the Squire to seven days and eliminated clearance held by the Little Neck theatre, a Great Northern house.

The Appeal Board raised the clearance of the Playhouse to 14 days, granted the Little Neck theatre one day and ordered that the Beacon theatre, Port Washington, and the Manhasset theatre, Manhasset, be given maximum clearance of seven and four days respectively over the Squire. The Beacon and Manhasset, although mentioned as possibly interested parties by the complaint, did not intervene and were not considered in the arbitrator's award.

The board held that: "It is quite true that inasmuch as these two theatres did not intervene and did not submit themselves to the jurisdiction of the Arbitration Tribunal, there can be no direct award against them or in their favor. On the other hand there can be no doubt that, even though they did not intervene, they can be indirectly affected by an award against the five distributor defendants."

All the theatres are in the same competitive area and an award between any two would affect the others, the board ruled. In practice the non-intervening theatres enjoy clearance over the Squire, it said.

"Actual clearance against complainant's theatre is clearance applicable to its theatre and specifically made the subject of arbitration by Section VIII. An award may properly be made fixing the maximum clearance which the distributor defendants may in licenses thereafter entered into grant to such a theatre against the complainant.

"Such an award can be enforced against the distributor defendants and so, as to future licenses, indirectly against the theatres involved which, though duly notified, did not intervene. They have had their opportunity to appear and present their case and if they chose not to do so they cannot afterward complain of the award. Otherwise the Decree could be nullified (except as to theatres owned by, or affiliated with, the defendant distributors and so bound by the Decree) by any theatre complained against which chose to ignore the arbitration. Such a result is not one contemplated by the Decree."

The board also defended the submission of appeal briefs by all five distributors, although they did not initiate the appeal action, and pay filing fees. The decree says any party "may" appeal but directs that all parties to the original action "shall" be notified, the Appeal Board said.

Examining the merits of the case the board praised the arbitrator's conduct and findings and agreed that the present 30 day margin is unreasonable.

The existing Paramount contracts which give the Squire pictures 14 days after the Playhouse were cited by the Appeal Board as criterion for its amended award setting a 14 day margin from all five distributors. The contracts with Paramount, the three judges said, were arrived at by negotiation, and were deemed a reasonable clearance.

Philadelphia Theatre Wins

Clearances against A. M. Ellis' Broad theatre in Philadelphia were altered by a decision from Calvin H. Rankin, arbitrator, on Saturday in the city's ninth case, one of three filed by Mr. Ellis.

The award maintaincd the 28 day margin of the Warner Logan over the Broad but reduced from 21 to 14 days the margin of Hunt's Rockland theatre and from 14 days to seven the clearance held by Warner's Bromley. Clearance of Warners Grange was maintained at seven days. Although the complaint was directed only against Warners, RKO and Paramount, the clearance fixed by the arbitrator is to apply to all distributors bound by the consent decree, excepting Warners', insofar as its own theatres are concerned.

Two More in New York

Two new clearance cases filed at New York this week increased the total number listed at the tribunal, the most active in the nation, to 29.

On Friday the Central theatre, Cedarhurst, Long Island, operated by the Drake Amusement Corporation, filed a clearance demand naming all five consenting distributors. The operating company asked that the Central clearance after Rockaway and Lynbrook first run theatres be reduced from seven days to one to three days. The complaint also contained a request that the arbitrator order distributors to license both its Cedarhurst and Lynbrook theatres on the same contract. It did not specify under what section of the decree the order should be granted.

Thte 29th New York complaint, filed Monday for the New Paltz theatre, Loren Theatre Company, in New Paltz, N. Y., names the Big Five in a clearance demand. It asks that the margin of Kingston and Poughkeepsie theatres over New Paltz be reduced, and cites 1936 contracts as precedent. Loew's Bardavon theatre, Poughkeepsie, and the Broadway in Kingston are cited in the demand.

Philadelphia

Saturday, George P. Aarons, counsel for Columbus Stamper, disclosed that his client's clearance complaint in behalf of the Rivoli theatre, Case No. 13, was withdrawn as of December 5th. A satisfactory settlement was made out of court, according to Mr. Aarons. Filed on October 1st, the complaint was scheduled to be heard November 6th before Rupert C. Schaeffer, Jr. The complaint against all five distributors involved a Warner circuit and independent theatres in West Philadelphia. It was Mr. Stamper's second clearance complaint. His first was also withdrawn.

The sixth day of hearing in Case No. 11, clearance complaint of A. M. Ellis in behalf of his Parkside theatre, Camden, N. J., was postponed for a third time last Friday to December 12th. Postponement was sought by Joseph J. Varbolow, intervenor.

Mr. Ellis' third clearance complaint, Case No. 10, in behalf of his Liberty theatre, Camden, N. J., will follow the conclusion of the Parkside complaint. Robert J. Callaghan, Jr., is arbitrator for both complaints.

Chicago

The first hearing of the clearance case filed by the Alcyon theatre, Highland Park., Ill., against 20th Century-Fox, Paramount and RKO, was held December 5th. The case, Chicago No. 9, was continued until further notice. Arbitrator Drennan J. Slater ordered that briefs be filed in dismissal motions by Aaron Stein's, attorney for the Teatro Del Lago, Wilmette, Ill., and Glencoe theatre, Glencoe, Ill., intervenors. They contended that no clearance exists and that the arbitrator lacks jurisdiction to grant an award under sections VIII and X of the decree. Paramount was dismissed from the proceedings by request of the complainants.

Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh's second case, the clearance complaint of David Green, operator of the Beacon theatre, will come to a hearing on December 16th before Samuel W. Pringle. The case, filed last April 25th, was postponed several times last spring at complainant's request. Hearings were then set ahead until December in the hope of a settlement under the new selling practices effective September 1st. The Big Five and the Squirrel Hill theatre are named.

Washington

Scheduled to open on Thursday after several postponements, was the arbitration hearing in Washington of the clearance complaint of Bayne Roland Corp., of Virginia Beach, Va., against Warners. Intervenors are the Newport theatre, Norfolk, Va., and the W. W. V. Co., Inc., operators of the Granby and Norva theaters in Norfolk. According to the complaint, which was to be heard by John E. Laskey, Sr., Warners extends unreasonable clearance to the Newport over the Bayne.

Minneapolis

The fourth Minncapolis complaint, some run action against Paramount filed by Ben Berger, Duluth Allied leader will be heard on December 22nd. Oscar G. Haughland has been selected as abitrator.

SCREEN PUBLICISTS TAKING THEIR FIGHT TO OTHER UNIONS AND PUBLIC

Guild Announces Plans for "Forcing" Action by Companies on Negotiations for Contracts; Sound Technicians Ask Revision

Its course a matter of speculation in New York industry circles for some weeks, the Screen Publicists Guild, which, two weeks ago, broke contract negotiations with the majors, and threatened "action," this week disclosed, with specification, what that action would be.

According to a Guild bulletin, the advertising and publicity workers' union will now proceed to:

1. Laying of a publicity base for all pressure operations.

2. Immediate institution of efforts leading to pressure from other trade unions, organizations and individuals.

3. Commencement of exploitation and advertising efforts.

4. Boycott action, including group support for boycott and picketing of theatres.

5. Continuous fund raising.

6. Intensification of organizing.

The approach to other unions is complicated somewhat by the Guild's rejection of affiliation with the CIO's United Professional Office Workers of America Local 109, which has chapters in majors' officers, and affiliation of the Screen Readers Guild. Cooperation is seen; but it is not as close as expected prior to the vote of three weeks ago.

The Guild has asked the CIO to clarify screen union jurisdiction, because the CIO's United Retail, Wholesale, and Department Store Employees union is also seeking organization of film company employees in New York City, and has approached the Guild.

Guild committees, to prosecute the types of action delineated above, have been formed, and are headed thus:

Publicity, advertising and exploitation, Charles Cohen; ways and means, Carl Rigrod; organization, Steve Freeland; union and group mobilization, Mort Frankel.

Noting the majors' alleged pleas of "inability to pay" the increases demanded by the Guild for its closed shop contract, the SPG News remarked especially the profits scored lately by the film companies. It said:

"Warner Bros. reports a net operating profit of $5,429,302 for the fiscal year ended August 31—a tidy 100% over the previous like period. Paramount's 1941 profits will be more than $8,500,000, according to a Variety estimate, with a net of $3.30 per common share compared with $1.07 per common share in 1939—without taking into account $1,000,000 of frozen funds received from England this year.

"And Columbia reports a September quarterly net of $261,705, compared with $153,878 last year—a 70% profit increase.

"Meanwhile, Motion Picture Daily quotes a report by analyst Leo C. Rosten, based on recent SEC surveys, in which Dr. Rosten shows that the film industry ranks second among all American industries in the proportion of net profits paid to its executives. In 1937, considered a representative year, film executives received 18.96% of the industry's net profits, compared with much lower percentages in the automobile, tobacco, steel, chemical, and many other industries.

"The film industry has grudgingly offered its underpaid publicists a 10% increase. The publicists refuse to accept it."

Meanwhile, in the same city, the Columbia home office chapter of Local 109, of the CIO Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, met this week with officials of National Labor Relations Board, and of Columbia, to determine classification, and representation for forthcoming bargaining.

In Hoolywood, the Screen Writers Guild continues negotiating with the producers. Final points before establishment of a contract, are expected to be cleared shortly.

Impatient over length delays in the complete rewriting of their contract, members of Sound Technicians Local 695, IATSE, were reported to be ready to call a strike meeting if an ultimatum reportedly delivered to the producers is not answered to their satisfaction. The new contract calls from a complete re-writing of the classifications of sound men, a considerable upward boost of their wage scales, and other conditions.

"PROBE" UNION, THEATRES ASK

Investigation of a union demand that scene painter be employed continuously during the run of a play, at a minimum of $90 per week—is being asked of the New York State Attorney General, by the League of New York Theatres. The union, the United Scenic Artists, claims such work is being done now by members of other unions, and thus is infringement of its rights.

Locals' Contracts Revised

Seven locals of the IATSE—two of them, laboratory Technicians Local 683 and Projectionists Local 165, already having obtained their contract revisions—are looking toward the sound men's local for guidance in their future dealings with the producers. One of them, the Studio Photographers Local 659, is stymied in its negotiations because of its insistence that something be done about its jurisdictional fight with the American Society of Cinematographers.

The expected help from the new international alliance officers had not arrived and the condition of cinematographers having to carry two cards—an ASC card while working on major lots and an IATSE card while on location and on independent productions—still exists. The studios are carrying on their established custom of not interfering with jurisdictional fights and of asking the unions to settle them between themselves, pointing out, however, that the ASC collective bargaining agreement has still some years to go.

Negotiations are under way by the Screen Office Employes Guild, now a local of the Painters' brotherhood, with Technicolor and Republic. The parleys have reached a strike threat at the color plant, due to the workers' insistence that the company grant increases retroactive to July 15 whereas the company is reported willing to grant the increases from October. The SOEG is seeking to obtain a contract at Republic, one of the five studios at which it has been certified by the NLRB as bargaining agency for office workers.

The office workers have voted to join the Conference of Studio Unions, federation of film locals prime mover in which is Moving Picture Painters Local 644 of which Herbert K. Sorrell is business representative. Five other locals already have joined.

In New Haven, projectionists' Local 273 won a three-year contract with the Fishman circuit. It contains pay increases.

The stagehands' Local 74, of the same city, will elect officers next Wednesday.

With exchange employees' locals approaching majors' executives in every key city, for new two year contracts, it became known this week that the Chicago local is asking a 30 per cent general wage increase, as well as changed working conditions.

Negotiators in that city are Sam Lamansky, for the union; Allen Usher, for the exchanges.

Picketing Laboratories

In New York, Laboratory Technicians Local 702, striking against Movielab Film Laboratories, this week began secondary picketing against Commonwealth Pictures and Guaranteed Pictures, Movielab clients. John Rugge, union president, said Monday picketing would also extend to Institutional Pictures.

The Philadelphia Film Exchange Employees' Union, Local B-7, on Friday was to elect its officers for the coming year. Harry Bache, Metro booker, and Fred Fortunate, Universal booker, were candidates for the presidency. Nominations for other offices included: vice president—Edward Reckafus; secretary—James McWilliams; treasurer—Marie Hause, Marie Tracey; business agent—Harry O. Cohan, James Flynn; sergeant-at-arms—Harry Appell, and board of trustees—Mae Radigan, John Wagman. For the executive board: shipping department—Harry Dressler, James Keating, Fred Kraiker, Ralph Kirson, Nathan Leon, Charles Smith; poster department—Anthony Blase, Edward Freyburger; inspection department—Lillian Boehmer, Margaret Brickley, Ella F. Rue, Mae Smith, and booking department—Leo Hannan, Charles Donahue.

Two hundred members of the Chicago Theatrical Protective union, IATSE, local No. 2, met Friday, December 5th and by a roll call vote elected Frank C. Olsen as acting business manager. Election was merely a formality because Mr. Olsen has been acting business manager of the local since George E. Browne, late incumbent of the office, found it necessary to confine his time and efforts to being the union's international president.

Mr. Olsen, who has long been associated with Browne, recently convicted of extortion, holds the office of secretary-treasurer of the local and it is generally conceded that he will be elected as permanent business agent at the regular election to be held in May.

Raise Asked in St. Louis

The St. Louis film exchange employees Local, B-51, asking for a new two year contract, under the orders for individual negotiation issued at a meeting of the exchange locals' delegates two months ago in Kansas City, is reported asking for a blanket pay increase of $8 per week.

In the same city, unionization of office workers in the majors' businesses there, has proceeded so that only four have employees not 100 per cent with the AFL Local, 17,707, conducting the drive. The local belongs to the Stenographers, Typists, Bookkeepers, and Assistants union.

The dispute in Hollywood, between Republic and the Studio Utility Workers Local 727 was settled last week, the union abandoning plans for picket lines.

TRADE ASSOCIATION GROUPS RULED EMPLOYERS UNDER THE WAGNER ACT

Decision in "Tent and Awning" Case Important to Groups Like MPPDA and AMPP; Citations to NLRB Seen

by VANCE KING
Hollywood Bureau

Holding the interest of motion picture union and producers' attorneys this week was the precedent-establishing ruling by the National Labor Relations Board in a Los Angeles case, not directly involving the studios but eventually one upon which future NLRB cases concerning film workers might be based.

The ruling was to the effect that employer organizations may be regarded as "employers," within the meaning of the Wagner Act, in board cases when and if the group acts directly or indirectly for an employer in employe-employer relations. Such a group, the board also held, may be found guilty of unfair labor practices and an employer may be forbidden by the board from contributing to the group or from soliciting the group's assistance.

May Be Cited to NLRB

Future film cases may find the board's attorneys and the unions and/or workers insisting that the Association of Motion Picture Producers and Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., be named respondents in labor board cases. Heretofore named in almost all film cases as respondents, the two organizations have been dismissed, either by stipulation or by ruling of the trial examiners, because of the insistence that they are not employers in the meaning of the Wagner Act.

The new edict, evolved in the lengthy "tent and awning" case before the Los Angeles regional board, cites specifically as "employers" the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, Southern Californians, Inc., The Neutral Thousands, the Employees' Advisory Service, as they were found by the board to have existed prior to June, 1940, the period in question in the NLRB case. The M. and M. association has been drastically reorganized since the board began its case in September, 1939; the other groups have ceased to exist.

The named respondents and "the respective officers, directors partners, agents, successors and assigns of each of them, when acting severally, jointly or in concert with the canvas companies, or any other employer, as agent for or in the interest of the canvas companies or any such employer" were ordered to cease and desist from:

"Dominating or interfering with the administration of the Independent Canvas Workers Union, Inc., or with the formation or administration of any other labor organization of the employees of the canvas companies, or any other employer, and from contributing financial and other support to said Independent Canvas Workers Union, or to any other labor organization of the employes of the canvas companies, or of any other employer;

"Soliciting and collecting funds from the canvas companies or any other employer to be used in whole or in part for the purpose of interfering with the rights guaranteed in Section VII of the act;

"In any other manner interfering with, restraining or coercing the employes of the canvas companies, or of any other employes in the exercise of the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid and protection, as guaranteed in Section VII of this act."

The organizations named were ordered to send notices to all members, contributors, supporters and those carried on their mailing list, including the convas companies, stating that each of them will not engage in the conduct from which it was ordered to cease and desist.

By far the most widespread decision ever handed down by the board in regard to employer groups, the order may be appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Ten days were given the respondents in which to notify William R. Walsh, regional NLRB director, of their compliance.

Under one interpretation of the order, in case of the federal courts' upholding it, the producers' association and the producer-distributor organization could be included as respondents in all future cases brought in the industry by the NLRB.

Practice Traced

How, it has been the rigidly adhered to practice of the members of the producers' association to sign union and guild contracts individually, although negotiations might have been carried on concertedly. The practice dates at least to the days when the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences functioned economically on behalf of the talent branches. In these instances, notably in the signing of the contracts governing conditions of writers and actors' employment, the studios signed individually.

Wage scales and working conditions obtained by the unions through negotiations with the major studios are followed by the independent production outfits, except in the case of the Screen Actors Guild contract where a minor concession has been granted the independents for atmosphere player calls at $5.50 per day.

This "follow through" condition prevails even to the extent of scales and conditions obtained by the internationals signatory to the studio labor basic agreement negotiated in meetings with eastern company heads.

Under a broad interpretation of the ruling, the positions of Pat Casey and Fred Pelton, producer labor contacts, might be described as "employers."

APPROVES PROTEST AGAINST PICKETING

In New York last week, a Supreme Court justice, Richard Koch, ruled that a theatre owner had reason to seek an injunction against a union, when that union picketed his house merely in retaliation for the picketing by another union, of another theatre. Complainant was the Delancey Theatre, Manhattan; the defendant, Local 306, projectionists. The Delancey charged the local with picketing in reply to the Empire State projectionists' union. Judge Koch denied the motion for temporary injunction, but nevertheless refused dismissal of the complaint.

Union Head Pays Fine for Extortion

for the presidency of the Central Labor Union, Wilmington, Delaware. He is business agent for the city's stagehands' local. Al Williams, a projectionist, is expected to be given a trusteeship on the Central Labor Union.

In Providence, the Capitol, of the E. M. Loew chain, is seeking an injunction against picketing by an AFL union.

George E. Browne convicted ex-IATSE head, paid his $20,000 fine for extortion, Monday, in New York Federal Court, and Willie Bioff, convicted with him November 6th, was expected to do the same. Browne, given eight years, and Bioff, ten, for gouging $550,000 from four film companies, thus are assuring they will not serve an additional ten years in prison—the penalties for not paying their fines. Meanwhile, Nick Circella, their asserted accomplice, freed himself with $25,000 bail, from the New York Federal House of Detention, Thursday, December 4th. Circella, known as "Nickelodeon" will stand trial January 6th, with Louis Kaufman, IATSE Newark business agent, for allegedly extorting "more than $1,000,000" from the film companies, in association with Browne and Bioff. At the same time, ten stockholders' suits against Warners, and eight against Loew's, in New York Supreme Court, have been ordered consolidated, in two actions. The suits result from major executives' disclosure of monies they paid Browne and Bioff, the stockholders charging the monies misspent, and asking accountings.

Nick, Weston Ask Rehearing

From St. Louis this week came the report that John P. Nick and Clyde Weston, deposed officers of the city's projectionists' local, 143, and convicted racketeers, would ask the United States Supreme Court for rehearing of its action recently, which denied review of the conviction. The men surrender January 1st for five year sentences.

Paramount this week asked consolidation of five stockholders' suits resultant from the Browne-Bioff trial.

The two men on Tuesday were granted until February 10th to file execeptions and notations of errors, in their appeal from conviction.

Louis Kaufman, mentioned as under indictment for extortion, on Tuesday was reelected buiness agent of the Newark local.

Photoplay Committee Named

Mrs. Robert Fleming of Fort Wayne, president of the Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays, has announced the society's committees for the coming year: Mrs. E. L. Burnett of Indianapolis, chairman, and Mrs. Mabel West of Indianapolis, co-chairman, extension; Mrs. David Ross of Indianapolis, historian; Mrs. E. W. Cowley of Indianapolis, hospitality; Mrs. Paul H. New of Greenfield and Mrs. T. C. Tilden of Greencastle, film chairmen; Mrs. W. C. Allen of Fort Wayne, and Mrs. W. A. Alexander of Bloomington, speakers bureau; Mrs. John Hauck of Fort Wayne, publicity; Miss Emma May of Terre Haute, membership, and Mrs. Maude Bruce of Anderson, ways and means.

SCREEN AND STAGE WILL FIGHT ANY 'WAR NERVES', SAYS SHOW HEAD

Hollywood, Chicago and New York Film, Stage Groups Plan Shows for Civilians, Armed Forces to Keep Up Morale

Hollywood motion picture interests and Broadway stage producers, with the radio industry, are set to launch "an all-out fight against low morale" in both U. S. military and civilian population. This statement came last week from Walter Hoving, chairman of the United States Service Organization, following a meeting of entertainment industry leaders in the New York headquarters of USO-Camp Shows, Inc. It came but a few days before Japan's surprise war declaration and blitzkrieg attack on the United States.

Members of the United States armed forces and civilians will never face a "war of nerves," he said, in the present national emergency, if the combined entertainment resources of the amusement world can prevent it. Mr. Hoving asserted that "the presentation of stirring, morale-building stage shows in Army camps and Naval stations throughout the United States is only the beginning."

He stressed that he did not want to indicate there was any presence of "war nerves," and added that as a business man and merchant, he had been impressed and delighted with the enthusiasm and forcefulness expressed by motion picture, stage and radio representatives who met recently in New York to speed entertainment plans to keep the country's "fighting spirit alive."

Productions Planned

Through Camp Shows, Inc., the United Service Organization is launching 11 stage productions by mid-December, with more to come after January 1st; four opened last week, four more debut this week and three additional shows will open next week. Eddie Dowling, producer-actor, is president of Camp Shows, Inc., and Edward Arnold, president of the Screen Actors Guild, is vice president. It is planned that these shows in addition to Red, White and Blue circuit featuring smaller presentations, of the stage-screen combine will tour 206 Army camps and Naval stations.

"Sunshine Review," the first west coast unit of USO-Camp Shows, Inc., left Hollywood on Tuesday for a four-month nationwide tour of Army camps and Naval stations. The show was produced by Marco of Fanchon and Marco.

One of the legitimate stage productions slated for Army camps, "My Sister Eileen," which was produced on Broadway by Max Gordon, was already in rehearsal in New York when Camp Shows, Inc., cancelled the production last week, announcing that lack of technical equipment was the reason for cancellation. It was reported, however, that either Camp Shows or Army morale officers, finally decided to pull the show on "moral grounds."

Last week-end Mr. Dowling announced that arrangements were "practically completed" for another legitimate show to replace "Eileen," and that he expected to get clearance on the new play in time to start casting this week. He hopes to have the show on the road within two weeks.

Concerning the general "moral tone" of Camp Show production, over the week-end, Brig. General Frederick Osborn, Chief of the Morale Branch of the United States Army, put his stamp of approval upon the "character and cleanliness," plus the enterment value of the productions opening at various Army bases during the past week.

General Osborn said, "The combined forces of America's entertainment industry, including the screen, stage and radio, have accomplished a tremendous task which will go far to keep morale high. The shows which opened last week have met with the enthusiastic appoval of soldiers and their officers."

"Funzafire" for Army

"Funzafire," one of the first shows produced by USO-Camp Shows to take to the road on the Army camp circuit, opened Monday night in the post theatre at Camp Lee, Petersburg, Virginia, to an audience of 2,400 servicemen. The show was a hit, according to reports. Each soldier paid 20 cents admission; ten per cent of the admission price went to the camp fund and the rest toward the theatre program. The premiere was in duplicate, one show given at 7 P.M. and the second at 9 P.M. "Funzafire" played Camp Lee three nights this week, two shows nightly, then played at Camp Davis, Wilmington, N. C., on Thursday.

Camp Lee took on the atmosphere of a Hollywood on an opening night, it was reported, with searchlights, a guard of honor, music and general fanfare.

Other shows which opened last week were "Follow the Crowd," a musical comedy, at Camp Clairborne, Alexandria, La., and Camp Polk, Leesville, La.; "Beachcombers of 1942," musical revue, at Bremerton Naval Yard, Bremerton, Wash., and Camp Lewis, Tacoma, and "Ada Leonard and Her All-American Girl Revue," featuring a girl band and comedy acts, at Pine Camp, Watertown, N. Y., and Fort Devens, Ayer, Mass.

Included in Camp Show productions opening this week are "Razzle Dazzle" at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, Mo., Tuesday night; "Happy Go Lucky," opened at Fort Custer, Battle Creek, Mich., Wednesday night; "Thumbs Up," at Fort Bliss, El Paso, Texas, Thursday night, and "The Laugh Parade," at Camp Forrest, Tullahoma, Tenn., Thursday night.

On Wednesday, "Harlem on Parade," an all-Negro show, will open at Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill.

Free Films

Plans have already been completed by the Amusement and Recreational division of the Chicago Commission on National Defense, to admit 1,000 members of the armed forces free of charge to many amusement places in the Loop each night beginning last Tuesday.

All the downtown motion picture houses are co-operating in the venture. These are the Chicago, State-Lake, Roosevelt, United Artists, Garrick and Apollo theatres, operated by Balaban & Katz; the RKO Palace, Oriental, Woods, Clark, Monroe, Astor, Telenews and Today theatres, the latter two newsreel houses.

James E. Coston, Warner theatre head in Chicago, is chairman of the amusement division which also includes John Balaban, Jack Kirsch and Edward Silverman. The commission is hopeful that neighborhood houses also will volunteer to co-operate.

A Gilbert and Sullivan theatrical troupe in New York's Greenwich Village, the Savoy Opera Guild, reacted immediately to news of Japan's attack against the United States. The acting troupe pulled "The Mikado," the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, from its repertory "in view of the national situation." It had been scheduled to run this Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, at the Cherry Lane Theatre.

Five thousand theatre tickets were contributed last week to the New York City Defense Recreation Committee which provides social and recreational activities for the servicemen visiting the city by 18 Broadway shows, it was announced at committee headquarters on Monday. Since the organization has been operating, a total of 55,000 tickets to legitimate shows were donated by Broadway producers.

NAVY USES FILMS TO BUILD MORALE

Motion pictures are a "major element" in the United States Navy's welfare and recreation program designed to maintain high morale, it was disclosed Tuesday by Rear Admiral C. W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation in Washington, D. C. All vessels of sufficient size to provide the space necessary for the projection of films are equipped to show sound motion pictures, as are all naval stations and marine posts, it was revealed.

Submitting his annual report to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, Admiral Nimitz showed that the total cost of motion pictures during the fiscal years ended June 30, last, was $447,000, of which $197,000 was provided by the Government and the remainder was taken from the profits of ships' stores and post exchanges.

Provision has already been made for film service for the new Atlantic bases. The shows, both ashore and afloat, are run on an admission-free basis, but attendance is limited to Navy personnel and such civilians as may be employed at the shore stations.

"Bolivar" Completed

"Simon Bolivar," a story of the Liberator of Venezuela, has been completed in Mexico by Miguel Contreras Torres, producer and director and Jesus Grovas, president of Grovas & Co., former Paramount manager in that city. This is the longest picture ever made in Mexico, running 25 reels.

OUR UNIVERSAL DATE! READY NOW!

Proposes War Use for Polio Drive

C. C. Moskowitz, co-chairman with Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., in the 1942 March of Dimes drive, announced on Tuesday that the nationwide organization among theatre men being built up in connection with the infantile paralysis campaign, would provide "a handy, active mechanism" by which the country's motion picture theatres could cooperate in the many war drives that are sure to come, now that the nation is embattled.

The industry's defense committee, formed some time ago, has created a nationwide organization of theatres to be called upon when the government needs them. The March of Dimes film industry group should be helpful and can provide quick help to the defense organization when needed in the future, it was said.

Mr. Schenck sent out the first letters of acknowledgments and instructions to the newly appointed state chairman for the motion picture theatres' collection drive, January 22nd to 29th. Leading showmen have volunteered their services. Collections will be held in lobbies in most cases. Already a number of circuits have agreed to cooperate, it was reported.

Mr. Moskowitz announced this would be the first time theatres had really organized on a national basis for the polio drive. "With a chairman in every state, we will soon have 48 state committees," he said. "The next step will be the appointment by state chairman of county chairmen covering every county in the U. S. These county chairmen will name community or key-city chairmen and committees." With that "thorough set-up," Mr. Moskowitz declared, "we will have the plan and the manpower to cooperate with the theatre defense committees and to carry out almost any sort of drive the government might want during the war crisis." He added, "we can show the world a unity of action such as the picture business never had before so far as public service is concerned."

AMPA Relief Fund Total Announced

The Association of Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., in New York, reported last week that $2,304 was collected for its relief fund during the first six months of its existence. Because of the need of those being aided, the committee recommended that preference be given present and past members of the association.

Disney Short Reissued

Walt Disney's "The Three Little Pigs," which was released by United Artists in 1933 and won the Academy Award in 1934, has been added to the program at the Broadway theatre in New York where "Dumbo" is playing.

Amityville Fire

Fire last week damaged the Amityville Theatre, Amityville, Long Island. No one was injured. The fire started in the basement, spread to the main floor before it could be stopped. Damage, not computed last week, was reported considerable.

SUGGESTS "MOVIE APPRECIATION"

The Milwaukee Better Films Council has received a suggestion from school official Harry B. Nash, of West Allis, for a "movie appreciation" course, to help pupils acquire good taste in films, as they are now helped to acquire such taste in literature.

Canadian Film Board Reorganized

As a result of the appointment of John Grierson as National Film Commissioner of the National Film Board in Canada for a term of three years, there has been a reorganization, necessitated by the absorption of the Motion Picture Bureau, formerly part of the Department of Trade and Commerce.

Ross McLean, who has been Mr. Grierson's assistant, is now Assistant National Film Commissioner. Allen McLean, formerly in another branch of the Department of National War Service, of which the Film Board is now a part, has been appointed controller and secretary of the board. There has been no change in other officers in their transfer to the Film Board.

Warner Sales Drive Opens December 21st

The Warner annual sales drive will open on December 21st and extend for 16 weeks, ending April 11th, it was announced this week. The campaign will be titled "Vitagraph's Drive of Champions."

Benjamin Kalmenson, Warners sales chief, in a telegram to all district and branch managers, advised that $25,000 in prize money will be distributed among the four winning district managers and the ten branch managers making the best showing for the full 16-week period.

Sunday Films Approved

Motion pictures on Sundays for Salisbury, N. C., are within the law, according to the City Council, which, by unanimous vote, passed an ordinance November 21st to allow theatres to operate Sundays from 1:45 P.M. to 6 P.M., and from 8:45 P.M. to midnight. While church dignitaries opposed the plan, proponents of Sunday movies reported to the Council that 15,000 persons had attended Sunday movies during the past six weeks in hours prescribed by the Council

Maplewood's Sunday Shows

A petition that Sunday films be banned from Maplewood was turned down last week by the Township Committee. A group of residents presented the petition, asserting such shows contravened the town's "traditions." They were reminded of a referendum of some years ago, establishing Sunday shows, and which, perhaps, cannot be repealed.

Milliken to Appear

Carl E. Milliken, of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, will represent the industry, at hearings Monday, in Washington, before the Committee of Reciprocity Information, on a proposed trade agreement with Iceland.

Quota Percentages Cut by Parliament

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

A two and one-half per cent reduction in both exhibitor and distributor quotas for England was approved by Parliament in London this week. It will become operative April 1, 1942, for distributors, and October 1, 1942, for exhibitors. The Board of Trade recommended the change.

The new quota regulation for exhibitors is 15 per cent, as compared with the present 17½ percent, and the new distributors' quota is 20 per cent, compared with the existing 22½ per cent.

American distributors and others had hoped for a complete waiver of the quota for the war period, because of the difficulties of maintaining production, due mainly to the shortage of technicians and other workers.

However, production groups and some labor representatives opposed any reduction in the quotas, and had gone on record as favoring maintenance of the existing quota percentages for the next three years.

The Board of Trade's new percentages return the quota to the status it had in 1938 when the quota law went into effect. The 10-year law provides for graduated increases in the exhibitor and distributor percentages up to a maximum of 22½ per cent for exhibitors and 27½ per cent for distributors.

Disney Realigns Feature Plans

Walt Disney Productions has realigned its production plans on feature pictures, scheduling "Peter Pan" to follow "Bambi," now nearing completion, instead of the previously announced "Wind in the Willows," work on which has been halted.

About 150 employes will be temporarily laid off because of the change leaving about 530 on the payroll. Production will continue on two other features, "Bongo" and "Cinderella." No letdown in short subject production is contemplated.

Shirley Temple Cast Set

Warner Baxter, Robert Young, Lionel Barrymore and Humphrey Bogart will be heard with Shirley Temple in her series of four Christmas plays on Friday nights over the Columbia Broadcasting System. The schedule for the programs follows: December 5th, "A Bonnet for Joan" with Warner Baxter; December 12th, "Mr. Ideal," with Robert Young; December 19th, "Christmas For Two" with Lionel Barrymore, and December 26th, an unnamed play with Humphrey Bogart.

Waldo Destroyed

Causing a loss of $15,000, fire on November 28th destroyed the Waldo Theatre, Magnolia, Arkansas. The loss was partly covered by insurance. The fire's cause is unknown.

Fire at Century

Fire at the rear of the Century Theatre, Jackson, Mississippi, caused small damage recently. A matinee audience escaped without injury.

RUSSIA GAINS GROUND, GERMANY LOSES IN THE U. S. FILM MARKET

Ufa Representative in New York Held by FBI in Round-up of Aliens; Artkino President Reports Increase in His Bookings

Increased distribution throughout the United States of Soviet-made motion pictures which are "making money" is one result of the German invasion of Russia on June 22nd which made Russia an ally, according to Artkino Pictures, Inc., New York, headed by Nicola Napoli, Artkino has exclusive distribution rights to Russian-produced films. Since June, 12 features, some of which already have been released and others to be released soon, 16 shorts and 40,000 feet of newsreels have been sent from Russia to the U. S.

The situation for Germany is a different story. The U. S. Customs Office in New York is still holding 16 Nazi pictures sent here during the late spring and early summer for distribution through Ufa Films, Inc., New York distributors of German productions and it is understood no new films have arrived since the summer.

Old Nazi Films Booked

Ufa had to book old films, some made in 1936 and 1937, to the few theatres in the country which play to German-language audiences. George Nitze, president of Ufa, was asked on Monday whether the probability that Germany might declare war on the United States would automatically put Ufa out of business and whether he had made any plans for that contingency. To this query Mr. Nitze replied that "I have made no plans."

Mr. Nitze was interviewed on Monday morning. His plans were suddenly changed Monday night when the FBI seized him as the first alleged German alien, at his home in New York in the general alien roundup conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

At the Ufa office Tuesday afternoon, an employee said that Mr. Nitze was not in. When asked when he would be in, the employe admitted that the Ufa chief had been "taken by the authorities." It was learned that Ernst Eisele took charge of the office, immediately following seizure of Mr. Nitze.

Mr. Nitze has always contended that Ufa here had no connection with Nazi Germany other than the fact that it had made a "business contract" to distribute films in America. Nitze, however, was registered as a foreign agent with the Sstate Department in 1939. He has been in this country since 1926 and became an American citizen.

Mr. Napoli, meanwhile, reported that Soviet pictures were playing to audiences in the South and in other sections of the country where Russian-made screen tales had never before received attention and consequently had not been booked by exhibitors. "The type of pictures we have been getting from Russian since June 22nd are acceptable to American audiences. They are entertainment films and have patriotic and war-defense themes which are of interest to Americans at this time," he said.

The distributor cited "One Day in Soviet Russia," the feature-length documentary for which Quentin Reynolds was narrator, as an example of the "success" of USSR pictures. He reported that it played three weeks at the Esquire theatre in Los Angeles. He also pointed out that Russian pictures which opened in New York since June 22nd, usually remained three weeks.

Of the 12 features which arrived from Russia since Germany's invasion of the communist Soviets, "General Suvorov," "Musical Story," "Wings of Victory," "One Day in Soviet Russia" already have been released. "Cinderella," "Girl from Leningrad," which is a story of the first Finnish campaign, will be released later this month. "Horsemen," a tale of the German occupation of the Ukraine in 1918-1919, and "Tankists," a story of an imaginery battle with an enemy, will be released later. The latter two films were made in 1939, just before Russia signed the peace-pact with Hitler. It is interesting to note that neither film was released for distribution by the Soviet Government until after Hitler's blitzkrieg tactics began late in June.

"Kino Concert," a film featuring Russian opera stars and constituting Soviet "culture" in the form of a concert, will be released shortly with other educational films, shorts on art, ballet, music and a four-reeler called "Puppetland."

"According to the Artkino head, who would not disclose the names of theatres which were playing Soviet pictures, the following are cities in which at least one house buy Russian films: New York, Boston, Baltimore, Washington, Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, Atlanta, Milwaukee, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, and New Orleans, and some cities in Texas and Florida.

Recent reports from Russia, said Mr. Napoli, indicate that film production is continuing. Features are being made in Soviet Armenia and Georgia and the studios in Moscow and Leningrad which are still operating are turning out newsreels and timely documentaries. He disclosed that 15 to 20-day shooting schedules, an "unheard of time schedule for film production in Russia," are determining feature-length production. The last batch of pictures arrived at Artkino offices one month ago. They came by way of the Pacific. No shipments have been lost due to the war, he said, and pointed out that no newsreels have arrived for the last month.

Negotiating With Milestone

Concerning Soviet newsreels, the Artkino president reported that on a recent trip to Hollywood, he conferred with Lewis Milestone and Joris Ivens, on distribution rights to the film they now have in production. Mr. Milestone is supervising production. The picture comprises part of the 40,000 feet of newsreels of the Soviet-Nazi war which arrived in America during the last few months, after cutting and editing. Newsreels prior to the German invasion will not be used. Eliot Paul wrote the commentary for the film which will be a "report" on Russia for the first four months of the war and shows the Red Army at the front lines and the civilian population building defenses behind the lines. Walter Huston will be the narrator and William Averell Harriman, who represented the United States at the Moscow conferences recently, will give an introduction to the film. It will run 105 minutes and is seven reels in length.

Artkino has full distribution rights to the film in North and South America, and Russian War Relief is expected to share in the income of the picture. First run bookings will be an a percentage basis and subsequent runs on flat rental. Mr. Napoli expressed his opinion that "England may want" the film.

"There has been much activity with Soviet pictures in England since the war," he said. "They dubbed in English voices for 'Alexander Nevsky' and for 'Rear of the Enemy,' a story of the Finnish campaign. If the voices are not too English and the material is acceptable for American audiences, Artkino probably will release these films here," he said.

The distributor also reported that the British Ministry of Information had been cooperating with the USSR and had been issuing a series of Russian playlets, or shorts, for national distribution. These 11-minute films show Soviet activity in aviation, Red Army at the front and defense efforts in the rear and in Russia's vast interior.

Commission Still Here

At Amtorg, the official Soviet trading company in America, it could not be learned this week whether or not the Soviet film commission which came to America last summer had returned to Russia. Other sources reported, however, that the commission, headed by Gregor Irsky, was still in the United States, obtaining technical equipment and information from other industries. The commission is said to have purchased more than $100,000 worth of laboratory and film equipment, including a large order of Mitchell cameras. It was also learned that the commission is still dickering for the purchase of "The Great Dictator," which picture Soviet officials believe will be a great "morale" builder in Russia during the war with Germany.

Meanwhile, the U. S. Customs officials are continuing to withhold the 16 Nazi-produced films which in all likelihood, will never be released for distribution in America, now that the country is engaged in a war with an Axis partner. Nine of the pictures are: "Herz er Koenigin," or "Queen's Heart"; "Zwischen Hankig und Haiti," "Between Hamburg and Haiti"; "Die Keusche Geliebte," "Virtue's Beloved"; "Sommer, Sonne and Erika," "Summer, Sun and Erika"; "Unzer Fraeulin Doktur," "Our Miss Doktor"; "Bismarck"; "Das Suendige Dorf," "The Village of Sin"; "Das Himmelblaue Abendkleie," "Sky-Blue Evening Gown"; and "Ein Laben Lang," "Our Life Long."

FIVE VARIETY CLUBS ELECT; SILVER HONORED

400 at Dinner to Retiring Chief Barker; AMPA Host to Club's National Leaders

Special tribute was paid by the Albany Variety Club, Tent Nine, to its first chief barker, Moe Silver, at a testimonial dinner held on Monday night at the Ten Eyck Hotel. More than 400 film people honored Mr. Silver at a testimonial banquet on his promotion to the Pittsburgh zone managership for Warner Theatres.

Earlier in the day, Tent Nine Variety Club's first officers were installed at a luncheon at the Ten Eyck where 150 guests participated in the completion of the reorganization procedure. John H. Harris, national chief barker, and James G. Balmer, chief dough guy (treasurer), both of Pittsburgh, handed over the charter and installed officers. Mr. Silver, formerly Warner Theatres' zone manager in Albany, and instrumental in the tent's reorganization there, was honored by his installation as chief barker. However, he immediately turned over the reins to first assistant chief barker Louis Golding, Fabian divisional manager, explaining that his duties in Pittsburgh would prevent his occupying the office in Albany.

Admiral Stirling Speaker

Among the prominent speakers at the Silver testimonial dinner were Admiral Yates Stirling, an old friend of the Pittsburgh Warner zone manager and the man who built the Pearl Harbor fortifications near Honolulu. James J. Walker was master of ceremonies, and Walter T. Brown, secretary to and representing Governor Herbert H. Lehman; Attorney General John J. Bennett; Mayor Herman Hoogkamp of Albany; Harry Kalmine, Mr. Harris, Mr. Balmer, Herman Robbins, Joseph Vogel, E. K. O'Shea, Si Fabian, chairman of the dinner; C. J. Latta, Mr. Silver's successor as zone manager in Albany; and Myer and Louis Schine completed the roster of speakers.

Mr. Fabian presented Mr. Silver with a desk set, scroll and motion pictures of the affair.

Present during the early part of the evening, but forced to entrain for Chicago for the all-industry unity meeting before the speaking began, were George J. Schaefer and Ned E. Depinet of RKO; Joseph Bernahard of Warner Bros. and Jack Cohn of Columbia.

The home office groups from New York came to the dinner on a special Silver section of the Commodore Vanderbilt, while delegations from Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Buffalo arrived in special sections.

Proceeds of the dinner were turned over to Mr. Silver, who in turn contributed the sums to the Variety Club in Albany to start its charitable fund.

Among those who were on hand to honor Mr. Silver were the following, from New York:

Clayton Bond, Frank Phelps, Sam Morris, Leonard Schlessinger, Harry Goldberg, Jules Girden, Harry Kaplowitz, Roy Haines, Arthur Saxon, Ben Worth, Max Brockman, E. J. Ullberg, Louis Kaufman, W. Stewart McDonald, Harry Mayer, Harold Rodner, Frank Damis, Mort Blumenstock, Joseph Feldman, Jack Shea.

Also, Jay Bernison, Ben Amsterdam, Edward Goldstein, Al Reid, Clarence Hill, Charles O'Reilly, Ben Sherman, E. C. Grainger, Al Manheim, John Turtletaub, Abe Raehlin, Joe Vogel, Herman Robbins and Harry Seed.

Among the out-of-towners were:

Joseph Feldman, Ira Cohen, Pete Dana, Jim Balmer, Buck Stone, Herb Greenblatt, Jack Maloney, Harry Yund, Pittsburgh; Jack Berkson, Phil Fox, A. C. Hayman, Ralph Crabill, Sid Samoson, Elmer Lux, Ralph Maw, Buffalo; Bob McDonald, Dallas; I. F. Hoffman, George Lynch, Bernie Mills, Seymour Morris, Ralph Pielow, Budd Rogers, William Smalley, Joe Unger, Myron and Sid Kallet, Bernie Granze, Jules Levy, Morris Wolf.

Officers installed by Chief Barker Harris earlier in the day, in addition to Mr. Silver, were:

Clayton G. Eastman, Paramount branch manager, assistant barker; Herman Ripps, MGM branch manager, property master; Charles A. Smakwitz, Warner Theatres district manager, dough guy; and Si. H. Fabian, Fabian Theatres; J. Meyer Schine, Schine Circuit; Gloversville; Moe Grassgreen, 20th Century-Fox branch manager; William Smalley, Smalley Circuit, Cooperstown; Sam E. Arnowitz, Albany film attorney, and Fred I. Archibald, publisher, Albany Times-Union, as canvassmen.

AMPA Host to Clubs

General William McGraw of the Dallas Variety Club, was to be master of ceremonies at the AMPA testimonial luncheon on Thursday to the Variety Clubs of America, at the Hotel Edison in New York. Former attorney general of Texas, General McGraw, is now on active duty with the Office of Production Management in Washington.

Variety Club's national leaders, John H. Harris of Pittsburgh, founder and National Chief Barker of Variety Clubs, and Robert J. O'Donnell of Dallas, Texas, first assistant national chief barker, will be the guests of honor at the luncheon for which Paul Benjamin heads the AMPA committee on arrangements, appointed by Vincent Trotta, president.

Invitations have been sent to:

Earle Sweigert, Tent No. 13, Philadelphia, Pa.; Syd Lehman, Tent No. 7, Buffalo, N. Y.; Marty Mullin, Tent No. 23, Boston, Mass.; C. C. Kellenberg, Tent No. 1, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Virgil Jackson, Tent No. 2, Columbus, Ohio; Harry Arthur, Tent No. 4, St. Louis, Mo.; Bert M. Stearn, Tent No. 6, Cleveland, Ohio; William Onie, Tent No. 3, Cincinnati, Ohio; John Howard, Tent No. 5, Detroit, Mich.; Jerry Zigmund, Tent No. 8, Kansas City, Mo.; Kenneth Collins, Tent No. 10, Indianapolis, Ind.; Benjamin Blotcky, Minneapolis, Minn.; M. A. Silver, Tent No. 9, Albany, N. Y.; Hardie Meakin, Tent No. 11, Washington, D. Keyes, Tent No. 18, Dayton, Ohio; William K. Jenkins, Tent No. 21, Atlanta, Ga.; William Hicks, Tent No. 19, Baltimore, Md.; M. A. Lightman, Tent No. 20, Memphis, Tenn.; L. C. Griffith, Tent No. 22, Oklahoma City, Okla.; H. H. Everett, Tent No. 24, Charlotte, N. C.

Five Tent Elections

Edgar Moss, 20th Century-Fox district manager, was elected chief barker of the Philadelphia Variety Club for the 1942 year by the new board of canvassmen last Saturday. Charles H. Goodwin, of Quality Premiums, was elected first assistant chief barker; David Supowitz, theatre architect, second assistant chief barker; Elmer O. Wilshke, Altee sound engineer, property master (secretary), and William McAvoy, Jr., electrical contractor, dough guy (treasurer). In addition to the officers, those elected to the new board of canvassmen at the annual election held last Thursday included Harry Biben, booking agent; James P. Clark, Highway Express Service; Alfred J. Davis, 20th Century-Fox sales manager; Al Fisher, Keswick Theatre; Ted Sehlanger, Warner Theatres zone manager, and Samuel H. Stiefel, Fays Theatre. The following ex-chief barkers automatically became members of the board: Earle W. Sweigert, Jay Emanuel, Dr. Leon Levy, William J. Clark, Jack Beresin and Ben Amsterdam.

Earle W. Sweigert, Paramount district manager, the present chief barker, was elected national canvassman to represent Tent No. 13 at the national convention. Jack Beresin and William McAvoy, Jr., were elected delegates to the national convention, with Henry Friedman and Elmer O. Wilshke the alternate "clowns." Chief Barker-elect Moss appointed Samuel H. Stiefel as 1942 chairman of the club's entertainment committee and Elmer O. Wilschke as chairman of the house committee. New chairman of the "heart" (charity) committee will be appointed at a later date, at which time the new "fixer" (counselor) will be named.

The new chief barker was to be inducted at the club's seventh annual banquet on Sunday, December 14th, at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, with James J. Walker, ex-Mayor of New York, acting as toastmaster. Vice-President Henry A. Wallace and Lord Halifax were expected to head the speakers. Acceptances already have been received from Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones and Major General William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan.

At the annual election meeting of the Variety Club of Baltimore, Tent 19, in its quarters atop the Stanley Theatre last Wednesday, the following members of the club were elected as officers for the year 1942:

Bernard Seaman, chief barker; Edward Perotka, first assistant chief barker; Rodney Collier, second assistant chief barker; Barry Goldman, secretary; Frank H. Durkee, treasurer; and members of the board of directors including Leonard McLaughlin, Howard Burman, Lauritz Garman, Edwin L. Sherwood, Joseph C. Grant, C. William Hicks, and J. Louis Rome.

Prior to the election, a full report was given to the membership, and ways and means are now being discussed for next year's charity program.

Collins Elected

Kenneth T. Collins, manager of the Indiana Theatre in Indianapolis, was re-elected chief barker of the Indianapolis Tent No. 10 of the Variety Club, beginning his second term.

Others named at the tent's annual election are: Arthur Landes, first vce-president; L. J. McGinley, second vice-president; Al Blocher, treasurer, and Claude McKean, secretary. Directors elected are: Carl Niesse, Marc J. Wolf, Diek Frank, Fred Greenberg, A. C. Zaring, Joe Neger, Curtis Butler, Harold Stevens, I. A. Fendrick, Morris E. Lefko and George Landis.

Tent No. 23 of Variety Club of New England was to hold a meeting of its members on Tuesday at the Statler Hotel, with M. J. Mullin, chief barker, presiding.

Topics to be discussed were panel of candidates for election to the tent's board of directors for 1942, and plans for the tent to sponsor the Christmas opening night of "Icecapades," at the Boston Garden.

R. E. Griffith of Dallas will be installed as chief barker of the Variety Club of Texas on December 15th. Other new officers of the tent recently elected are: Claude Ezell, first assistant chief barker; W. C. Underwood, second A. C. B. Ted de Boer, dough guy; John Q. Adams, property master; Ed Rowley, S. L. Oakley, Ben Ferguson, Herman Beiersdorf, Jo Jack and Justin McInaney, canvasmen; R. J. O'Donnell, canvasman four years; Paul Short, canvasman five years; J. O. Cherry and Burt King, clowns; Jake Lutzer and B. C. Gibson, alternate clowns, and Paul Short, national canvasman for 1942.

Paramount Signs Dooley Wilson

Dooley Wilson, Negro comedian who made a hit on Broadway last season with Ethel Waters in "Cabin in the Sky," has been signed by Hollywood and will go to work on three pictures for Paramount. After a film debut in "Night in New Orleans," a murder thriller with a Mardi Gras background, Mr. Wilson will play a pullman porter in the Bob Hope-Madeleine Carroll comedy, "My Favorite Blonde," and Rudy Vallee's valet in "The Palm Beach Story," the next Preston Sturges picture starring Claudette Colbert and Joel McCrea.

Press-Radio List Revised by FCC

The Federal Communications Commission last Thursday, December 4th, in Washington, D. C., decreased its estimate of the percentage of broadcasting stations owned by newspaper interests, deleting from its list 49 of the 298 stations which it earlier had classified as newspaper-owned.

The commission's action was taken at the resumption of hearings on Newspaper ownership, but the new figure immediately was attacked by Harold Hough, of the Fort Worth, Tex., Star-Telegram, chairman of the Newspaper Radio Committee, who charged that many of the stations still listed should be eliminated.

Mr. Hough pointed out that the new exhibit placed stations in two groups, one of which, he said, consisted of stations where the newspaper interest was so trivial that the paper had no control of their operations.

"On a percentage basis," Mr. Hough said, "the figures show that newspaper stations are 31 per cent of the number of all stations, and that their time sales are 27.8 per cent and their broadcast income 26.5 per cent."

On Friday, December 5th, attorneys for the FCC completed the introduction of their evidence in the commission's investigation of newspaper-radio relationships, and the hearings were adjourned to January 8th, 1942.

When the hearings are resumed, the newspaper-radio committee, organized to oppose any prohibitions on future acquisition of broadcast stations by newspaper interests, will begin presentation of evidence.

Academy Committee

A committee of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has been formed to consider rules governing this year's Awards for Achievement in Art Direction. On the committee are: Bertram Teitelbaum, Chairman; Lincoln Banks, McClure Capps, Ernst Fegte, Danny Hall, Al Herman, Russell Kimball, Richard Riedel, Stan Rogers, Joseph Wright, and Gordon S. Mitchell, Manager of the Academy Technical Bureau.

Robins Estate Appraised

An appraisement filed in probate court in Youngstown, Ohio, set at $167,576, the estate of the late David M. Robins, former manager of the Warner theatre in that city, and brother-in-law of Harry, Jack and Major Albert Warner. Mr. Robins left his estate to his wife with bequeaths to Jewish organizations in Cleveland, Denver and Youngstown.

Sherkel Theatre Sold

Operated by Carl Sherkel for more than 25 years, the Sherkel theatre in Houtzdale, Pa., has been taken over by H. J. Thompson, who operates theatres in Bellefonte, Clearfield, Coalport, Curwensville, Stoneboro, Madera and Watsontown, Pa.

Warners Signs Massey

Raymond Massey, actor, has been given a contract by Warner Brothers It provides three pictures per year.

ROGERS URGES MORE SHORT SUBJECTS USE

William F. Rogers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in a statement issued this week from the home office in New York pointed out that short subjects have suffered from inadequate attention.

"The prevailing sentiment against double features has given shorts a new and needed impetus," he said. "As a result, our company and producers generally are giving increased time and effort to shorts production." Mr. Rogers said short subjects were becoming important to exhibitors.

"Shorts are being made today which I believe offer more satisfactory entertainment that many average second features," he said. "It is logical to believe that they offer as good, or better, revenue possibilities. Certainly they merit merchandising attention," he concluded.

Equity Weighs Agents' Protests

Actor's Equity, in New York, is considering protests voiced by members of the Theatrical Artists Representatives Association against the union's new regulations affecting agents. The TARA, according to George Goldsmith, president, is seeking a basic agreement, temporary suspension of the new agent policy and an increase in commissions from five to ten per cent.

Equity, incidently, has already granted the first agent permit under the new policy to T. Hayes Hunter of 1270 Sixth Ave. Mr. Hunter paid an initiation fee of $100 besides annual dues of $25.

Emanuel Opens New Theatre

Charles Emanuel, for many years a distributor of Spanish language films on Los Angeles Film Row, is now operating the Sutter Theatre in San Francisco, which he has taken over from Allen and Irwin Lee. The Sutter has been switched to Spanish films, taking first-run from the Verdi theatre, a Golden State house operated in partnership with Morris Klein.

Kestenbaum with P. R. C.

Samuel S. Kestenbaum has been appointed assistant to Joseph O' Sullivan, director of advertising and publicity of Producers Releasing Corporation, according to announcement made last week. Mr. Kestenbaum was formerly with Monogram and Republic Pictures. He joined PRC in October 1940, in charge of prints. His new duties cover exploitation and fan publicity.

Allen Buys Four Houses

R. S. Allen of Toronto, who has launched an independent theatre circuit in Ontario, has purchased the four M. J. O'Brien theatres in the Ottawa district formerly operated by the Ottawa Valley Amusement Co. The group, located at Armprior, Almonte, Renfrew and Pembroke, has been added to his first acquisition, the Queens theatre at Hespeler, in western Ontario.

Government Acts to Disbar Kaufman

The U. S. District Court in Philadelphia, on specific instructions from Attorney General Francis Biddle, on December 5th was asked to discipline Morgan S. Kaufman, defendant in the William Fox conspiracy trials, as a member of the Federal bar, a former Federal referee in bankruptcy and, hence, an officer of the Federal courts.

The Government's petition, filed by U. S. Attorney Gerald A. Gleason, said Mr. Kaufman admitted at the trials of himself and former U. S. Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis that he lent a cousin of the jurist $10,000 at a time when he was counsel to seven cases before Judge Davis. Five cases in which Mr. Kaufman was counsel and which were before the court at the time of loan were named in the petition, including the action of Paramount Pictures, Inc., against Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, Mr. Kaufman representing the exhibitor organization.

No specific punishment was recommended. The Federal attorney later explained that the court could absolve him, disbar him, censure him or suspend him from practice before the Federal Courts for any length of time.

The Government also based its petition on testimony of William Fox, who testified he loaned, through Mr. Kaufman, $15,000 to Judge Davis at a time when the Fox bankruptcy cases were before Judge Davis.

The petition was presented to Senior Federal District Court Judge William H. Kirkpatrick, who assigned Judge Guy K. Bard to consider the case. It was Judge Bard who originally tried William Fox, sentencing him to year and a day in prison and a fine of $3,000, and last week rejected a second Fox petition to reconsider the sentence and for withdrawal of the guilty plea.

Two RKO Shorts Are Completed

Bert Gilroy, short subjects producer for RKO, announced last week that two of the eight two-reel comedies still to be produced on the 1941-42 RKO schedule, will be completed by December 31st. The remaining six will not be filmed until early in 1942, he said. An Edgar Kennedy comedy, "Average Man," and one of the Leon Errol shorts, are the two which will be finished by the end of December. Charles Roberts, who will direct the Kennedy picture, is now working on the script.

Wanger Transfers Assets

Walter Wanger has completed the transfer of assets of Walter Wanger Productions, Inc., to United Artists Productions. John LeRoy Johnston, Mr. Wanger's publicity director has put the final touches on the "Sundown" campaign and, with the rest of the Wanger staff, has left the company. Mr. Johnston's future plans are not set as yet.

Oakie Contract Extended

Twentieth Century-Fox has picked up the option on Jack Oakie's contract. The comedian is currently appearing in "Rise and Shine."

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

THE MOTION PICTURE SCREEN warned of Japanese invasion of our shores a quarter of a century ago.

Back in the autmun of 1916, William Randolph Hearst's International News Service, which was just then beginning to turn attentions to the art of the cinema, gave expression to Mr. Hearst's editorializations on "The Yellow Peril," in a film serialization entitled "Patria," which was later withdrawn from theatre circulation at the insistence of Woodrow Wilson.

Oldtimer Ed McManus, head of International News then was studying the World War I situation and looking for ideas to be capitalized when everybody but the public knew the U. S. was going into the big fight in Europe. The newspapers and the atmosphere were full of preparedness propaganda. And the idea of seeing a most impressive Joan d'Arc, in glittering armor astride a big white stallion in a woman's suffrage parade on New York's Fifth Avenue, elaborated itself in McManus's mind into a full-blown outline of a motion picture serial which was to get aboard the trend of the day and capitalize at one and the same time, for the Hearst properties, the interest in the feminist movement and the patriotic wave. There was to be a motion picture written to a prescription, as Terry Ramsaye described it in his A Million and One Nights, the history of the motion picture.

Some elements of the history of the DuPont family of Deleware, famous munitions makers for generations, suggested the Joan d'Arc basis for the story. The original purpose was to show the United States attacked by an imaginary nation, with the heroine saving the country, through great suspense.

This was, however, too good an opportunity to be lost from the point of view of the Hearst newspapers with all they had been saying about the Japanese "peril," about a naval base in Magdalena Bay down the Gulf of Lower California and the yellow threat on our west coast.

The imaginary foe of the United States was to be an allied army of Japs and Mexicans.

The serial was produced by the Wharton Studios. Irene Castle headed the case, which included Milton Sills, Warner Oland.

There were two nations displeased most particularly with the "Patria"—Japan and Mexico, and, by devious methods, Jap Ambassador Hanrihara, in Washington, pulled some mighty strong diplomatic wires, resulting in International News Service's home office receiving a tactful letter one day, as follows:

> Several times in attending Keith's Theatre here I have seen portions of the film entitled 'Patria' which has been exhibited there and I think in a great many other theatres in the country. May I not say to you that the character of the story disturbed me very much. It is extremely unfair to the Japanese and I fear that it is calculated to stir up a great deal of hostility which will be far from beneficial to the country, indeed will, in present circumstances, be extremely hurtful. I take the liberty, therefore, of asking whether the Company would not be willing to withdraw it if it is still being exhibited.
> With much respect,
> Sincerely yours,
> WOODROW WILSON.

The picture was withdrawn. Precisely 25 years later, last Sunday, the Japs invaded U.S. possessions.

Will Hays and the MPPDA board members assembled quickly on Monday and sent the President at the White House a pledge of support and loyalty in the conflict.

ASCAP also on Monday shot right out with announcement of extraordinary wartime import: that "ASCAP members today turned their talents to the writing of war songs," adding: "War songs written by ASCAP members in 1917-18 (for World War I) will also doubtless be revived. These include: 'Over There,' 'We're Going Over,' 'Where Do We Go from Here?' 'I Don't Know Where I'm Going But I'm on My Way,' ''Til We Meet Again,' 'There's a Long, Long Trail,' 'I May Be Gone for a Long, Long Time' and 'I Don't Want to Get Well'" (??????)

"I Don't Want To Set the World on Fire" will positively not be encouraged.

The theatre section of New York City Museum is coming along very nicely. It just received two very special donations for its theatrical display room. One was a batch of 900 photographs of hilight scenes from important plays staged since 1893, given anonymously. The other was two caskets, one of silver and one of lead, both used in Edwin Booth's 1867 revival of Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," and cheerfully donated by Miss Affie and Miss Horatio McVicker, whose aunt was the second wife of the famous tragedian. The McVicker girls had been sort of minding the caskets for awhile.

YAZZIE GREYMOUNTAIN is a Navajo Indian. Yazzie Greymountain protested to the Arizona highway patrol that he is not a dead Navajo.

"Yazzie Greymountain is me who is not dead," he wrote from a hospital. "If I was a dead accident then I couldn't write you this letter, could I? That's right."

Yazzie was reported by the highway patrol radio to have died after an accident.

"I live at Castle Butte trading post in Arizona, which is also in America," Yazzie wrote. "I have one wife which is called Tonlin Barton Greymountain just like my name. It makes Tonlin cry when she reads that I am a dead accident. I am in the hospital here in Leupp and my leg is broke and there are bumps on my head but I am alive."

"Yazzie Greymountain is a live Navajo Indian. Tell them Yazzie is me so they don't make any mistake next Tuesday and give me a decent Christian burial because I don't want one," he concluded.

SCHINE CASE ORDERED TO TRAIL MARCH 3rd

Nashville Verdict Not Expected Until January; New York Trial Set for Early Spring

The Government's second anti-trust suit against a large non-affiliated circuit and the majors, the action against the Schine Circuit, its affiliates, Universal, United Artists, and Columbia, in Buffalo Federal Court, will begin March 3rd, Federal Judge John Knight decided in that court Monday.

The Government's first suit, against the Crescent Circuit and Universal and United Artists, virtually ended in Nashville Federal Court last week and Federal Judge Elmer Davies' verdict is expected in January. The trial phases occurred this summer; the recent weeks have seen filing of briefs, and supplemental arguments by counsel. Columbia was dropped from that case. In both cases, the five majors in the consent decree have been dropped as defendants.

The Government's anti-trust suit against the three non-consenting majors is expected to open in New York Federal Court before June. If the Government does not prosecute them successfully by June 1st, the selling and tradeshowing provisions of the decree become inoperative for the consenting majors, if they use the decree's "escape" clause.

The Government's third field anti-trust suit against a large independent and a major is that against the Griffith circuit, affiliates, and majors in Oklahoma City. The prosecution of that case depends on the fate of previous actions, it is thought.

Trial Without Jury

Before Judge Knight announced March 3rd trial of the Schine action, Seymour Simon, assistant United States Attorney General, asserted he would be prepared by January 15th. Willard McKay, Schine counsel, objected that the defense could not be ready then, whereupon the March 3rd date was set. Judge Knight indicated he would hear the case without jury.

Columbia, United Artists, and Universal have until January 15th to file answers to the Government interrogatories, filed last February 13th.

Setting of the Schine case for March 3rd indicated to New York observers the impossibility of a New York case trial in April, planned by the Government.

Mr. Simon predicted the Schine action would consume two months.

The Government last week filed a 28-page supplemental bill of particulars.

Restated in clearer form are 45 names and locations of theatres to which preference or protection allegedly was granted by the distributor defendants. Listed are 27 theatres in four states which, according to the Government, were acquired by Schine after they were granted preference over competing theatres. Forty competing theatres over which Schine allegedly obtained privileges are listed.

Also given are 73 houses which, the Government charged, the distributors have refused to license on a local competitive basis.

Final arguments were heard last week, in the suit against Crescent, affiliates and Universal and United Artists, in Nashville; and observers thought Federal Judge Elmer Davies, somewhat hampered by other duties, might give decision by January 15th. They noted, too, the maze of evidence and briefs the judge must consider, and the abstruse "angles" submitted by counsel.

In addition, supplemental briefs by Crescent, and by Muscle Shoals Theatres, and by the Government, are still being filed, and will not all be in court until December 23rd.

In final argument last week, Robert Wright, special Assistant United States Attorney General, asked Judge Davies not to free UA and Universal. He maintained the companies' franchises with the circuit and affiliates created unreasonable restraints upon interstate commerce.

William Waller, Crescent lawyer, argued that the Government had not proved conspiracy, nor coercion, and that franchises given the circuit by the distributors were not illegal nor did they hamper exhibitors.

He also added that if the Government thought the circuit's interpretation of the Paramount franchise wrong, the circuit would amend it "to provide expressly that the selling of second run is not prevented."

George Armistead, Jr., chief Crescent counsel, asserted the anti-trust action against Crescent was motivated by the complaints of a few exhibitors.

Previously, and possibly indicative of the decision to be rendered by Judge Davies, the judge had commented:

"Would Close Theatres"

"The relief asked by the Government, dissolving the Crescent Amusement Company and affiliates, would probably close up all the theatres in many of the towns involved in the suit."

In the $1,592,785 anti-trust suit filed by Charles Mion and W. T. Murray, Atlanta operators, against the Lucas and Jenkins circuit and the majors recently, the observers on the scene reported expectation that the circuit and the others will shortly file a general denial of charges. Mr. Murray and Mr. Mion operate the Rialto, Atlanta, and three other houses in the suburbs. They charge restraint of trade resultant from conspiracy among the defendants, and the sum mentioned is asked as triple damages.

In New Haven, time in which to file objections by Twentieth Century-Fox to the long interrogatories of the plaintiffs in the Pickwick, Greenwich $5,452,575 anti-trust suit against the eight major film companies, has been extended by stipulation. The stipulation was signed by Raymond Hackett of Cummings and Lockwood for the plaintiffs, and Edwin P. Morse for Twentieth Century-Fox.

Chances of the Fox Midwest circuit getting a new trial in federal court in Nebraska, after losing in Frank Hollingsworth's anti-trust suit charging collusion with the major film exchanges, in their Beatrice, Neb., situation, hinge on an odd factor. Trial Judge T. C. Munger, who died recently, never ruled whether the new trial should be granted.

Observers point to attorney Paul Good as the logical man to get the federal bench for his vacancy.

Mr. Good, incidentally, was one of Hollingsworth's lawyers.

On January 29th, the final hearing will be held in the Schad Theatres' $750,000 damage suit against the Wilmer and Vincent circuit and Fox and Warners. The Schad Theatres is in Reading, Pa., and operates the Astor there.

Gerbracht Transferred

W. Jerry Gerbracht, who has managed the four theatres of the Ames Theatre Co., at Ames, Iowa, owned by Central States Theatres, Gerbracht, has gone to Estherville, Iowa, to manager the Central States Grand theatre there. Forrest Sorenson, former manager of the Grand, has been transferred to Clinton, Iowa, to manage the circuit's Rialto.

MINNESOTA CRIMINAL SUIT STARTS MONDAY

The civil suit by the majors in Minnesota courts, to invalidate its anti-consent decree law, has been postponed, to give preference to the criminal violation trial, scheduled to begin Monday. The postponement Monday ends speculation over which trial would proceed first. Either, or both, will determine the law's constitutionality.

The criminal trial concerns RKO, Paramount, and Twentieth Century Fox, charged with selling films in the St. Paul-Minneapolis area in blocks of five and ten. The law specifies the films be sold as an entire season's output, allowing the exhibitor a 20 per cent cancellation.

Judge John Boerner, in Ramsey County Court, Monday, directed its clerk to place the civil action on the calendar, after February 1st. He did not set a date.

In the civil action, the five consenting majors, and United Artists, ask a permanent injunction to prevent enforcement of the state law, and a declaratory judgment that it is unconstitutional.

Meanwhile, the majors, except Loew's, having secured relief from the decree, in the New York Federal Court, are selling in Minnesota, in accordance with its law. And Loew's, in the interest of "industry unity" will shortly start selling, William F. Rogers, sales head, announced in Chicago Tuesday.

Menken Exhibits War Zone Film

Urging America "don't be downhearted; we have many allies in the Far East." Arthur Menken, Paramount Newsreel cameraman, predicted Tuesday that this would be a "long, hard pull. Japanese are accustomed to making sacrifices for war, but we in the United States must learn to tighten our belts." Mr. Menken showed his film, "The Battle for the Pacific," to 500 members of Cinema Lodge of B'nai B'rith, at the Hotel Edison in New York.

Mr. Menken returned five weeks ago from a six months' tour through China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Singapore, Java, Hawaii and other spots in the Far East. Mr. Menken's film included shots of Hawaii, taken in September, other scenes of the war zone and the Army and the Navy preparing to defend the islands.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Studio Visits a Racket; 'Woman' Casts a Shadow

Esteemed Editor:

Anyone who's been wondering whether an overabundance of preoccupations has reduced fan interest in Hollywood and its affairs can stop now.

Last week's quotation on visas entitling bearers to visit a motion picture studio was $7.50 the copy and supply was far short of demand.

This figure compares, a bit obliquely to be sure, with the standard rate of 50 cents charged by hawkers for an obsolete map of the community purporting to guide sightseers to the domiciles of the famous, and with the $3 charged by reputable bus companies for touring the curious through Beverly Hills past some mighty expensive diggings.

This quotation of $7.50, first price tag ever affixed to the privilege of visiting studio premises, is in its way something of a vital statistic, by no means as fundamental and indicative as those chalked up by exhibitors at close of a day's business, yet something of an index of the state of mind and pocketbook of the fan who finds himself in Hollywood full of anticipation and discovers that the no-visitors rule established by the studios last July still stands.

It is of course well and yet a trifle sad that the industrious individual who furnished the industry this convenient standard for determining the degree of fan fervor has been stopped from pursuing his enterprise and—who knows?—mayhap achieving other and even more fascinating disclosures. Be that as it may have been, the studios caught up with him last week and turned him over to the police. What they'll be doing with him is as yet undisclosed, for it appears that he was managing, by means described in generalities, to deliver the contraband in a manner satisfactory to his customers.

Although documentation is not to be had, for several reasons which proclaim themselves, it is a fact that some steps are being taken hereabouts which were not in contemplation prior to the Legion of Decency's action in re "Two Faced Woman."

At least one million dollar production completed some months ago has been overhauled, to the extent of extensive reshooting of scenes on the stages of a rental studio some distance from the home lot, without publicity of any kind, although some players whose names are news were called back to work in the substitute footage.

At least three scripts have been scrapped en toto and there's been no publicity about that, either.

Doubtless these cases, learned about without trying, are details in a movement affecting the whole of the Hollywood scene, but the Town is relying with unaccustomed steadfastness upon the merit of that adage about silence being golden.

Meanwhile you'll have noted that four of the five local newspaper critics gave their readers a variety of reasons for staying away from exhibitions of the Garbo picture, the fifth floundering.

This virtual unanimity in condemnation is of such rarity as to stamp itself a result of the Legion of Decency's stand. Whether so or no, it rates as a factor of singular potency in the scheme of things as they are and are to be. For the Town is home to many a producer, director and writer who care not a whit about the opinions of the Legion, nor of the population, but to none who don't squirm when the local newspapers pan their pictures.

That matter of the misleading layout in Pic Magazine, which moved the Studio Publicity Directors Committee to the adoption of a resolution at last week's meeting, is as susceptible to duplication as it ever was.

The committee refrained from directing its resolution at free lance publicity men in general, or in particular, not only because these independents in the field of promotion are not as a group guilty of transgression, but also because they are not on studio payroll and so do not come within committee jurisdiction. Neither are they required to submit photographic material to the Advertising Code Authority, which inspects studio art prior to its dissemination, although they may avail themselves of this facility if they choose to do so and many of them do.

Neither is there nor can there be any direct control over the output of the resident correspondents, although revocation of a few studio passes might amount to about the same thing, and of course no group of publicity men in responsible positions could entertain a thought of attempting to exercise control over the managements of magazines which pervert photographs to their own newsstand purposes.

The committee's resolution "condemning publicity practices conducted in behalf of individuals without regard to their effect upon the industry's goodwill" is counted upon to give some pause to such persons as may have been inspired by Pic's liberality in handling the pictures of Mitchell Leisen's party to try another pitch over the same corner of the plate.

It may improve the probabilities, but it doesn't change the possibilities.

So long as an individual possessing a Graflex without a conscience can establish contact with a publication without an ethic, nothing but a before-the-fact Post Office Department and some after-the-fact courts of law stand between Hollywood and as many repetitions of the Pic affair as the photomagazine traffic will bear.

The Misses Louella Parsons and Hedda Hopper continue unmindful of exhibitors' requests anent publication of reviews. Miss Parsons put her irk in print last Thursday, saying, "If there weren't some nonsensical rule about any advance comment on a picture before release date I would say that 'Babes on Broadway' was a riot at the sneak preview in Glendale." Miss Hopper just said 150 words in praise of "Ball of Fire" and none of extenuation to anybody. Lay press people invited to the "Bell of Fire" preview had been pledged to 'bide the rules.—W. R. W.

MGM Premieres 'Pulham' in Boston; Ballet Film Set

The two-theatre world premiere opening of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "H. M. Pulham, Esq.," was held at Loew's State and Orpheum theatres in Boston Wednesday night, December 3rd.

Newspapers in the city accorded front page displays to the opening and the visit to the city of Robert Young, who has the title role in the picture. Governor Saltonstall of Massachusetts, Harvard faculty members, and members of the Harvard class of 1915 were honored guests at the opening. More than 20,000 people were in the streets surrounding the theatres opening night according to the company.

J. P. Marquand, author of the novel on which the picture is based and a Harvard '15 graduate, spoke to the audiences of the two theatres and also addressed radio listeners. In the afternoon, preceding the opening, Mr. Marquand presented the film's shooting script to Dr. William B. Van Lennap, curator of Harvard's theatre collection.

"H. M. Pulham, Esq.," was directed by King Vidor and stars Robert Young, Hedy Lamarr and Ruth Hussey, and the cast includes Charles Coburn, Van Heflin, Fay Holden, Bonita Granville, Leif Erikson and Sara Haden.

"Parisian" Opens

"The Gay Parisian," Warner Brothers color short subject featuring the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, had its initial theatre showing at the Fabian theatre in Paterson, N. J., Thursday night, December 4th. Tamara Toumanova, leading dancer of the Ballet, was guest of honor at the opening and was introduced to the audience by Paterson's Mayor, William P. Furrey.

Prior to the opening of the picture a large-scale campaign had been in progress in Paterson and the opening night's festivities equalled a top premiere for ballyhoo and newspaper coverage. Over 2,000 high school pupils took part in a contest devoted to ballet posters. Representatives of women's clubs and civic organizations attended the opening, while giant searchlights played over the front of the theatre.

Monty Woolley, featured in the Warner screen production of "The Man Who Came to Dinner," was guest of honor at the annual function of the Wine and Food Society held at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York Tuesday night. A special concoction called Le Souffle Chaud Monty Woolley was the feature of the meal. The actor had ten of his favorite dining companions with him as fellow guests of the Wine and Food Society. Those who joined him at dinner included George Jean Nathan, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Bel Geddes, John Mosher and Mr. and Mrs. Oliver B. Jennings.

"Dumbo" for Christmas

Walt Disney's "Dumbo," now in its ninth week at the Broadway theatre in New York City, is being released nationally during Christmast Week and is set to play in 250 key cities during the holiday period, RKO announced this week.

Bookings to date include the entire New York circuit of RKO theatres embracing approximately fifty theatres.

Key city playdates include: Boston, Cedar Rapids, Chicago, Columbus, Cleveland, Davenport, Denver, Des Moines, Dubuque, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Lowell, Marshalltown, Newark, New Orleans, Omaha, Providence, Rochester, San Francisco, Sioux City, Syracuse, Trenton, Washington, Waterloo, Salt Lake City, Buffalo, Hornell, Champaign, Cincinnati, Dayton, Colorado Springs, Fort Wayne, Allentown, Harrisburg, Reading, Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver, Victoria, Winnipeg, New Brunswick, Oklahoma City and Lincoln.

Canadian bookings for Christmas Week include sixteen key theatres of the Famous Players Canadian circuit.

The Broadway theatre, New York, leads the list of theatres presenting a special midnight show of "Dumbo" on New Years Eve.

Council Elects Officers

Officers for the 1942 period were elected in Seattle last week by the Greater Seattle Movie Council, Inc., organized a few weeks ago to "study, review and make recommendations on motion picture production." Heading the group is Mrs. Charles G. Miller, prominent clubwoman. Other officers are: Miss Gertrude Apel, first vice-president; Mrs. Louis Marks, second vice-president; Mrs. Lee Farrell, recording secretary; Mrs. Anthony Cozza, corresponding secretary, and Judge Evangeline Starr, treasurer. Trustees include Mrs. Irene Durham, Mrs. B. A. Ross, Miss Julia Shourek, Mrs Bruce Elmore, Jr., Mrs. V. R. Forgey, and Mrs. Ernest Kummer

Frayne Heads Coast SMPE

J. G. Frayne has been reelected chairman of the Pacific Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. Charles Handley has been retained as secretary-treasurer and Hollis Moyse, John Hilliard and W. Ray Wilkinson have been named managers for a two year term.

Warners Continue Field Promotions

Continuing his re-alignment of the Warner field forces, "in moves designed to give sales operations a maximum of speed and efficiency," announcement was made Wednesday, in New York, by Ben Kalmenson, Warner sales chieftain, of the appointment of Ralph L. McCoy to the post of southern and midwestern division manager. At the same time Mr. Kalmenson gave W. C. Williamson, Jr., a new branch manager's post at Atlanta and Henry Krumm the post of branch manager in Memphis. All appointments were advancements for men who have been with the organization for some time.

Mr. McCoy, who arrived in New York Tuesday from Atlanta, will make his headquarters in New York. He had recently been named southeastern district manager in addition to his duties as Atlanta branch manager.

Mr. Williamson, who has been the Memphis branch manager for some time, assumes his new post immediately. Henry Krumm, who succeeds Mr. Williamson in the Memphis branch, has been with the Dallas office as a salesman.

Henry Herbel, west coast district manager, assumes more important duties in that territory in addition to the ones he now has. He will be in direct charge of the entire territory under supervision of Mr. Kalmenson.

PARAMOUNT RETIRING $4,250,000 PREFERRED

Payments of 25 Cents a Share on Common, $1.50 on Preferred; 5 Declare Dividends

Paramount will redeem its entire outstanding second preferred stock, with a face value of approximately $4,250,000. Redemption date is February 3rd, and was set last week at a meeting by the company's board of directors.

The board also declared a 25 cents per share dividend on the common stock, and the regular quarterly dividends on the preferred stock, which amounts to $1.50 per share on the first preferred, and 15 cents per share on the company's second preferred stocks.

The dividends are payable December 27th, to common stockholders on record December 11th, and to preferred holders on record December 12th.

The common stock dividend is the fourth this year. The 1941 dividend is now $1 per share.

Redemption of the second preferred will be at $10.06; it will also apply to scrip for second, at a proportionate rate.

Outstanding are 412,200 shares of second preferred, including scrip and approximately 22,600 shares of the second preferred in Paramount's treasury.

Up to January 20th, the second preferred will be convertible to common, nine shares of common for ten preferred.

The redemption will leave only first preferred outstanding, apart from common. It was noted that conversion of first preferred to common was now spurred by increased dividends on the common.

Expired this Thursday was Paramount's offer to exchange 3¼ debentures for the new 4 per cent debentures. It was reported about $12,000,000 worth of debentures were exchanged. The company will call about $600,000 of old debentures for redemption December 12th.

Five Others Declare

Universal's board last week voted $2 per share on its preferred, payable January 1st to stockholders of record December 23rd.

This is the third on that stock in recent quarter periods. After the January payment, arrears on the stock will then amount to $68 per share.

Loew's, Inc., declared an extra $1 dividend, which adds to the interim payment of 50 cents on the common stock. Both are payable December 31st, to stockholders of record December 19th. Dividends on the common stock thus total $3 per share, for 1941, equaling the 1940 payments.

The Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation last week declared a dividend, out of operating surplus, of $1.75 per share, on seven per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock for the quarter ended December 31st, payable to stockholders on record December 19th.

RCA Votes Payments

RCA's board Monday, in New York, announced that the following dividends had been declared: On the outstanding shares of First Preferred stock, 87½ cents per share, for the period from October 1, 1941, to December 31, 1941, payable in cash on January 1, 1942, to the holders of record of such stock at the close of business December 18, 1941.

On the outstanding shares of "B" Preferred stock, $1.25 per share, for the period from October 1, 1941, to December 31, 1941, payable in cash on January 1, 1942, to the holders of record of such stock at the close of business December 18, 1941.

On the outstanding shares of Common stock, 20 cents per share, payable in cash on January 28, 1942, to the holders of record of such stock at the close of business December 19 of the current year.

The Balaban & Katz circuit, Chicago, declared, this week, a $1 payment on the common stock, payable December 31st. The total yearly dividend thus becomes $4. It was $4.50 last year.

More Warner Earnings

Earnings for the 13 week period ended November 29th are probably about 50 per cent more than for the same period last year, in the estimation of officers of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., which Monday, in Wilmington, Delaware, reelected to the board Joseph Bernhard, Waddill Cathings, Robert W. Perkins, Major Albert Warner, Harry M. Warner, and Jack L. Warner, for two year terms.

It was stated there that war conditions prevented a statement of policy on back dividends on preferred stock. The shareholders were reminded of the company's success in refinancing maturing debentures of $29,400,000 during two years past. In the reelection, 82,996 preferred shares, 82,946 by proxy, were participants. Outstanding in that category are 99,617 shares. Represented, also, were 1,591,714 shares of common, of the 3,701,090 outstanding.

Time, Inc., Reports

Time, Inc., last week reported for 1941, a net profit of $3,750,000, after income and excess profits taxes, estimated at $4,550,000. The company is parent of the March of Time, documentary film producers.

Disposition, by exchange, of 3,341,800 Paramount Pictures convertible debentures by the Manufacturers Trust Company, reported by the Securities and Exchange Commission, Washington, last week in its first semi-monthly summary for October, was the largest movement of film company securities reported over a long period.

The report showed that the Manufacturers Trust Company also acquired 169,000 of the debentures and held 20,000 at the close of the month.

The heaviest individual deal reported was made by Jack L. Warner, New York officer, in Warner Bros. common stock, of which he acquired 22,900 shares, giving him a total of 125,860 shares.

Atlas Stock Acquisitions

Atlas Corporation, Jersey City, added to its portfolio of Radio Keith Orpheum holdings by the acquisition of 10,800 shares of common and 1,500 shares of preferred stock, and at the close of the month held 47,571 shares of preferred stock, 327,812 warrants for common and 834,223 shares of common direct and 268,230 shares of common through the American Company.

Three officers in Columbia Pictures picked up common stock of that company during the month, Samuel J. Briskin, Hollywood, buying 1,100 shares to give him a total of 1,800 shares; Benjamin B. Kahane, Los Angeles, buying 500 shares, representing his entire holdings, and Abraham Schneider, New York, also buying 500 shares to give him a total of 2,104 shares.

Loew's, Inc., continued to mop up odd lots of Loew's Boston Theatres common stock as it came on the market, picking up 121 shares to give it a total of 118,688 shares.

National Decency Legion Classifies Nine Pictures

Of the nine motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, five were approved for general patronage, two were classified as unobjectionable for adults, and two were classified as objectional in part. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Go West, Young Lady," "Obliging Young Lady," "Tarzen's Secret Treasure," "Texas Manhunt" and "Tuxedo Junction." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Body Disappears" and "Confirm or Deny." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "I'll Sell My Life" and "Louisiana Purchase."

Indiana Society Honors Will Hays, Saturday

Will H. Hays, former Postmaster General and now president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, will be the guest of honor at the 30th annual formal dinner of the Indiana Society of Chicago in the Grand Ballroom of the Stevens Hotel on Saturday evening, December 13th.

The only speech of the event other than that of Mr. Hays will be given by Dwight H. Green, Governor of Illinois. F. Harold Van Orman, former Lieutenant Governor of Indiana, and Philip Maxwell of the Chicago Tribune staff will be masters of ceremony.

There will also be presented a sound motion picture, "Hoosier Boy Makes Good," which traces the career of Mr. Hays. The film will also incorporate scenes from the "Great Train Robbery" and "Gone With the Wind."

Monarch Gets 16 mm.

Monarch Pictures, Pittsburgh exchange, has obtained the West Virginia, and the Allegheny County franchises for the Starlight 16mm. Film Company, distributing "home" films through commercial outlets.

New U.A. Product Announcement from Sales Chief Sears

First announcement of new product was made last Friday by Gradwell Sears before leaving New York for Hollywood on his first trip to the Coast since assuming his new post as vice-president in charge of domestic distribution for United Artists. Also, he held his first sales meeting for all district managers, and announced that Charles A. Rogers had become a U. A. independent portedly were being considered with Lewis Milestone and Alfred Hitchcock.

Mr. Sears was accompanied to the West Coast by Edward C. Raftery, president of United Artists, and Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president and chairman of the finance committee. They were in Hollywood for the annual meeting of owner-members and Eastern executives which was to take place on Friday at Pickfair, home of Mary Pickford, one of the owner-members of the company. Production plans for distribution of films already completed and others now in production received discussion-attention at this meeting.

Gives Product Details

United Artist product ready for release is the Edward Small production of Alexander Dumas', "The Corsican Brothers," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and directed by Gregory Ratoff. Nearly finished, with only the final musical accompaniment to be added, is Charles Chaplin's reissue of "The Gold Rush." Arnold Pressburger's "The Shanghai Gesture" soon will be ready for release. Alexander Korda's Technicolor production of Rudyard Kipling's "The Jungle Book" will be ready within the next month or so. . Another Edward Small picture, "Twin Beds," starring George Brent and Joan Bennett, is nearly completed. Mr. Sears also reported that another film from the Korda studios, the Ernst Lubitsch comedy, "To Be or Not to Be," starring Carole Lombard and Jack Benny, was before the cameras and would be ready for final cutting and editing within a month's time.

While in Hollywood, Mr. Sears, Mr. Raftery and Mr. Kelly also will confer with Hal Roach on both his current and forthcoming streamlined feature productions. They will discuss with Edward Small plans for the production and casting of "The Life of Rudolph Valentino."

In announcing that negotiations had been completed with Charles R. Rogers in the independent-producer-deal with United Artists, Mr. Sears said the new organization would be known as Charles R. Rogers Productions, Inc. Its present headquarters are at the RKO-Pathe Studios in Culver City.

Mr. Rogers' new Jessie Matthews musical comedy, "The Lady Comes Across," in which he has a financial interest, will open in New York on December 30th. The producer plans to remain in that city until that time and will return to Hollywood on January 2d. The three pictures to be produced for UA under the Rogers banner are: "Three Blondes and a Red Head," in Technicolor; the second, a musical comedy starring Jessie Matthews, scheduled for production in July, and the third, "The Powers Girls," suggested by the novel by John T. Powers, agent for models in New York. The latter film will be in Technicolor. John W. Rogers, son of the producer, and Monty Schaff will be associate producers for "The Powers Girls."

Mr. Sears and Carl Leserman, general sales manager for United Artists, called the special sales meeting at the home office last Thursday at which the new UA vice-president stressed the merchandising and selling angles on the company's next six films scheduled for early release. District managers and home office executives were present. Those who attended the meeting were Harry L. Gold, Monroe Greenthal, Paul Lazarus, Charles Stern, Arthur Silverstone, C. E. Peppiatt, Bert Stearn, John Dervin, J. D. Goldhar, Sam Glazer, Harry Kosiner, Phil Dow and Clarence Eiseman.

David O. Selznick, producer-owner of United Artists, postponed his departure for Hollywood until Monday. He was accompanied to the West Coast by Mrs. Selznick, Daniel T. O'Shea, executive vice-president of David O. Selznick Productions, Inc., and a member of the newly-created U. A. production board, and E. L. Scanlon, treasurer of Selznick Productions.

The producer's next picture and his first to be produced since he joined United Artists, will be "Keys to the Kingdom," the A. J. Cronin novel, starring Ingrid Bergman. It is reported that Mr. Selznick is endeavoring to secure Robert Donat for the principal male role in the film.

Alley's Son in Navy

Dexter Alley, cameraman for the Los Angeles Universal Newsreel staff, has been called into active duty by the United States Navy. Mr. Alley, son of Norman Alley, news cameraman, will be on duty in the Photographic Division of the U. S. Navy, Norfolk, Virginia.

Smith Again Chairman

Pete Smith, MGM short subjects executive, last week was reelected chairman of the short subjects branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Re-elected to the executive committee were Gordon Hollingshead, Jules White, Mr. Smith.

Loew and Universal Give Holiday Bonuses

Loew's and Universal this week announced that employees would receive Christmas bonuses. In both instances they will be for those receiving $40 or less weekly.

Some 5,800 employees of Loew's theatres, exchanges, the home office and Station WHN in New York, will receive gifts similar to the bonus distribution of last Christmas.

Employees receiving not more than $40 a week who have been employed for a year will get two weeks' salary, the bonus not to exceed $50. Those receiving not more than $40 who have been employed for six months will receive a week's salary, not to exceed $25.

A Christmas bonus of one week's salary to employees in the home and branch offices receiving $40 or less weekly has been voted by Universal's board of directors.

A similar benefit, in a different form, is to be made to the studio personnel. It will be a donation in lump sum to the Universal City Club, studio employees' own benevolent organization, which for years has provided financial assistance to employees in such emergencies as family bereavement, serious illness and accidents.

Fox on "Book"

Bud Fox Enterprises will handle commercial licenses for the forthcoming Alexander Korda production, "The Jungle Book." The organization will direct merchandising and general promotion of the film through tieups with manufacturers, retailers, and other industrial and commercial outlets.

U. S. REPORTS CUBA, EIRE REMAIN GOOD MARKETS

Few Changes in Status of U. S. Pictures Reported in Survey by Department of Commerce

The war in Europe has had comparatively little effect on the motion picture industry in Cuba and Eire (Ireland) according to reports from the United States Department of Commerce in Washington.

In Cuba a favorable situation for American films prevails, for in addition to the fancy of theatre-going public for such films, these pictures enjoy a preference of 20 per cent in the import duties.

There are no quota or contingent laws in effect which restrict the importation of motion pictures and none can be imposed while the Reciprocal Trade Agreement, which became effective in 1934 remains in force. However, a Presidential decree which became effective on June 10, 1940, and which was issued, without prior notice by the Government of Cuba, at the instigaiton of the Association of Empresarios, an exhibitor organization, was calculated to prohibit the block booking and blind selling of motion picture films.

The censorship of films in Cuba is not strict and is performed by a Film Censorship Commission in the Ministry of the Interior, the membership of which includes representatives appointed by the Minister of Education, the Minister of the Interior, the Mayor of Havana, two press associations, and three cultural and scientific organizations. The commission previews about half of the feature films entering Cuba.

Films which are considered politically dangerous are submitted to careful examination and sometimes their release is held up. During 1940, representatives of the German Government in Havana protested against the exhibition of films which they thought discredited the political regime and the leaders in Germany.

About 600 feature films are required annually to supply the Cuban film market. Copies of practically all feature films produced in the United States are exported to Cuba during 1940, 619 feature films were released in Cuban theatres. Films produced in the United States have always dominated the market, and during 1940 487 American films were exhibited.

There are 396 theatres operating in Cuba. This number includes a number of small theattres which present pictures only once or twice a week, and a sugar mill theatre, operated during the sugar grinding season. Only 25 theatres are not wired for sound.

Shortage in Ireland

Since exhibitors in Ireland depend upon the British offices of American film companies for much of their product, the war has had its effect on the film business in Ireland, since the greater part of the supply of American films produced before the war has already been seen in Dublin, and now only those which managed to cross the ocean in 1940 are available. This reduction in supply has resulted in available films being sold to exhibitors at substantially increased prices in comparison with previous years. Publicity material for available films is also scarce.

There are over 200 motion picture theatres in Eire, with a total seating capacity of approximately 130,000. Dublin theatres seat about 32,000 people with the total paid admissions amounting to about $22,000,000 annually.

Of the 1,229 films submitted to the censor board during 1940, 1,068 came from the United States, 159 were British, and two were French. No Irish films were submitted for censorship.

The Hibernian Film Company, of Killarney, County Kerry, is the only production company. It has only produced two pictures during the past four years, "Dawn" and "Uncle Mick," both said to have been successful.

Approximately 90 per cent of the entertainment tax in Ireland (£300,000 per annum) comes from motion picture theatres. Film duty amounts to about £60,000, and censorship fees nearly £3,000 annually.

60 Montreal Houses Cited on Child Laws

About 60 actions have been taken by the Quebec Attornev General's department against Montreal theatres on charges of admitting children under 16 years of age, contrary to law, officials announced early this week.

The officials said that such actions would continue. Twelve exhibitors have pleaded guilty. The majority of them were fined $10 and costs.

Roach Drops Suit Over MGM Pact

A formal stipulation discontinuing the $1,289,000 damage suit of Hal Roach Studios, Inc., against Loew's, Inc., and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corp. was filed Friday, December 5th in the United States district court in New York. No details were given.

The plaintiff had charged the defendants with violations of a series of distribution contracts made between 1936 and 1940.

Agfa To Move

The Agfa Raw Film Corporation has notified New York's Secretary of State that it will move to 245 West 55th Street, Manhattan. At the same time, the Secretary was informed the M. H. Embossing Corporation wishes to be known as the Dimension Pictures Corporation; Pathe Film Corporation filed dissolution papers; and the United States Record Corporation has filed a change ot capital stock setup from $225,000 to $9,670.

Horace Free Transferred

Horace Free, manager of the Buffalo office of Ross Federal Service, Inc., has been transferred to the home office, where he will direct the expanding credit promotion division.

"York" Accessories Up

According to a report from the Warner home office, sales to date of the "Sergeant York" accessories have totaled more than the complete sale of accessories on "The Fighting 69th" during its entire run. This is a new gross record for the company in this field.

Increase Ad Rates

Amusement advertising rates have been increased ten cents an inch by the Gannett Publishing Co., publishers of Portland, Me., only newspaper.

N. Y. U. Opens New Film Course

Executives of the motion picture industry in New York joined the faculty of New York University last Friday, December 5th, inaugurating the college's new motion picture department. This new course is a four-year curriculum of Arts and Sciences in motion pictures leading to a degree of bachelor of arts. Robert Gessner is in charge of the course.

New York University, the Washington Square College branch, has become the second university to introduce a liberal arts course devoted entirely to specialization in motion picture writing and production. The University of Southern California was the first.

Industry Praised

A tribute to the film industry's devotion to public service by Chancellor Harry Woodburn Chase was read in his absence, due to illness.

"It is one of the functions of a university to keep pace educationally with the times," Dr. Chase said. "To an increasing measure, the motion picture industry itself has been recognizing this cultural responsibility and has been honestly striving to improve the artistic content of motion pictures.

"Both the motion picture industry and universities are charged with the responsibility of public service. The industry, like educational institutions, has borne these responsibilities in creditable fashion in the past and is continuing to do so in these critical times. This, to me, is a tribute to the vast army of people who are daily devoting their energies to the further advancement of this comparatively new art form."

J. Robert Rubin, general counsel of Loew's, was called upon to respond. Before speaking Mr. Rubin said he was not the man to respond. "The Dean of the industry is sitting back there," Mr. Rubin said, pointing to Adolph Zukor, whose presence was greeted by applause.

Mr. Rubin praised the University for introducing the film course. "It is splendid," he said. "We welcome and appreciate the resources that you are placing at the disposal of our industry for wider distribution of creative talents. If we get your sympathetic treatment, you will get our sympathetic response."

Mr. Zukor spoke briefly and hoped the venture would succeed in bringing "brains" into the writing end of the business.

Among those who attended were Barney Balaban, president; Austin Keough, vice-president, and Hiller Jones, home office production manager, Paramount; Joseph H. Hazen, vice-president, Warner's; Bertram Block, story editor, Twentieth Century-Fox; Albert Margolis, director of advertising and publicity, United Artists; Collier Young, west coast story editor, RKO; Miss Gertrude Unger, story editor, Samuel Goldwyn Productions; Louis Pollack, publicity manager, Universal; and N. B. Spingold, advertising manager, Columbia.

Actress' Contract Extended

Frances Farmer's Paramount contract has been extended for another year as the result of a deal concluded between the actress and the studio. She is now at work under the direction of Mitchell Leisen in a comedy, "Take a Letter, Darling," with Rosalind Russell, Fred MacMurray and Macdonald Carey.

Mercier with RKO

Bud Mercier, former president of the Southeast Missouri Theatre Operators Association, has been named a salesman with the RKO exchange in St. Louis, replacing Mike Gottshaw.

The Exhibitor has his say --and wants to know what next?

In an early issue Motion Picture Herald will be presenting a summary of the opinions of the retail showmen of the land as expressed in this flow of expression entitled "The Exhibitor Has His Say", but even now, without counting up the box score, it is manifest that the broad general objection bears on the issues created by what is known as "chiseling". This means the all too prevalent endeavor in high places and low, and on several sides, in the issues of buyer and seller, to seek not only all that the traffic will bear but also a little more. Once upon a time a street car magnate was quoted as saying that "the dividends are in the straps." That policy for the motion picture has all too often given rise to the manifold issues reflected in these exhibitor responses to the Herald's invitation to speak out with what is on the minds of the men at the box offices.

Interestingly enough, the sum total of what the exhibitors have had to say in this inquiry indicate no general position that there are not some important mistakes of procedure at the box office as well as in production and distribution. It is no one-sided story that the exhibitors tell. Perhaps that is why there has been a "unity" meeting in Chicago this week.—THE EDITOR.

¶ Many thanks for this space!

1st: Eliminate all "B" pictures.

2nd: Single Feature Programs Nationally!

3rd: Do away with the Consent Decree!

4th: Keep all risque scenes and dialogue away from pictures. The churches will again find fault with the Motion Picture Industry, and anyway, such things do not improve any picture but harms it instead.

5th: Stop forcing of unwanted product.

6th: A sliding scale on all percentage features and a fair rental on flat rental features.

Please keep up these comments. We agree with most of the exhibitors' comments and they may do some good.—New Hampshire (Independent).

¶ I for one am against this blocks-of-five, and was from the start. For the small towns it is a no good system. Too far for the previews, and too expensive, also.

It may have not had a fair trial as yet, so early in the season. But I know that some of the exhibitors in this territory that were for it are very sour on it now.

Most of them are praying that it will be knocked out at the end of the trial period.

I don't think that there is a chance that it can be done. I think that the preponderance of the small town exhibitors would support any effort that is made to cancel it out and go back to the old system of 20% cancellation. That seems to be the reaction that is growing in this territory. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Indiana (Independent).

¶ The abolishment of double features. Good single features with more good two reel comedies.—JOE FAZIO, Mgr., Angels Theatre, Angels Camp, Cal., Harvey Amusement Co. (Circuit)

¶ Less war propaganda.—(Circuit)

¶ Features of such length that, when combined on a double bill with news and other single bill will run about 3 hours. An increasingly large number of people do not care to sit through a program running longer than 3 hours.—Arizona (Circuit)

¶ It don't make much difference who is in the show so long as it is good. Patrons prefer good comedy, or comedy-drama or good westerns not the hit and run kind. Something with a good background.—Ohio (Circuit)

¶ Better stories and less dry material. More stars in a picture, and box-office stars. Less B pictures—and all of the cheap ones.—Tennessee (Circuit)

¶ Single features, change policy on clearance in Chicago.—Illinois (Circuit)

¶ No more morbid stories, more comedies.—Arkansas (Circuit)

¶ More advertising material for short subjects, such as onesheets. How can you exploit them if there is nothing to exploit with. More good "B" pictures with good action and good story and less highly dramatized pictures that are only good for a lot of critics to rave about and only 1/10 of your customers care to see. JACK CAMERON, Bartow, Fla. (Circuit)

¶ I don't mind being checked by the distributor on any picture—but I hate like Hell to be "blind checked" especially by some of the saps. —Kentucky (Circuit)

¶ What a wonderful business this would be if we could make it illegal to give away anything or approach merchants for contributions of merchandise, etc.—Illinois (Circuit)

¶ Less government interference!—Texas (Circuit)

¶ Gene Autry has fallen plenty in this town. Bob Hope considered silly. Spencer Tracy liked because of strong dramatic acting—Melvyn Douglas for his brand of comedy. (Both stand about the same.)—(Circuit)

¶ What the average independent exhibitor needs is: Less features from each producer with average running time 80 minutes. The public does not want double features. By making less pictures, more money can be put into each production, thus making a better standard of pictures, which will in turn result in better box-office to us and also the producers.—(Circuit)

¶ More good pictures but less war pictures.—Texas (Circuit)

¶ Better and longer pictures. No stinkers to bother with. Everyone woud be better off to play even mid-week percentage.—Pennsylvania (Circuit)

¶ Cut out Jack Rabbit circuits. No expense, cheap admission, play old halls, use portable machine. Exhibitor should not be made to pay high percentage on Sunday. If picture demands it that it should be able to play any day and do business. Forget making old re-issues of pictures. Make pictures that have a dash of humor in them. People in times like these need laughter. Make exchanges quit selling unfair competition against town theatre who has an investment. Namely free shows, outside high schools, Jack Rabbit circuits.—Grand Theatre, Oelwein, Iowa (Circuit)

¶ Why not quit copy-catting? Every producer's pet theme seems to be copied from some other's idea and a cycle of pictures is produced that mean a little profit from one but the following pictures don't mean a thing. Just one ounce of initiative would help.

Why not let the help know who is boss and when some temperamental star who wants to make some big financial flop tell them where to go and don't mince words. It has to be sold, so why not stop the loss at the minimum? —Kansas (Circuit)

¶ I feel that shorts are an important part of any program and that a greater effort should be made to make them better. I have seen some shorts that are absolutely not worth the film they are made on and had the person that was responsible for the making of them

"Elimination of All Double Features"

seen them, he would not have allowed his name on them. Let the producer have a look at his own short and we won't be bothered with so many stinkers. Texas (Circuit)

¶ Let the picture makers remember that we are in the business of entertaining, let's not try to be "world reshapers" or attempt to interpret fancy theories—let's just have entertainment—That's all, brother!—Iowa (Circuit)

¶ All pictures in Technicolor.—PAUL A. HUNTER, JR., Corham, Maine (Circuit)

¶ Fewer "B" pictures, more "A" pictures and the elimination of double features.—C. B. BUECHEL, Mgr., Mary Anderson Theatre, (Circuit)

¶ Single features. (Elimination of double bills.)—California (Circuit)

¶ A short, short story in film. Just like the short short story in "Liberty" with box-office stars such as Gable, Taylor, Tracy, Beery, Hope. I think it will be the answer to double bills.—Nebraska (Circuit)

¶ More good pictures—less poor ones.—Arizona (Circuit)

¶ A profit sharing plan for all of us underpaid managers.—Illinois (Circuit)

¶ Due to the limited space I cannot say all I want to but I think you'll get the general idea. This subject has undoubtedly been brought up time and again with film exchanges in regard to the condition of prints and tin reels received by 2nd or 3rd run houses. It has been our experience to receive prints which have no leader on some reels; prints in which from two to five minutes of film have been cut out and never replaced. Some tin reels we have received will not stay in the magazine without tearing film. A protest to one major film company brought the weak excuse "These prints have had a great deal of use in smaller circuits and cannot be expected to be perfect." If companies cannot afford to hire enough inspectors to check their film properly why be in the business at all? After all it is to their profit that these are exhibited to the public in the best way possible. Exhibitors do their part. Why not film exchanges?—WM. GRIEBEL, Projectionist-Empire Theatre, Billings, Mont. (Circuit)

¶ Certainly more emphasis should be placed upon the production of good shorts. All our programs are "Single" and good shorts are essentail if we are to maintain this policy.—JIM KANE, Conway, Ark. (Circuit)

¶ Scrap the blocks-of-five selling, sliding scales and all other rackets, sell product in blocks with 20 or 25 per cent elimination plus no forcing of shorts! In present system I either buy shorts or no features. Nice racket! But that's what they do to me. (Independent)

¶ I would like to see the majors abolish all B, C, D, etc. pictures and concentrate on every pictures being a double barreled hit.

Although the trade papers will not agree I'd like to see the companies spend part of the money they spend with the papers, on a little national advertising.—New Mexico (Circuit)

¶ Here's a suggestion you might pass along to the producers! Why doesn't one of the majors take one of the big serials which has been made a best seller in some magazine and make it into a deluxe serial catering to the patronage of the ladies. . . . One could start one of these serials with a free show for the ladies and really count on getting them back. . . . Put a big star or two in it and make it about two or three reels in length. . . . I would suggest not over 10 chapters and preferably less. Here is something which in my estimation could really be built up into something big if the exhibitors would get behind it.—(Circuit)

¶ Not enough stability. Too much hiring and firing, to save few dollars in management, but it's better than it used to be.—California (Circuit)

¶ All "B" Pictures to be edited to 45 minutes. Eliminate all premiums.—New York (Circuit)

¶ Single bills, good pictures that will stand up at the box office by themselves, with interesting and informative short subjects that one doesn't have to pay $25.00 to $30.00 for. I feel the move should come from the producers themselves at the same time all over the country.—California (Circuit)

¶ Our pet annoyance is the size of contracts offered to a theatre showing only 40 pictures a year. No company in the business turns out 20 pictures a year that can make money. If our theatre were not a community proposition it would have folded up long since. This in spite of good light, good sound and comfortable seats. Of course the war has interfered badly for which we have no alibi. After all it's our primary job for the present.—L. E. RAMSEY, Carlyle, Sask. (Independent)

¶ It is about time that the producer gave the small towns a break in prices on some of the so-called top productions. Fifty-five cents for all seats for many of the big pictures is too much for small theatres. If the producers are sincere in cutting production cost, then start with the big salaries for both stars and company officials. We need more stories for the masses and fewer for the very few upper class. When, if ever, is Metro, going to film the other half of "Northwest Passage" or Book Two of "Rogers Rangers." It is pictures like that which mean box office to us little fellows.—E. S. CURIE, Mgr., Dreamland Theatre, Livermore Falls, Maine (Circuit)

¶ Less foreign pictures forced on us—such as, "Girl in the News" "Stars Look Down" etc. and no propaganda pictures which have practically been eliminated anyway.

More comedies such as "Caught in the Draft," "In the Navy," "Charley's Aunt," etc. without music, and less smart, sophisticated drawing room comedies which have a limited appeal, no more Bette Davis comedies.. A few more "Women" pictures such as "Magnificent Obsession," "Back Street" and "Blossoms in the Dust." Less series pictures. Hardy and Kildare have just about slipped.

Ballots that fit the envelope! New Jersey (Circuit)

P.S. We use single-features exclusively and compete with Balaban and Katz who play doubles ahead of us.—GEORGE W. KRUGER, Hinsdale Theatre, Hinsdale, Ill. (Chicago suburb) (Circuit)

¶ I would like to see serials produced for adult audiences, about 30 minutes in each chapter, based on good stories and with top stars. These would take the place of the second feature on a double bill and would keep them coming week after week as they should be booked on the same change each week. If "One Man's Family" can gather a big following on the radio its success could be duplicated on the screen. I believe they would be a boon to the industry and in addition take the place of give aways.—California (Circuit)

¶ What I want most is the abolishment of double bills and class "B" or program features.

Also I believe that the industry is trying too hard to create too many new stars instead of glorfying some of the many fine stars we already have and, in many cases, allowing them to remain idle and lose popularity by inactivity.—JACK HALIMEN, State Theatre, Dinuba, California. (Circuit)

¶ We want most: 90 minutes, very good A Pictures. Down with double-bill tripe. MRS. JUANITA ZIMMERMAN, California. (Circuit)

¶ As an Independent Theatre Owner I ask for an equal right to choose the type pictures I am to offer my patrons. Producers make pictures of their own liking with various foreign markets as a source of extra income, and force these pictures on theatres that cannot play them and satisfy their customers, or show a profit.

The course of percentage pictures must be stopped. Why should producers disregard house expenses and overhead and demand 40% or 50% for pictures, and then leave the theatre all their expenses, including the advertising and publicity.

Our industry needs a cleaning out of some of the local and district executives that cover up too much that N. Y. shoud know about. We have one case where an important exchange does not carry 30% of the accounts as possibilities because the accounts are hard to sell. Does New York know about this? Why doesn't New York check and see how many theatres are open in each territory and ask their branch and district manager, why these accounts have not been sold.—Ohio. (Independent)

Average Wage for Studio Technicians $27.45 for 40 Hour Week, Rosten Shows

Hollywood, the land of the high star salaries, has not been any "boom town" for technical motion picture workers, according to figures compiled by Fred Pelton, producers' labor contact, from a continuing study of studio payrolls and printed in Dr. Leo C. Rosten's new book, Hollywood, The Movie Colony—The Movie Makers.

The average wage for 15,097 workers in 23 different crafts for 1938 was $1,427.58, or about $27.45 for a 40 hour week. Some had more employment than others and earned much more than the average; others earned less.

In 1939 a general ten percent increase was given to the studio workers and this brought the average weekly salary, on the basis of the same figures, to about $30.20 for each of the 15,000 men.

Certain categories of craftsmen have recently received another ten percent increase so, according to the same base figures, the average weekly wage is approaching $33. Many of the workers receive twice that sum or more for a week's work but the layoffs and long slack periods bring down the general average when calculated on a year-round standard.

	TOTAL NUMBER	TOTAL PAYROLL
Carpenters	2,906	$3,099,938.96
Second and assistant cameramen	314	906,295.58
Electricians (gaffers, best boys and operators)	1,695	2,669,642.85

Plumbers	92	167,859.79
	15,097	$21,552,143.47

The average per man was $1,427.58 or $27.45 a week.

The above data from a continuing study of major studios' payrolls, was supplied to Dr. Rosten by Y. Frank Freeman and Mr. Pelton.

Schenck Appeal To Be Heard on January 12th

Joseph M. Schenck, former chairman of the board of Twentieth Century Fox, will be heard, in appeal from United States income tax evasion conviction, on January 12th, in New York U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, through his lawyers.

Argument on the appeal had been scheduled for Thursday, December 4th. It was postponed when Judge Joseph Clark, sitting in the court's December term, disqualified himself from hearing the appeal, because his brother, Samuel, is an official of the Internal Revenue Department.

Treasury Makes Award

The Treasury Department's Procurement Division has announced in Washington that an award has been made to Emerson Yorke Studio in New York, for the production of five sound films. This series of motion pictures will deal with technical training and will be released.

CANADIAN FILM RENTALS SUBJECT TO PEGGING UNDER WAR REGULATIONS

All Contracts Affected by New Order Freezing Price Scales on Basis of Average Range from Sept. 15th to Oct. 11th

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

Film contracts and rentals are subject to revision under the terms of an edict enforced by the Canadian Wartime Prices and Trade Board for the control of prices in the Dominion of Canada for the duration of the war through an Order-in-Council pegging admission prices of moving picture theatres. There had been some speculation as to whether the pegging order applied only to rentals.

The portion of the order dealing with contracts reads as follows:

"Where a contract to supply any goods or services was entered into prior to the basic period or subsequent to the basic period but prior to December 1, 1941, at a price higher than the maximum price as provided in these regulations, the price of any goods or services supplied under such contract on and after December 1, 1941, shall be reduced to such maximum price.

"No person shall impose any terms or conditions of sale, or alter any terms or conditions of sale imposed or agreed to by such person, in such way as to increase the price of any goods or services.

" . . . the Board, in its discretion, may vary any maximum price, may prescribe other or additional terms or conditions of sale, may exempt any person or any goods or services or any transactions wholly or partly from the provisions of these regulations, and may withdraw any such exemption either generally or in specific cases and subject to such terms and conditions as the Board may prescribe."

Effective December 1st

The "basic period" described above means the four weeks from September 15 to October 11, both inclusive. The deadline for the stabilization of prices was first set for November 17 but was changed to December 1. The order stipulates that "any differences in price which he has customarily and lawfully allowed to different classes of buyers or for different quantities or under different conditions of sale and which result in a lower net price per unit of goods or services shall be continued." The maximum price "shall be the maximum price of goods or services of a substantially similar kind and quality sold or supplied by him during the basic period" and there is nothing to prevent the sale of an article or service at a price lower than the maximum.

To protect business and industry from loss under the sealed prices, the Government has adopted an import subsidy policy for importers or other firms handling imported goods which are subject to a retail ceiling price which, in the case of the moving picture business, is the fixed theatre admission price.

This subsidy plan will first take the form of direct financial assistance, it is announced, and later there will be a downward revision of duties and excise taxes on imported goods which, in the case of the film industry, would be films and advertising accessories. Imported equipment not sold to the general consumer will not come under this benefit, it is stipulated, and this is taken to mean that theatre equipment, such as projection and sound units, airconditioning and heating machinery and general supplies for theatre operation would not be subject to subsidy because such equipment is not actually sold to theatre patrons and is used only for the presentation of performances. Goods imported prior to December 1 will not be eligible for subsidy.

At the same time, there is a limitation on the value of imports of structural or operation machinery or supplied under another war measure of the Foreign Exchange Control Board for the conservation of foreign exchange, the maximum value of such equipment having been placed at $5,000.

One point that may affect film imports is the provision that no subsidy can be provided for raw or semi-finished goods. A special ruling may have to be obtained in this connection on the importation of film negatives from which positive prints are made in Canada for release to theatres whose admission prices, of course, have been stabilized. An industry has been built up in the Dominion for this processing of films from negatives imported under bond for stated periods during which the positives are made. The duty and excise tax are paid on the negatives, the latter being returned to the United States after the necessary positives have been printed. This procedure was adopted some years ago as a matter of economy, the saving being the customs charges on the positive prints, as compared with the duty on the single negative of feature and other films.

Rule on Imports

Imported negatives may come under the heading of raw or semi-finished goods, in which case the Canadian film distributors could claim no subsidy or reduction in customs tariff to offset higher film costs and to continue to operate within the range provided by the revenue from pegged theatre admission prices. At the same time the Government has laid down the general principle that imported goods should cost business "no more than is appropriate in relation to the retail ceiling prices."

The new situation has been causing much conjecture in view of the fact that, to date, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has not specifically mentioned "film rentals" as coming within the scope of the new regulations. There have been declarations, however, which refer definitely to contracts for goods and services for which retail ceiling prices have been fixed and the Order-in-Council No. 8527 lists "the exhibiting of moving pictures" as one of 11 services to which the regulations apply. Hence, business procedure leading up to moving picture shows appears to be affected by government control. One Canadian trade spokesman has declared that the control of film rentals is subject to interpretation and the film exchanges are continuing to carry on business under that premise.

The exact position of the Canadian film business will have to be worked out, it is believed, but it must be recognized that the Government will be conservative in its concessions because the officials have long been exploring every field for possible revenue with which to pursue the war—and the moving picture theatres have apparently been regarded as fruitful soil with little regard for individual success. Developments have been such that J. J. Fitzgibbons, president, of Famous Players Canadian Corporation has come out with the plea that the Government should confer with the industry before giving effect to any further imposts.

Mexican Producers To Pool Efforts

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Mexican producers are optimistic, now that they have made a working agreement with the 45 locals of the National Cinematographic Workers Union, similar in many respects to that which the eight major Americans signed with the Union on October 11th, and which is scheduled to run for two years. Details of the Mexicans' pact are not disclosed, but it it understood that, like the Americans', it features higher wages and some other concessions.

The producers are arranging for an amalgamation of their business, the organization of one big company that expects to make as many as 20 full-length pictures a year, starting with 1942. It is reported that leading local banks have agreed to grant this business a very considerable loan, the exact amount of which has not been revealed. Moving spirits in this one-big-company plan are:

Jesus Grovas, a few years ago the local Paramount manager; Mauricio de la Serna, managing director of the Cine Teatro Alameda, one of the principal first run theatres here, who has produced successfully on his own account; Miguel Contreras Torres, who with Sr. Grovas has just made "Simon Bolivar," life story of the Venezuelean patriot; Juan Bustillo Oro, winner of the medal given by the local daily newspaper "El Universal" for the best contribution to Mexican pictures in the past ten years; Raphael Sevilla, and Miguel Zacarias.

The producers who have signed with the union are: Grovas and Co., Raul de Anda, Iracheta and Elvira, Films Mundiales, Lux Films and Film Trust.

New Association Planned

These producers are planning to break away from the Assocition of Producers and Distributors of Mexican Motion Pictures because they are also distributors, and organize a distributors association of their own. Each of the signers is to contribute $210 to start the association, which is to begin functioning after the turn of the year.

The National Cinematographic Workers Union held its annual convention December 4th to 6th at Torreon, a north central industrial town, and passed resolutions pledging full cooperation with the industry's and the federal government's program for more and better pictures and the founding of a bank to provide the business with sufficient money. One thousand delegates, representing the union's 45 locals, attended.

Columbia

BIG BOSS, THE: Otto Kruger, Gloria Dickson, John Lytel—A strictly program picture for dual billing.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can., General patronage.

BLONDE IN SOCIETY: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms, Daisy—This "Blondie " not as good as "Blondie Goes Latin," although it was entertaining and with fair comments. Running time, 77 minutes. Played October 30-November 5.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Can., General patronage.

ELLERY QUEEN AND THE PERFECT CRIME: Ralph Bellamy, Margaret Lindsay—Good picture for any Friday-Saturday. Running time, 73 minutes. Played November 28-29.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

FUGITIVE AT LARGE: Jack Holt, Patricia Ellis—A good filler on second half of program—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage

LADIES IN RETIREMENT: Ida Lupino, Louis Hayward—Good mystery story. Excellent acting by the whole cast. Miss Lupino perfect.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LONE WOLF KEEPS A DATE: Warren William, Frances Robinson—The most interesting and best of the "Lone Wolf" series. Excellent picture for most any mid-week program. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 14-15.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

MEN IN HER LIFE, THE: Loretta Young, Conrad Veidt—Very pleasing entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

OUR WIFE: Melvyn Douglas, Ruth Hussey, Ellen Drew—Very good picture, but lacks something, what, we don't know. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 23-25.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

OUR WIFE: Melvyn Douglas, Ruth Hussey, Ellen Drew—A swell comedy that should please audiences anywhere. Melvyn Douglas good, as usual. Ruth Hussey always easy on the eyes. Everyone had a good word for it. Running time, 96 minutes. Played October 13-18.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Can. General patronage.

TEXAS: William Holden, Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor —Just a western.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TEXAS STAMPEDE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—A very good western action picture that helped out on a week-end.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

YOU BELONG TO ME: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda—Very good comedy. Fonda perfect in his part. —Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

YOU BELONG TO ME: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda—Fonda and Stanwyck team well to make a hilarious comedy. Comments from patrons good. Too many stories of this type which may have been reason for business not being up to average. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 27-December 3.— Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

YOU'LL NEVER GET RICH: Fred Astaire, Rita Hayworth—Fred Astaire has at last found a partner that pleased the patrons immensely. A good musical that gave us a good week and we held it over for three extra days. Nice music, good comedy, swell dancing and lovely scenery. You can't go wrong with this one. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 17-26.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

YOU'LL NEVER GET RICH: Fred Astaire, Rita Hayworth—Very well liked. Hayworth a very able partner for Astaire.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BARNACLE BILL: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main, Virginia Weidler—Very good picture, but they don't seem to like Beery this way. How about another Beery like "O'Shaughnessy's Boy"? Running time, 92 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

BIG STORE, THE: Marx Bros., Tony Martin—These Marx Bros are all right. I think there are a lot of actors that should retire before these boys do. They were never better than in this picture, and we want to see more of them. Played November 7-9.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

BIG STORE, THE: Marx Brothers, Tony Martin—Used this on Wednesday-Thursday Bargain Nights and did a bigger business than "Go West" did with a Sunday opening. One of the biggest mid-week grossers for 1941. Possibly a little better than their avarage show. I think the trailer helped on this.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby Wis. General patronage.

..CHOCOLATE SOLDIER, THE: Nelson Eddy, Rise Stevens—Everybody was disappointed with this picture. They came expecting to see beautiful settings and a lot of singing; instead they saw Eddy playing the part of a Mad Russian, in scenes which were much, much too long, and dragged out.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FEMININE TOUCH, THE: Rosalind Russell, Don Ameche, Kay Francis—Very foolish comedy. Miss Russell deserves much better parts.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HONKY TONK: Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Claire Trevor—The first Metro picture to gross satisfactorily out of two blocks.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage

LADY BE GOOD: Ann Sothern, Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, Lionel Barrymore—After this picture finally got started, it moved right along, but by that time the audience was either asleep or had gone home. The specialty acts were good but they were evidently late for the filming and something had to be done while the cameras were grinding. Not worth half the film rental Metro tacks on it and it won't be missed if you don't run it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY HARDY: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—About on a par with the others in this fine series, but for no apparent reason at all this nose-dived at the ticket window, as compared to the last three or four we have run. In fact, it didn't do normal Sunday-Monday-Tuesday business, which was very disapointing as it is an indication that the series is slipping.—L. V. Bergtold, Wetby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

MARRIED BACHELOR: Robert Young, Ruth Hussey—Very fine comedy. Robert Young deserves the best roles MGM can give him. He is a favorite with young and old and can handle all roles given him perfectly.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

RINGSIDE MAISIE: Ann Sothern, George Murphy, Robert Sterling—Good show, this series. "Maisie" is all right. Played November 26-27.—J. R. Pate, Royal Theatre, Samson, Ala. Small town patronage.

SHADOW OF THE THIN MAN, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Another good "Thin Man" story. Everyone enjoyed it.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SMILIN' THROUGH: Jeanette MacDonald, Brian Aherne, Gene Raymond—Different stars, but to the public it is like a re-issue. Color improves it.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THEY MET IN BOMBAY: Clark Gable, Rosalind Russell—Nice show. Holds interest throughout. Suitable for "B" allocation. Played November 23-25.—J. R. Pate, Royal Theatre, Samson, Ala. Small town patronage.

UNHOLY PARTNERS: Edward G. Robinson, Edward Arnold, Laraine Day—Good acting. Just fair entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WHEN LADIES MEET: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Herbert Marshall—This picture did terrible business at our box office but more than pleased the few that saw it. It is a grand picture, but not for rural patronage. If we never have any business, we just have to run all pictures featuring Greer Garson, one of the screen's grandest actresses. Running time, 105 minutes. Played November 23-24.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Lynne Overman.—Good story, beautiful color. Business very good. Played November 26-27.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Lynne Overman—Print was not so good. Did standout Sunday-Monday business. Playing them late doesn't mean a thing here if they're good. Played November 23-24.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Lynne Overman—We played this long after every other theatre had it, but found it to be the biggest profit maker since "Jesse James," played in May, 1939. Had it bought flat, which is the only way for a small town exhibitor to come out with a substantial profit.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

CHEROKEE STRIP: Richard Dix, Florence Rice, Victor Jory—Fair western that seemed to please. Played November 4-5.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLD BACK THE DAWN: Charles Boyer, Olivia de Havilland, Paulette Goddard—The further the season advances, it is plain that this Consent Decree is the worst and most detrimental thing that has been forced on to both the producers and exhibitors. Here is one that would not have had a place in our program. It is the old triangle story and Boyer backgrounds the dialogue with his accent, which was unintelligible. It was so marked that it did not record clearly.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche, Oscar Levant, Virginia Dale—Dandy program picture with a semi-special price that did not have the draw it should for the price paid. Why is it that so many women do not care for Mary Martin? Can it be just a little jealousy? Title was misleading and kept some people away. Our patrons are side-stepping many of the war propaganda stories. Agree that Virginia Dale is a gal to watch because she has just what it takes. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 19-20.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LIFE WITH HENRY: Jackie Cooper, Eddie Bracken—The biggest bargain night mid-week surprise we have ever had. On a Wednesday-Thursday, this did average Sunday-Monday-Tuesday gross business and a lot better figured from the 'net" standpoint as is the case when a "B" priced pictures does "A" class business. I would say just a "darn good little picture" with a pull like a tractor.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

MAD DOCTOR, THE: Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew, John Howard—Some said O. K., more said not, so it must have been not any too good.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

NEW YORK TOWN: Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin, Robert Preston—Good comedy which failed to draw. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 23-24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ROAD TO ZANZIBAR: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Una Merkel—This picture is very good. First time my patrons have seen Hope, and they want to see more of him.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—During the last half of the 1940-41 product season,. Paramount came through with more box office attractions than any other exchange and that includes MGM! "Shepherd of the Hills" is one of these real draws that helps to keep the small exhibitor in business. This was my third most profitable picture of the year.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

THREE MEN FROM TEXAS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—This started out shooting, and just about ended up the same way. Can't say much for this, and my patrons felt the same. Played November 18-19.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

VIRGINIA: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, Stirling Hayden—Not having sent in any reports for about a year, I have had a feeling of guilt when I read so many valuable reports from others. We played "Virginia" a long time ago, but because it is one of the very best of 1941, it should be reported on. Did a nice business and pleased 100 per cent. Should have more of this calibre.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

VIRGINIA: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, Carolyn Lee—Saw by past reports that they were all good on this picture, and so I picked it up. This was one of the best pictures I have run in a long time. This had a lot of these big specials backed off the map. Weather was bad, and did not do so good, but everyone that saw it had nothing but praises for it. Played November 21-23.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

BILLY THE KID'S RANGE WAR: Bob Steele—Good western. The print was terrible. That is a habit with P. R. C. This series draws well. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 28-29.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

Republic

ICE-CAPADES: Dorothy Lewis, James Ellison, Jerry Colonna—A very fine ice picture that did satisfactory business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

KANSAS CYCLONE: Don "Red" Barry—Typical Barry western. He makes fairly good draw. Played November 28-29.—J. R. Pate, Royal Theatre, Samson, Ala. Small town patronage.

RIDIN' ON A RAINBOW: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee, Carol Adams—We still like them. Mary Lee is one of the swellest child actresses on the screen today. Running time, 79 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

YOUNG BUFFALO BILL: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—The average type of western. This one did not draw so well. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 13-15.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

CITIZEN KANE: Orson Welles, Joseph Cotten, Dorothy Comingore, Ruth Warrick—Is likely to make your auditorium resound from vacuousness like the giant stone halls in Kane's incredible castle. Box-office or no box-office, this unusual film is without a doubt a step toward elevating the artistic plane of the motion picture in general. It is also sufficient proof that Hollywood either needs a new idea or two, or executives really big enough to pay heed to suggestions already being made, for Mr. Welles' first production is, on many counts, the outstanding film of 1941; if not one of the most creative American pictures in a decade. "Citizen Kane" tends, too, to substantiate this writer's opinion that the girl selling violets on the street corner of any town is potentially a more convincing actress than putty-faced glamour girls to whom we are so ruthlessly subjected. Abnormally gloomy and melodramatic, fantastic and overplayed, "Citizen Kone" is, nevertheless, more realistic, powerful and convincing than 90 per cent of 1941's Hollywood films. (Problem: Find the other 10 per cent.)

Charles Kane's castle is far less implausible and certainly less ludicrous for reasons not briefly accountable than Alice Faye's colored week-end apartment in Havana.

"Citizen Kane" is approaching cinematic art, a good play, in good theatre tradition, on celluloid, but the box-office attractions are still coming out of the inlaid swimming pools.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldohoro, Me. General patronage.

DEVIL AND MISS JONES, THE: Jean Arthur, Robert Cummings, Charles Coburn—Played second run. Business not very good.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FATHER TAKES A WIFE: Adolphe Menjou, Gloria Swanson—Just fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HURRY, CHARLIE, HURRY: Leon Errol—A typical Leon Errol two-reel comedy that they let the clock run out on. They just forgot to turn it off or maybe they let it run past the twenty-minute zone to the short feature length so they could sell it for four times the two-reel comedy amount. Not so hot!—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

NEW CONTRIBUTOR TO DEPARTMENT

A new contributor reported to the What The Picture Did For Me Department this week, and four others resumed after a lapse of some time. The new contributor is:

WILLIAM K. HENDERSON, Roxy Theatre, Mounds, Ill.

The contributors who resumed after an absence are:

J. R. PATE, Royal Theatre, Samson, Ala.

C. T. COONEY, JR., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me.

L. V. BERGTOLD, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

LEON C. BOLDUC, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H.

Read the reports from these and other contributors in the adjoining columns.

LOOK WHO'S LAUGHING: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—The majority of patrons will enjoy this comedy. A natural for the juvenile trade.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

QUICK MONEY: Fred Stone—A real small budget picture helping a few out of work studio props. Might pass in small towns.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RELUCTANT DRAGON, THE: Robert Benchley—An early date and ahead of other theatres in the territory was still not enough to make this do much more than 50 per cent of normal Sunday-Monday-Tuesday business. We doubled this with "Dance Hall," which helped the few that came to feel that they hadn't been taken too hard. Positively my last cartoon feature. The first three-quarters of this not bad, but the sequence on the "Dragon" was entirely too silly to be interesting.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SCATTERGOOD MEETS BROADWAY: Guy Kibbee, Emma Dunn—Several remarked, "Not as good as the other two," and I am inclined to agree with them. However, it is good average program stuff suitable for double billing. The draw was very, very poor. Perhaps that is why we didn't think this up to the others. Doubled with "Double Date" (Universal) to the lowest Friday-Saturday gross in 1941. Nothing else going on either.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

TOM, DICK AND HARRY: Ginger Rogers, George Murphy, Alan Marshal, Burgess Meredith—Here was indeed the disappointer! Don't know when we have had a crowd come in expecting so much and finding so little. The story was silly and certainly will not help Ginger at our box office. Why do they do this to a star who has just last year won the Academy Award? Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 16-17.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ACCENT ON LOVE: George Montgomery, Osa Massen, Cobina Wright, Jr.—Picked this up for the bargain nights. Not much of a cast, but will please all those that attend. Running time, 61 minutes.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

BELLE STARR: Randolph Scott, Gene Tierney, Dana Andrews—The acting is fair, the color is beautiful, but did a poor business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 30-December 1.—William K. Henderson, Roxy Theatre, Mounds, Ill. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE WAX MUSEUM: Sidney Toler—A very good "Chan" feature. Running time, 63 minutes. Played November 3-5.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

DANCE HALL: Carole Lombard, Cesar Romero—Nice little picture that did no business for us. Was nearly 50 per cent below average. Running time, 73 minutes. Played November 21-22.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DANCE HALL: Carole Lombard, Cesar Romero—See review on "The Reluctant Dragon," RKO Radio.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

DOWN ARGENTINE WAY: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda—Played second run to satisfactory business.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST, THE: Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne, Cesar Romero—I let this get so old, I had to run on Bargain Nights and with the top allocation on rental, we lost a few dollars. The show is very good, and with a different title might have had a much more successful run everywhere.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

GREAT GUNS: Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy—Very good comedy and very good business on Friday-Saturday date. This should please any day in the week. Running time, 74 minutes. Played November 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOT SPOT: Betty Grable, Victor Mature, Carole Landis—Your patrons are going to have nothing but praise for this offering. A mystery (detective) that will have them tearing the padding out of your seats to the final climax.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

JENNIE: Virginia Gilmore, William Henry, George Montgomery—Here is one I ducked for months. I had the notion it was an English produced picture. It was a very pleasant surprise as I found it to be one of the best program pictures we have had this year and we have used most of the good ones. Received a lot of nice comments, which is unusual with a Friday-Saturday double bill.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

VERY YOUNG LADY, A: Jane Withers, Nancy Kelly, John Sutton—This is probably the poorest of all the Withers pictures and the title is definitely the worst. Also, to complete the thing the business was the lowest we have ever had on a Withers'. Too bad Jane can't get a strong story for a change.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

WEEK-END IN HAVANA: Alice Faye, Carmen Miranda, John Payne, Cesar Romero—This is tops in entertainment. Just what the customers hope for and seldom get. Running time, 80 minutes.—H. Goldson Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

WEEK-END IN HAVANA: Alice Faye, Carmen Miranda, John Payne, Cesar Romero—Good musical show in beautiful color, and good business, too. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

YANK IN THE R.A.F., A: Tyrone Power, Betty Grable, John Sutton—This one was well liked, good story, and Grable and Power good in their roles. It is heavy on the side of Britain, as was to be expected. The female of the species was noticeable for their absence. I suspect that it is, as some of the ladies have expressed themselves, that they hate the sound of an aeroplane.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

ALL-AMERICAN CO-ED: Frances Langford, Johnny Downs—A fast-moving light musical. Not strong enough to stand alone.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BLACKOUT: Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson—Like all English produced picture, this was a flop. Several remarked they didn't know what it was all about. The English are better war makers than picture makers. In fact, I have never played an English picture that anyone liked. Most of them are thoroughly panned.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP: Martha Scott, William Gargan, Edmund Gwenn—The rental was too high for a mid-week bargain show, but the great amount of praise this received from the ladies more than made up for the slight loss we took. Certainly rated 100 per cent with the women folks. A few of the rougher males walked out, as was to be expected. This should rate as one of the best of 1941.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

INTERNATIONAL LADY: George Brent, Ilona Massey, Basil Rathbone—Here's a picture that has everything. It is a real thriller with laughs, suspense, in fact, it is all a person could ask for in any picture. Could use more of this type. Good comments from all. Running time, 104 minutes. Played October 20-29.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

INTERNATIONAL LADY: George Brent, Basil Rathbone, Ilona Massey—Good spy picture. Keeps interest throughout.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LYDIA: Merle Oberon, Alan Marshal—This is one that was enjoyed mostly by the women as it is a woman's picture, although the better halves who came along with them also had a good word for it. Merle Oberon and all supporting cast were good. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 6-15.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LYDIA: Merle Oberon, Alan Marshal—A woman's picture, and it pleased the women.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NEW WINE: Ilona Massey, Alan Curtis, Binnie Barnes—Pleasing. Excellent singing.—Leon C. Boldus, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

POT O' GOLD: James Stewart, Paulette Goddard—One of the best musical comedies we have played in a long while. It was sure entertaining and Horace Heidt's band was real good. Enjoyed by everybody. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 17-19.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

ROAD SHOW: Adolphe Menjou, Carole Landis, Charles Butterworth—This one was rather insane. With each ticket we should have given a couple of "shots." A picture that could be enjoyed if you were slightly canned. At that, it did draw a lot of laughs. but it was a little over-done on the silly side.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SO ENDS OUR NIGHT: Fredric March, Margaret Sullavan, Frances Dee, Glenn Ford—Worst business since the theatre opened. No draw whatsoever.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SUNDOWN: Gene Tierney, Bruce Cabot—Very good picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TANKS A MILLION: William Tracy, James Gleason, Noah Beery, Jr.—A Hal Roach Streamliner that is a laugh from beginning to end. Patrons were still laughing when they got out on the street. Played double bill. Running time, 50 minutes. Played October 30-November 5.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Universal

DOUBLE DATE: Edmund Lowe, Una Merkel, Peggy Moran—See review on "Scattergood Meets Broadway," RKA Radio.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

IN THE NAVY: Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Dick Powell, The Andrews Sisters—They have all the answers for box office vitamins, S. R. O., and it shows profit.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN RETURNS, THE: Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Vincent Price, Nan Grey—An entertaining programer that pleased the few that came to see it. Running time, 81 minutes. Played November 10-12.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

IT STARTED WITH EVE: Deanna Durbin, Charles Laughton, Robert Cummings—Beautiful picture. Our patrons ate it up. There is just enough of Miss Durbin's singing to make it a little better than a down-to-earth comedy. Charles Laughton almost steals the show. Played November 31-December 1.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

BAD MEN OF MISSOURI: Dennis Morgan, Jane Wyman, Wayne Morris, Arthur Kennedy—A real action week-end picture that did satisfactory business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BRIDE CAME C.O.D., THE: Bette Davis, James Cagney—Open letter of apology to Miss Davies: I have said some mean things against you in past pictures, and well were they deserved. This "C. O. D." is a grand picture; brings you out as a real woman. Please make more like this, with a grand cast that supported you in this picture, and I promise you we will all praise your work. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 16-18.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

LAW OF THE TROPICS: Jeffrey Lynn, Constance Bennett—Fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NAVY BLUES: Ann Sheridan, Jack Oakie, Martha Raye, Jack Haley—It is not a top rank musical, but it was a welcome relief from some of the heavy pictures we have been running. Good dancing and music, with some laughs. Seems to be that the public wants today are more clever comedies and less heavy drama.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

NAVY BLUES: Ann Sheridan, Jack Oakie, Martha Raye, Jack Haley—Good musical.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NINE LIVES ARE NOT ENOUGH: Ronald Reagan, Joan Perry, James Gleason—Just a small picture. Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ONE FOOT IN HEAVEN: Fredric March, Martha Scott—Warner Bros. is to be highly commended for producing this picture. The churches recommended it to their flocks. We invited twelve ministers from twelve different churches and it caused much good will.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SERGEANT YORK: Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, Joan Leslie—Tops in entertainment. You will see people in your theatres who never go to movies. Our patrons did not complain about increase in price.—

Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SERGEANT YORK: Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, Joan Leslie—We got an early date on this, ahead of other theatres in the territory and did the biggest gross we have done in our fifteen years in the business. A few kicks on the 55c admission, but none after seeing the picture, which brought forth more praise than a dozen top attractions. Quite a number said "the best of all time!" Word-of-mouth advertising kept them coming and the last night, the fifth, was almost as big as the first.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

UNDERGROUND: Jeffrey Lynn, Philip Dorn—We have a pro-German community, and this picture did not go over too big. Personally, I didn't think much of it. Played November 25-26.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WAGONS ROLL AT NIGHT, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Sylvia Sidney, Eddie Albert, Joan Leslie—Unanimous applause from our audience for this fine feature. This throbbingly romantic story of the carnival world is a great picture, and is packed with action. Eddie Albert is excellent in his portrayal of the Great Varney and our bet is that this young man is going places in filmdom. It's good to see charming Sylvia Sidney again (where's she been all these years?), also Joan Leslie, who enacts her role perfectly and naturally. Humphrey Bogart, who has won so many laurels in other flickers, again puts on a flawless performance. Caesar, the big cat, deserves credit for his part in making this picture one of thrills. Suspense all the way through keeps the pulse throbbing and the climax will bring every audience to the edge of their seats. It's a realistic picture without unnecessary frills. Running time, 84 minutes. Played November 29.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Short Features

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

LITTLE MOLE, THE: Technicolor Cartoons—Metro even makes sob stuff out of their cartoons. Jerked after first run. Running time, 10 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: Vol. 13, No. 212—It was great to hear the voice of Cross. Now let's change the other two, then we have a grand newsreel. Running time, 9 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: Vol. 13, No. 214—Only thing of interest here was U. S. Kearny torpedoing and football. Running time, 9 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

SUCKER LIST: Crime Does Not Pay—Very good two reeler from the 'Crime Does Not Pay" series. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

YE OLDE MINSTRELS: Our Gang Comedies—Here is something. Bill it as a feature attraction. It really is better than most of MGM special musical features. This makes sense. Good music and excellent photography. Running time, 11 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

YOUR LAST ACT: Passing Parade—Very unusual and interesting reel. Be sure to book this one. It really is worth it. Running time, 11 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

Paramount

FIRE CHEESE: Gabby Color Cartoons—Very good color cartoon. Running time, 7 minutos.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

—AL ELIASEN, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

POPEYE MEETS RIP VAN WINKLE: Popeye the Sailor—Average Popeye cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PROBLEM PAPPY: Popeye the Sailor—Very poor. Running time, 7 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

YOUR FAVORITE PROGRAM—THOSE WE LOVE: Headliners—Who gave Jimmie Fidler that chance to get on the screen? It certainly wasn't entertainment but it did show up some of the faking that radio resorts to in order to present a program. —Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

PANTRY PIRATES: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very good subject. They want too much film rental, though. Running time, 8 minutes.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

PICTURE PEOPLE: No. 6—Boy, oh, boy, is this terrible. The rest of this series has been pretty punk, but this one went over the top for negative entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

AMERICAN SEAPOWER: The World Today—Good subject ruined by green film stock. Would have been swell if I could have gotten some light on the screen. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

BIRD TOWER, THE: Terrytoons—Good cartoon in color which pleased all. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF A THOROUGHBRED: Sports Reviews —Average one reeler dealing with dogs. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Thetare, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Universal

MUSIC IN THE MORGAN MANNER: Musicals—Excellent. This short has plenty of diverse entertainment packed into it. Singing, dancing, music and variety acts, all of which are well done, and will please everybody. Especially good was the young man who imitated Groucho Marx, Charles Laughton as "Captain Bligh," W. C. Fields, Jerry Colonna and Jimmy Durante. Running time, 17½ minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SHADOWS IN SWING: Jan Garber—A very good entertaining short subject.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Vitaphone

HECKLING HARE, THE: Merrie Melody Cartoons —Bugs Bunny on the loose again. This rabbit is the best cartoon on the screen. Running time, 8 minutes. —Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

HECKLING HARE, THE: Merrie Melody Cartoon—Passable.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

IT HAPPENS ON ROLLERS: Sports Parade—Very tricky and fancy stuff on roller skates. These boys and girls are good and the added touch of color makes this a good single reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

TIMID TOREADOR: Looney Tunes Cartoons—Just fair. Running time, 7 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

TROUBLE IN STORE: Hollywood Novelty—Very satisfactory.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Century

"THE PROJECTOR OF THE CENTURY"

Miscellaneous

BOMBER: Office for Emergency Management—This free reel is worth running. Running time, 10 minutes. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

IRON CLAW, THE, CHAPTER 12: Charles Quigley, Walter Sande, Joyce Bryant—Hero is still battling six men and comes out on top without a scratch. Does Horne really believe the public falls for this trash? The kids even hold their noses. Running time, 17 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

IRON CLAW, THE, CHAPTER 13: Charles Quigley, Walter Sande, Joyce Bryant—This chapter is as bad as the rest. Thank goodness only two chapters left. Running time, 17 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

What's What in the "Week's Wash"

THE Mitchell Street Advancement Association, an organization of leading Milwaukee business men, recently honored their president, presenting him with a briefcase, a token of appreciation for his fine works on community behalf. The president was Joe Rosenfield. The occasion was his promotion from the Fox Modjeska to the Wisconsin, the circuit's flagship in the state.

HERE is another instance of a manager's occupation with outside activities that bear importantly upon the health of his boxoffice. The cooperation that Rosenfield enjoyed from the merchants in putting over his attractions was well earned by his leadership in movements that had to do with the business men's progress.

TWO other civic hustlers also step up, as promotions are announced for Famous Players Canadian theatremen. Bill Burke leaves the Brant in Brantford, Ontario, for the Capitol in Sarnia. Fred Tickell goes to the Orpheum in Fort Williams, Ontario, from the Princess in Edmonton, Alberta. Both members are to be listed among Round Tablers ever ready to beat on the drum to push over a project that rates showmanship handling.

ON the California front, Dave Martin is now getting settled in his new assignment to the Fox West Coast Redondo at Redondo Beach, with supervision over three other of the circuit situations in nearby cities. On the promotion, Martin bows in this direction by saying: "I feel that the publication of my activities in the Round Table for the past three years has been noticed on occasion by executives of my company."

THE Round Table's chucklesome "Showman's Lobby Laff" corner purrs pleasantly as Carolina Brunson tells about borrowing some of the "Laff" cartoon ideas to publicize the Publix-Richards-Nace Frank Freeman Drive in Phoenix, Arizona. Deciding upon a window card that would be different, the boys dug into their Round Table files, selected cartoons to fit each house, had them copied and incorporated into a layout which, Carolina notes, proved sufficiently attractive to compel public attention.

Results in the Twentieth Century-Fox exploitation contest on "Sun Valley Serenade" are made known. Of the five prizes of all-expense vacations at fabulous Sun Valley, three are taken by active Round Tablers—Dan Terrell, Lige Brien and Ray Hendry. Of the five runners-up, Dave Kamsky, Sterling Way, Dave Sablosky and Harold Barnes are other members whose showmanship has often been noted in the pages.

Seven out of ten is not at all an unimpressive showing. The percentage of winners continues the high rating expected of Round Tablers in competitions of this nature.

ALWAYS willing to help the cause, that slicker, Matt Saunders, did a job last week for a nearby restaurant opening its doors coincidentally with the premiere of "Keep 'Em Flying" at Loew's Poli, Bridgeport. Asked to lay out a co-op page and to take some space, as Milt Harris tells it, Saunders did so by taking the top banner for the theatre and attraction, tieing in the copy as a salute to the eats place.

DUTIES of the staff, listed in the break-down on a following page, are offered by the authors, John deMars Wylder and Ralph C. Nordmark, as an effective means of stopping patronage losses through lapses in service. Though these rulings are obvious, they have been "grossly neglected", the authors note, which well might be. It is no secret that the theatre striving for perfection in patron contacts does a more effective job of retaining business than the house taking the "obvious" for granted.

AS these lines are written, comes further information of civic-minded members, in particular about Sonny Shepherd, just elected to the presidency of the Miami Beach Kiwanis Club. Long-time leader in local activities, Sonny is another of our Round Tablers who advances the cause of his theatre by advancing the cause of his community.

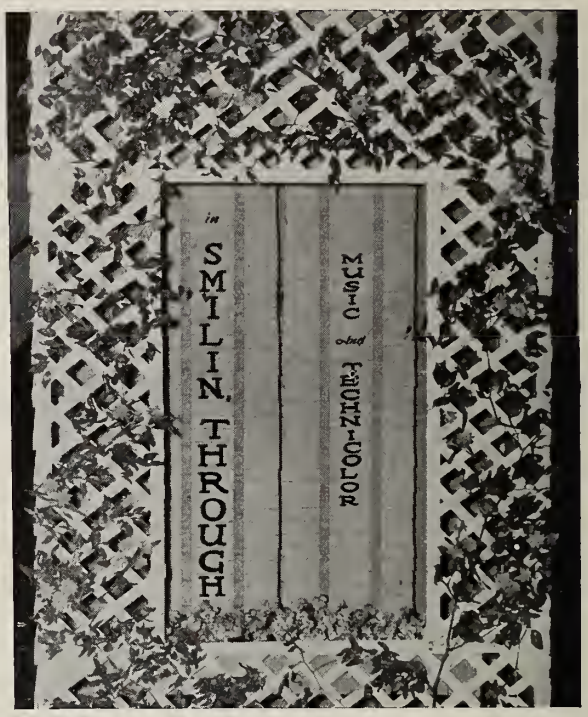
ROUND TABLE IN PICTURES



Millard Ochs, Warner's Strand, Akron, Ohio, shows "Sergeant York" pictorial educational films to a group of students studying American history. This marks a first-time films were shown in a schoolroom in Akron, says Millard, shown up front at teacher's desk.

Appropriately lettered jalopy toured the streets of Hot Springs Ark., ahead of Clyde Smith's date on "Birth of the Blues" at the Paramount Theatre.

To his patrons, adult and juvenile, Frank Murphy at Loew's State, Syracuse, offered guest tickets to those pinning tail on Asta ahead of "Shadow of the Thin Man".

Venetian blind setpiece was effective display created by Lee Kline for "Smilin' Through" at the Orpheum, Philadelphia. Operating on motor, when blind was opened, cast was revealed.

Ahead of "Our Wife" at the Gran Teatro Opera, in Buenos Aires, N. Bruski, Columbia publicity manager, arranged six-foot setpiece. Cutout figures of the stars were featured.

LATE EXPLOITATION FLASHES

GIANT BLIND DATE TOPS "BELONG" PREMIERE

What the publicity boys termed the "most colossal blind date since Adam and Eve" was put on for the New York Roxy date of Columbia's "You Belong to Me", when ad head Homer Harmon worked with Davy Lipton's exploitation forces to have 100 soldiers date that many girls at the theatre on opening night. Provided by the New York Defense Recreation Committee, the boys wore large numbered badges with the title, each boy searching through the waiting crowd of girls in the outer lobby to find the one wearing the corresponding number.

As each soldier found his date, he was supposed to say, "You belong to me", and escort the girl inside to see the picture, after which the guests enjoyed a special party at a nearby hotel. The papers gave the stunt quite a ride.

ASKS PATRONS TO VOTE ON CHANGE IN TITLE

With the advance campaign for the picture already in print under the original title of "Hot Spot", Kal Kalberer was informed, through the trade press, of the change to "I Wake Up Screaming" just four days ahead of the opening at the Indiana, Washington, Ind. Accepting the new title as the more potent, Kal decided to get it across with a contest asking the public to vote their choice, promoting his paper to tie in with page-one stories and other emphasis. Vote blanks were distributed to patrons, a gratifying number being turned in. Guest tickets were given for the best reasons.

To play safe, the Round Tabler ran both titles in all advertising and posting, incorporating the newer one with snipes for the paper and slugs in the ads. In no instance was the original title covered up.

"CHARLEY ROCKET" SELLS PICTURES FOR STODDARD

For the purpose of spotlighting the theatre's bigger attractions in newspaper ads, and the coming shows plugged in trailers, Manager Dick Stoddard, at the Tri-States Rocket, Rock Island, Ill., has adopted a cartoon character, personalized with the name of "Charley Rocket" and sold to the public as a slangy, cocky fellow, with copy in keeping. "Charley" is a small cut, who speaks his piece in balloon copy.

Stoddard introduced the new helper via an eight-frame trailer, in which "Charley" noted his reason for being by saying the manager had hired him because Charley knew how to pick good shows, of which he intended to inform the customers. This goes right into the regular trailers and has caught on nicely, Stoddard says. The cartoon will also serve to announce policy changes, special events, and suchlike.

GREETINGS RECORDS ARRANGED BY SIEGAL

Messages from local mothers to sons in service will be recorded in the lobby of the New Granada, Pittsburgh, the week before Christmas on a tiein arranged by Ed Siegal with a neighborhood radio store possessing home recording equipment. Theatre will pay cost of discs, to be mailed by the parents. Since the records will contain a plug for the theatre, Siegal recommends the promotion for institutional advertising and goodwill.

"BIRTH OF THE BLUES" CONTEST AWARDS COURSE IN SINGING

Featured for the campaign on "Birth of the Blues", at the New York Paramount, was a singing contest over Station WMCA, arranged by Bob Weitman, managing director, to name the "Mary Martin of tomorrow". Winner was awarded a one-year course in singing and stage technique by the star's tutor, and a booking at the Paramount. Runner-up was similarly awarded. The choices were made by a committee of prominent editors and columnists, judging entrants on their renditions of hit numbers from the picture.

LOCAL FAMILY TIED TO NEWSREEL SHOT

Having visited often in Fulton, Ky., where he has a number of in-laws, Arthur Stearns, famed parachute-jumper, is well known locally. Thus, when Stearns made his recent record-breaking leap, it was publicized by the Fulton papers, and followed up by Hal Thomas at the Malco Fulton with the newsreel showing the jumper in action. Further publicity was had when Thomas invited the in-laws to the showing, which notices, he reports, helped to sell some extra business.

IT'S NO HEADACHE, SAY THEATREMEN

Getting aboard the national campaign of the headache-cure people to stimulate sales of the old-time remedy, George Laby promoted a lot of those Seidlitz powder boxes for distribution around town. Inside was slip reading: "Heck. This ain't no Seidlitz powder. But we think it's a swell way to tell you about 'When Ladies Meet'," etc.

Out in Devil's Lake, No. Dak., Art Abelson also found the stunt useful, this time for his date at the Lake on "Sun Valley Serenade".

SPONSORED RADIO SHOWS HELP SIDNEY BUILD-UP

Taking over recently at the National, Louisville, Ky., an independent situation with a musical stock policy plus whatever product he can get, Jack Sidney has put his house into the spotlight with a radio quiz program from the stage, sponsored by the state's largest brewery. It is an audience-participating idea, elaborately staged, and helping the grosses considerably on Monday nights, one of the weak ones. Sponsor is following through with newspaper ads, street car and bus cards, covering their accounts with colorful heralds.

In addition, Sidney has promoted a five-day-a-week street broadcast sponsored by one of the leading stores and on which guest tickets are given for prizes. Results have been so good that the sponsor has just re-signed for another stretch, the theatre benefiting accordingly.

STAN TESTS "TRUTH" RUG IN FRONT OF BOXOFFICE

To the many unusual slants employed by theatremen in hooking picture promotions to their dates, Stan Lambert adds one having to do with a rug used in "Nothing but the Truth", tied to the date at Warner's Venetian, Racine, Wis. Using a duplicate of the pictured floor covering, Lambert had the rug laid at the boxoffice in advance of the date, after which the store had one-half of it cleaned and relaid out front, where it all was explained with a poster alongside.

The copy tiein had to do with how the rug had stood up with all the wear, emphasizing how well it had been cleaned, etc. Due credit was given the picture, and the promotion plugged further by the store in ads and on the radio.

Jack Nelson comes up with another of his giant newspaper tieins in North Bay, Ontario, this time the Canadian theatreman taking over the 24-page Christmas shopping issue of his paper on a tiein with "She Knew All the Answers" at the F. P. C. Capitol. Ten cash prizes and ten pairs of guest tickets were given for the best 20-word answers to the question: "Why I find it best to shop in North Bay", entrants being required to attach their answers to sales slips from any store advertised in the issue.

Two-color front-page banner head read: "Shop In North Bay. You'll find all the answers to gift problems," etc. Further along the copy read that the event was inspired by the picture, theatre credits being carried prominently and further emphasized with a two-column close-up of the stars.

FURTHER LATE REPORTS

STAR, AUTHOR FEATURED ON "PULHAM" PREMIERE

Since "H. M. Pulham, Esq." is a story with a Boston and Harvard background, campaign for the world premiere last week at Loew's State and Orpheum was given special attention by the press in the campaign reported by Joe Longo, ad head, under the direct supervision of Charlie Kurtzman, division head. In all, some 70 newspaper breaks were had in advance, featuring editorials in two of the more conservative dailies and a five-day contest in the Traveler wherein guest tickets were offered to readers on the best answers on why they would like to see the picture. Three-day serialization was also planted.

Much of the featured publicity was had by the personal appearance of Robert Young, the picture lead, and J. P. Marquand, author, the campaign being definitely localized by the presentation by Mr. Marquand of the original script of the picture to Harvard University. Various college papers also cooperated, Longo arranging with the Boston University daily to invite Hedy Lamar to the school's annual military ball.

Screening for Alumni Held

Another slant that also hit the dailies was a special screening for Harvard alumni, particularly the officers of the class in which the author graduated. Through this, Longo was able to get a crack at the alumni mailing list, which brought a special group to the premiere in Marquand's honor and also hit the society pages.

Different heralds directed to male and female patronage were distributed about town, as were special printed bookmarks in stores and libraries. The Community Fund list gave the Loewman another outlet for names. Many good windows were had and, recognizing the importance of the event, civic authorities gave permission for banners across the main streets. At the theatre the opening was celebrated with all the Hollywood trimmings. This included a special broadcast from the lobby, and other radio promotions were had for a week ahead.

Credited by the Loewman with valuable assistance in putting over the opening were Loewman Howard Burkhardt, Ed McBride, Joe PiPesa, Sandy Gampa and MGM exploiteer, Bert McKenzie.

GLAMOUR GIRL SEARCH PLUGS "SCREAMING" DATE

The successful glamour girl contest reported in various spots on "I Wake Up Screaming" is currently effected, and successfully, for the date at the M. & P. Paramount in Boston, as reported by Martin Glazer, publicity director, in cooperation with Manager Ben Rosenberg. Tied directly to the Daily Record, local tabloid, Glazer reports over 3,000 free lines of publicity during the promotion. Selected by Ralph Stitt, Twentieth Century-Fox exploiteer, from a group of working girls, the one chosen was given a complete glamourizing, such as beauty treatments, clothing, suite at swanky hotel, etc. Paper followed through with daily picture layouts and stories.

Also reported as unusual for local advertising by Glazer was the back-page "ear" of two of the local sheets, space taken up with a reverse cut of the title. This, he says, was a first-timer and caused quite a bit of buzzing.

SELLS ADVANCE TICKETS FOR NEW YEAR'S EVE SHOW

With "Babes on Broadway" booked for the New Year at Loew's Poli in Waterbury, Ed Fitzpatrick is working on the date for a big New Year's Eve midnight show, already selling tickets in advance, importantly with a portable ticket booth on downtown street corners. Special booth in the lobby is also being used to sell the tickets, and the entire theatre staff is cooperating through a ticket committee, stores and business firms being canvassed for the purpose. Ed is encouraging these sales with special prizes.

Sound truck has been promoted for daily use to plug the "big show", special recordings of the hit numbers from the picture being broadcast with theatre announcements. Badges are being worn by the personnel and at each break ushers are circulating through the crowds advertising advance tickets. Festivities are being announced on the radio stations and many defense plants in the sector are being covered with special heralds.

STARTS TARZAN CLUB TO AID LOCAL ZOO

Organized by Francis Deering for "Tarzan's Secret Treasure" at Loew's, Houston, is a "Tarzan Club" which created a lot of publicity in advance. The main objective of the organization, according to Francis, was to secure one new animal for the local zoo and, for this purpose, readers were invited to become members by bringing or sending a dime to the club headquarters at the theatre. In exchange, the Loewman gave engraved membership cards. Through the process of announcing that Johnny Weismuller had contributed $25.00 to start the fund, Francis secured an opening three-column break and scene cut, running for the best part of the week. Other explotations on the date included coloring contest, sound truck which made the rounds of the schools and a special jungle front.

'Texas' in Arizona Sold by Carolina

The South was moved over a bit to the Southwest recently when Manager Carolina Brunson went all out to sell "Texas" at the Rialto, Phoenix, Ariz., doing quite a bit to remind the folks of the Lone Star state. In line with the promotion was a tiein with the local Texas Society for a state register, taken about town by girls in cowland costume. Back banners read: "Are you from Texas? Register now. See," etc.

Further atmosphere was had with the only genuine stage coach in Arizona, promoted by Brunson for street ballyhoo. Driven by an old-time driver with another old-timer armed with rifle as guard, the coach carrying a girl in costume of the picture was driven to the state capital, joining the Governor's parade to open the State Fair. The coach, colorfully bannered, was displayed around town and in front of the theatre, where it was posed with usherettes who with the rest of the staff wore full costumes.

Outstanding exploitation in window display was obtained by Carolina in conjunction with leading merchants such as Porter's, nationally famed saddle and western apparel department store. Here a giant display was had with comparison showing of a dress used in the picture and a modern outfit. Atmospheric exhibits in other strategically located windows were also had, with appropriate credits.

In addition, there were quite a few radio tieins, coop pages and contests for students aimed to highlight the historical background of the story.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Shaffer-Galligin Duo Report Recent Tieins

Joining in Round Table activities, but recently, new members John W. Shaffer, publicist and Manager W. G. Galligin report colorful doings at the subsequent Commercial, Chicago, of the Harry Balaban circuit, the theatremen sending on details of a "Triple Horror Show" of high voltage. Immediate interest was aroused with a bannered ambulance parked out front for four days ahead, and three boys dressed as ghosts covered the district with signs "picketing" the theatre for being "unfair to the Ghost Union." The ambulance was used further to spread the word at local football fields and stadiums during games. Window displays throughout the neighborhood were also used to call attention to the proceedings, which in addition to the screen program included the Dr. Silkini spook stage show.

Another report from the Shaffer-Galligin duo notes details of a "Queen" contest put on recently, a number of preliminary contests being held on the stage with winners entered in the finals. Prizes were awarded for the preliminaries and in addition, the girl selected as "Miss South Chicago" was further rewarded with a complete ensemble from one of the leading stores. The promotion was hooked to the local daily which ran entry blanks and continuous publicity to build up the proceedings.

Warnermen Report From Philadelphia

Some of the recent campaigns emanating from Steve Barutio's Warner Philadelphia theatres district, and reported by R. Lee Kline, included a thorough job of work by Andy Schectman, on "Sun Valley Serenade" at the Vernon, and Jerry Weissler on "Kiss the Boys" at the Diamond, both being neighborhood situations.

Schectman tied in to a recent appearance of Glenn Miller at the downtown Earle, having a photo taken of himself and the band leader showing Miller autographing one of his recordings of the picture's hit numbers. Andy tied this to his campaign by promoting a number of the records from a music store for distribution to the first 25 patrons at the opening evening show. The band leader photo was used out front to plug the offer.

Another Glenn Miller plant was a "juke-box" recording machine out front carrying the band's recordings. Accompanying poster invited the public to select the numbers they wanted to hear. In the theatre, a victrola was placed on the stage and before the matinee and evening shows started, recordings of the hit numbers were played. At the finale of the concerts, a special record was run calling attention to the picture and crediting the music store for the machine and records.

Seeks Most Kissable Lips

Discovery of the "most kissable lips" in the neighborhood was the contest angle tied in with his newspaper by Weissler for "Kiss the Boys", the Warnerman hooking up with the House of Westmore on the promotion. Squares of cleansing tissue and makeup mirror were provided in the lobby, and women patrons invited to make an imprint of their lips upon the tissues to which were attached small tickets for names, addresses, coloring (blond or brunette, etc.,) and age. On opening night, cosmetic representatives and models made their selections on the stage, the winner presented with make-up outfit of products merchandised by the advertiser.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Circus Day Observed By Welty on "Dumbo"

City Manager Neil Welty made it circus day in and around Stamford, Conn., for his date on "Dumbo" at the Palace, campaign including a torchlight street parade in which the fife and drum corps of the American Legion participated. Street bally featured side show barkers, clowns who drew chalk pictures of "Dumbo" and who visited the schools. One of the clowns distributed new pennies to children who gathered while he did his chalk act, drawings of the Disney characters were presented to patrons leaving theatre.

Full cooperation of school board was obtained with bulletins posted on all boards and heralds distributed at schools. One honor student and a teacher from each school attended the opening and wrote their impressions for use in daily paper. Radio coverage included 13 spot announcements over WSRR, children enacting a play with characters from the picture.

PERSONNEL CONDUCT

Inspired by an address by Walter Wanger, that losses in patronage may in part be due to lack of tact in customer approach, is the following listing of suggestions for personnel coming in actual contact with the public. The material, compiled by John DeMars and Wylder and Ralph C. Nordmark, of the Marquis Theatre, Hollywood, Calif., aims to set forth rules of indivdual contact, not including routine operation. "These rules may be obvious. Nevertheless, they have been grossly neglected," say the authors.

Lettered Jaloppy Used By Stearns for "Hardy"

For "Life Begins For Andy Hardy" at Schine's Strand, Lexington, Ky., Manager Harry D. Stearn picked up an old jaloppy, had it lettered with trick copy and driven around town by one of the town's collegiates. For added decoration, a quartet of girls came along, the gang cheering and otherwise to engage attention.

On "Tom, Dick and Harry", Stearn had three boys around the streets, each wearing back banner reading, "I'm Tom", "I'm Dick", "I'm Harry", the cards also carrying star and theatre copy. Boys walked in single file and from time to time together so that the title would read correctly. Soda fountains naming drinks after the title announced the confection with banners and mirror copy.

Local Movie Sponsored By Staten Islanders

Backed by a comprehensive campaign in the local press was the production and showings of a local movie of Staten Island, put over by Edgar Goth, Fabian theatres zone ad head, and shown in a number of the zone theatres. Cost was defrayed by the 15 merchants and industrial concerns represented whose activities were portrayed. Editing and continuity were handled by Harry Black, zone head, with Goth assisting.

In advance of the initial showings at three of the principal houses, the participants paid for three full-page ads, in which their names were mentioned, with dates in the subsequents also emphasized. Shown in conjunction with the regular program, the short made an excellent added attraction, Goth notes.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Giveaway herald in the form of a bank note which had "Virginia" picture copy at the bottom was distributed at the box-office as part of Mel Jolley's campaign for the date at the Columbia, in St. Thomas, Ontario. In addition, heralds made up in the form of bookmarks were given out at local library and bookstores, plus house-to-house. Ahead of "Caught in the Draft" Mel used three boys on street corners reading papers with theatre copy overprinted on outside. On Saturday matinee kids in costume paraded main street with signs reading "we are on our way to see," etc.

New, because the local paper has only lately come around to theatre cooperation, is the coloring contest put over by Bill Johnson for "Aloma" at Smalley's, Dolgeville, N. Y. The daily run a two-column cut and story, inviting boys and girls to try their skill. Johnson contributed 10 guest tickets for the best entries.

To mark Andy Hardy Week, in Ridgway, Pa., Bob Bowman secured a proclamation from the Mayor, then followed this with a wire promoted from Hollywood and signed by Mickey extending his appreciation for the honor. Other stunts to put over "Life Begins" at the Strand by Bowman included a four-day classified hookup, phone calls by cashier in advance and post card campaign to out-of-town patrons.

In connection with his date on "Harmon of Michigan" at the Colonial Theatre, in Erie, Pa., Jack Cotter planted a grid contest in local daily with cash and guest ticket awards going to those coming closest to correct scores. Through tieup with paper, weekly guest tickets are awarded to those sending in news tips judged good enough by paper for publication.

Reported as bringing in excellent returns was Frank Shaffer's contest on "What Is Man Power?" which was landed in local daily for that picture's opening at the Warner Dixie Theatre, in Staunton, Va. Running a week ahead folks were invited to write letters on the subject for theatre tickets, cooperating paper running two-column mat of the stars. For "Dive Bomber" Shaffer planted a six-day serialization.

As a teaser ahead of "Mr. & Mrs. Smith" at Smalley's, in Dolgeville, N. Y., Bill Johnson distributed sealed pay envelopes to men only with copy on the outside reading: "We dare you to hand this to your wife unopened." Mimeographed handwritten copy inside: "Dearest: I have been neglectful of late, so I am making a date with you right now to see," etc. In addition Bill featured a football score guessing contest with guest tickets going to those coming closest to perfect scores.

A SMART TIEUP

SINCE Fredric March, starring in "One Foot in Heaven", is also appearing on Broadway in the stage play, "Hope for a Harvest", Elihu Glass at the Fabian Paramount, Staten Island, conceived the ingenious idea of building up the picture by offering free tickets to the play, as noted. Tickets were promoted in a tieup with Joe Heidt, publicity head of the Theatre Guild, in exchange for newspaper advertising, in addition to other publicity and theatre display.

From Indianapolis, Bill Elder continues to report those smart co-ops on various dates. Recently, he carved out a large ad with a head cut of Clark Gable affixed to a hunting coat advertised by one of the stores. Layout was topped with theatre and picture credits. Elder repeated on "Lady Be Good" and "Shadow of the Thin Man," for jewelry store co-ops, the ads topped with giant close-ups of the stars, properly tabbed.

With the ban on children attending the movies because of the polio scare lifted in York, Pa., Al Myers, manager of Warner's Ritz Theatre offered his kid patrons a chance to see their favorites in the pictures they had missed during their six week's absence from the theatre. The pictures were offered as the second feature at his Saturday morning shows.

Another one of those outstanding publicity campaigns for his stage shows is noted by Lou Mayer at the RKO Temple, in Rochester, in this instance for the personal appearance of "Fats" Waller. Local dailies came through with art and stories on amusements page, columnists devoting space to the pianist.

Effective window display was promoted by Vern Hudson at the Palace, in Guelph, with copy reading: "For Christmas gifts you will find All That Money Will Buy." In addition, stills from that picture were spotted around the window with appropriate tiein copy. Vern also sent government postcards carrying picture plug to special mailing list.

Playing "Charley's Aunt" on Thanksgiving Day, Lester Kolste at the Van Der Vaart, in Sheboygan, Wis., planted a live turkey out front of his house with copy on cage reading: "I know it's dangerous hanging around town, but I'm risking my neck to see," etc. For street bally usher carried large umbrella with imprint: "If you think this is funny you should see," etc.

Tinted star photos were distributed to the first 500 women attending George Cronin's opening of "Weekend in Havana" at the Strand Theatre, in Portland, Maine. Tropical lobby display was featured with star cutouts and numerous window displays promoted.

Flying over Antigo, Wis., opening day of "Yank" at the Palace, was plane which dropped heralds and a certain number of guest tickets to the opening. Stunt advertised well in advance brought much attention from the localities. In addition, paper parachutes were also dropped. Heralds were also distributed to teachers, who handed them out to students. Free cuts and publicity stories were landed in daily paper.

A radio whistling contest proved effective ballyhoo for "Whistling in the Dark" during William Freise's campaign for the film's Rivoli, La Crosse, Wis., engagement. Freise awarded guest tickets to the first 10 persons identifying correctly the numbers whistled.

REPRESENTATIVE NEWSPAPER ADS

Getting Personal

By

BARNEY DeVIETTI

Pull up a chair, movie fans, and we'll tell you about . . . .

VEGETABLES...

- Mr. Joe Veltri, our fireman, who has charge of the boilers in the Price, Carbon and Utah theatres, has been after me all spring and summer to stop at his home for a load of vegetables from his garden. I finally got around to taking him up on his invitation the other day and all but cleaned out the place.
- Joe really is a swell farmer, and I certainly did cart off a dandy load of garden produce. I have a hunch he won't be too anxious to have me call around next year.
- Mr. Veltri had a bit of trouble this year as we noticed the following sign planted smack in the middle of his garden:
- Trespassers will be persekuted to the full extent of two mongrel dogs which aint never been overly soshible with strangers and one double barreled shot gun which don't shoot no sofa pillows. Dam, if I ain't tired of this hell raisin and steelin round my toomater patch.
- Vegetables, you know, are chuck full of this Vitamin and that Vitamin all of which are supposed to keep us in tip-top physical condition. Let me tell you about a new Vitamin—Vitamin "M"—which now joins the "Keep Well" parade!
- Vitamin "M" is MOVIES. We urge you to enjoy liberal treatments of Vitamin "M" for pleasure.
- Mental health is just as vital as physical health. So how about taking a dose of Vitamin "M" to-night and then keep right on with the treatment. Always remember that Vitamin "M" is the symbol of comfort and enjoyable entertainment offered by the Huish theatres.
- Here is your Vitamin "M" treatment for this week . . . . . .

—PRICE THEATRE—

(Below) For holdovers on "Honky Tonk" at the United Artists, Detroit, Bill Hendricks followed through with a series of osculatory closeups, as represented by this 130 lines on 2 col., to announce the second and third weeks of the date.

(Below) Direct public appeal to the clergy as noted in this "If I were" 50 lines on 2 col., worked well for Francis Schlax in selling "Foot In Heaven", at the Kenosha, Kenosha, Wisc. Other ads in the campaign stressed the comedy angles.

IF I WERE A MEMBER OF THE CLERGY! —

I would make special mention of the engagement of "One Foot In Heaven" starting tomorrow at the Kenosha Theatre.

I would say to my people—"It is one of the great pictures of this or any other year. There is romance and drama and rich humor. Love of God and love for men, women and little children is its theme song. Whatever your age, faith or condition, if you have ever lived in a family, you'll be stirred by this portrayal. It is life with father and mother, and it marches with the trumpets of faith and courage!"

BUT I AM JUST ANOTHER THEATER MANAGER! . . .

Trying to tell you about a richly entertaining film drama. PLEASE SEE IT!

Chalmers, Trade Publisher, Dies At Age of 98

James P. Chalmers, former vice president of Chalmers Publishing Company, who celebrated his 98th birthday last October 20th, died in his home in Greenwich, Connecticut, Thursday, December 4th. The company published Moving Picture World, prior to its purchased by Martin Quigley in 1927 and its consolidation with Exhibitor Herald to form Exhibitors Herald-World, which was merged with Motion Picture News in 1930 to form MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Mr. Chalmers was the father of James P. Chalmers, Jr., who founded Moving Picture World in 1907, and Cine-Mundial, a Spanish film magazine, in 1913. The company also published text books, among them, Richardson's "Blue Book of Projection" and "Motion Picture Theatre Management."

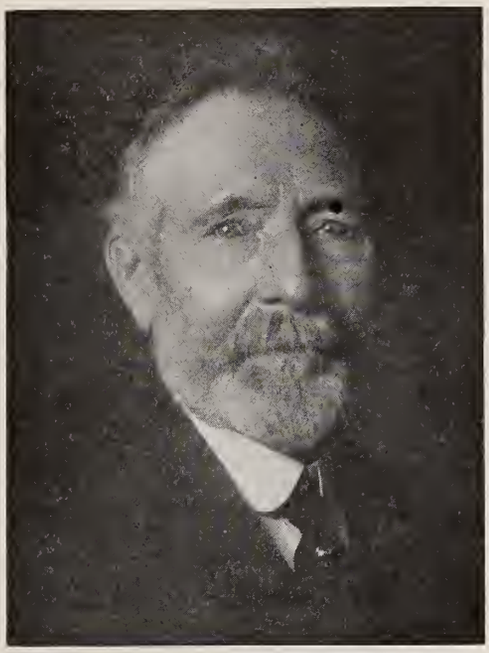
The elder Chalmers was born in Kirkwall, Orkney, Scotland, in 1843. He left with his family and came to the United States in 1892. Shortly after his arrival in America, he established a printing business in New York, and was engaged in that enterprise for a number of years. Later, he retired and purchased a farm in Cromwell, Conn. When his son was killed in an accident in 1912, Mr. Chalmers returned to business and took charge of the Chalmers publishing firm. He remained active there until 1927.

Mr. Chalmers' grandson, Alfred J. Chalmers, heads the Chalmers Publishing Company which still publishes Cine-Mundial in New York.

James Chalmers was a senior elder in the Presbyterian Church in Greenwich, and participated in church activities for many years. He was the oldest living member of the local Y.M.C.A.

Surving are two daughters, Miss Eliza J. Chalmers and Mrs. John D. Rosie of Greenwich; a son, John F. Chalmers; three grandchildren, Alfred J., Norman L. Rosie of Chicago and Edgar C. Rosie of Darien, Conn.; and four great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held last Sunday at the First Presbyterian Church in Greenwich. Mr. Chalmers was buried beside his wife in Kensico Cemetery.



Walter G. Preston, NBC Executive, Dies

Walter G. Preston, Jr., vice-president and manager of the public service division of the National Broadcasting Company, was found dead at his home in New York Saturday morning, December 6th, as a result of an overdose of sleeping tablets. He was 39 years old.

Mr. Preston joined NBC in 1935 as assistant to the vice-president and treasurer. The following year he was made director of the general service department, and in 1938 was appointed assistant to the vice-president in charge of education. Later he became manager of the public service division, which arranges radio forums and does other promotional work.

James F. Potts

James F. Potts, 73, operator of the first motion picture theatre in Portsmouth, Ohio, and later operating houses in Cincinnati, died at his home in Dayton, Ohio, Monday, December 7th.

JAMES P. CHALMERS

Wells Hawks Dies; Former Press Agent

Wells Hawks, 71, publicity man, press agent and former representative of many theatrical firms and motion picture stars, died Thursday, December 4th, at the Pinehurst Sanitarium, Pomona, N. Y., where he had been since suffering a stroke in 1927.

During his career he was credited with titling Mary Pickford as "America's Sweetheart," and helped mold the careers of Maude Adams, Ethel Barrymore, Julia Marlowe, John Drew and Nora Bayes.

A former newspaper reporter, he was in charge of publicity for Charles Frohman and Sam H. Harris in addition to publicizing the old Hippodrome, Ringling Brothers Circus and Coney Island. During the last World War he volunteered to handle publicity for the Navy Recruiting Service. He was founder and honorary president of the Theatrical Press Representatives of America.

John Wilson Dies: Television Engineer

Funeral services were held Monday for John Charles Wilson, 32, internationally known television engineer, who died at his home in Bayside, Long Island, Friday, December 5th.

A native of London, Mr. Wilson was first associated with Baird Television Development Co. in England, coming to this country in 1936 to join CBS. A year later he became associated with the Hazeltine Service Corp. He is survived by his widow.

Mrs. Lena Sarnoff Fox

Mrs. Lena Sarnoff Fox, mother of David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America and chairman of the board of the National Broadcasting Company, died Thursday, December 4th, at her home in the Bronx, New York. She was 73 years old.

Coit H. Carson

Coit H. Carson, 62, co-owner with his brother, Drew J. Carson, of the Majestic and Palace theatres in Arctic, R. I., died at his home in Centerville, R. I., December 2nd.

Dr. Frank Mankiewicz

Funeral services were held in New York Friday, December 5th, for Dr. Frank Mankiewicz, 69, father of Joseph L. Mankiewicz, MGM producer, and Herman J. Mankiewicz, screen writer. Dr. Mankiewicz died in New York Wednesday, December 3rd.

Oscar Deutsch, Odeon Chairman, Dies in London

Oscar Deutsch, chairman and managing director of Odeon Theatres, Ltd., and a director of United Artists Corp., Ltd., died at his home in London, Friday, December 5th. He was 48th years old.

He had been in ill health for some time, and recently his condition was more seriously impaired as a result of shock sustained in a Nazi air raid.

Mr. Deutsch first entered the motion picture field 25 years ago as owner of several theatres in Birmingham, England. About ten years ago he began to expand his business in other communities, building a great number of new theatres, most of them locally financed, throughout the British Isles. Ultimately he brought his interests in more than 200 theatres under the central organization of the Odeon Management Corporation, which subsequently bought out all local financial contriubtors to the circuit.

At his death, Mr. Deutsch was president of the managing corporation, which now reportedly controls the largest single theatre chain in England, including such large first run houses as the Odeon in London, built several years ago. He was also a member of the board of directors of United Artists, Ltd., which is said to own the controlling share in the Odeon Management Corporation.

Before the Films Act was passed in England Mr. Deutsch is reported to have given impetus to production of many films by guaranteeing a certain minimum rental in advance of production. After the Films Act this practice was continued on a smaller scale and only under specific permission from the British government.

Mr. Deutsch's home, which he maintained in Manchester throughout his career, was bombed several months ago during an air attack, and he suffered minor injuries in being hurled from his bed by the explosion.

Surviving is his widow who lives in Birmingham. They had no children.

Guy Eastman

Guy Eastman, 64, father of Clayton G. Eastman, manager of Paramount's Albany exchange, died December 1st, at North Conway, N. H. Mr. Eastman was survived by his widow, by two sons, Clayton G., of Albany, N. Y., and Raymond Eastman of North Conway, N. H., and by a daughter, Ruth. Interment was at North Conway, N. H.

William H. Ogden

William H. Ogden, 60, stage electrician, died December 4th, at his home in Camden, N. J. He had been taken ill two days previous after returning home from the Forrest Theatre, Philadelphia, where he was stage electrician for the Eddie Cantor musical show, "Banjo Eyes." A charter member of the Philadelphia IATSE, he was formerly employed for many years by Camden theatres. His wife and parents survive.

Gilbert E. Gable

Gilbert E. Gable, 55, who produced travel motion pictures, and active in publicity and radio work, died December 2nd in Portland, Ore., from acute indigestion, it was learned by his friends and family in Philadelphia.

PRODUCT DIGEST

THE RELEASE CHART SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Sullivan's Travels

(Paramount)

Laughter vs. "Messages"

Preston Sturges knows how to make a slick, entertaining picture. He has done so again with this story about a Hollywood director. Properly sold, and it will require special attention, it should prove fully as pleasing to both exhibitors and patrons as writer-director Sturges' previous successes "The Great McGinty" and "The Lady Eve."

The picture asks whether the public wants sheer entertainment or a social "message" on the screen. By a laughful plot Mr. Sturges constructs a very positive argument in behalf of entertaining cinema.

Sullivan, played by Joel McCrea, is a successful comedy director who wants to film a document about the downtrodden. His producers, Raymond Walburn and Porter Hall, ask what he knows about trouble. Sullivan dons tramp's garb and sets forth to see the other half.

Twice he is forced back to Hollywood. On the first return he meets the Girl, Veronica Lake, who buys him breakfast. Touched, Sullivan promises to help her to crash Hollywood. They are arrested after Sullivan borrows his own car. He reveals his identity. There is a melee of pushing into swimming pools as the Girl rebukes Sullivan for deceiving her. Miss Lake combs out her tresses and forgives Sullivan. But he must take her on his adventure.

Again the experiment is interrupted as Sullivan catches the flu and is put to bed by the doctor and publicity men whom the studio assigned to trail him in a land yacht. He recovers and with the Girl explores hobo jungles, freight cars, jails and missions learning of the seamy side.

The journey ends and Sullivan is sent by the publicity men to distribute five-dollar bills along skidrow. He is slugged and his money and shoes are taken by a tramp. Sullivan is dumped into a freight car and the tramp, fleeing, is hit by a train. His body is identified as Sullivan. The director fights with a railroad detective and lands in a chain gang. Here he learns of sweat and anguish, and of the entertainment value of films. With his fellow convicts he rocks in laughter over an old Mickey Mouse cartoon shown at a back country negro church.

Needless to say, Sullivan eventually proves his identity and returns to Hollywood to the Girl. Sullivan no longer wants to film misery. He has found why people want pictures that make them forget trouble in laughter.

Mr. Sturges has been given full canvas by producer Paul Jones. He uses it all, with numerous, though linked and swiftly paced incidents. A group of skilled supporting comedians including Eric Blore, Robert Greig, Franklin Pangborn, Porter Hall and Torben Meyer give extra spark to the story. The chain gang, hobo jungles and Hollywood are convincingly recorded by John Seitz' camera.

Miss Lake, except for the somewhat obvious spotlighting of her blonde tresses and their habit of falling in her mouth, makes a winsome foil for Sullivan. The somewhat unnecessary introduction of divorce and a wife whom Sullivan married for income tax purposes make the picture primarily adult entertainment.

Reviewed at a projection room tradeshow in New York. Exhibitors, circuit buyers and trade press laughed frequently at Sturges touches and departed smiling and with favorable comment heard from several.—JOHN STUART, JR.

Johnny Eager

(MGM)

Taylor, Turner, Melodrama

With the highly inflammable combination of Robert Taylor and Lana Turner, and a fine supporting cast which includes Edward Arnold, Van Heflin, Robert Sterling, Patricia Dane, Glenda Farrell, Henry O'Neill and Diana Lewis, in an exciting melodrama about the life of a gangster, there are definite values to exploit in this picture.

"Johnny Eager" is reminiscent of "A Free Soul," produced in 1931 by MGM, starring Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Lionel Barrymore and Leslie Howard.

While the hero and central character in "Johnny Eager" is utterly devoid of principle, and is a notorious gangster and racketeer who runs the gamut of crime from murder down, he nevertheless does reform, although this occurs almost at the end of the picture, and pays for his criminal practices with his life. In spite of the fact that justice is duly observed, the saga of crime portrayed limits the picture to adult audiences.

Robert Taylor enacts "Johnny Eager," ruthless racketeer who stops at nothing to gain his ends. The picture opens with Taylor reporting to his parole chief and making a pretense of living honestly. Then his true character and racketeering methods are revealed. Having met and been attracted to Lana Turner, a sociology student, he does not hesitate to implicate her in murder, in order to force her step-father, the district attorney, to permit him to open a dog-racing track. Eventually, he reforms to the point of proving to Lana that she was innocent of murder by producing in person the man she thought she killed, sends her away with her fiance, and loses his life.

This is a new type of role for Taylor and he does very well. In spite of the fact that he is a reprehensible character, he arouses one's sympathy. Lana is quite luscious as the girl who loves not wisely, but too well, and particularly fine performances are turned in by Edward Arnold as the step-father district attorney and Van Heflin as a friend of Taylor's, whose utterances will be appreciated by lovers of fine dialogue.

Produced by John W. Considine, Jr., and directed by Mervyn LeRoy, "Johnny Eager" emerges as a gangster picture calculated to maintain interest, with ingenuities in plot, action and shooting for the men and romantic appeal for the women.

Previewed at the company projection room before an audience of trade-press reviewers who thought it was "good."—IRENE SMOLEN.

Mr. Bug Goes to Town

(Fleischer-Paramount)

Feature-Cartoon

From the Max Fleischer Studios in Florida comes another gay and fanciful feature length musical cartoon studded throughout with many moments of enjoyment. As the title implies this is a story of a community of insects, their fight for existence against the avarice and passion of three of their own members and the encroachments of the human race. It is a story designed for cartoon fans of all ages in which adults as well as children will find the elements of love, tragedy, comedy and pathos—all presented in an entertaining cartoon manner.

David Fleischer, the director, has taken this new group of characters and set them through their paces with all the deft and cleverness incorporated in previous Fleischer productions. Heading the cast is "Hoppity," a grasshopper, who returns to his insect community to find the inhabitants living under the threat of destruction from humans who use their community as a short cut. He also finds that "Honey" a bee and his fiance, is being forced into marriage by the villain "C. Bagley Beetle," and his two aids "Swat," the fly and "Smack," the mosquito, so that her neighbors may move to the highlands controlled by the beetle.

Also worked into the plot is the effort of "Dick" and "Mary," a young married couple who are trying to save their tax-burdened home which would result in providing a garden-refuge for the persecuted insects. Much of the comedy is supplied by "Swat," who at the least provocation mimics everything and everybody, and many times nearly foils the villains plans by taking his orders too literally.

The music and lyrics far the production were written by Hoagy Carmichael and Frank Loesser which includes such tuneful numbers as "We're the Couple in the Castle," sung by Kenny Baker who supplies the voice of "Dick"; "Katy Did, Katy Didn't," and "I'll Dance at Your Wedding." Leigh Harline created and conducted the atmospheric music which aids immeasurably in the progression of the story.

For exhibitors who have found previous feature cartoons successful at the box-office this Fleischer-Paramount production, properly exploited, should attract consistant cartoon fans and also bring many new patrons of all ages to the theatre. The Fleischer Brothers in this have hit a new high in their animated cartoons.

Previewed at the Twentieth Century-Fox exchange in New York where Paramount held the screening. The audience, comprising many exhibitors and a few representatives of the trade press, found the picture entertaining.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Bedtime Story

(Columbia)

Comedy of Show Business

Given an assignment fitting him like a glove, Frederic March turns in a heap of entertainment opposite Loretta Young and at head of a seasoned cast in this comedy of careers that conflict with ambitions. He portrays a playwright who wants to keep on writing plays for his actress wife who wants to retire to a farm in Connecticut, and a wealth of diverting dialogue and incident is packed between this starting point and the ending in which they compromise their differences.

Produced by B. P. Schulberg and directed by Alexander Hall from a script by Richard Flournoy, based on a story by Horace Jackson and Grant Garrett, the story abounds in briskly handled situations which follow one another in steady sequence to culminate in a hotel-room episode which had the preview audience howling. At this point the actress, having divorced her husband and married a banker in pique, only to discover that her divorce was not valid, communicates the knowledge to her absent spouse who rescues her by sending plumbers, chambermaids, waiters, porters, exterminators, and finally a crowd of roistering conventioneers to the apartment. Although the point is made that this is by way of preventing further progress toward consummation of an invalid marriage, discretion is employed in the handling.

Robert Benchley, Eve Arden, Allyn Josly and Helen Westley provide excellent support.

Previewed at the Alex theatre, Glendale, to a Friday night audience which gave the offering their manifest approval in sometimes rafter-shaking laughter.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

WORLD RELEASING "THIS ENGLAND"

World Pictures is distributing the British National-Anglo American production, "This England", in the United States. The recurrent theme of the picture is that whoever assails the land of Britain merely succeeds in cementing the landowner, the peasantry and the laboring classes.

Reviewed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, from London, issue of March 8, 1941, the reviewer said: "Tuned to the patriotic mood of the moment, aiming to use the theme of invasion as the key to national pride, this episodal essay in history and romance embraces an ambitious canvas, sets its stories—each unified by the central idea—in four epochs, the Norman invasion, the Spanish Armada, the Napoleonic Era and the twentieth century

"It is one of those instances, however, where the canvas is more ambitious than the palette; probably producers and directors can be pardoned for failing adequately to compress the story or the spirit of the British nation into 8,000 feet of celluloid."

John Corfield was the producer and David MacDonald directed. Players include Emlyn Williams, John Clements, Constance Cummings and Roddy McDowall.

Confessions of Boston Blackie

(Columbia)

Murder Mystery

Following the trails blazed by previous films of the "Boston Blackie" series, Chester Morris returns as the title character in another vehicle of crime, murder and adventure as the lone wolf aiding the police while trying to prove his innocence in a murder.

Based upon the character created by Jack Boyle the story concerns a gang who, under the guise of art dealers, duplicate a valuable life-size statute and attempt to sell the facsimile as the original. When they are exposed at a public auction a gun fight ensues which results in the death of the gang's ringleader. The story continues from that point as noted above.

Supporting the star is Harriet Hilliard who becomes implicated in the crime and who handles the romantic interest in the picture. Richard Lane is again seen as the police inspector with whom "Blackie" parries wisecracks, insults and subterfuges, while George E. Stone returns as the assistant to Chester Morris. All enact their roles with the zest and vigor manifested in previous films of this series.

William Berge, the producer, and Edward Dmytryk, the director, give to showmen another film of laughs and suspense which should appeal to followers of this type melodrama.

Reviewed at the Rialto theatre in Times Square. The presentation was attended by an early morning audience who displayed their interest with the quiet attention they rendered the picture.—G. S.

Release date, January 9, 1942. Running time, 65 min. PCA No. 7824. General audience classification.

Midnight Angel

(Paramount)

Melodrama

Paramount's "Midnight Angel" is more topical than today's newspaper headlines. It is months ahead of its time in depicting what the headlines indicate might soon be a section of the American scene. The entire action of the picture taken place during a simulated "blackout" and a mock demolition and gas bombing of a large American city by unnamed enemy planes.

Against this background, the plot has an inventor, sentenced to death for the murder of his co-worker, escaping during the blackout to locate the real criminals and thus expose a sabotage ring which had loaded the planes of the mock invaders with live bombs in order to blow up a munitions works.

Robert Preston, leading man in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S poll of exhibitors naming Stars of Tomorrow, enacts the role of the inventor well. Surprise of the film is the characterization by Martha O'Driscoll, as a telephone operator who aids in the inventor's escape. She delivers charmingly and effectively, putting her in line for more important roles in the future.

Supporting the pair are Philip Merivale, Eva Gabor, Louis Jean Heydt, Thurston Hall, Mary Treen, J. Edward Bromberg, Spencer Charters, Cy Kendall, Russell Hicks, Paul Stanton, Clem Bevans and Robert Emmett Keane.

Director Ralph Murphy achieved maximum suspense in the development of the story, and at the same time used nuances of comedy for a lightening effect. A well furbished mounting was given the picture by Producer Burt Kelly.

Seen at a trade showing in Los Angeles where a press-exhibitor audience was quite impresed. The title seems incongruous.—VANCE KING.

No Hands on the Clock

(Paramount)

Mystery Melodrama

This first of three melodramas to be produced by William H. Pine and William C. Thomas and to star Chester Morris is of a class and calibre to suggest extension of present planning to include a good many more.

It is a fast, frequently funny and always engrossing tale of a newlywed detective's attempt to locate a missing man. A large number of characters, all suspects and each suspicious of the others, go through a sequence of puzzlingly complicated events in a manner both stimulating and amusing before the quick and satisfying conclusion. Some killing occurs in the course of the proceedings.

Maxwell Shane's screen play, based on a novel by Geoffrey Homes, is an adroitly counterweighted pattern of thrills and laughs directed by Frank McDonald in a manner to extract maximum screen values.

Jean Parker as the detective's bride and George Watts as his boss are standouts in an effective cast.

Scene of the story is Reno and surrounding territory.

Tradeshown in the Ambassador Hotel theatre to a sizeable turnout of theatre men and their families who expressed approval in terms of laughter at the proper places during the showing and in verbal comments afterward.—W. R. W.

Road Agent

(Universal)

Western

Second of the new series of westerns starring Dick Foran, Leo Carrillo and Andy Devine, Universal's "Road Agent" is a combination of fast riding, straight shooting, a dash of love interest and a bit of music. It is a highly acceptable piece of western picture fare, maintaining suspense throughout in a plausible story outside of the groove for such opuses.

The trio is supported by Anne Gwynne, Samuel S. Hinds, Richard Davies, Anne Nagel, Morris Ankrum, John Gallaudet, Reed Hadley, Eddy Waller, Ernie Adams and Lew Kelly.

Foran sings two songs, "Gielito Lindo" and "Ridin' Home," in a pleasing manner.

Director Charles Lamont keeps steady pace with the story of the trio who, suspected of murder and robbery, manage to force the hand of the real criminals and bring them to justice.

Ben Pivar's production rates applause.

Land of the Open Range

(RKO Radio)

Western

"Land of the Open Range" is another western with those three shining knights of the saddle, Tim Holt, who administers justice, Ray Whitley, who provides music and Lee "Lasses" White who furnishes comedy. "Lasses" is ably assisted by Hobart Cavanaugh in the dispensing of comedy.

The picture opens with the funeral of "Luke Archer" and the subsequent reading of his will, which specifies that any man boasting of a prison record may enter into a homestead race for the land bequeathed. The lawyer appointed to execute the will attempts to obtain a strategic part of the land in order to build a dam across the river, and thus gain full control, but his plot is thwarted.

The homestead race constitutes one of the more exciting incidents in the picture.

While not spectacular, the "Land of the Open Range" has enough of the required riding, shooting and action to insure the entertainment of western fans.

Come On Danger

(RKO)

Western

Produced by Bert Gilroy, RKO's "Come On Danger," starring Tim Holt, is another rip-roarin' Western which gives opportunity to exploit to the fullest extent more daring antics of the Texas Ranger.

The plot is simple, direction quick-moving and photography of the traditional chase across the open spaces, good. A harmonious cowboy quartet headed by Ray Whitley furnishes an entertaining respite on three occasions, singing three tuneful cowpuncher songs.

Tim Holt plays the Ranger, in search of an alleged girl-killer, played by Frances Neal. He attempts to get the evidence on the gal who is young, pretty, blonde and makes an attractive picture atop a fast-moving horse. In digging up the evidence, Tim runs across the real killer. He also discovers the instigator of other murders and some larcenous doings, the county tax collector. Holt and his buddies, Whitley, and Lee "Lasses" White, who carries a comedy part reminiscent of Fuzzy Knight, round up the outlaw gang and their leader. The girl goes free and Tim rides off into the distance, to his next adventure.

It's a good yarn and one which should appeal to men and boys who are devotees of the adventure-in-the-saddle film traditions.

Thundering Hoofs

(RKO-Radio)

Western

Tim Holt can usually be counted on for a solid western with a small, intelligible plot, hard riding and few frills. There are, to be sure, songs pleasantly sung by Ray Whitley and a pretty girl with a fair opportunity for acting, well played by Luana Walters.

Basically, however, it is Tim Holt, a personable young man who knows his way on a horse or in a fight, with fists or guns, tackling a tough situation and handling it with dispatch. The situation this time is the attempt of a crooked lawyer to disrupt a stage line in order to acquire it and resell at a tremendous profit. Holt is the son of the prospective purchaser, who is misrepresented as the instigator of the attacks to the owners, an old man and his daughter. With the help of "Smokey" and "Whopper" he saves the mail and unmasks the lawyer.

Previewed at the projection room to a small trade-press audience.—E. A. CUNNINGHAM.

Paris Calling

(Universal)

Romance and Espionage

"Paris Calling," the title being the code words of an underground espionage movement of Nazi-hating Parisians, is a study in contrasts, in story, in casting and in settings, all hung on a couple of substantial pegs. The first is love; the second is Elizabeth Bergner. Whatever Miss Bergner is called upon to do she does with the complete confidence of an actress who knows how to live her role.

A good part of the plot's structure is a reasonable facsimile of past espionage stories, and can be passed over as typical of the times. It tells of a well-to-do Parisian girl, engaged to a high government official. She flees Paris with her mother when the Germans arrive, despondently returns when her mother dies on the road to Bordeaux as a result of the Nazi bombing, joins the underground movement and slays her fiance—who turned out to be pro-Nazi—for the traitorous state papers he is carrying.

Basil Rathbone, as the pro-Nazi Frenchman, is exceedingly competent. The contrasts come with the fortuitous arrival of an American member of the RAF, played by Randolph Scott, who is left stranded in France after the evacuation; the incompetence displayed by Gestapo agents, and a climax that verges on the fantastic. In that climax, a British seaplane puts down in a French port with a detachment of sailors who overcome the Gestapo agents and the Nazi soldiers gathered in a seaport cafe, and rescue Mr. Scott, Miss Bergner and sundry others. It is blood-brother to a serial.

Overlooking lapses, "Paris Calling" is an interesting, entertaining spy story with some really competent acting by an actress named Elizabeth Bergner.

Edwin L. Marin directed under the guiding hand of Producer Benjamin Glazer.

Shown in the Universal projection room in New York to reviewers and guests, the picture was well received. Scepticism seemed to be the general feeling anent that climax.—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

Borrowed Hero

(Monogram)

Metropolitan Melodrama

Momentum and a multiplicity of complications which sustain suspense give this melodrama of metropolitan politics an entertainment value in excess of its production cost. Speed of narration tends to offset some defects of acting which dispel only momentarily a semblance of reality which producer A. W. Hackel and director Lewis D. Collins maintain without incurring expenses beyond the purposes of the enterprise.

Alan Baxter dominates the picture as the accidental hero of a police capture which results in his appointment by crooked civic leaders as special prosecutor assigned to smash a crime ring. Their efforts to escape detection by turning public sympathy against him are defeated when he adopts gangland's own methods of wringing a confession from their hired killer. Florence Rice portrays the usual newspaper girl in love with the hero, John Hamilton, the corrupt politician, and Wilma Francis stands out as the girl who supplies the necessary evidence in the case.

The story by Ben Roberts and Sidney Sheldon and screenplay by Earle Snell gave the production staff an abundance of material to work with.

DICK TRACY VS. CRIME, INC. (Rep.)

Serial

The popular newspaper cartoon detective is again the focal point in a Republic serial. And again the genial but efficient "Dick Tracy" is portrayed by Ralph Byrd. This time "Dick" is called upon to halt the depredations of a master criminal known only as "The Ghost." In the first chapter—running time, 28 minutes—the action gets underway immediately with "The Ghost" wiping out a member of a council of eight, an organization of influential citizens formed to rid New York of a reign of crime, and ends with the good people of that city taking to the Westchester hills as a tidal wave begins to engulf the town. It portends much activity to come in future chapters. Supporting Byrd are Michael Owen, Jan Wiley, John Davidson, Ralph Morgan and "The Ghost," whose voice is the clue to his identification. W. J. O'Sullivan was the associate producer and the serial has been jointly directed by William Whitney and John English.

The complete synopsis, cast and chapter titles are on PRODUCT DIGEST Page 377.—P. C. M., Jr.

ADVANCE SYNOPSES and information

REMEMBER THE DAY (20th Century-Fox)

Drama, Romance

PRODUCER: William Perlberg. Directed by Henry King. Based on the play by Philo Higley and Philip Dunning.

PLAYERS: Claudette Colbert, John Payne, John Shepperd, Ann Todd, Douglas Croft, Jane Seymour, Anne Revere, Frieda Inescort.

SYNOPSIS

Mousey, middle-aged Nora Trinnel (Claudette Colbert), for many years a school teacher, enters a Washington, D. C., hotel in the summer of 1940 to see Dewey Roberts (John Shepperd), Presidential candidate. While she waits, her mind drifts back to the time when she first started teaching at the Auburn school where Dewey Roberts (Douglas Wheatcroft) was in her eighth grade class. . . . Dewey is star pitcher on the baseball team and a conflict develops between Nora and Dan Hopkins (John Payne), baseball coach. Dewey is secretly in love with Nora, chiefly because she knows about boats. Nora and Dan, meanwhile, fall in love with each other and a scandal develops when they spend their vacations at the same place. Dan is dismissed. Dan and Nora secretly marry two weeks before he sails for France with Canadian troops, and thus passes out of her life. . . . Now she is in Washington to see Dewey, who also has passed out of her life. Her presence inspires the candidate to stick to his ideals despite outside pressure.

When a company truck is wrecked the police believe that the Kid's father died in the truck. The Kid lets them believe it and hides his father while he sets out to discover the reason for the wrecked truck and who is behind it. With the help of his dad's secretary (Peggy Moran), the Kid traces the "accident" to the company comptroller and the transportation manager and after a battle turns the culprits over to the police.

DANGEROUSLY THEY LIVE (Warner Brothers)

Espionage

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Ben Stoloff. Directed by Robert Florey.

PLAYERS: John Garfield, Nancy Coleman, Raymond Massey, Moroni Olsen, Lee Patrick, Christian Rub.

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Ingersoll (Raymond Massey) is head of a Nazi spy bureau, which has as its objective the sinking of every American cargo bound for England. The bureau's immediate objective is to kidnap the secretary of the British Export Bureau, who is leaving on a vacation. The secretary, Jane (Nancy Coleman), realizing she is being kidnapped, tries to escape from a cab, causing it to hit a truck. Jane is attended by Dr. Michael Lewis (John Garfield). She interests the doctor in her story and he agrees to help. Jane plans to pretend she is suffering from amnesia. Dr. Ingersoll, a noted psychiatrist, has her moved to the home of a fellow-conspirator. Mike goes along. Mike, who has just been lukewarm before, suddenly realizes that he and Jane are trapped in a Nazi stronghold. While Jane is being tortured in to giving information on ship locations, Mike escapes and holds the spys at bay. Jane, now free, phones British Intelligence.

WILD BILL HICKOK RIDES (Warner Brothers)

Western Melodrama

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Edmund Grainger. Directed by Ray Enright.

PLAYERS: Bruce Cabot, Constance Bennett, Warren William, Ward Bond, Betty Brewer, Russell Simpson, Frank Wilcox, Howard da Silva.

SYNOPSIS

Belle Andrews (Constance Bennett) watches her gambling hall burn down in the great Chicago fire of 1871. Penniless, she accepts Jim Farrel's (Warren William) invitation to accompany him to Powder River, Montana, to open a gambling place. Farrel plans to get control of all the land in Powder River by hiring stooges to file claims on the land—proceedings which the settlers had neglected to do. On the stage coach to Powder River they meet Wild Bill Hickok (Bruce Cabot). Farrel has his claim jumpers go to work and even has Ned Nolan (Russell Simpson) convicted of a murder charge by a fixed jury. Nolan's ranch is the "key to everything." Hickok gathers the ranchers together to pool their resources to pay Nolan's note. They round up their cattle. Farrel blows up the dam in an attempt to drown the cattle, but fails as the cattle reach high ground. Farrel dies in a fight with Wild Bill.

BLUE, WHITE AND PERFECT (20th Century-Fox)

Detective Story

EXECUTIVE PRODUCER: Sol M. Wurtzel. Directed by Herbert I. Leeds. Based on the story by Borden Chase. And the character "Michael Shayne" created by Brett Halliday.

PLAYERS: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Beth Hughes, Helene Reynolds, George Reeves, Steve Geray, Henry Victor, Curt Bois, Marie Blake, Emmett Vogan.

SYNOPSIS

Michael Shayne (Lloyd Nolan), private detective, is put on the payroll of an aircraft company and listed as a riveter. While he's acquainting himself with the new job, a crime is committed in the cashier's office. A diamond-cutter, who is fixing up $100,000 worth of rough diamonds to be used as grinding tools, is found unconscious. The diamonds are gone. Mike suspects the diamond-cutter, especially when he disappears. The trail leads first to a dress company where the diamonds have been inserted into buttons on dresses, then aboard a liner bound for Honolulu where the diamonds are transferred to a candy jar and finally in Honolulu, where the diamonds come to Mike's hands by accident. In the showdown, Mike captures the spies—the diamonds were headed for German factories.

REAP THE WILD WIND (Paramount)

Historic Drama (Technicolor)

PRODUCED and directed by Cecil B. DeMille. Associate producer, William H. Pine.

PLAYERS: Ray Milland, John Wayne, Paulette Goddard, Raymond Massey, Robert Preston, Susan Hayward, Lynne Overman, Walter Hampden.

SYNOPSIS

Adapted from the Saturday Evening Post story by Thelma Strabel, "Reap the Wild Wind" is a historic drama of America's fight to rid the Florida Keys of piratical wreckers who preyed upon the "lifeline" of her merchant marine 100 years ago—before the railroad era, when only the sailing ship lanes linked the Atlantic Coast commercially with the rich Mississippi Valley. This, DeMille's 66th production, includes several storm-whipped scenes at sea, on the decks of rolling sailing ships; a sequence laid in the aristocratic Charleston of 1840; scenes of the colorful Key West of the period, and a sequence laid on the ocean's floor. Several hundred brilliantly-colored tropical fish, as well as three octopi and a number of sharks, were imported from Florida for the underwater scenes.

ARIZONA TERRORS (Republic)

Western

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER-DIRECTOR: George Sherman.

PLAYERS: Don "Red" Barry, Lynn Merrick, Al St. John, Reed Hadley, John Maxwell, Frank Brownlee, Rex Lease, Lee Shumway, Tom London.

SYNOPSIS

Around the beginning of the twentieth century, an adventurer, under the assumed name of Don Pedro de Berendo (Reed Hadley), perpetrates a land grant swindle that is upheld by the courts. With an accomplice, he immediately institutes a reign of terror. The ranchers themselves offer no resistance but two rough and ready cowboys, Jim Bradley (Don "Red" Barry) and Hardtack (Al St. John) become modern Robin Hoods, robbing Don Pedro's tax collectors and giving the money back to those from whom it was taken, and after a series of adventures rid the country of the impostor.

SNUFFY SMITH, THE YARD BIRD (Monogram)

Comedy

PRODUCER: Edward Gross. Directed by Edward Cline. From the comic strip by Billy DeBeck.

PLAYERS: Bud Duncan, Edgar Kennedy, Sarah Padden, Doris Linden, Andraia Palmer, J. Farrell MacDonald, Pat McVeigh.

SYNOPSIS

Snuffy Smith (Bud Duncan), hillbilly whose home is on Smokey Mountain, is forever dodging revenue agents, headed by Cooper (Edgar Kennedy). He tries to join the army because of the free food and $21 a month but is rejected. However, he manages to save the general from being run down by a truck, and is allowed to join the army as a "Yard Bird," a sort of servant around the camp. He finds that Cooper is his superior, a sergeant. Snuffy gets tired of army discipline and returns to Smokey Mountain. The maneuvers are held there and Snuffy because of his knowledge of the territory, is called on for assistance. Meanwhile, Lowizic (Sarah Padden), Snuffy's wife, catches some fifth columnists.

SHORTS SYNOPSES AND INFORMATION

STRANGE FACTS (Col.)

Cinescope (3975)

Three items make up this Cinescope reel. (1) Processing and preparing sea shells tossed by the million from the sea and used by an industry whose demand for the shells far exceeds the supply. Craftsmen fashion costume jewelry, electric lamps and useful decorative pieces out of sea shells. There is even a house fashioned entirely of sea shells. (2) A sculptor armed with a sharp knife makes an endless variety of things out of fresh cocoanuts. (3) A phenomenon of nature occurring every ten years at Silver Springs, Fla. The migration of shad which happens only once in a decade. Millions of them come in from the sea for a day or two, eat the vegetation from the bottom of the spring, and then disappear like magic.

HEDDA HOPPER'S HOLLYWOOD, No. 2 (Par.)

(*Z*1-2)

Hedda Hopper here plays hostess to several of her son's friends, attends the dedication of the Motion Picture Relief Fund's country home and takes the audience to the Mocambo, cafe of the movie set. At the party for her son, the guest of honor is William Farnum, silent screen star. Guests include Arline Judge, Jinx Falkenberg, and Kent Rogers, who does impersonations. There is also a sequence devoted to the Milwaukee world premiere of "Hedda Hopper's Hollywood" with Carole Landis, Evelyn Keyes, Jane Withers, Anne Shirley and Joe E. Brown making brief appearances. About a dozen other stars appear in the subject.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, No. 4 (Col.)

Series 21 (3854)

Billy Gilbert, the comedian, goes to town for a day of fun and adventure in the big city. He visits the City Hall in San Francisco; takes over the Mayor's job: goes to the mint; runs a street car; works as a chef in Joe Di Maggio's Fish Grotto; visits Chinatown and makes a personal appearance at a theatre where he is mobbed by his fans.

Page numbers on short subject synopsis published in Product Digest are listed in the Shorts chart, Product Digest Section, pages 398 and 399.

QUICK RETURNS (Par.)

Sportlight (*R*1-4)

This issue of the series is devoted to badminton and table tennis. An expert demonstration of all types of badminton strokes in normal speed and slow motion is given by Jess Willard, the top ranking champion since 1923. His opponent is Chester Goss, amateur champion. The major portion of the reel is given over to table tennis and after an introduction of old time ping pong as played in the gay nineties, an exhibition of singles is shown, with Sandor Glancz, world champion, and Ruth Aarons, world feminine champion, as the players. Following that there is an exhibition of trick shots.

HOW WAR CAME (Col.)

Historical Reel (3982)

This is the second in the film chronicle series of Raymond Gram Swing subjects being released through Columbia recording the history of our times. This one deals with the League of Nations set-up at Geneva after World War 1, the league being organized to stop nations from prowling around the world taking each other's possessions and to prevent war. Mr. Swing's narration accompanies animated cartoons in color.

WHO'S A DUMMY? (RKO)

Leon Errol (23,702)

Mrs. Errol is rehearsing for an amateur play unknown to her husband. She demands the use of the car making Leon ride in a taxi. During the ride the driver tells Errol about the triangle in his own home and how his wife shot the other man. This story causes Errol's imagination to run riot. Leon follows his wife and discovers her rehearsing a love scene with the other man. He is dejectedly walking away when a pistol shot brings him back. He sees his wife stuffing a dummy in a hamper, and, in an effort to save her, Leon steals the hamper, which he believes contains a dead body. Leon becomes further involved and is almost lynched by a crowd who also believe the hamper contains a dead body.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS, No. 2 (Par.)

Six subjects comprise this issue of the series. First there is a visit to the zoo at San Diego, which is run by the only woman zoological director in the world, Mrs. Belle Benchley. Charles Connick, of Boston, colors stained glass. Malcolm Pope, of Winter Haven, Fla., races 60 miles an hour on an aquaplane of his own design. Emil Mottert, of Hoyletown, Ill., makes instruments out of the hides of animals. Then there is a visit to Grassyfork, near Martinsville, Ind., which once was waste marsh, but has been developed by Eugene Shireman into the largest goldfish "farm" in the world, and finally a sequence with Bill and Fran Johnson, who are handy with a gun.

Better Theatres

EQUIPMENT • FURNISHINGS • DESIGN • PHYSICAL OPERATION

Fortunate are we of the motion picture, that in a day of world ordeals, deep national concerns and all humanity on trial with its woes of adjustment, we have as our function and share of service the happiest job on earth — the purveying of entertainment. Through the medium of make-believe that makes dreams come true, we open vistas of heart's desire attained, declaring for the screen's hour of grace a truce with fact in a shadowland where, for the while at least, care may be laid aside, and added strength found to face another day.

SECTION II

It must Sparkle!

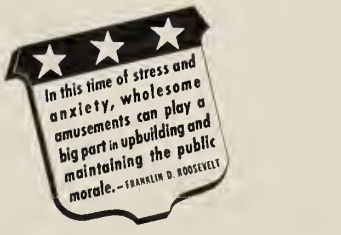
Just as a Christmas tree must sparkle with all its trimmings to be attractive and beautiful, so too, must the pictures on your screen today sparkle to attract theatregoers.

To secure the desired screen brilliancy with present dense black and white and colored films, TWICE AS MUCH LIGHT is required as is possible to project by any low intensity lamp.



This necessary doubling in light is possible at an increased combined current and carbon cost of LESS THAN 2¢ PER HOUR, with the low cost Strong Utility High Intensity Projection Arc Lamp.

Without the snow-white light such as is secured by this lamp it is impossible to show colored films satisfactorily. The light of your old low intensity will appear a dim, muddy yellow by co parison.

Increase your business by installi Strong Utility One-Kilowatt Arc Lam now. Theatregoers readily recogni good projection and go where it offered.

What Will It Cost You

Not to Install Them?

IRRITATED customers seldom complain. They just stop coming to your theater.

Why irritate them by making them stand to let others pass?

Why block their view of the screen while the row in front rises to let someone enter or leave?

You can put an end to all these exasperating, box-office-robbing moments by installing Kroehler Push-Back Theater Seats.

This revolutionary seat keeps your patrons luxuriously seated throughout the entire show—gives them uninterrupted vision. Theaters which have installed these seats report they are a remarkable publicity investment as well as the last word in equipment. Write today for latest facts.

MARKET NOTES

¶ News reports concerning equipment and materials, and those who make them

Small Ticket Booth Safe

A SMALL, compact safe especially adapted to the average theatre ticket booth for the protection of receipts in the intervals between deposit in the office safe or in bank, has been marketed by the National Theatre Supply Company. By placing the larger bills and coins not needed for making change in the safe, available if needed for transactions but otherwise not accessible to a robber, only a small amount of cash is jeopardized by a holdup.

The safe is substantially constructed of quarter-inch machine steel, welded throughout. The outside dimensions are 12½ inches high, 7½ inches wide, and 5 inches deep. The safe is finished in an attractive olive green.

The door of the safe is made of ½-inch machine steel, and the rear of the door interlocks ⅜-inch from top to bottom with the bottom of the safe, making it just as securely locked with the hinges removed as with the hinges intact. The lock on the door is of the double nose type, all bronze and requires two keys to open.

At the top front of the safe, there is a special money slot, protected with a saw tooth bevel plate to prevent the fishing out of the money. This money slot will take fifty $1 bills at a time. There is also another money slot for rolls of coin of all denominations up to 50c pieces. A half-round chute 4 inches long extends into the safe to support the rolls of coins in position to slip through into the safe.

Chair Orders Added

INSTALLATIONS of push-back auditorium chairs now in preparation or just completed, are announced by B. B. Buchanan, director of public seating sales for the Kroehler Manufacturing Company, as for the Hub theatre in Chicago, the Edna in Gibson City, Ill.; Hope, Providence, R. I.; Salem, Salem, Va.; Curto, Tijuana, Mexico; Spreckels, San Diego, Calf.; Liberty, Lyons, Ill.; Avon, Southgate, Calif.; and Telenews, Dallas.

Interchangeable Soundhead

A NEW DESIGN of soundhead has been announced by the Ballantyne Company of Omaha, in which adaptation has been made to either Powers or Simplex projector mechanisms, interchangeably. This has been done to supplant two different Ballantyne soundhead types. It is further announced:

"An adaptation of the Simplex sound heads for Powers has been worked out. This makes it possible for any exhibitor using Powers projectors to change at any future date to Simplex projectors without having to discard his soundheads, as it is only necessary to replace the Powers drive pinion with a Simplex drive pinion to make this change."

Chair Distribution Arranged

BEGINNING THE first of the year, auditorium seating manufactured by the American Seating Company will be available through the branches of the National Theatre Supply Company, according to an announcement by H. M. Taliaferro, president of American.

The arrangement, which is referred to as one of "co-operation," applies to "most" of the United States.

Have You Pink Umbrella?

THAT IS THE way the Strong Electric Corporation, Toledo, Ohio, seems to paraphrase Ipana's tooth paste advertising in a folder directed to theatres still having low-intensity projection lamps. The folder has been made available, however, to any theatre operator or projectionist. It is a novel presentation of the arguments for high-intensity light sources, regardless of how small the theatre is, with the front cover picturing a man holding an umbrella, the area of which is cut away and backed by a piece of ornamental pink cloth, while above is a line asking, "Don't you feel funny with a pink umbrella?"

HOW TO "CLEAN UP" ON RAINY DAYS

YOU know how rainy-day trade can mar the appearance of your interior, track up your carpets and floors.

That's easy to prevent by using Goodyear All-Weather Link Mats in your entrance and lobby. The unique corrugated construction of these mats picks up and holds dirt before it can be carried inside. To cleanse them is a simple matter of flushing through drainage channels on the underside.

They're safer, too. Their non-skid surface is designed to prevent wet-weather slipping — they lie flat, do not create hazardous bulges or ruffles.

All-Weather Link Mats are made of specially-compounded rubber blocks intertwined with tough, rust-inhibiting steel wire. They come in bright, non-fading colors that give your floors a neat, well-cared-for look.

If you prefer, special-design mats, with your name or other brief message woven into them, may be ordered in any shape or size.

For additional information on these attractive mats, write to Goodyear, Akron, Ohio — or Los Angeles, California.

ASK YOURSELF THIS QUESTION:

What Would 50 to 100% More Screen Light Mean For My Theatre?

● Theatre managers who have adopted High Intensity projection know that the increased screen light means

IMPROVED PICTURE QUALITY
BETTER AUDIENCE RESPONSE INCREASED ATTENDANCE MORE PROFIT

The new "One Kilowatt" High Intensity arcs supply 50 to 100 per cent more screen light than low intensity lamps at practically the same operating cost. Initial cost is also low.

Ask your dealer to give you the figures and a demonstration of this modern projection light.

ISSUE OF DECEMBER 13, 1941. VOLUME 145, NUMBER 11

Discovered: New Don'ts for New York Theatres

NEW REGULATIONS apply to the character and placement of advertising and exploitation matter, and certain architectural and decorative structures, in and around the theatre, which New York City adopted last spring, seem only now to be catching up with exhibitors in the big town. The regulations are aimed at fire hazard, and New York's building and fire codes have proved to be guides to the lawmakers and administrative officials of cities throughout the country, and even of states, so that there should be more than local interest in them.

Several New York exhibitors have recently been notified of violations. John Sefing, custodian of our "Ways and Means" department, reports that a number of theatre owners and managers have expressed surprise when he has brought the new regulations to their attention; one exhibitor received a summons, and renewal of his license was held up until his lobby and front displays were changed in accordance with the new code requirements.

These are enacted in two ordinances revising the administrative code of the city. One of them authorizes the use of "combustible trim and decoration" in outer lobbies (vestibules) which open directly to the street, also in lobbies separated from the street by not more than two sets of doors, and which are separated from the auditorium by fireproof doors and used exclusively for entrance and egress (not connected with other rooms or stairways); but such trim and decoration are legal only if—

1. The aggregate area and width of the lobbies or vestibules are not reduced by them below code requirements;

2. The trim and decoration are attached closely to the masonry or plaster surfaces of the enclosing walls, and the walls themselves are solidly filled with "gypsum plaster or its equivalent."

3. The trim and decoration do not extend more than one foot beyond the wall.

This ordinance also specifies that unless printed or painted advertising matter is completely enclosed in "tight glass enclosures," it cannot be more than 3/16-inch thick and must be entirely flame-proof. All such advertising materials cannot be placed so as to obstruct ingress and egress.

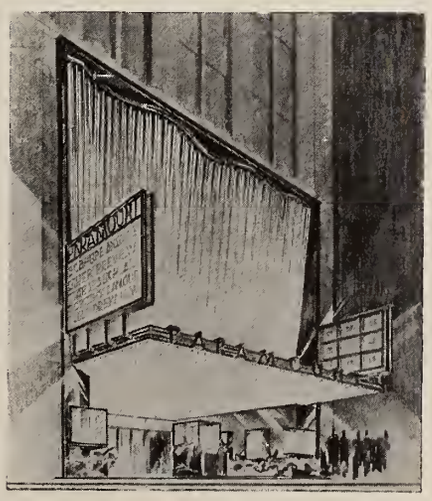
Advertising matter and implements are more specifically the subject of the other ordinance, which states that where there is display advertising in the form of ground signs and false fronts beyond the building line, it must be revised so that—

1. It does not extend at any point more than 8 inches beyond the street wall of the building;

2. It is constructed of material not more than 3/16-inch thick and which is "adequately stiffened" or attached directly to the street wall;

3. The material used in the construction is flame-proof, or is itself incombustible.

All of these regulations of course apply to theatres under construction or to be built, as well as to existing houses.



Exploiting Foto-Fans

One of the ways in which the theatre itself can enter into the business of promoting business is interestingly indicated by the camera fan activities of the Esquire theatre, capacious and rather swanky house on Chicago's somewhat snooty Near North Side. These activities center around a room in the theatre called the "Little Gallery," which has been rigged for this purpose (see accompanying photograph).

This room, located off the balcony level foyer, has been a meeting place for local notables—the "artistic" and the "discriminating," as it were—since the theatre was

PARAMOUNT'S NEW HOLLYWOOD "SHOW WINDOW" TO HAVE A REFRESHMENT LOUNGE

IN appearance as well as in name, the El Capitan theatre in Hollywood, once one of the fabulous showplaces glorifying a matured motion picture, is being obliterated to provide Paramount Pictures with a "display window" in the film capital. Redesigned by W. L. and Hal Pereira, Chicago architects, the remodeled house, renamed the Paramount, will present an architectural and decorative scheme altogether modern, but with a semi-tropical atmosphere in a mezzanine foyer-lounge featuring a soda fountain. The architects' designs for this area, and for the front, are shown in the adjoining renderings. The large square section over the marquee will consist in a series of metal channels containing fluorescent neon, which will be reflected repeatedly because of the curvature of the channels and serpentine formation of the entire section. This metallic area, slanting toward the marquee, will be framed in rose marble. The ticket booth will have a base of translucent marble, lighted from behind. As indicated in the sketch, the display frames will project out prominently from the walls, instead of being modestly recessed, a treatment that will be followed also in the lobby and main foyer. . . . To achieve a tropical environment in the mezzanine refreshment lounge, real planting will be resorted to, the plants growing upon trellises. The palm spreading over the soda bar will be of metal, however, and other metallic structures simulating plants will be distributed around.

opened four years ago, and not only has the room been the source of constant publicity through regularly changed exhibitions of photography, but it has even solved a traffic problem for the theatre! In general, it assists the management in selling the "Esquire Idea" to the public.

In Chicago there are about 20 major camera clubs which, at one time or another, have been invited to exhibit in the "Little Gallery." These showings brought additional business, not only from members' families and friends, but from other camera clubs and fans, both amateur and professional. And of course they developed a great deal of word-of-mouth advertising and good will for the theatre.

As to the traffic angle: The policy of the Esquire has always been not to seat patrons during the last 10 or 15 minutes of the feature. People arriving during this time were invited to visit the "Little Gallery" during the wait. By giving them an interesting place to occupy their waiting time, the management not only lessened the main floor traffic, but introduced many exclusively main floor habitués to the balcony, who later became steady balcony patrons!

While the idea was originally outlined by Hal Pereira of Pereira & Pereira, Chicago architects who designed the Esquire, its success is attributed to William D. Galligan, who was manager of the Esquire theatre for the first 3½ years of its operation (now managing the company's Commercial theatre in South Chicago). Paul Hesse, present manager, is continuing the policy.

A December exhibit is of the results of a new hobby: collecting, photographing and coloring dolls, and it fits in nicely with the holiday season.

The "Little Gallery" of the Esquire theatre, Chicago (see adjoining story). It is an oval-shaped room approximately 20x40 feet. The walls are covered with sand-colored, fluted velour with a copper hanging rail for the exhibits. Carpeting is eggplant color, all wood trim is in natural mahogany, and furniture is of smoked gray and salmon. The ceiling is white with chromium plated lighting fixtures.

Paragraphs—

The drive-in theatre, that unexplainable phenomenon of a motorized people, has entered a new phase. In some areas, established theatre interests, operators of regular theatres, have scratched double chins in thoughtful observation of their (the drive-ins') extension and decided it was about time to protect product rights by starting a drive-in here or there, usually in the path of expected community growth, if only as a temporary measure against the time when the outlying locality may warrant erection of a regular theatre. To what extent this phase may expand we wouldn't know. If drive-in's are going to be importantly competitive, however, they are not likely to be allowed to offer increased competition from outside the regular theatre business.

When these curious picture-parks began back in 1933, BETTER THEATRES described the physical scheme that had been conceived, and similar data has been presented in these pages on later developments. The editorial slant has mostly been that drive-in's are rather interesting novelties. Although still not really numerous, they are novelties no longer.

It has been announced by John Eberson, New York architect who has been a prominent specialist in theatre design for a quarter of a century, that his firm of John and Drew Eberson is collaborating with Park-In Theatres, Inc., of Camden, N. J., originators of the ramp systems used for perhaps most of the drive-in's, on a group of basic plans.

The November 21st issue of the National Theatre Supply Company's house organ, Facts and Fancies, ably edited by Lou Friedman, should prove a source of helpful information on drive-in's. An article by L. H. Walters of the Cleveland branch discusses lot dimensions and preparation, projection and sound provisions, etc.

But what we are still trying to find out, completely and once and for all, is: Why do people drive in? . . And if so, what has that got to do with motion pictures?

NEW AGAIN— AFTER 25 YEARS

Strand Theatre, Muncie, Ind.

■ Two significant facts of motion picture exhibition today are well exemplified in the recent remodeling of the Strand in Muncie, Ind. One is the completeness of the obsolescence which has overtaken properties long the pride of their communities; the other is the convenient, economical availability of varied materials for effecting comprehensive modernization of such properties. When the Strand was built, 25 years ago, a Muncie newspaper reported it as "the finest and most up-to-date moving picture theatre in the state". Two views of the original theatre are presented here to permit it to be contrasted with the remodeled house. . . . The theatre is owned by Leonard S. Sowar, Muncie manager for Theatrical Managers, Inc., which operates four other houses in that city. Remodeling was under the supervision of Luther D. Miller, display manager, and Hugh McLachlan, supervisor of maintenance and construction, of Theatrical Managers. The Strand, located in the central business section, seats 450. The other theatres operated by Theatrical Managers in Muncie are the Uptown, also owned by Mr. Sowar; Rivoli, Wysor-Grand, Hoosier.

FRONT: The original front (shown at left) had a relatively deep vestibule. Substantially eliminating it provided space for somewhat larger lobby and foyer area, and for a women's cosmetic room. The front (erected by Everbrite, Milwaukee) is finished in cream, orange and burgundy porcelain enamel. Wagner three-line attraction panels, forming continuous fascias of the triangular marquee, are lighted with flourescent neon. Marquee borders and soffit are lighted with filament lamps (note inner curvature of soffit to door lintels and ticket booth roof). Display cases are stainless steel, lighted top and bottom with lumiline lamps.

AUDITORIUM (pictured on page 11): Seating 450 in three banks, the auditorium has been completely redesigned in a moderately ornamental modern style. A notable feature of the redesigning is the "streamlined" transverse "trough" treatment of the ceiling, by which I-beams are rendered unobtrusive. The plaster ceiling, tinted powder blue, curves to the edge of each beam, and is built out beyond it to form a cove facing the front of the auditorium and concealing neon, alternately pink and blue from beam to beam. Rebuilt to the curve in unbroken line into the proscenium walls, the plaster side walls are painted in a modern bar and panel pattern, in cream, apricot, wine color and Swiss rose above a cinnamon brown wainscot. The chairs, by American, have backs upholstered in striped blue mohair, seats in coral simulated leather. . . . The Strand has also been air-conditioned, with air introduced by Barber-Colman outlets at each side of the screen opening and exhausted both under rear seating and at the screen platform. Heat transfer is by coils carrying steam for heating, water for cooling, the water being cooled by an 18-ton York refrigeration machine.

COSMETIC ROOM: (Right) The mirror from light trough to cosmetic shelf, and from shelf to floor, is entirely Flexglass, the sections being 4 inches square. The light trough is also faced in Flexglass (1 inch). It contains white fluorescent lamps and is covered with white flashed glass. The cosmetic shelf is linoleum, floor covering blue and gray linoleum tile. Walls are peach brocaded Wall-Tex, general illumination is by glass fluorescent lamp luminaire.

TOWARD EXIT DOORS FROM FOYER

LOBBY: Relatively spacious, for a small theatre, the new lobby of the Strand has walls entirely in Prima-Vera wood veneer. At the right side on entering is a built-in refreshment booth with integral candy case and a panel protecting space for a popcorn machine, finished in lacewood veneer, chromium and plate glass, with candy case doors of Prima-Vera. Doors to the foyer are also sheathed with lacewood veneer. Large display cases, co-ordinating posters and stills, are built of Masonite and Lamicoid, painted cream, rose, apricot and wine. Posters are lighted with neon, stills by filament lamps. A smaller case has a conspicuous position immediately beside the exit doors, placed at the floor beneath a mirror (in which milady can give makeup and hat a "last look"), the frame of which bears the legend, "Our Next Attraction". A built-in seat just inside the entrance doors is covered in coral simulated leather. The lobby is lighted by power-white neon tubing in a ceiling cornice cove rimming the room. Flooring is brown and cream linoleum tile. Projecting about 18 inches into the lobby, the ticket booth has been given a brilliantly attractive decorative treatment in the lobby by rounding the corners and finishing the entire surface of this portion of the booth (except for the door) in Flexglass. Entrance and exit doors are paneled in corrugated glass.

FOYER: View of foyer-standee across rear of seating area, looking toward drinking fountain, with surrounding panel of gold-leaf Flexglass, which also finishes the fountain base. Flexglass has here been most effectively applied to mark the aisle heads, forming cylindrical pylons at the ends of the standee rails. It is also employed to conceal ornamentally structural piers at the middle of the central standee rail. Foyer walls and the rail fascia are finished in gold "metalique" Wall-Tex coated fabric. Crowns of the latter, which are finished in upholstered coral leatherette, project over the sides, with the projections concealing neon tubing. This area is further illuminated from an oval coffer painted flesh color, with cove concealing white neon. The ceiling surrounding the coffer is light blue edged with ivory striping. The carpeting extending down the aisles, has an overall plume design of tan and gold and dark blue ground. Just inside the foyer entrance door is a small light and buzzer panel; the light may be flashed by the cashier to call the doorman; the buzzer is for signaling the projection room on sound volume.

GLASS BLOCKS . . . Outside and In

■ In the Varsity theatre in Decatur, Ill., a newly constructed unit of the Frisina Amusement Company's circuit, striking and, at some points, unusual decorative use has been made of glass blocks, both to effect an interesting facade design and a sparkling interior. Designed by F. E. Holmstrand, architect and engineer of the Engineering Service Corporation of Decatur, the Varsity has a front combining glass blocks and terra cotta. The upper portion is finished in cream terra cotta, in which are set glass block windows serving lounge and toilet areas, and an office. And the windows are separated by projecting glass block pylons extending to the coping. The front at entrance level, including the ticket booth, is finished in brown terra cotta trimmed with cream. The porcelain marquee, equipped with Wagner attraction panels at each end, is blue, brown and cream, while the marquee and sign lighting is red and white neon. Trim lighting of the marquee is by filament lamps on a flasher circuit.

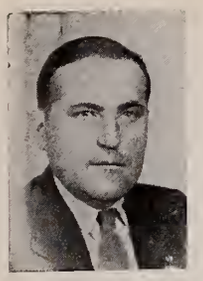
Leafy Floors, Modern Style

■ To assure decorative designs of constant appeal that are at the same time on the lively rather than the formal side, nothing perhaps quite equals the simple woodland leaf—and its cousin, the flower—as a pattern device. Especially in carpeting has it been freely used, and in modern carpeting it has produced a whole class of designs, most of them even more sprightly and imaginative than its classical adaptations. The rooms by Charles C. Burton on the opposite page have been designed with patterns like those pictured on this page, but they would as suitably enliven most modern interiors.

New Theatres Of Other Lands

ARGENTINA: The impressively lighted auditorium, in classic modern, of Clemente Lococo's Normandie in Buenos Aires.

EGYPT: The inner lobby, a thoroughly modern application of flowing curves, in the Metro theatre in Cairo.



URUGUAY: Massive, its ceiling a series of fluted vaults curving to a balcony, is the lobby of Bernardo Glucksman's new Cine Trocadero in Montevideo.

AUSTRALIA: More ornamental in its modernism, no more free, but far lighter of fancy than the other theatres shown on this page is Union Theatres's new West's in Adelaide. The view above, of the proscenium area, indicates the imaginative interior treatment. At right is the foyer looking toward the entrance. Illumination throughout the theatre is mainly by cove lighting in soft colors. The West's theatre has 1,800 seats.

Better Maintenance For Wartime Economy

FOR THE PAST six months or so theatre owners, and equipment manufacturers and distributors have been operating under very abnormal conditions. Some manufacturers would be near a complete shutdown were it not for defense orders, because of the impossibility of obtaining sufficient material for products not carrying government priority ratings. No one now can honestly foretell, even a week ahead, what can be done about getting repair and replacement parts for the theatre. Consequently, it behooves theatre operators to use special care in the operattion and maintenance of their equipment. During the National Emergency, present equipment and materials may have to be made to last a little longer.

Even if repair and replacement parts could be had with a minimum of difficulty, it is of course in the best interest of the exhibitor to be able to keep his existing facilities in proper working condition, by careful servicing, and by foresight in maintenance. Let's take, for example, the case of motor-generator sets. A motor-generator set is highly reliable as current conversion equipment, but it must be looked after consistently and intelligently to get the maximum efficiency out of it and so that no unnecessary parts and replacements will have to be made.

The bearings should be oiled or greased regularly and the commutator kept clean at all times to reduce wear on the moving parts. Oil or grease should be used only as specified by the manufacturer, who wants his equipment to give the best possible service. The commutator should never be cleaned with hard, abrasive cloth or paper, since grooves will thus be scratched on the copper surface, which in turn will tend to wear out the brushes faster and even cause excessive sparking.

Any idle generator or motor should always be covered completely with a canvas, duck or oil-cloth material to keep out harmful dirt, grit or moisture from the commutator, windings and brushes. When a "hot" electric current is turned on damp or wet windings, the insulation around the wires will have a tendency to crack or "peel."

At this time it is a good idea to order a spare set of brushes for the generator, if any are available, to use in case of an emergency.

The floor in the generator or rectifier room should be spotlessly clean. In the case of a generator, the revolving shaft causes a sucking action inward toward the set, and any dust on the floor will be drawn inside, to be deposited on the moving parts. If oxide element rectifiers are used, the revolving fans will suck this abrasive matter into the housing, and in time this accumulation of dust will reduce the cooling process of the rectifying elements and might even cause burn-outs. Rectifiers especially should have at all times clean, free-flowing air to carry off the heat produced by the rectifying elements. The above simple precautions, if followed, will add months and even years to the useful life of generator or rectifier equipment, with maintenance and replacement parts cut to an absolute minimum.

PROJECTOR HEAD SERVICING

A very important item to think about at this time is the servicing and maintenance of projector heads. The projector mechanism is an intricate, precision-made piece of equipment with the many and varied parts machined and fitted to very close tolerances. When in use the projector mechanism has a very hard job to perform day in and day out, and frequently for many hours at a stretch. To keep it in efficient operating condition, it should be carefully oiled, with oil recommended by the manufacturer, at the start of each day's show. This is very important, as the more precise the machinery, the more attention it requires. The entire mechanism should be kept immaculately clean at all times and checked regularly every day for loose or worn parts.

In installing new heads, make sure that the main drive gears are perfectly lined up. This is too often overlooked. Use a straight edge to make sure the face of the drive gears are perfectly in line. To check the meshing of the teeth, use a fragment of a sheet of ordinary newspaper and insert it between the revolving gear teeth; if the paper is completely cut through, the meshing is too tight, in which case loosen the gear so that the paper is barely cut through by the teeth; then the meshing is right.

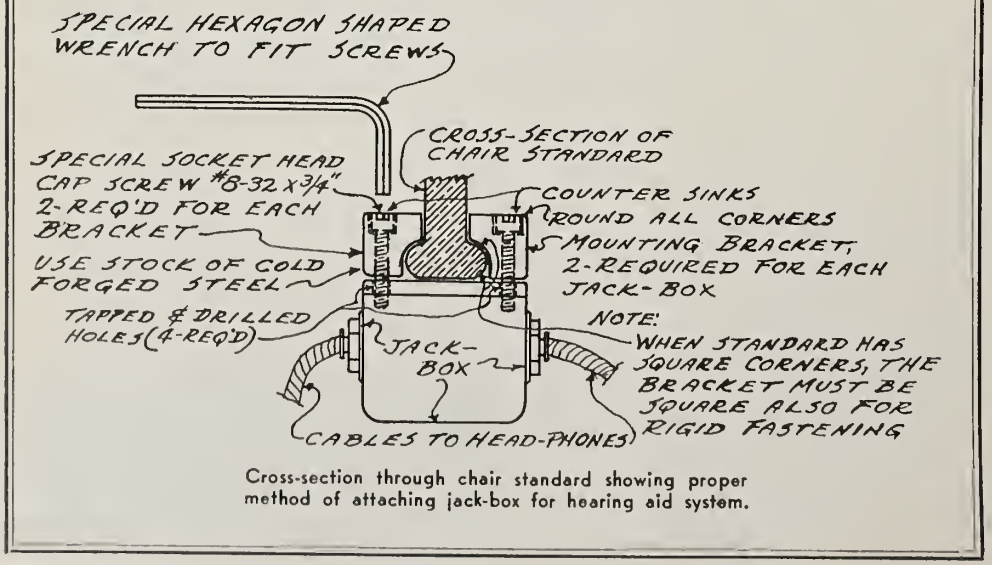
If replacements are needed they should be made before an actual breakdown occurs. In normal times when an emergency occurred in the projection room, a new or spare head, or parts could usually be had in just a few hours; but now, with the national defense program in full swing, it might take months to obtain what is immediately needed.



Projector mechanisms will wear out regardless of how precision-made they are. No piece of moving machinery will do an efficient job indefinitely without new parts or replacements. It is not a question of how long a mechanism will last, but how well it does the job while in operation. Consider an airplane motor, which is made just as precise in every detail as human ingenuity can make it; nevertheless, it is taken completely apart after so many hours in the air, regardless of how well it performed. Under present conditions especially, no theatre operator should take a chance that his mechanism may break down under normal usage, or that his only projector head may be fused tight by a film fire. To be prepared for any emergency, a spare mechanism should always be available. If a new head cannot be had in a reasonable time, a good rebuilt one should be purchased—or better than having nothing, an old head should be obtained if only to be used as a source of some spare parts to replace, as necessary, ones in the mechanisms in operation.

It is also a good idea to have a spare intermittent movement available in the projection room, as well as a spare arc control motor mechanism. Never over-oil an arc control motor, as this causes breakdowns. The excess of oil saturates the motor windings and circuit wire insulation, as well as blackens the commutator, with complete failure as the result.

To purchase spare items may seem like making an unnecessary expenditure, but when an emergency arises and repairs must be made hurriedly, they will be worth a lot more than was paid for them. It must be remembered that these are abnormal times and we must take unusual means to meet them. One item that will become harder to get as time goes on is paper. Where this restriction will handicap theatre exhibitors is in the use of paper in toilet rooms. The largest use of paper in most theatres is for towels. Paper towels seem to litter the floor and even cause clogged plumbing because some patrons throw them about carelessly. Cloth towels, on the other hand, present the problem of laundry expense; moreover, they are germ carriers, and many people shun them. If paper towels become out of the question, because of shortage or cost, an electric drier can be installed. Such a device is contained within a beautifully finished cabinet, with air filters, small electric blower, heating coils and a time limit switch for regulating the duration of the air flow. It comes in several different types and models for surface mounting, wall recess installation, and with floor stand. Electric driers eliminates the need of the metal towel cabinet, waste towel receptacle, and conserves needed floor space, which adds to the general appearance of the washroom. They are dependable and provide a sanitary and low-cost hand and face drying service. For the emergency servicing and maintenance of chairs, it is well to be sure that a seat patching kit, and a few yards of suitable upholstery fabric, are on hand—also chair bolts and a can or two of patented cement for fastening chair standards to broken floors.

Proper method of installing hearing aid jack-boxes and also recirculating air duct at standee rail (see accompanying article).

Cross-section through chair standard showing proper method of attaching jack-box for hearing aid system.

METAL NOSINGS; SIGNS

For keeping screen deterioration at a minimum, a good cleaner should be bought, preferably as recommended by the manufacturer. For the repair of carpeting installations it is quite hard to obtain metal nosings of any kind. Hard rubber nosings, and also rubber and composition door saddles, are available, and while rubber is also a "priority" material, rubber products are so far less scarce than metal ones.

Electric signs are becoming hard to get, so now is the time to do all that can be done with the old sign, painting, repairing and refurbishing it. Every theatre operator should use foresight in ordering the parts, materials and replacements, no matter how small, necessary to keep his theatre in good operating condition, and that are available now. They may not be obtainable later on.

¶ Hearing Aid Jack-Boxes

IN THE INSTALLATION of chairs there are items that should be carefully considered besides laying out the proper radius, back-to-back spacing, and aisle width, in order to have the most serviceable job. And with any equipment, we should learn from experience so as to make the new installation just a little better than the previous one.

Even today one can observe difficulty in keeping the "plug-in" jack-boxes for the hearing aid systems properly fastened to the chair standards. The old way was to let the electrician on the job use his own notions about a mounting bracket for the jack-box. In most cases he would pick up some flat piece of metal, cut it to the proper size, bore a couple of holes through it, then use ordinary bolts or machine screws for fastening the brackets to the standard of the chair.

Not all chair standards are alike, however, with the result that the brackets would not fit properly and nine times out of ten would work loose because a rigid fastening could not be made. Another bad feature was that in tightening up the bolts or screws the heads would be burred, leaving small slivers of steel projecting, on which patrons would cut their clothing or hands. Also with the bolts or screws on the brackets, mischievous boys bent on destruction or just curiosity, would take off some of the jack-boxes by using a plier or screw driver and then take them home to see if any music could be produced from them.

ATTACHING BRACKET

This is exactly the same trouble that the seat bottoms gave when flat head wood screws were used to fasten the seat frame to the bottom plate. These wood screws would work loose by themselves under constant hard usage, or most likely by a prankster's hand, with the result that passing patrons would rip their clothing especially stockings, when the seats were in the up position. However, the latest seat bottoms on chairs now use special socket head cap screws that only a special wrench will fit. This simple improvement has entirely eliminated seat bottom trouble, especially the possibility of women tearing their stockings. As a result, these same socket head cap screws should only be used for the jack-box mounting bracket with a special hexagon shaped wrench that the owner or manager can keep.

When tightening the bracket to the standard make sure that the heads of these special screws are flush inside the screws in the bracket so that they do not project beyond the rear side. In determining the size and shape of the mounting bracket, first get the exact type and shape of the chair standard to be used. When the rib of the standard is round, make the inside face of the bracket also round so as to follow the contour as closely as possible. When the flange of the chair standard has square corners, the inside face of the bracket should be square also in order to have more stock for a rigid fastening.

In locating the position of the jack-box on the chair standard, make sure that it is as close as possible under the arm rest. In a lot of installations, these boxes were installed on the standards in line with the top of the seats, which gave annoying interference in plugging in the cable from the

FROM PARKING LOT TO CANDY COUNTER

AN EFFECTIVE "decoy" for the promotion of candy sales has been adopted by Balaban & Katz at a number of their Chicago theatres where free parking is provided. Formerly the check given out by the parking lot attendant was stamped by the cashier when the motorist-patron purchased a ticket. This system has been changed to one requiring that the patron have his parking lot check stamped at the candy counter in the lobby. Thus is the horse led to water—and quite often, it is found, he "drinks."

POPCORN LOCATION FOR TWO-FOLD EFFECT

WITH CANDY dispensing facilities consisting only in automatic machines, the Florida theatre in Tampa has a Manley popcorn machine located where the doorman can double as ticket-taker and popcorn salesman. At the same time, this location prevents the appetizing sight and odor of fresh, expertly seasoned popcorn from escaping the incoming patron. And few people who like popcorn at all (and who doesn't?) can easily deny such temptation when it's showtime.

A LINE O' LAW OR TWO

Meaning of "Custom and Usage"

By RUDOLPH ALLEN
Member New York Bar

FROM time to time there arises in the ordinary course of events certain unusual legal phraseology which, on its face, appears to be strange and incomprehensible but, when analyzed from a logical point of view, becomes readily understandable.

Thus, for example, there is a phrase known as "Custom and Usage". These words are synonymous. The word "custom" is defined as "according to or conforming to established custom". The phrase "custom and usage" arises ordinarily in that department of law affecting contracts.

One may rightfully ask what have custom and usage to do with a valid and binding contract. The answer is: nothing whatsoever, providing, of course, that the contract is clear, plain, and without any doubts or misunderstandings. There are, however, many contracts entered into in good faith where a few loose ends are left flying in the breeze. It is in these instances where proof of custom and usage are permitted in order to eliminate the inconsistencies and provide a just determination.

In order that a custom may be admitted to qualify a contract, it must be established, uniform, general and known. It must, in addition, be certain and reasonable, continuing from time immemorial without interruption, and must not be opposed to or calculated to violate the law.

Custom and usage cannot be introduced to destroy the effect of a binding agreement. Thus, in the case of Harris vs. H. W. Gossard, and Co., 185 N. Y. S. 861, an actress sued an advertising company for unauthorized use of her name and picture for advertising purposes. The defendant tried to show that it was the custom for actresses to permit their names and photographs to be used for advertising purposes. The court held that the contention of the defendant was not tenable, since to allow the force of such a custom would be to destroy the personal privacy and rights of individuals.

It is true that a custom cannot vary the legal construction of a specific contract nor the legal obligations arising under it, but where an ambiguity exists, and the intention of the parties cannot be readily ascertained, then it is permissible to introduce a custom for the purpose of clarifying the issues and removing any possible existing doubts.

There are two interesting cases which present the problem of when a custom may be used in a specific situation. In the case of Wilson vs. Hitchcock, 174 N. Y. S. 673, an actor sued a producer for two week's compensation, and at the trial, the actor was permitted to prove that it was the custom in the theatrical business where employment is indefinite as to time, that in the event of a termination of the employment, either party must give two week's notice.

On the other hand, the case of Hart vs. Court, 144 N. Y. S. 627, which was a case involving an action brought by a theatrical manager against an author: In this instance, the author entered into a written contract with the manager, giving to him a license to produce a play within a period of six months. At the same time, the author licensed the same play for the same period to other producers. The manager contended that it was the custom in the theatre that a license to produce a play carried with it an exclusive right to such a production, and, therefore, the author violated the agreement. The court, however, decided in favor of the author, contending that the agreement was not ambiguous, and, therefore, the custom could not be introduced, since it would have the effect of creating, instead of eliminating, an ambiguity, and, in doing so, would be writing a new contract for the parties.

In conclusion, let it be said that the law will read into a contract an existing custom, providing that such custom does not disrupt a true meeting of the minds of the parties.

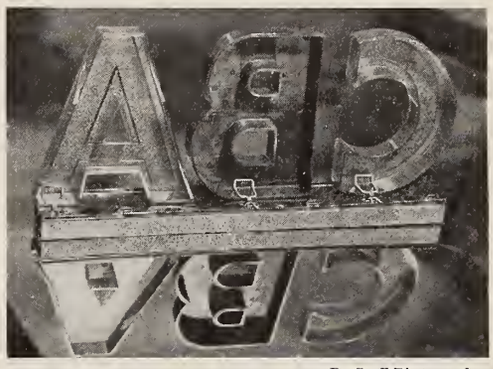
SIGNS and SELLING

New Frame and Clip-on Letters For Inside Attraction Displays

THE PROBLEM of providing for really effective coming attraction advertising inside the theatre has been getting more and more attention. The conventional display cases along the side walls of an inner lobby or foyer probably will always have their place, but it is to a large degree impossible to overcome their inherent disadvantages of location outside the natural line of vision of outgoing patrons, while neither lithos or special posters are adapted to quick conveyance of the message, whereas the vast majority of the prospective readers are on the move.



For some time growing recognition of the problem has brought about increased use of marquee-type attraction advertising equipment inside the theatre; now the Wagner Sign Service of Chicago, has developed letters and also special frame and glass panel equipment for this very purpose, and augmenting these facilities are the star photo transparencies which this company introduced some months ago. The whole combination provides a convenient, flexible and variable means of putting a dynamic kind of coming attraction display "right in front of their eyes."

The letters are of the translucent plastic type which Wagner began to manufacture this fall; to the original 10-inch plastic letters, available in a number of colors, 4-inch letters have been added. Both are slotted for use on standard Wagner marquee frames, but a new means of mounting them has been developed for inside applications. The letters can be readily attached, with clips, to spring steel strips along the top or bottom of the new inside glass panel frame (similar strips could be tacked to a wall anywhere, of course, for use of these letters in various kinds of advertising and announcements). For attachment at the top of a frame, the clips are applied to the bottom of the letter, so that it stands self-supported; for attachment along the lower edge, the letters are suspended with clips at the top.

The inside-type attraction frame supports an opal glass panel and has rods for mounting the letters just as on a standard frame. The new frame, however, is open at the top and bottom, providing light behind letters clipped along the top or bottom, so that the full color values of the transparent letters is realized. The frames with their glass panels are made in 4-foot units and may be joined together to make continuous panels of various lengths, with only a 3/8-inch obstruction between sections. Behind the glass panel is placed a row of lamps (normally 15-watt) on close centers for uniform illumination of the Applied inside, the star photo transparency frames may be mounted on wall studs. After being used in a coming attraction display in the lobby, foyer or standee, the photo transparencies can be used in the current attraction advertising on the marquee.

Incidentally, the illumination of an inside attraction panel is itself a source of light for general lobby illumination, reducing the wattage required in other sources. With the clip type of mounting, moreover, the plastic letters can be readily placed in front of light coves.

Putting Promotion Values into the Marquee and Sign

IT ISN'T OFTEN that a theatre, because of local zoning ordinances, must deny itself the advantages of full-scale promotional equipment out front, and when such restrictions are encountered, it takes a bit of ingenuity on the part of the marquee and sign designer to avoid contriving something too static to be more than a rain shed.

Among the recent marquee and attraction advertising installations noted in this account is one meeting just such prohibitions (see picture on following page). This equipment was recently installed on the Lincoln theatre in Miami, Fla., Wometco house managed by Sonny Shepherd. Designed by Robert E. Collins, Miami architect, and constructed by Balton & Sons of Memphis, Tenn., the marquee fascias on three sides carry the name of the theatre in letters over 5 feet high. The attraction boards are placed over the entrance.

The marquee framework is made of structural steel, electrically welded, and all metal facing is 18-gauge enamelling iron fused with three coats of porcelain enamel. In recesses at the top and bottom of the Above this bottom border and below the top border is a continuous strip of white opal glass 12 inches high. This lower glass is set with face mouldings so that glass may be removed from the front, and the top glass with moulding is applied from the interior of the sign for removal from behind the letters.

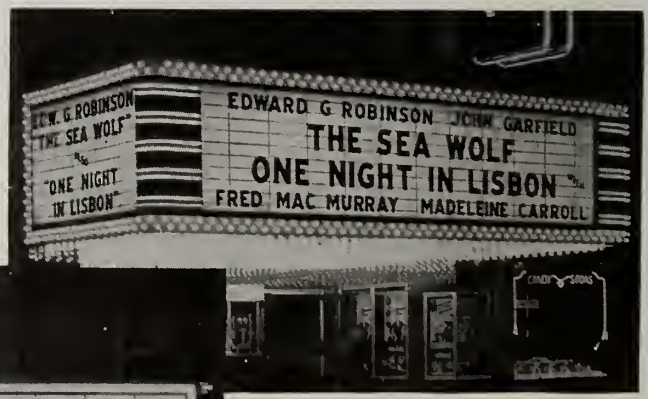
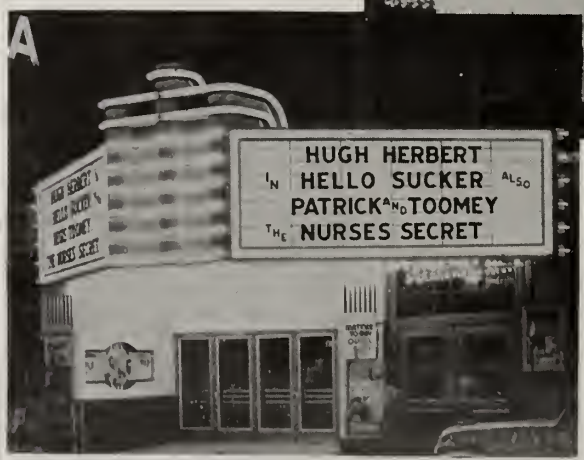
Behind each row of this glass is a galvanized shadow box fabricated of 24-gauge metal, the interior of which has been painted three coats of white duluxe. In this shadow box are four strokes of red neon tubing.



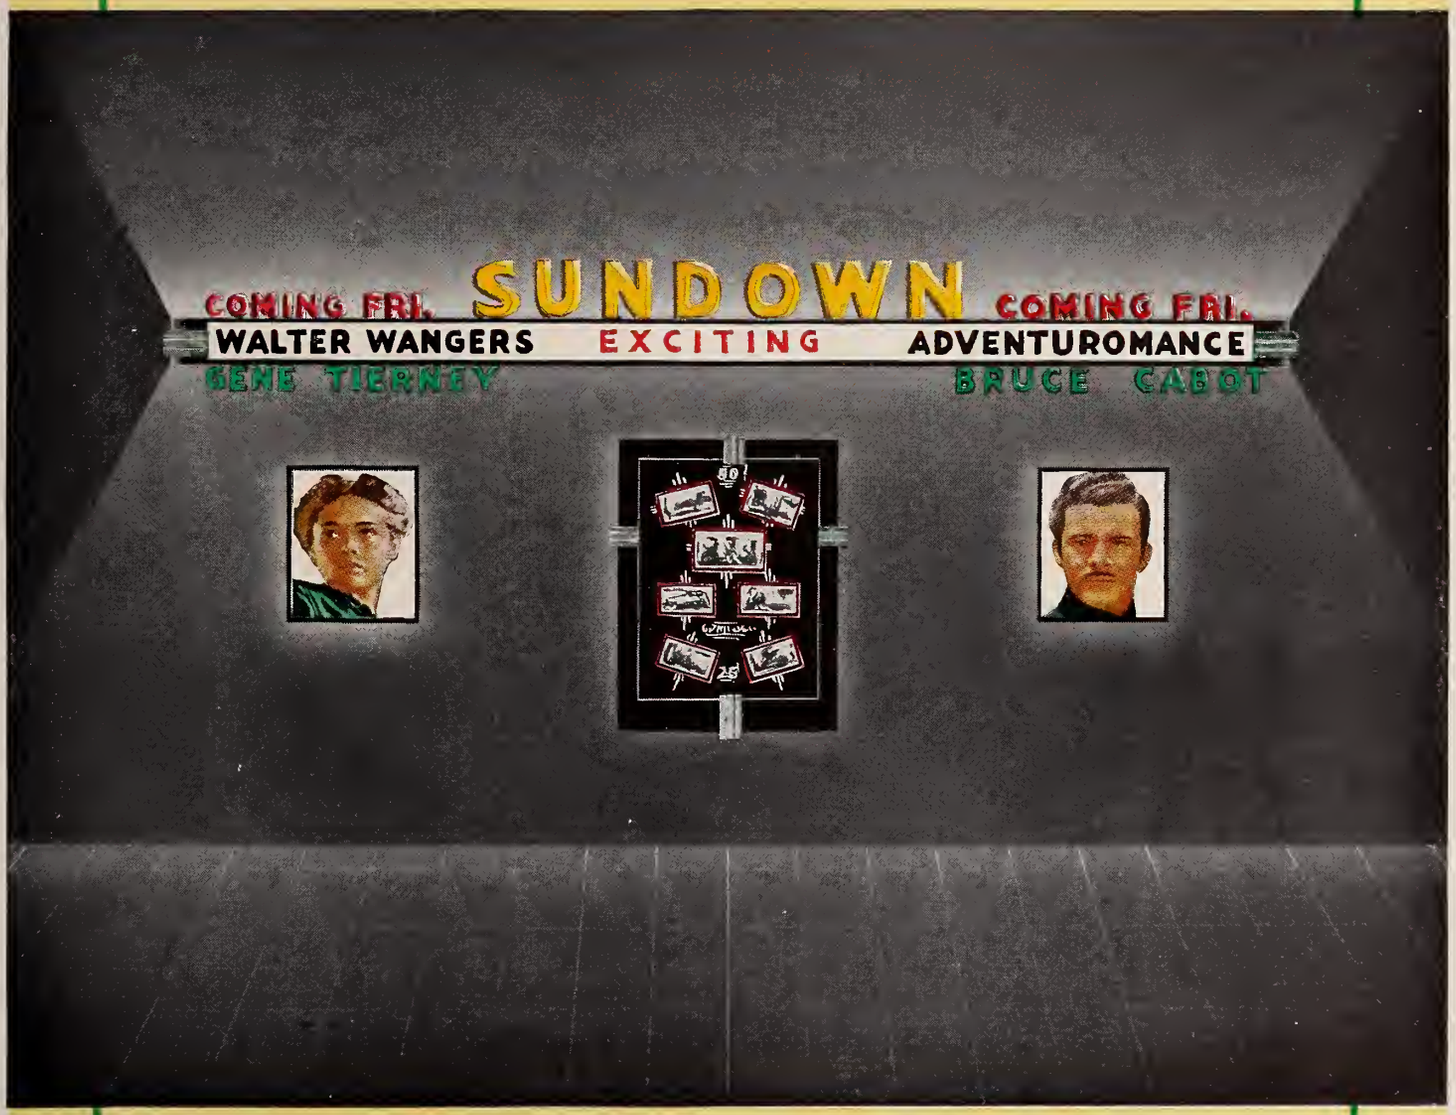
The center panel of this sign is of 18-inch porcelain enamel panels in which are recessed, flush with face, letters reading "Lincoln Theatre" across the front as shown on photos. Each of these letters are equipped with S-11 twinkler lamps spaced 2¾-inch on center, and are connected to a five-point flasher to form a twinkling effect. The upper case type of these letters are 26 inches high, and the lower case 14 inches high. All transformers used in the sign are of a high power factor.



The entire soffit of the marquee is formed of porcelain enamel panels approximately 2 feet wide into which are recess channels for neon tubing. The front edge of these panels are rolled to shape as shown in the photo, and all flanges are welded. The soffit is of bone white color. Into each recess in the soffit is installed a single stroke of white fluorescent tubing.

New marquee and sign equipment of the Lincoln theatre in Miami, Fla.

In decided contrast are the new marquees of the Avalon and Granada theatres in Detroit, also pictured. Both marquees were built by the Long Sign Company, Detroit. With a simple rectangular marquee mainly devoted to Adler attraction advertising panels, the Avalon uses two sizes of letters—10- and 16-inch—for combination in a typographical style employing, so the photograph indicates, plenty of white space for legibility.



Avalon (right) and Granada theatres, Detroit.

The Granada marquee has more design and lighting features and, also equipped with Adler sectional type attraction panels and letters, uses only a 10-inch font. The copy shown, however, follows a typographical rather than a "label" treatment, with liberal white space. The attraction panels depart somewhat from the usual in having a border.

WAGNER'S SENSATIONAL NEW PLASTIC LETTERS—and TRANSPARENCIES DO Double Duty

USED FOR INSIDE DISPLAY

Wagner Transparencies and PLASTIC Letters do double-duty for inside-the-lobby display as well as outside on the marquee. The illustration above shows Transparencies mounted in shadow boxes and PLASTIC Letters used three ways—(1) mounted in frames—(2) as "standee" letters (on top of frame), and (3) suspended from bottom of frame. The same Letters and Transparency Frames are slotted for outside display in marquee on Wagner standard frames. Against an illuminated background these beautiful PLASTIC Letters have the brilliancy of Neon. Available in 4-inch and 10-inch size in Opaque Black, Translucent Red, Amber, Green and Blue.

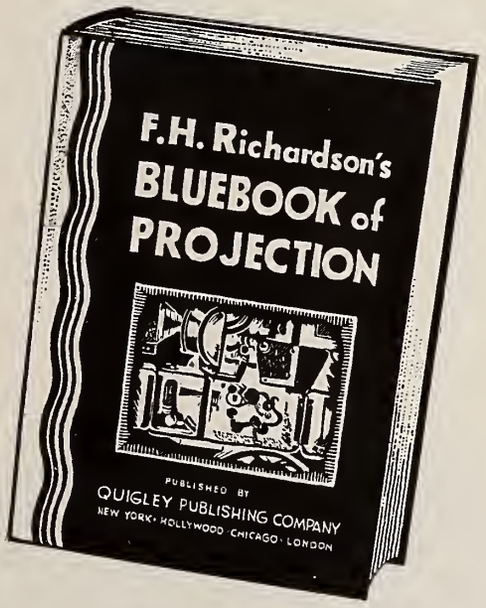
A GOOD TIME TO IMPROVE SEATING

THE CURTAILMENT of construction activity during the emergency period should not be an invitation to the exhibitor to forget about improving his theatre. One of the items which can receive his attention and if necessary be taken care of adequately during this period is that of the seating. The seating may be considered to be inadequate if the following conditions prevail:

1. Inefficient arrangement of the seats in plan.
2. Floor slope which is inadequate or improperly shaped.
3. When the size of the motion picture image and its lighting is not suited to the basic dimensions and form of the seating plan.
4. Chairs themselves which are in poor condition.
5. Use of chairs widths of less than 20 inches for more than 20% of the seating capacity.
6. Inadequate back to back chair spacing. Less than 32 inches for orchestra seating and 34 inches for upper level seating. These minimums being adequate only for the chair backs of 1½ inches maximum thickness or if the chair backs are especially shaped to allow for leg room where the thickness is greater.



NEW CHAIR ADVANTAGES

Where the arrangement of the seats and the floor slope is inadequate and changes are proposed, a most effective job can be achieved if new chairs were to be purchased. This is so because the shape of the chair standards at the floor and the slope of the back of the chair has to be in accordance with the slope of the floor and the level of the picture image. This does not preclude the possibility of reusing existing chairs if they are in good condition with a new seating arrangement and floor slope. Some of the chair standards may have to be changed or shimmed to conform to the new requirements.

Such a reuse of existing chairs should not be attempted without the advice of a seating expert or competent theatre designer. Excessive shimming of the chair standards might result in changing the distance of the top of the cushion of the chair to the floor sufficiently to destroy the comfort originally provided for in the chair design.

An existing seating arrangement may be improved in many cases where the motion picture image is either too large or too small or where the screen image is insufficiently or excessively illuminated. Although the image is rarely excessively illuminated, such a condition would render the seats closest to the image less desirable as would an image of excessive size. An image insufficiently illuminated and insufficient in size renders the seats furthest from it less desirable. It is advisable to use a motion picture image size which comes as close to being a dimension which would equal the maximum viewing distance from the image to the last row of seats divided by 5.2.

The average width of all the chairs should not be less than 20 inches, with 21 inches being the recommended average width. This recommendation suggests that very few of the chairs be as little as 19 inches wide and that the bulk of the chairs be 21 inches wide leaving a small proportion of 20 inch and 22 inch chairs. It is always desirable to put the narrowest chairs at the aisles where freedom for arm movements exists. In a seating plan where staggering of seats is depended upon for clearness of vision, it is desirable to use maximum width chairs—throughout the portion of the seating where staggering is used. The narrower chairs should be used in the portions of the seating which are least desired by the patron for viewing the picture; they are usually not crowded.

Installing Hearing Aid Jack Boxes

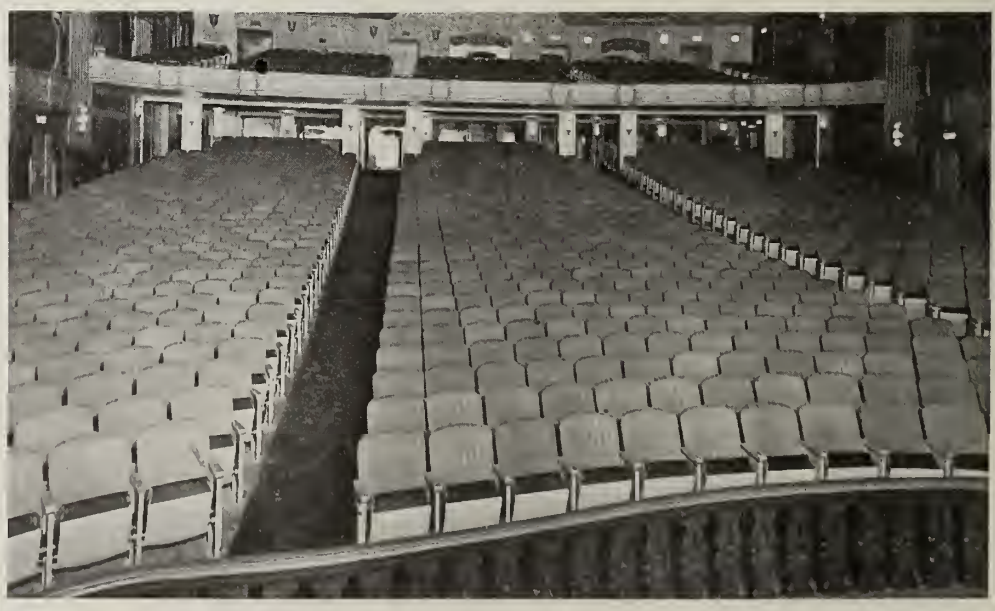
headphones, and also when the seat was lifted or lowered.

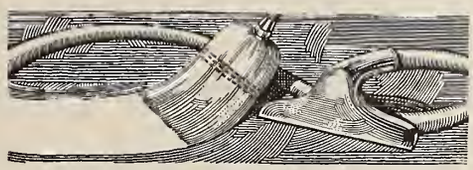


When running in the armored cable from the floor box to the jack-box on the standard, make sure that it is long enough to reach easily the jack-box near the arm rest. In many cases this cable is figured incorrectly, with the result that when the jack-box has to be lifted to clear the seat line, it is too short and a terriffic strain is put on it. When this happens there is a very strong possibility that the cable will pull out entirely or cause a loose connection at the terminal. This cable should run neatly along the flange of the chair standard with clips or strong tape holding it in place, instead of dangling at or near the seat hinge, which may cause interference with the operation of the seat or with the comfort of the patron. These little precautions taken in installation will add greatly to the efficiency and practicability of the hearing aid system and also prove more beneficial to patrons who depend on this means of enjoying the show.

Preferred Placement Of Recirculating Ducts

SPEAKING of equipment involving seating: It is a good idea to install the recirculating duct up and directly to the rear of the backs of chairs in the rows at the standee rail, instead of ending it at the floor under the seats or in the standee area itself. When the recirculating grilles are terminated in the floor directly under the seat, the rush of air into these grilles will cause great annoyance and discomfort to the patrons. With the recirculating ducts extended a little upwards and shaped to fit the slope of the chair backs and then tapped through the standee rail, this annoyance and discomfort will be entirely eliminated.

This method is more efficient also, as it picks up the cold air which enters through the doors at the standee area before it has a chance to reach the last rows of chairs.



Another bad feature of having recirculating grilles in the floor is that they pick up dust, dirt and foreign bodies which in time will affect the proper operation of the recirculating system.

HINTS OF THE DAY AND SEASON

By SAMUEL BRAVERMAN

THIS IS NOT an I-told-you-so (they make me mad, too). It is simply another suggestion (following the one we made in these columns a few issues back) that you buy now, if you can, what you are going to need. Now, of course, shortages are greater than they were a few months ago, and prices for the most part are higher.

SAMUEL BRAVERMAN

There is a connection between shortages and higher prices, but not always a direct one. But whatever the cause, the higher price has to be paid because the seller can afford to wait until he gets it.

It is sometimes difficult to see why a certain material or chemical should be scarce because of military activities. Soap, for example, shouldn't require materials needed for defense. But good soap contains oils that we procure from other lands, and the ships that used to bring it are defense goods. As a result, soap is up 100%—when you can get it. Another instructive example is roach powder. This contains sodium fluoride, which is also used in flexing steel. So roaches multiply because we are building battleships!

Some carbon tetrachloride is available, but a fraction of what is needed.

And so, if you have not already done so, we suggest that you make up a comprehensive list of supplies that you will need over a period of, say six months (certainly not less), and see how many items you can buy. Don't count on getting substitutes later on.

WINTER CLEANING

Few parts of the United States can be sure of going through the winter months without at least some snow, and most sections have plenty of it. By this time the marquee roof should have been well cleared of any leaves, papers and other debris that have been blown on it during the past six or seven months; if your's hasn't been so cleaned, it should be as soon as possible, for the job becomes a mean one after the first snowfall.

Marquee hangers should be checked for rust, and also for firm anchorage to the building. Make sure that drains are clean, and that the roof is absolutely free of any condition that might develop later this winter into leaks. The flashing should also be carefully inspected, for snow is worse than rain as a cause of water seepage behind flashing, and water leaking through behind the flashing not only gets into the building, discoloring and loosening plaster, but it rots the insulation of the marquee wiring.

Wood frames of doors, and also of exposed wood display frames, should be well protected by paint or varnish so as to be impervious to moisture, which will cause them to swell and split. Also, check all door weatherstripping for tightness. And make sure door checks work firmly.

Any extensive cleaning of glass outdoors should be done before severely cold weather sets in. For regular glass cleaning during the cold months (even though it isn't used at other times), a really authentic glass cleaner is the best means of getting a good job done quickly. There are many kinds of glass cleaners, however, and some are made of little more than water and dye. A genuine glass cleaner contains a non-freezing solvent and a rust preventative as well as alcohol and similar agents to effect the cleansing.

PROTECTIVE MEASURES

▶Many of you will be putting up holiday trimmings. We have seen some very unhappy results of this, simply because proper precautionary measure were not taken. The first rule is to flame-proof any display Christmas trees, branches, etc. (your local fire regulations may require this); the second is to place a fire extinguisher near enough to the display to be handy for quick action without being too close to be cut off from it by flames. A soda and acid type of extinguisher is all right for protection here.

▶So as to prevent your liquid soaps and disinfectants from atmospheric conditions that cause them to disintegrate, store them during winter months only where the temperature will not go below 40°. And remember in this connection that outside walls get substantially colder than other parts of the room.

TAKING STOCK

. . . A Simplified Theatre Equipment Inventory

By PRESTON G. TUCKERMAN

AT THE CLOSE of each business year most concerns take an inventory of their "stock and fixtures," figure costs, depreciation, and selling prices, so that they know where they stand.

In a theatre the "stock" for sale is of course entertainment. The "fixtures" are a complex array of equipment and furnishings for selling tickets, providing seats and many other accommodations for patrons, projecting sound film on the screen, or working a show on the stage, as well as keeping the building lighted, heated or cooled, and otherwise maintained.

Since the defense program has gathered momentum we are all finding costs rising sharply while a great many materials threaten to become unobtainable. This should mean to every theatre owner that "stock taking" is particularly important at this time. Spare equipment may prove valuable in another theatre on a circuit and equipment in service should be carefully maintained and kept in good working order under home-office supervision.

Preston G. Tuckerman

For this purpose the writer has devised for the Shea-Chain, Inc., a simplified inventory form, two copies of which are required; one to be sent in to the home office, the other to remain at the theatre. These copies must be identical so that our reference numbers agree in pertaining to the same equipment item listing.

This inventory is in chart form and consists of ten major headings under which are grouped classified equipment items numbered up to 500 including ample spaces for the listing of spare equipment.

The function of the column headed Location is to place equipment items of the same classification in their respective location in the theatre building while retaining their listing under the proper grouping; for instance, Exhaust Fans come under Heating & Ventilating and are to be found in the booth, lamphouses, restrooms or auditorium and should be so listed under one another showing respective locations. Filled in Location column pertaining to Seating illustrates this feature.

The column headings to the right of Location up to Revised are for the purpose of obtaining an accurate description of each equipment item listed and should be filled in under as many of the column headings as are applicable to the particular item; for instance, Lamphouse No. 1—Quantity—1, Location—booth, Make—(name of manufacturer), Model—D, Type—Suprex, (for example), Serial No.—2901, Amps—65, Condition—good. Size, Finish, Color, Material, Volts or Watts would be left blank in this instance, but would apply to many other items, such as reels, lenses, seats, carpet, lighting fixtures, motors, drapes, furniture, etc.

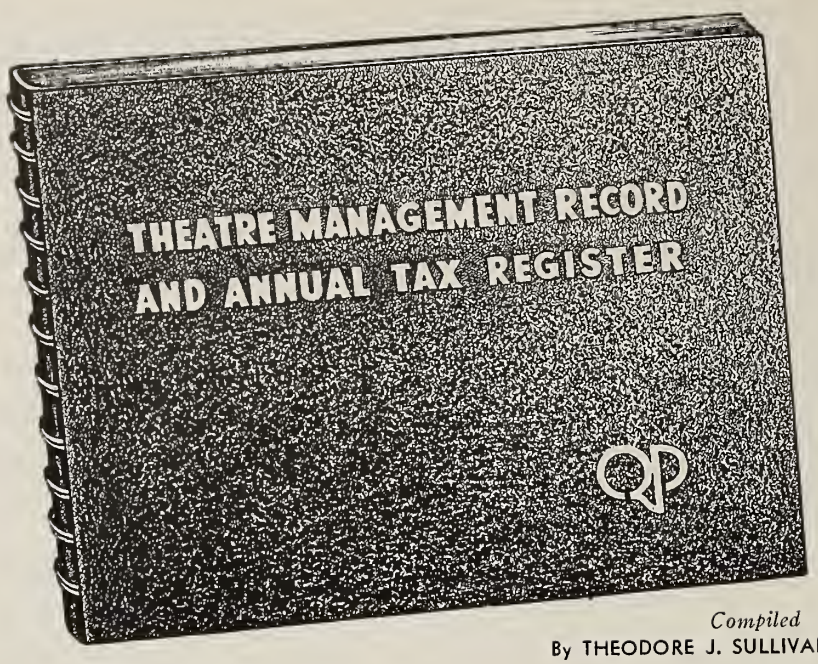
At the end of each group of equipment items there is a space provided for the listing of spare equipment. It is important that this spare equipment be listed only under its proper classification; that is, spare standards under Seating, spare lamphouses under Projection Booth, even though they happen to be stored or "located" in the cellar; spare fans under Heating & Ventilating, etc.,

Drawing indicating pocket and theatre name tab of back cover.

The function of the extreme right-hand column headed Revised, is to note changes that may be made from time to time, such as a screen replaced, projectors overhauled, new lighting fixtures installed, etc. A brief note in this column may state "reconditioned" and show the date; or, for example, "transferred—see Shea's Erie." This column is also to be used either to refer to lengthier notes made on several pages of Memoranda provided in the back of the book, or to a particular invoice billing a replacement, and the date, so that a complete description of less simple transactions is afforded. There is a pocket bound into the inside back cover for such papers, as well as for seating plans, ticket samples and any other reference matter that a manager may want to keep handy.

Under present market conditions we feel that a column headed Estimated Value would result largely in guess-work on the inventory taker's part, so our policy is to set up such values at the home-office when an occasion, such as a transfer of any equipment, arises.

We also do not consider it feasible to record such fluctuating items as arc carbons, lamps, tickets and janitor's supplies. We keep maintenance stocks of paints, cleaning materials, our standardized carpet and stationery forms, etc. in warehouses at strategically located points under a perpetual inventory control system.



The record pages spread across the bind of the book, as indicated in the accompanying reproduction. This arrangement gives the book an opening right-hand page, which is devoted to general data on the theatre in question. The following information is

PUMPING DOWN COOLING PLANT

A note of warning should be sounded to those operators who haven't got around to the problem of pumping down their refrigeration system for the winter. It is safe to say that no small number have not put their air-conditioning systems in proper winter condition yet. This calls for the pumping down and storing of your refrigerant in the receiver over the winter months, and unless you do this the refrigerant will be lost through the seal of your compressor, through the stems of the various shut off valves, and through small leaks that normally aren't detectable when the system is in operation. When it comes time to purchase refrigerant, if you can't show just cause, you may not get it! Refrigerant will be available only to those who lost their charges through accident.

LYLE TURNER is contemplating the erection of a new theatre in Lodi, Wis.

The Hollywood theatre at Estherville, Ia., has been reopened by MARION F. PARKINSON and JACK MILLER, after reconditioning and the installation of new heating and projection equipment.

GERALD GALLAGHER has purchased the El Cajon theatre in El Cajon, Calif., from BURTON JONES.

Fire of undetermined origin gutted the Ritz theatre at Dublin, Ga., causing a loss said to be in excess of $40,000.

Warner Theatres is expending $20,000 to redecorate and re-equip the Highland theatre, Chicago.

CECIL and FRANK BUDD, who recently took over the Anita theatre in Anita, Ia., have opened it after modernizing.

WILLIAM SYUFY of the Rita theatre in Vallejo, Calif., will erect a new house there at an estimated cost of $80,000, to be known as the Vallejo Family Theatre.

The Sterling theatre in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was formally reopened on Thanksgiving Day, with GEORGE HORLACHER as manager, and TOM DEVEY returning as house manager. The Comerford house was completely modernized at a reported cost of $50,000.

ELMER SVENDSEN, who recently reopened the Roxy theatre at Alta, Ia., after a remodeling and redecorating, has announced several new features including "Family Nights," and admission by corn as a Chamber of Commerce enterprise.

CLYDE HANEY, formerly of the Ashley Theatre Company's Orpheum theatre in Madison, Wis., has been named manager of Fox's Myers theatre in Janesville.

Altec has given W. R. WIDENER, Philadelphia supervisor, leave of absence to do specialized defense work for the Western Electric Company.

F. H. Richardson's COMMENT

A Step Nearer to Three-Dimension Effect

THE STATUS of three-dimensional pictures bothers Ken Pascoe, who projects pictures at the Nordic theatre in Marquette, Mich. Although Brother Pascoe has belonged to the profession only a year, his letter shows an active interest in what is going on. He writes:

F. H. R.

"Although this is my first letter to you, it is not because I am having trouble in my projection room, and neither because I wish to register a kick or raise a fuss about bad cues and starting leaders. I have been doing this work for only a year, but just the same I am not a greenhorn—or am I?

"Recently I read an article pertaining to third-dimensional motion pictures which have apparently become almost perfected in Russia. [We should think Russia had far more urgent business to attend to.—F. H. R.] The article stated that the illusion of depth was created by the use of a different type of film. By that I mean, each frame is divided in half, with an image for both left and right eyes.

"The actual filming of these pictures, the article stated, was done with a device known as a 'stereo-nozzle'. It consists of two mirrors placed at an angle in front of the object being filmed. Both mirrors receive the same image and record it on the split frames.

"These films are projected with an ordinary projector, but they use a special grid made of transparent opaque bars in front of the screen. If I explained the article fully I am afraid I would go on for pages, however. I understand a theatre has been erected in Moscow where they are now presenting a third-dimensional film, 'Land of Youth'.

"Has any work been done over here in this progressive country of ours to perfect depth in motion pictures? I warrant you will agree with me, Dad, when I say we will not have to worry about television if they do perfect third-dimensional pictures.

"As I said before, I have no kicks to make. My projection room has fine equipment and although it is not all up-to-the-minute, it gives very satisfactory results. I work for a swell company which denies nothing we need. The fellows who write in and tell about their obsolete equipment and shortage of new parts have my sympathy.

"By the way, what is this mercury vapor lamp I read about which is to be used for projection? Will it replace the arcs?

"I enjoy very much the pictures of the other chaps' 'offices' and hope they will keep coming in."

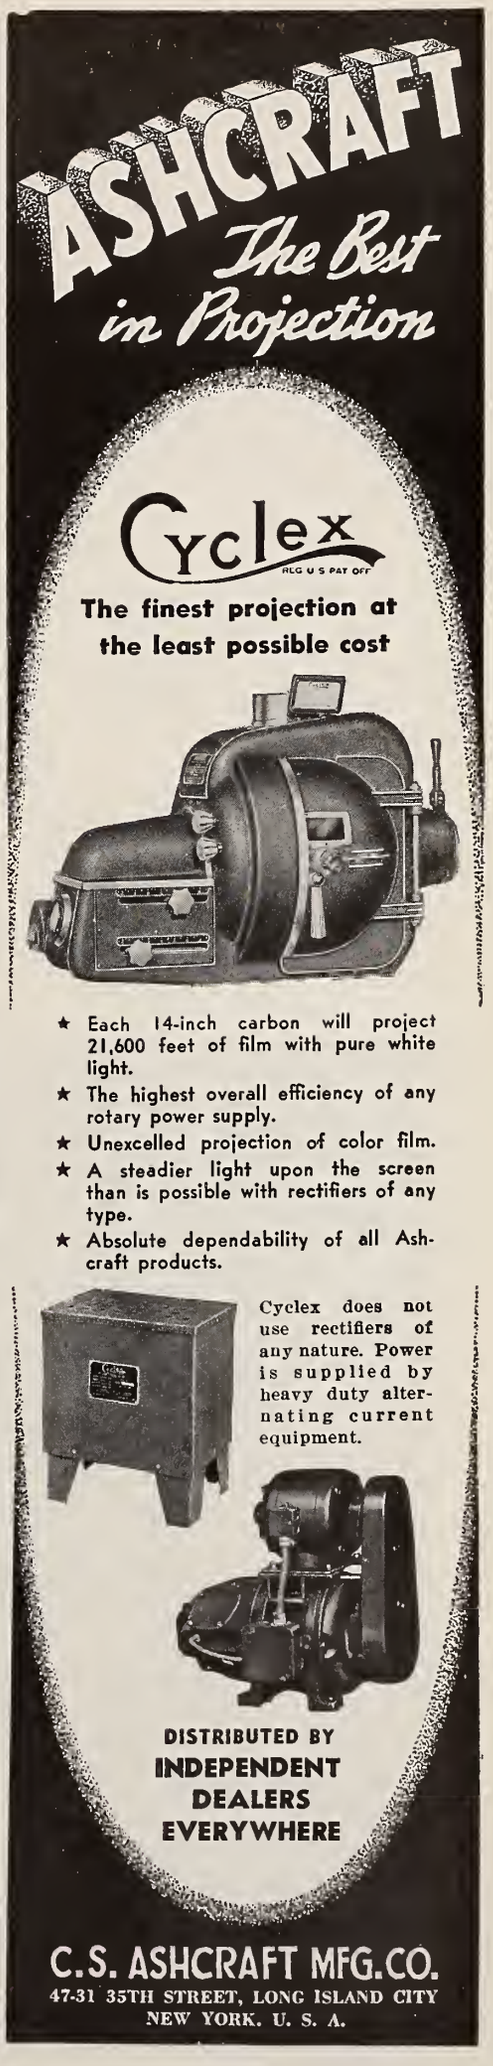
I have asked Dr. A. N. Goldsmith, consulting engineer and a past-president of the SMPE, who is in a position to know of the significant work on stereoscopic motion pictures, to give us a little account of developments in this field. He responds:

"It is not easy to answer your questions because so little is known in this country about the work that goes on in Russia. However, I shall try.

"Question No. 1: Has any work been done over here in this progressive country to prove depth in motion pictures?

"Answer: There have been a number attempts to increase depth of field (generally called depth of focus) in the United States. Only two of them are based on correct scientific and photographic principles.

"One method, used by Cameraman Gregg Toland in filming 'Citizen Kane,' was to employ very short focus lenses in the camera and to stop these down in order to get greater depth. This method secures additional depth, but has two disadvantages. Using short-focus wide-angle lenses, the perspective of the picture, as projected in the theatre, is over emphasized—that is, everything is made to look too large in the foreground, and to shrink too rapidly in the background. The picture therefore looks somewhat unnatural in this respect.



"Furthermore, when people walk from the front to the back of the set, they expand too rapidly as they approach on the screen, and the effect is not natural. In addition, stopping down the camera lens requires an excessive amount of light on the stage during photography, which inconveniences the actors, and even then a contrasty, harsh negative is generally obtained.

"A second method of obtaining depth of field is the recently announced IR System. This is free from the objections mentioned above and does give so much depth of field that practically universal-focus pictures can be obtained under most practical conditions. The method cannot be described in a brief statement, but involves in general photographing the entire stage in sections from front to back, with refocusing of the camera lens for the photography of each section, the entire process taking place within the time of each single exposure.

"Of course, three-dimensional movies can never be satisfactory unless there is real depth of field, so that everything from front to back of the set is in focus. As you will gather from these comments, the problem has really been solved and will have its good effect on the future of motion pictures.

"Question 2: What is the mercury vapor lamp to be used for projection? Will it replace the arcs?

"Answer 2: The mercury high-pressure arc has the advantage of steadiness, freedom from replacement of carbons, absence of feed mechanism, and so on. It has the disadvantages that fairly costly lamps must be replaced at intervals, that water cooling is required to prevent the lamp tube from melting, that high voltages are involved, and that the color of the light is not pure white and therefore does not do full justice to color pictures (the bright reds being shifted somewhat toward brown). On the whole, the carbon arcs seem likely to hold their own unless some radical improvement is made in the mercury arcs."

Friend Daughter Appoints Herself Reporter-at-Large

FRIEND DAUGHTER has been gallavantin' around through the West and South—Colorado, Tennessee, et cetera —and I have received a letter from her, parts of which are likely to interest most of you. She says:

"We in the East think we have something to rave about in the Pennsylvania Turnpike—and it is nice, too!—but as far as speed is concerned it seems to be just a piker. I drove along out in the West with my foot down to 60 or 70, or whatever, for hours at a time. No matter how fast you go, everyone on the road seems to pass you. Most of the states out in the West have speed limits of 60 miles an hour—some have none at all!

"When I got to Mt. Carmel, Ill., I found that they have a very nice little theatre there somewhat comparable to our own little pet, the Pix, in White Plains. It was closed, but the manager was kind enough to open it up for us (with the exception of the projection room, which was locked, with the key in the absent projectionist's pocket). Seats were very comfortable, lights unusually nice and of a brilliancy that would please you. The thing that took my eye, though, was a 'crying room', which I have never happened to encounter before in the many theatres I have been in. This was up next to the projection room—a small room all encased in glass and sound proof. Inside were three comfortable chairs. Here mothers can see the picture, and babies can howl as much as they want to. I was with June Holderer, and I wish you could have seen her face, for you know she is a member of various motion picture councils who firmly insist that no picture should be viewed by a child under 8 years old!

"Theodore Coleman is the proprietor of this theatre, which seats 700. Mr. Coleman runs single features except on Monday nights. He says double features are a jinx to him (thank goodness). Prices range from 27c for adults (3c tax), to 9c for children under 12.

"That evening I saw 'Hold Back The Dawn,' in a small town called Dyersburg, Tenn. I talked to the manager, John Bagswell, who took me up to the projection room for a look-around. When I heard the working projector running, I was amazed at the picture which was being placed on the screen. The picture was nicely lighted and quite steady, but the projector sounded like a coffee grinder. Mr. Bagswell informed me that he had sent for parts last June and still had not received them. I wish you could have seen the sprockets on a part he had been loaned. You would not have to magnify the hooks in order to demonstrate, as you used to do in one of your lectures. Mr. Bagswell was not using the loaned part, but an old one he had. Seems to me, defense or no defense, there is no excuse for holding up parts for six months—but other exhibitors and projectionists had better take warning and put in orders now.

Mr. Bagswell said business was exceptionally good, for the reason that cotton crops are better than in years, and prices the highest ever. His theatre, the American, has one projectionist to a shift. If I recall correctly, there are two theatres in the town, and three projectionists for the two theatres, which belong to the same circuit. The projectionists are Gerry Babrick, Ray Latherlan and Gene Irvin.

"The next day, just outside of Fort Smith, Ark., I waited in line till 16 cars were chained bumper to bumper and hauled, through water that came up on my feet in the car, by a huge tractor. I talked to a farmer who said the water from the Arkansas river had come in the night, suddenly. His barn was full of baled hay and his fields full of corn. When the water went down the hay was so sour,

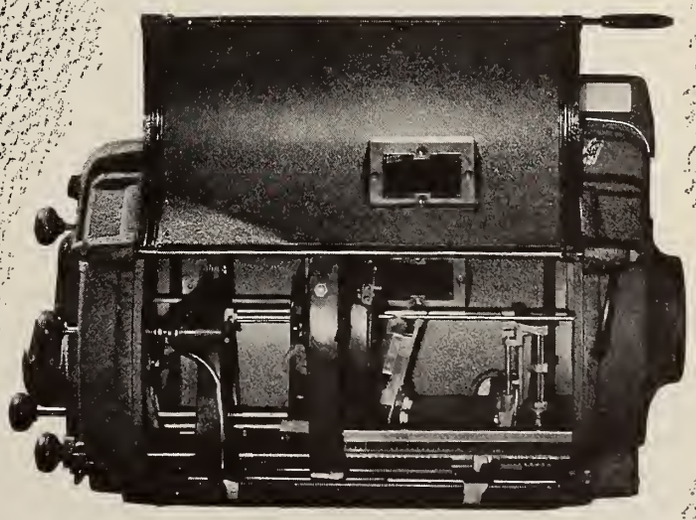
WHICH YOU NEVER GET!



—if you are using low intensity projection arc lamps

Millions of dollars are spent annually by Hollywood producers to put onto film all the fine qualities possible. But full appreciation of these qualities cannot be realized unless you do your part. Pictures today are produced under lights possessing certain peculiar properties and cannot be satisfactorily reproduced excepting with projected light having the identical characteristics. Without such snow-white light as that projected by the pictures are dim, flat and lacking in color beauty. The tremendous possibilities of the film are there, you have paid for them, but you are not "cashing in".

Ask about this low-cost, one-kilowatt projection lamp which has been designed for moderate sized theatres with screens up to 18 feet in width. See it demonstrated in your own theatre. See how it doubles your screen brilliance as against the dim, yellow light of your old low intensities. See how beautiful colorea pictures really are when projected with snow-white light. See how little it affects overall operating costs, but how importantly it affects the box office. Thousands know the name Simplex to be a guarantee that you get the best. Resolve today to have better grosses by having better projection than your competitors.

CUT CARBON COSTS 10% to 25%

Droll processed carbons provide a milled male end and a drilled female end. You simply join two of them and clip with a sleeve of pure copper, which matches exactly the copper coating on the carbon and which is consumed without altering light quality or intensity. When a carbon is burned to about 3" it is fitted onto the next carbon. No dirt, delay, work, or machine to buy. Burn every inch of every carbon.

Available in: Negatives, 6 mm x 9", 6.5 mm x 9", 7 mm x 9", and Positives, 6 mm x 12", 7 mm x 12" x 14", 8 mm x 12" x 14". Also High Intensity 13.6 mm x 22" (machined for adapters) which provide 20 minutes more burning time per trim.

he could not go near the barn and every ear of corn lay on the ground ruined. This man had lost everything he had. I asked, 'How will you manage?' He said, 'I don't know, but some way will open up for us—it always has in the 50 years I have been alive.'

"When I got to Pueblo, Colo. (after freezing in the South!), I piled out of the car in my winter coat only to find all other women were walking down town with no coats on at all. I hied me to the court house intending to get myself a birth certificate, but the state didn't seem a bit interested in acknowledging the fact that I had been born in it. They insisted I must have a parent's certified statement, and then I must find someone who knew the 'circumstances of my birth' to go to the court house and present the papers in person.

"What to do? I went to the phone and called Sid Jefferson, business manager of the projectionist's local union, and was invited up to the projection room of the Pueblo theatre, where I was met by T. C. Boyle, projectionist. Mr. Boyle was dressed in spotlessly clean coveralls of light color, and he ushered me into a projection room which was cleaner than my kitchen and I like my kitchen clean! The picture on the screen was steady, but poorly lighted—however, I was too busy trying to get myself officially born to inquire into the matter. Mr. Boyle could not help me directly, but he sent me to his lawyer, who was an old-timer in the town. Seemed like this lawyer called about everyone in town, but my famous Pop must not have been so famous in the good old days, for the lawyer could not locate anyone who remembered him, much less the 'circumstances of my birth.' I finally gave up and went out to eat. The waitress (all waitresses out there say 'Hello' instead of 'Good morning') suggested I call the District Attorney. I did, and he suggested I call his dad, who, he informed me, was 'older than hell.' Well, sure enough, his dad remembered Frank Richardson, because once upon a time he ran for some office, and Richardson, who published a paper, wouldn't endorse him! . . . And now, after all these years, I am officially born. It took a lot of time and fuss, plus five bucks, but here I am!

Looking 'Em Over in Memphis

"Finally arriving in Memphis, I called Business Agent E. L. Hurt of Local 144, on the phone, and later met him at Loew's State theatre, where he is a projectionist. Mr. Hurt said Local 144 had 46 members and that business conditions were good. Every house, with the exception of three small ones, is organized and signed on a two-year contract. Each house has two men to a shift. While we talked D. S. Weaver, also a Loew's State projectionist, came in and stopped to say 'hello.'

"Because of a rather tall and formidable ladder which had to be climbed, I did not go up into the State projection room, but did visit the projection room of the Warner's theatre a bit later. There E. G. Grace and W. A. Maunder were just threading up for the first show. A. C. Frame and J. N. ('Gabby') Cullen are the two men on the other shift.

"The projection room itself was appropriately lighted, the walls being of a non-reflecting dark green. First thing I noticed (one does see some curious things, scouting around like this!) was that the projectors were mounted on cement blocks. Inquiry elicited the information that the request for regular bases had been referred to the 'sound engineer'!

"Projection distance in this theatre is 120 feet, the screen 20 feet, 8 inches by 16 feet, 3 inches. The sound, I noticed was quite loud. When the volume needs changing, the projectionists are buzzed from the auditorium. The decision to change the volume is made by the ushers. In all the time Mr. Grace has been working in this theatre, he has never received, he says, one order to lower the sound, but is often buzzed to 'turn it up,' until at times 'they are blasted out.'

"Incidentally, it has been interesting to observe what types of pictures are most popular in various sections. In Colorado ('where men are men' and most of them cowboys), they seem to prefer, naturally enough, Western or 'Northern forest' pictures; but in small out-of-the-way places, where one would think most anything would go, people insist upon the best in 'class' pictures, while in fine theatres in the larger cities, many managers answered 'honky-tonk' to my question concerning local preferences. Ah, well, there's more than that's strange about our world. . . ."

Drying Up a Source Of Theatre Manpower

A COUPLE of letters came in recently that were fairly typical of those received from time to time from young fellows who want to become projectionists. It is unfortunate that as matters now stand, it is very difficult to give advice that can be applied in practice.

In the beginning, projection was little respected, either by exhibitors or by the public; even the men themselves were won't to regard their craft only as an easy way of earning money, since they only had to turn a crank or two and throw a switch. We have thousands of able, alert men in projection, but there still is some of the old dead wood, and no acceptable method of adding new timber seems to appear. It is a shame that a young chap who has dreamed nothing but projection and who has had the gumption to study it though there was no immediate position in sight, can find no opening in projection. Every business and craft must have a steady stream of new manpower, otherwise it dies at the roots—and the new men should represent an improvement over the old.

"I am a young man twenty years of age and am exceedingly interested in becoming a capable motion picture pro-

jectionist. With me this is not just a passing fancy. My interest dates back to when I was eight years old and I bought a $15 Keystone toy projector with only a top feed sprocket and intermittent sprocket. I rigged it up in the garage in our back yard. Had a regular booth with port holes and everything. I was very proud of the black border I put around my screen. When I got through the projector ran 1,000-foot reels.

"When I was ten I got hold of an old Powers 6-B projector (and got hell from mother for running her light bill up with the 1,000-watt Mazda lamp!). In my spare time last year I attached sound to an old Motiograph projector and was laughed at for spending my time foolishly, but I had a swell time and it only cost $1.49 for an 868 photocell from S.O.S., and $10 from the local Y. M. C. A. for the projector. I built the amplifier from parts I had collected in my attic.

"All this is my way of telling you I really like this work and want to continue in it. Unfortunately, I have to eat, therefore I have to find a place where I can get paid. However, the union does not seem interested in young people who want to break into their field. When I speak to the members they do their best to discourage me, representing a dark picture—'no jobs, hundreds of thousands out of work, you have no experience, we can't waste time on you, a very unprofitable profession' and to date I have not been able to persuade them to give me a break, although I know all of them (I was usher and doorman for the Robb & Rowley circuit for two and a half years)."

Here is the type we want and need. Yet the only suggestion I can make is to hang on and hope.

Studied, Worked for $9 a Wee—But . . .

The other recent letter came from a small town in which I, myself, once lived. Then it had only three small stores and perhaps a dozen residences, and it was surrounded by very sparsely settled semi-desert country. Its tributary population may have been 200; its population an equal number. The chief excitement was watching the daily (sometimes) train go by. . . . But to the letter:

"Recently I was employed in a very small theatre containing equipment that was just about ready to fall to pieces. It had, in fact, been bought second-hand several years ago and has had only the most sketchy care from then on. I make no pretense of being expert in projection work, but have 'fooled around' every projection room I could gain access to and am very much interested in the work. I did everything possible to acquire knowledge of projection, until, as I saw it, I finally was capable of handling projection in a small theatre; so when the manager of the one theatre in a small town proposed to employ me at the magnificent wage of $9 per week (one show a day, six days a week), I almost fell over myself accepting.

"The main idea was that I would get experience, and I certainly should have done so for I almost slept in what was, by courtesy, called the projection room. Gosh, but I was proud of myself! I was now a projectionist! And I certainly worked over those scrap-pile projectors good and plenty. I tried everything I could think of to keep both the sound and picture going, but as you may suspect, things got worse and worse. Finally someone told me of your Bluebook of Projection, but living on $9 per week left nothing whatsoever with which to obtain a copy, and the boss refused to buy one.

"I am afraid my projectionist days are already over, that very soon I will be working at—I don't know what. Would you be kind enough to make some suggestion as to some method by which I could obtain employment as a projectionist? I would appreciate it deeply if you could. I promise you I will become an ardent student so as not to disgrace the profession."

Another fellow with the makings of a good projectionist, yet it is extremely difficult, if not immediately impossible, for the theatre business to use him!

My advice in such situations usually has been that the young man obtain employment of some kind in a theatre of some local importance, make friends with the projectionists, get permission to observe the projection work during "off" hours (without making a nuisance of himself, of course), be cheerfully helpful if a projectionist calls on him for some little assistance, study and watch for an opening. If the fellow is of the "right" sort (has a flair for mechanics, and is of generous, genial disposition), he is likely to get his chance in time—perhaps two, three, four years or so.

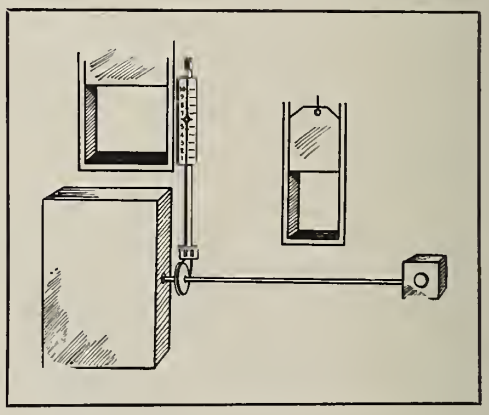
Not a very promising picture, is it? Promising neither for the young candidate nor the motion picture business. But that, generally speaking, is the way it is.

About a Flame That Flickered and Did Not Die

ABOUT TEN years back in the limbo of time we were wont to hear often from a projectionist, Frank Dudiak, who lived and worked in one of the Carolinas—North' I think. Frank was keenly interested in his chosen field and sent in decidedly interesting bits of information and comment very often. Suddenly he dropped out of the picture, and various inquiries failed to locate him. A few days ago this letter was received from Washington, D. C.:

"I know it has been some time since you have heard from me, but I have never forgotten you and the 'Bluebook School' from which I derived so much in the way of practical knowledge and the fundamentals of real motion picture projection. I have always meant to tell you that in a way, indirectly, you are responsible for a spark that became a flame, and before that flame became extinguished I walked out of college with an A.B. degree. If it had not been for that schooling, I know I would not have the position that I have today. Incidentally, that flame is building up again, and no telling what may be the outcome this time.

"In March, a year ago, I had taken a Civil Service examination for the position of projectionist in the National Archives. My grade was 93.6, and I was appointed to this position.



"So far I am very much in love with the work and I hope to continue to be. The work is much different from that in a motion picture theatre, and to my mind, much more interesting in view of the fact that we encounter problems of every possible description as far as motion pictures are concerned."

That's hearing from Brother Dudiak again in the nicest way possible. I know "the flame" will continue to burn brightly through the years.

The Boss Thinks Up A Volume Control Device

FROM Louis Humphrey, who shoots pictures 'way down south in Mount Vernon, Wash., comes a letter describing a device which may interest some of you. Brother Humphrey says:

"I have read many of your articles with ideas to make projectionists' work easier, and some of these ideas were very good, too. Now I've got one that I think might be worth passing along. It is a device to make the volume control settings more easily read, which helps to maintain a more even sound level, especially when changing from one subject to another.

"The sound system I am using has a volume control mounted in the side of the amplifier box, which hangs on the wall between the projectors. The shaft is a long rod which runs parallel to the front wall and extends to the right-hand projector for the extension control station.

"I have found considerable trouble in reading the settings on a small dial located in an awkward place, and formed the habit of guessing at the sound level. This didn't prove very satisfactory, however, so from necessity, the mother of invention, came an idea—not mine, however, but from the boss, who has a knack for designing mechanical things. It is a string and pulley arrangement which moves a pointer up and down on a gauge right beside the observation port. The numbers on the gauge run up and down as on a thermometer.

"I have seen several makes of sound systems using a rod in this manner, and this idea might easily be adapted. It starts with a pulley about 4 inches in diameter which has a flat surface about half an inch wide with flanges to keep the string or cable in place. The use of a lathe will help to make a suitable pulley. This pulley has a hole in its center to fit the rod between control stations.

"A small double pulley was fastened to the front wall in line with the drive pulley at a point just to the side of the port. For this purpose a pulley that is used to operate a venetian blind is ideal. It has two tiny wheels about ½-inch in diameter, mounted in a brass bracket. Also on the front wall at any convenient point directly above the double pulley is a single pulley. The cable is threaded through the pulleys and wrapped around the drive pulley so that a pointer attached to the cable at a point level with the observation port will move up and down as the volume is turned up or down.

"Now make a gauge to suit and fasten it to the wall, with the cable passing in front of it. Try one of cardboard until the volume levels are established, then a more permanent one may be made of tin or plywood to improve the gauge point numbers on one side of the cable and mark average fader settings for each company's features on the other half (a setting for the newsreels might be added).

"This cable and pulley idea is often used in radios for remote control tuning of the condensers. We found that the radio shops have an assortment of cables and pulleys suitable to make it more flexible in locating the gauge where a direct mounting is impossible. The use of a piece of small copper tubing will also guide the cable around a slight bend.

"The gauge in this instance is about 2 inches wide and 12 inches long. The pointer was cut from a piece of shim stock and is fairly large. With this arrangement, the volume level is shown very clearly and may be watched without looking away from the screen very far. It certainly has helped me to maintain more even sound level."

Showbusiness—and Spirit—Are "Good" in England

A BRIEF NOTE arrives from Stanley Perry, projectionist at the Empire theatre, MGM house in Leicester Square, London, and long a guiding light in the British projectionists' organization. He says, in part:

"I've read remarks concerning theatre business over in the States being not up to par, but I feel sure this is but a passing phase. We had it here for the first few months of the war, then things settled down again and we are practically normal again. We here in the West End [of London] are carrying on as usual."

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 145, No. 12 December 20, 1941

"UNITY"

OFTEN it has been said that it is not the length of the step but the direction that counts most. The Chicago gathering called "the unity meeting" is a signal step in a constructive direction and may by subsequent developments rate as the most important intra-industry function in all the years of the screen.

Never before have so many and such widely diverse factors of power and interest assembled in one conclave with a single purpose: the general well-being of the industry.

Perhaps most significant is the indication to be had from the Chicago mid-continent unity meeting that at long last, and after endless costly experiment, there is appreciation that the motion picture industry, to serve and prosper, must run itself; that, if it is to be an industry, it is not to be operated healthily by courts and decisions won by belligerent lawyers.

When a family calls the police and goes to court over conduct and property, the embers on the hearth fade out and in time the roof of the house falls in.

THE inter-dependency of all branches of the motion picture business is ever so apparent that to mention it is to proclaim the obvious—but that consciousness has not often prevailed.

The Chicago meeting is the important and, let us hope, vitally significant meeting of a great era of understanding.

War came to unify all America while that meeting was in progress.

The great effort in which we are now engaged for America must also find us preserving the American Way in all things, including the business of the motion picture.

All of the business of the motion picture, from distributor to screen, was represented in Chicago.

But the roster of that meeting does not include the art of the motion picture, production and the studios of Hollywood.

No program of unity will be complete until such time as the makers of the product which goes through distribution to the screen and the people are included.

The motion picture does not live by trade alone. The spirit of unity presumes product dedicated to, made for, guided by, the concerns of the whole institution of the screen, which includes the customers who now fight for, and demand to live under, the American Way.

THEATRES "IN SERVICE"

PLEASANTLY emphatic reference to the current patriotic functioning of the exhibition branch of this industry is contained in a recent letter which the editor has had from Mr. Robert B. Wilby of Atlanta, in which he observes:

". . . the motion picture theatre—or perhaps the motion picture industry—is probably the only non-defense industry in America which at the beginning of this war had a workable organization for the rendering of such service as probably would be wanted by the government.

"Due to the foresight of E. V. Richards and a lot of hard work on the part of Joe Bernhard and Harry Brandt, there are about 12,000 theatres in America which have not only signed a 'Pledge of Cooperation' under which they exhibit such films as the Motion Picture Theatre Committee agrees should be exhibited, but have in fact been doing so off and on for a year.

"During that same time various of the exchanges in each exchange center have been distributing these pictures, and of course the truck companies—no, not the post office or express company—have been transporting them without charge. No particular amount of publicity has been given that nor sought for that, but there is the reasonably well accomplished fact."

DOING VERY WELL

EIGHTEEN months have now passed since the executive quarters of the motion picture industry East and West reverberated with forebodings of debacle as the blockades of war shutdown on foreign markets.

Hollywood was crying out for "longer runs, higher rentals, higher admissions."

It seemed relevant then—May 25, 1940—to observe on this page that: "Hollywood's cost programs and budgets accept precedent as economic law. It is not . . .

" . . . Happily, these United States are abundantly provided with all that it takes to make and maintain a motion picture industry. It needs no importations of talent, skills or materials. It has vast audience. The American screen can survive and even prosper in the Americas, even if Lady Hollywood has to give up caviar and truffles . . . "

The financial statements of this autumn of 1941 find the motion picture companies prospering—and Lady Hollywood is on no real reducing diet, either. The customers did it.

NEWS AND RADIO

WITH a startling impact of concise, informative sanity radio news broadcasts from the New York Times have arrived on the air. The effect is as though a competent chairman with effective gavel had prevailed to restore order for an interlude in a bedlam meeting.

Every hour on the hour from morning until late at night, in a voice as crisp as the imprint of newly cast type, over WMCA the Times recites the news as of then. It takes from four to five minutes to say everything that is worth saying on the air about the state of the world in terms of news.

The information is competent, the relief is infinite in delivery from commentators, crooning orators of second-hand scripts, pontificators, heart-throbbers, interpreters, propaganda peddlers, flag-wavers, and welkin-ringers, all engaged in endeavours to convert the news into entertainment. Real news is dramatic enough. It is just possible that the injection of the New York Times radio news service may have an influence toward purifying the air.

This Week in the News

Pearl Harbor Pictures

A WEEK long search by the newsreel companies through the channels of U. S. Navy and Army censorship for pictures of the Japanese attack on Hawaii which they knew their cameramen had filmed but which they could not locate, ended Tuesday night when the Navy Department released to each company "several hundred feet" of heavily censored film. All scenes of actual military or naval action and all military or naval background were snipped from the footage as taken by the newsreel's own photographer.

What remained was described by one newsreel editor as "good, but not sensational." This was supported by the fact that none of the newsreels thought them worth special issues. The Hawaii clips were held for insertion in the regular midweek release on Thursday. "We don't know what's missing in those shots because we don't know what our men took and what the Navy took out," another newsreel official said. "We do know that they censored everything pertaining to the actual bombing." He inferred that repair work was also banned.

Whether the newsreels were to get pictures from the Philippines or other battlefronts remained a question at midweek, as did the whole matter of war coverage. Cameramen were said to be at the front, however, and the Army and Navy issued orders that any pictures were to be sent back to Washington by field commanders. There were reports that Byron Price, executive editor of the AP and new official U. S. censor, would set up a films division.

Twentieth Century-Fox may have precious footage of the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor, Col. Jason Joy, Fox studio executive, revealed in St. Paul Wednesday, where he testified at the Minnesota block-booking trial. Four Fox cameramen, a director and a crew manager were at the naval base photographing background on the United States Marines. The crew was to have left Honolulu December 12th, he said, presumably aboard a U. S. warship.

If pictures were made they will be turned over to the Navy censors, Col. Joy said.

"Sneaks" Back

AN END to the long standing Los Angeles preview arrangement in which pictures not intended for press review have been "sneaked" in theatres outside the Los Angeles metropolitan zone was announced on Wednesday by Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers. He said that war conditions made the out of town previews impossible and asked the cooperation of editors in not printing reviews of films prior to specified review dates. Journeys to the far reaches of Los Angeles were cited as dangerous during blackouts.

The zoning system thus ended by wartime was invoked several years ago to end the competitive conflict which raged between Los Angeles publications, to the distress of all parties. The hinterland previews are said to have cost the studios much money and more time for several years. Mr. Freeman indicated that he expected journalistic cooperation now to be "uniform and spontaneous."

Cultural Product

LAST weekend in a special screening in the Archives building on the "Federal Triangle" in Washington, John Hay Whitney, with two members of his staff from the film division of the Office of Inter-American Affairs, and "a guest" from the State Department, sat through a screening of pictures to be considered for free distribution in the Latin Americas.

The screening included "Harvest for Tomorrow," and "Power for Defense," a TVA production, both made for the Government, and "Adventure in the Bronx."

Of some special interest was the screening of the considerably discussed "Better Dresses on the Fifth Floor," directed by Victor Stoloff, and produced by Jay Leyda, who has come to American documentary production by way of training in Moscow. Mr. Leyda has had editorial connection with the especially leftish quarterly, entitled films, published in New York. His picture was photographed at S. Klein's store—sometimes known as "Madame K's"—in Union Square, and at a New Jersey studio. The Government's funds are said to have met 20 per cent of the costs. A Spanish narrative is in preparation. No decisions on the availability of any of the pictures have been announced.

Staffs Safe, Business Not

FOREIGN sales departments of the majors in New York checking the wreckage of their Far East business this week found their personnel safe but business off about 50 per cent.

Paramount's office in Manila was untouched at mid-week, James Perkins, its supervisor in the Orient, reported. Hank Henry, its manager, a Naval Reserve officer, is in active duty.

Universal heard from its Shanghai office that "business is usual," but there was trouble close by.

Film shipments from this country now leave New York instead of San Francisco; they go through the Panama Canal, and the South Pacific, to Australia, for re-shipment.

The majors appear headed for difficulty in collecting monies representing 1937 revenue from Japan. Checks totaling $210,000, the third payment in an agreement with the Japanese Government, were returned, uncashed, to the companies. They were on the Yokahama Specie Bank, San Francisco, under control now of the Alien Property Custodian; and the companies must appeal to the Treasury Department.

War Censoring

THE U. S. now has a censor of war news and pictures. He is Byron Price, who resigned as executive news editor of the Associated Press and was appointed Tuesday by President Roosevelt, who asserted censorship when necessary "will be in harmony with the best interests of our free institutions."

Mr. Price is to meet Friday, in Washington, with a special, new Cabinet committee under Postmaster General Frank Comerford Walker, which has been studying Federal agencies whose news must be controlled.

Earlier, Mr. Roosevelt had authorized the U. S. Defense Communications Board to take over radio, wholly or in part, if necessary; and the Army and the Navy had censored news.

Others on the Walker committee are Vice-President Wallace, and Attorney General Francis Biddle. Participating in its meetings is Lowell Mellett, Director of the Office of Government Reports.

Is It Propaganda Now?

NO American could offer the slightest criticism today of the motion picture industry for producing pictures which are aimed at stimulation of the public war effort through depiction of the great struggle now going on in the world, Wendell Willkie told an audience of entertainment executives Wednesday. "No one would have the industry do otherwise," Mr. Willkie said. He was the principal speaker at an organization luncheon at the Hotel Astor, New York, for the budget campaign of the National Conference of Jews and Christians.

Mr. Willkie was counsel for the industry at the recent and abortive Senate sub-committee investigation into "propaganda" on the screen.

On the dais with Mr. Willkie and J. Robert Rubin, toastmaster, were George J. Schaefer, Basil O'Connor, Martin Quigley, Jack Cohn, Will Hays, Nicholas M. Schenck, Louis Nizer, Dr. Everett Clinchy and Rabbi Morris Lazaron.

Brylawski Takes Over

THE quest of the film industry through Washington hallways for priority ratings for essential materials employed in the making and exhibition of motion pictures narrowed this week to one cubicle in the Office of Production Management. There, A. Julian Brylawski, appointed this week to a dollar-a-year post by Donald Nelson, director of priorities, will pass upon all requests from studios, theatres, distributors, laboratories and equipment makers for allocations of the relatively small amount of defense essentials used in the film industry.

Mr. Brylawski resigned his posts as manager of the Warner circuit's Washington real estate and as purchasing agent for the Warner eastern division, for the duration. Since 1923, Mr. Brylawski, the Washington legislative agent for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, also has been president of the District of Columbia MPTO. He has been a national MPTOA vice-president since 1928.

An advisory board representing the interests of all branches of the industry, including the 16 mm field will be named to aid Mr. Brylawski in coordinating requests. The priority situation in the film industry, which uses relatively small amounts of vital materials, is not yet acute.

War-show Talent Pool

INVESTIGATING requests, synchronizing schedules and availabilities, a Hollywood Coordinating Committee for stage, screen, and radio, is this week forming a huge talent pool.

Indicative of motive was a recent situation: in one day, the studios received 40 requests for stars' personal appearances for war-and-defense benefits, shows and whatnot.

Chairman of the Committee is Fred Beetson, vice-president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers; members are Y. Frank Freeman, president of the AMPP; Howard Strickling, chairman of the Publicity Directors Committee; Edward Arnold, president of the Screen Actors Guild and Coast head of Camp Shows, Inc.; Kenneth Thomson, SAG executive secretary; Bert Allenberg, president of the Artists Managers Guild; Charles K. New RKO Setup

THE "Schaeferizing" of RKO begins. An announcement was made Tuesday, in New York, by George Schaefer, RKO president, that the company's executive realignment would take this primary form:

N. Peter Rathvon, vice-president. He was chairman of the executive committee.

Malcom Kingsberg, director of all theatre activities. He continues as vice-president of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, and will be elected president of subsidiary corporations, such as the RKO Proctor, RKO Midwest, RKO Orpheum, and RKO Service.

Leon Goldberg, treasurer for all companies. He had been treasurer for the theatres.

Charles Koerner will be elected vice-president of the theatre companies. He continues general managership, under Mr. Kingsberg.

All officers will be responsible to Mr. Schaefer, who indicated the changes would "more clearly and definitely fix duties and responsibilities."

It was understood in New York that the designation of Mr. Kingsberg displaces Major L. E. Thompson, who may be given another executive post; and that Mr. Goldberg succeeds William Clark.

Play Now, Pay Later

UNIQUE wartime selling terms have been devised by Paramount for its timely-titled "Pacific Blackout." In order to get to the nation's screen while news of the west coast's first air raid alarms is still fresh, Paramount announced in New York on Tuesday that special arrangements would enable exhibitors to show the picture beginning January 2nd and postpone settlement of price terms until later, when they purchase the company's third block-of-five.

HOLLYWOOD ADJUSTS TO WAR AND EXTENDS WORK IN NATION'S SERVICE

Studios To Work Only During Daylight Hours; Company Fire, Police Units Organized; Training Film Work Expanded

by VANCE KING
Hollywood Bureau

All Hollywood has answered the eall to war.

Changes in the patterns of the lives of everyone and the nature of everything eonnected with the making of motion pictures have been made since December 7th, when Japan attacked the United States possessions.

Some of the alterations in the normal procedure of getting out items of the largest single entertainment factor in the world eame at once; some, days later. Some had widespread effect and others, not.

The Association of Motion Picture Producers ordered the studios, starting last December 15th, to inaugurate a daylight shift of from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., in order to permit employes to get to their homes without traveling in the dark. All night work was ordered suspended.

Los Angeles' film row offices generally went on an 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. basis.

Theatre business in Southern California has dropped precipitously because of the blackouts and threats of blackouts.

Fourteen AFL unions representing 16,000 workers and including the ten IATSE locals, have adopted an implied "no strike" policy for the duration of the emergency.

Business managers of the studios have met to organize mutual protection by their police and fire departments.

Some 200 members of the Hollywood Photographic Unit of the United States Navy, all of them top cinematographers, photographers, sound men and electricians and other technicians, have been ordered to stand by for calls to active duty.

The Academy Research Council project of producing Army training films has been augmented and ten of the subjects are currently in work at the various studios.

At an emergency meeting of the board of directors of the Association of Motion Pictures Producers, called by Y. Frank Freman, president, Thursday, the following statement was issued:

"In view of the present emergency, the board of directors today deeided that, effective next Monday, December 15th, the studios will open for business at 9 A. M. The studios will elose at 5 P. M. On the contrary, the Screen Actors Guild and Studio Projectionists Local 165 were promptly on record with formal waivers of overtime rates for extra work necessitated by blackouts or air raid alarms, setting an example expected to be followed by all.

"This action has been taken in order to allow sufficient time in daylight for the studio personnel to arrive at their work and sufficient daylight time for them to return to their homes at the conclusion of their day's work.

"This ruling affects all personnel, including actors, exeeutives, directors, writers, office workers and all others employed at the studios."

Off to an excellent weekend business before the fateful Sunday, Hollywood and Los Angeles theatre grosses dropped some 35 per cent in the first runs and during the nights of the blackouts and expected blackouts, neighborhood and subsequent run theatres had virtually no patrons. Retail stores have instituted earlier closing hours in order that their staffs may get to their homes earlier, thus indirectly affecting night theatre grosses.

With all unions and guilds anouncing their complete cooperation with the government in the interest of the successful prosecution of the war, the skies were wiped clear of any anticipated labor trouble.

Studio managers also met Thursday to discuss mutual protection in the event of bombings and attempted sabotage. Police and fire departments were generally augmented; restrictions were placed on all visitors with the exception of the working press; and programs of training employes to act in emergencies were launched.

Training Films Expanded

That same day, the Hollywood branch of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense was called into emergency session to expand the Army film training program being earried on through the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, to meet the heavier demands now faced by the Army. Lieut. Col. Richard T. Sehlosberg, who the day before had conferred with Lieut. Col. Darryl F. Zanuck and other Army reserve film men, brought praise of the War Department.

Several of the completed films were shown to members of the committee. Meanwhile secrecy that surrounded the making of the pictures and their subject matter since the inception of the project was maintained.

The committee was placed on a weekly meeting basis, and an executive board and subcommittees charged with various aspects of the work will be appointed shortly.

To obviate official closing of the Central Casting Bureau's switchboard through which extras call many times daily seeking employment, the bureau ordered studios to place their work calls earlier, and that in the event of blackouts, extras must hold their calls to a minimum with no one calling in more than once every 25 minutes. Central also adopted a project of ealling extras instead of atmosphere players calling it.

Hollywood was notified that the remaining units of the Hollywood Photographic Unit of the United States Navy would be called to active duty shortly. At present on active duty are 106 photographers from Hollywood studios, in ratings from chief photographer to photographer third class in Naval aviation units ashore and afloat.

Cameramen In Training

There are now 40 Hollywood cameramen training for aerial photography at San Diego. Four officers are under instruction in a "foreign country" and three camera units are at sea on aetive duty with the fleet.

The main body of the photographic unit, already on active duty and at present assigned to the Executive offices of the President of the United States, Coordinator of Information's Office and known as the Photographic Presentation Unit, includes the following:

Commander John Ford, recently promoted from lieutenant commander, commanding officer.

Lieut. (jg) Frederick Spencer, executive officer; Ensign E. R. Kellogg; Ensign Marcus E. Armistead; Chief Petty Officer R. J. Pennick. (This is the staff which works with Capt. Merian C. Cooper, U. S. Air Cops, also assigned to this particular unit.)

Under Commander Ford are the following on active duty:

Camera Unit No. 1, Lieut. Joe August, commanding; A. T. Powell, chief petty officer; G. J. Irvine, J. P. Mackenzie, E. M. Tronowsky, R. B. Yould. Camera Unit, No. 2, Lieut. A. Siegler, commanding; L. L. Goldstein and W. J. Wheeler, chief petty officers; W. H. White, B. B. Heath and R. L. Harris. Camera Unit No. 3, Lieut. H. Wenstrom, commanding; R. R. Rhea, chief petty officer; C. M. Jones, E. R. Smith and H. B. Jones. Camera Unit No. 4. Lieut. A. Gilkes, commanding; P. P. Mohn, chief petty officer; J. S. Barnett, T. H. Evans and G. Laursen. Sound Unit No. 1; Lieut. (jg) K. Pier, commanding; E. A. Hilson, R. M. Braggins, J. B. Allin.

Units "on the alert" for active duty calls are:

Camera Section A; Lieut. Gregg Toland, commanding; F. J. Jancar, J. S. Varalyay, S. Newmark, J. E. Mitchell. Camera Section B; Ensign R. Hoge, commanding; J. W. Saper, R. R. Parrish, W. D. Faralla, D. A. Cline. Camera Section C, Lieut. H. Davis, commanding; G. W. Lufkin, J. W. LaGrone, R. O. Neal. Camera section D, Lieut. S. Halprin, commanding; G. V. Thayer, chief petty officer; P. B. Pierce, J. W. Seiter, D. P. Kelly, R. C. Skidmore. Technicolor Technical Section E, Lieut. (jg) A. Arling, commanding; H. H. Van Pelt, C. W. Inman, J. J. Stout, H. R. Martin.

In addition to these, two other film figures holding high positions, in the 11th Naval District's Procurement and personnel office, are Lieut. Commander A. J. Bolton, formerly with 20th Century-Fox, and his executive officer, Lieut. Commander Eugene Zukor, formerly with Paramount.

Writers Mobilize

Film, radio and publicity writers, under the banners of the Screen Writers, Radio Writers and Screen Publicists guilds, mobilized Monday night to do their part in aiding local and national civilian defense. They met with Randolph Van Norstrand, head of the Defense Council public information bureau. Jack Jungmeyer, Jr., chairman of a defense committee appointed by the SWG, arranged for the session to which all writers were invited.

Initial work of the group will be to prepare pamphlets and other material addressed to the public for the Los Angeles Civilian Defense Committee.

Sale of defense savings stamps and defense bonds skyrocketed throughout this area. Larg-

ADVANCE INFORMATION ON STUDIO SABOTAGE

Hitting book stores and mailing lists last week, several days after the United States entered the war, was a book, "The Specter of Sabotage," written by Blayney F. Mathews, Warners director of plant protection and superintendant of personnel.

It reveals the latest and most effective methods of detecting sabotage and safeguarding all types of plants and personnel, including motion picture studios.

Immediately upon the declaration of war, Mr. Mathews augmented the Warners police force, established heavy guards at the water and power plants on the lot, carrying out his own advice.

Titles Changed, Dates Advanced On New Product

est organizational contribution was the $50,000 worth purchased by the Musicians Mutual Protective Association, Local 47, American Federation of Musicians.

The effect of war time conditions on actual production plans was instantaneous in several cases. All private aircraft was grounded in Southern California, causing rewriting of scripts and revamping of schedules on pictures for which the use of aircraft was planned. Also causing rewriting was the Army's revocation of all machine gun permits and its picking up the weapons. Studio arsenals also were diminished under government order, and in the near future there will be less gunplay in pictures.

All night location work was dropped, and all plans for beach and ocean filming were blanked out. Southern California harbors were restricted to military shipping alone.

Revamping of pictures already finished, in production and in final preparatory stages to conform with the spirit of the times, was a matter of course. Several stories dealing with espionage, sabotage and other wartime themes were purchased, while some studios pushed forward the shooting dates of timely pictures already under consideration.

Having tradeshown and received reviews of "Midnight Angel" under that title, Paramount switched its name to "Pacific Blackout," last week, several hours after Los Angeles experienced its first blackout of the war. The picture, starring Robert Preston and Martha O'Driscoll, is a melodrama showing in detail working of air raid wardens and first aid crews in a simulated bombing and gas attack.

New Films Announced

Pictures announced since the start of the war having military or naval or national defense themes include:

"Spy Swatters," Warners, to star Jimmy Durante and Phil Silvers, who appear in the forthcoming "You're in the Army Now." The new picture has the pair attached to the Secret Service and in the espionage agents. Peggy Diggins, Margueritie Chapman and Alice Telton also have roles in the script, being written by Paul Gerard Smith and George Beatty.

"She's in the Army Now," Monogram, dealing with the part played by women in national defense, from a story by Robert Kehoe and to be produced by Ted Richmond, signed last week as associate producer.

"I'm an American," Monogram, to star the East Side Kids and to be produced by Sam Katzman from a Barney Sarecky script. In this the youngsters join the United States Navy.

"Midnight Blackout," Monogram, original story of the blackout of a large American city, to be produced by Maurice and Franklin King.

"Yellow Menace," Monogram, from an original story idea by Edmond Kelso.

"Camp Nuts," Columbia, with Florence Rice, Bruce Bennett, Jackie C. Gleason and Jack Durant, with Charles Barton directing. It is a comedy with an Army background.

Another peculiar situation arising out of war conditions is the matter of exploitation regarding 20th Century-Fox' expensive "Son of Fury," adapted from the novel "Benjamin Blake." A. M. Botsford, director of advertising and publicity, arrived Monday in Hollywood for conferences to determine whether the picture should be exploited as a straight adventure yarn or an idyllic South Seas romance. Inasmuch as the locale of the story is probably being overrun with armed soldiers at present, it might not be such an idyllic idea.

Two short subjects headed war or no, for augmented exploitation by their respective studios had to be recalled. Warners is re-narrating "Soldiers in White," filmed at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, to bring it up to date with war developments. Knox Manning, radio commentator, is doing the narration. MGM recalled for re-recording and re-editing its special two-reel national defense short, "Message from Main Street," and will re-title it "Main Street on the March." John Nesbitt is making the new recording on the subject which deals with a documentary exposition of national defense preparations for the government.

Warners also may recall "Tanks Are Coming," "Here Comes the Cavalry," "Wings of Steel," "March On, Marines," and "Meet the Fleet" for dialogue changes to bring them up to date in the current war situation.

Dates Advanced

Meanwhile, the studios pushed ahead their preparations on war theme pictures scheduled since before the start of open hostilities.

Columbia this week started "Canal Zone," story dealing with bomber ferrying across the South Atlantic with Chester Morris, John Hubbard and Harriet Hilliard heading the cast and being directed by Lew Landers.

Larry Darmour hurried into production the serial, "Captain Midnight," with Dave O'Brien, Dorothy Short, and James Craven enacting the principal roles of the espionage drama.

Republic cast Kane Richmond and Jimmy Dale in the principal roles of its "Spy Smashers" serial, another current topic.

RKO pushed up from Jan. 15th to this week the starting date for its "Flying Bombardier," story of the new bomb sight on which Lieut. Col. Mason Wright, Jr., was conferring with producer Reeves Espy before he was ordered back to Washington the night of Dec. 7th. "Passage from Bordeaux," yarn of wartime Bordeaux, is expected to start shortly there.

Currently shooting is "Powder Town," story of a munitions making town, and finished for some time is "Call Out the Marines," Victor McLaglen-Edmund Lowe vehicle. Harold Lloyd, producer, is readying "My Favorite Spy," to star Kay Kyser, for early production. "Joan of Paris" is finished.

Paramount has abandoned, at least temporarily, plans for making "Over the Hill," story of an Army deserter. Coming up on the schedule is "Hong Kong," to star Charles Boyer and Veronica Lake, "Channel Port," which may have Ray Milland in the lead, and the already finished "Torpedo Boat," "True to the Army," and "The Fleet's In."

The war will not affect the announced plans of Monogram to film, in Brazil's jungles, the story of "Catch 'Em Alive," to be made by Clyde Elliott, according to official assurances. That company has on its forthcoming release schedule "Snuffy Smith, the Yard Bird," produced by Edward Gross from the King Features Billy DeBeck comic strip.

Twentieth Century-Fox is shooting "This Above All," from the best selling novel by Eric Knight, who tells of a deserter from the British Army after the evacuation of Dunkirk, and is currently shooting "To the Shores of Tripoli," Marine story. The studio for a while was worried about the fate of a camera crew of six headed by James Havens which is now in Honolulu shooting backgrounds for the picture. The crew is safe, the studio heard over the weekend. Coming on the schedule is "Ten Gentlemen from West Point," in which John Payne, George Montgomery and Maureen O'Hara have the principal roles after some cast changes.

Hal Roach is currently working on "About Face," streamlined feature comedy which is a sequel to "Tanks a Million."

Producers Releasing has five topical pictures on its schedule. One, "Duke of the Navy," starring Ralph Byrd and Veda Ann Borg, is finished, and to come are "The Marines Take

Police in New York Issue Air Raid Instruction for Theatre Owners

Following is a summary of basic air-raid precautions delivered to New York theatre managers by city police and fire officials, who recommend that it be kept as a check list for future reference, and remind that the first, most important, rule is: "Use Common Sense—Avoid Panic".

For Preparation:

Train theatre staffs. Each member should have a specific duty to control crowds and prevent panic.

List all safety equipment and see that all employees know where it is and how to use it.

Know how to swiftly summon police and fire assistance. Check your direct fire telegraph boxes, or have one installed if the theatre does not have one.

Procure, or check, emergency lighting equipment in case power fails.

Distribute extra sand urns, sand buckets, fire equipment.

Add extra first aid equipment, including cots, emergency supply of drinking water.

Paint stage skylights, dressing room windows with opaque paint to insure blackout.

Check switches to insure instant blackout of marquee and all exterior lights.

Clean fire escapes, courtyards of snow at all times.

Consult with local police commanders, air-raid wardens to coordinate theatre defense plans.

Advise patrons, by notices, trailers that theatres are safe and that staffs have been trained for their protection.

In Case of a Raid:

KEEP CALM. Keep the show going.

Blackout exterior lighting but keep normal inside lights burning.

Keep audiences in the theatre. Prevent an exodus to the street.

Do not inform the audience of a raid unless they can hear it.

Announce, if necessary, that the show will continue and that patrons are safest inside the building.

Clear the topmost balconies in an orderly, quiet fashion, leading patrons to lower levels.

Shelter persons from the street but do not overcrowd aisles or stairways.

Obey instructions from firemen and police officials.

In case of fire or a bomb hit, ask the audience to file out slowly. Keep music or the program running.

Stars and Workers Sign up for Active Service in Army

Over," "Convoy Courage," "Harbor Patrol," and "Flying Fortress."

Film titles involving American war participation were registered over the weekend. Republic announced "Remember Pearl Harbor," a story idea by Albert J. Cohen, who will produce the film starting December 29th; "Wings over Alaska," by Charles Millicent and "Yanks Over Burma Road." Edward Small registered "Pearl Harbor," and Walter Wanger and MGM took reserve rights to the title, should Mr. Small relinquish it. Twentieth Century-Fox already owns "Pearl Harbor Pearls." Fox also registered "Men for the Fleet." David O. Selznick, who owns "V for Victory," registered "Aloha Oe." Columbia scheduled "The Stolen Bombsight" and announced also "Salute to Tobruk," a picture suggested by a British Broadcasting Company program. Warner Bros. registered "My Four Years in Japan;" MGM, "Wings Over the Pacific;" and Paramount, "Wake Island."

Paramount has shelved Somerset Maugham's story, "Hour Before Dawn," a fifth columnist story laid in England, and the company also will make Jap agents the villains in "This Gun for Hire." The Maugham story was slated for February production and was to have co-starred Ray Milland and Vera Zorina. As a result of the war, MGM rushed production on its latest "Crime Does Not Pay" short subject and changed the title to "Idle Words" from "Silent Invaders."

Universal will use locations in Lone Pine and Arizona for "Saboteur," which Alfred Hitchcock will direct for Frank Lloyd-Jack Skirball Productions. Plans of Samuel Bronston to shoot a good part of "Mutiny of the Elsinore" at sea have been abandoned and production will be shot entirely on soundstage via process.

Signed for Active Duty

Two of Hollywood's most famous directors—Frank Capra and William Wyler—enlisted in the nation's armed forces over the weekend. Capra, a private in World War I, applied for a commission in the U. S. Signal Corps, announcing he would not accept any further film assignments for the duration, including his contract with 20th Century-Fox. He is currently working on Warners' "Arsenic and Old Lace." Mr. Wyler, directing MGM's "Mrs. Miniver," also joined the Signal Corps and expects to be called to active duty around Feb. 1st.

Warners reports it has received many rebookings on "Sergeant York" and that many showmen who had planned to wait until July 4, 1942, when it would be generally released, now want the film for showings at advanced admissions. Other Warner pictures reported by the company to be sought for re-bookings are "Dive Bomber" and "International Squadron." No national release date has been set yet for "Captains of the Clouds," story of the Royal Canadian Air Force starring James Cagney.

Drives Organized

In addition, film talent, never stinting in their donation of time and services to worthy causes, has volunteered in overwhelming numbers to aid in benefits, money-raising enterprises, radio transcriptions and programs, and in multitudinous activities all looking toward the successful prosecution of the war against Japan, Germany and Italy.

As in World War I, stars, featured players and all other talent are offering their services where they are needed. Personal appearances, morale-building entertainment and virtually everything else needed by the government are being volunteered for without compensation but the knowledge that they are "doing their bit."

ZANUCK GETS WAR ORDERS

To answer requests for the clarification of the military status of Twentieth Century-Fox's Darryl F. Zanuck, the Hollywood branch of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National defense this week issued the following statement:

"On direct orders from Major General Dawson Olmstead, chief Signal Officer of the Army, Lieut. Col. Darryl F. Zanuck will alternate between his civilian and army duties. He will be called to active service in Washington for monthly conferences at the office of the Chief Signal Officer, as directed. This will permit him to continue his activities as vice-president, in charge of production, of Twentieth Century-Fox and chairman of the Research Council of the Academy where he is the coordinator of the War Department training films being produced by the industry in collaboration with the Signal Corps."

War Films on Other Fronts

Hollywood reaction to Japan's treacherous attack on Hawaii and the Philippine Islands took many turns, one of which was a rush of film title registration at the Hays office. Edward Small registered "Yellow Peril" and "Yellow Menace;" Columbia followed with "Bombing of Honolulu" and Twentieth Century-Fox registered "Secret Agent of Japan" while Metro filed "Sunday in Hawaii."

M. J. Weisfeldt, Columbia Pictures short subject sales manager, announced in New York last Friday that America's war declaration resulted in an immediate increase in booking of patriotic shorts. Reports from the exchanges show a strong demand for Columbia's International Forum films, he said. Also in demand are the Raymond Gram Swing historical screen reels.

Walter Futter, of Mercury Film Laboratories in New York, advertised in the trade press on Monday, "40,000 feet, for sale or use, of especially photographed A1 process backgrounds, negative and print, of Japan, Shanghai, Hongkong, Manila and the Philippines."

March of Time announced on Monday that it has prepared a separate war subject which will be released by RKO apart from the regular March of Time program. The picture, titled "Battlefields of the Pacific," include footage on Guam, Hongkong, Dutch East Indies, Philippines and other Pacific islands. Reels were due in all exchanges on Monday, it was said.

The Princeton Film Center, Princeton, N. J., reported last Wednesday that Gordon Knox started immediate production on a short, "What to Do in Case of an Air Raid."

Herbert Rosener Company of San Francisco, operating a West Coast chain of foreign language theatres, is distributing "Defense of Tobruk" and two other British Government films, "Australia Marches With Britain" and "Road to Victory." All three were made recently in North Africa and will be released to first run and newsreel theatres on the West Coast.

Gruenberg Replaces Fuller As Rocky Mountain Manager

L. S. Gruenberg of Salt Lake City has become RKO Rocky Mountain District manager, replacing H. C. Fuller, who was granted a leave of absence because of ill health.

Mr. Fuller took the Rocky Mountain managership in April upon its creation, being promoted from exchange manager at Salt Lake City. At that time Mr. Gruenberg was advanced from salesman at St. Louis to branch chief at Salt Lake City. He joined the sales staff in Minneapolis in 1934.

Mr. Gruenberg takes his new assignment at once and his headquarters will be Denver. His Salt Lake City successor will be named shortly.

Comerford Drive Report

Paul Tighe of the Penn theatre in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., remained leader in Group A of the Comerford Theatres Managers Drive, according to the standings for the fifth week of the campaign announced Dec. 15th by the Comerford Circuit home office in Scranton, Pa. Leaders in the other divisions are: Group B—Art Glaser, Strand theatre, Carlisle, Pa.; Group C—Ned Kornblite, Capitol theatre, Waverly, N. Y.; Group D—Robert Schmidt, Temple theatre, Berwick, Pa.; Group E—Charles Collins, Columbia theatre, Bloomsburg, Pa., and Group F—Michael O'Donoghue, Capital theatre, Mauch Chunk, Pa.

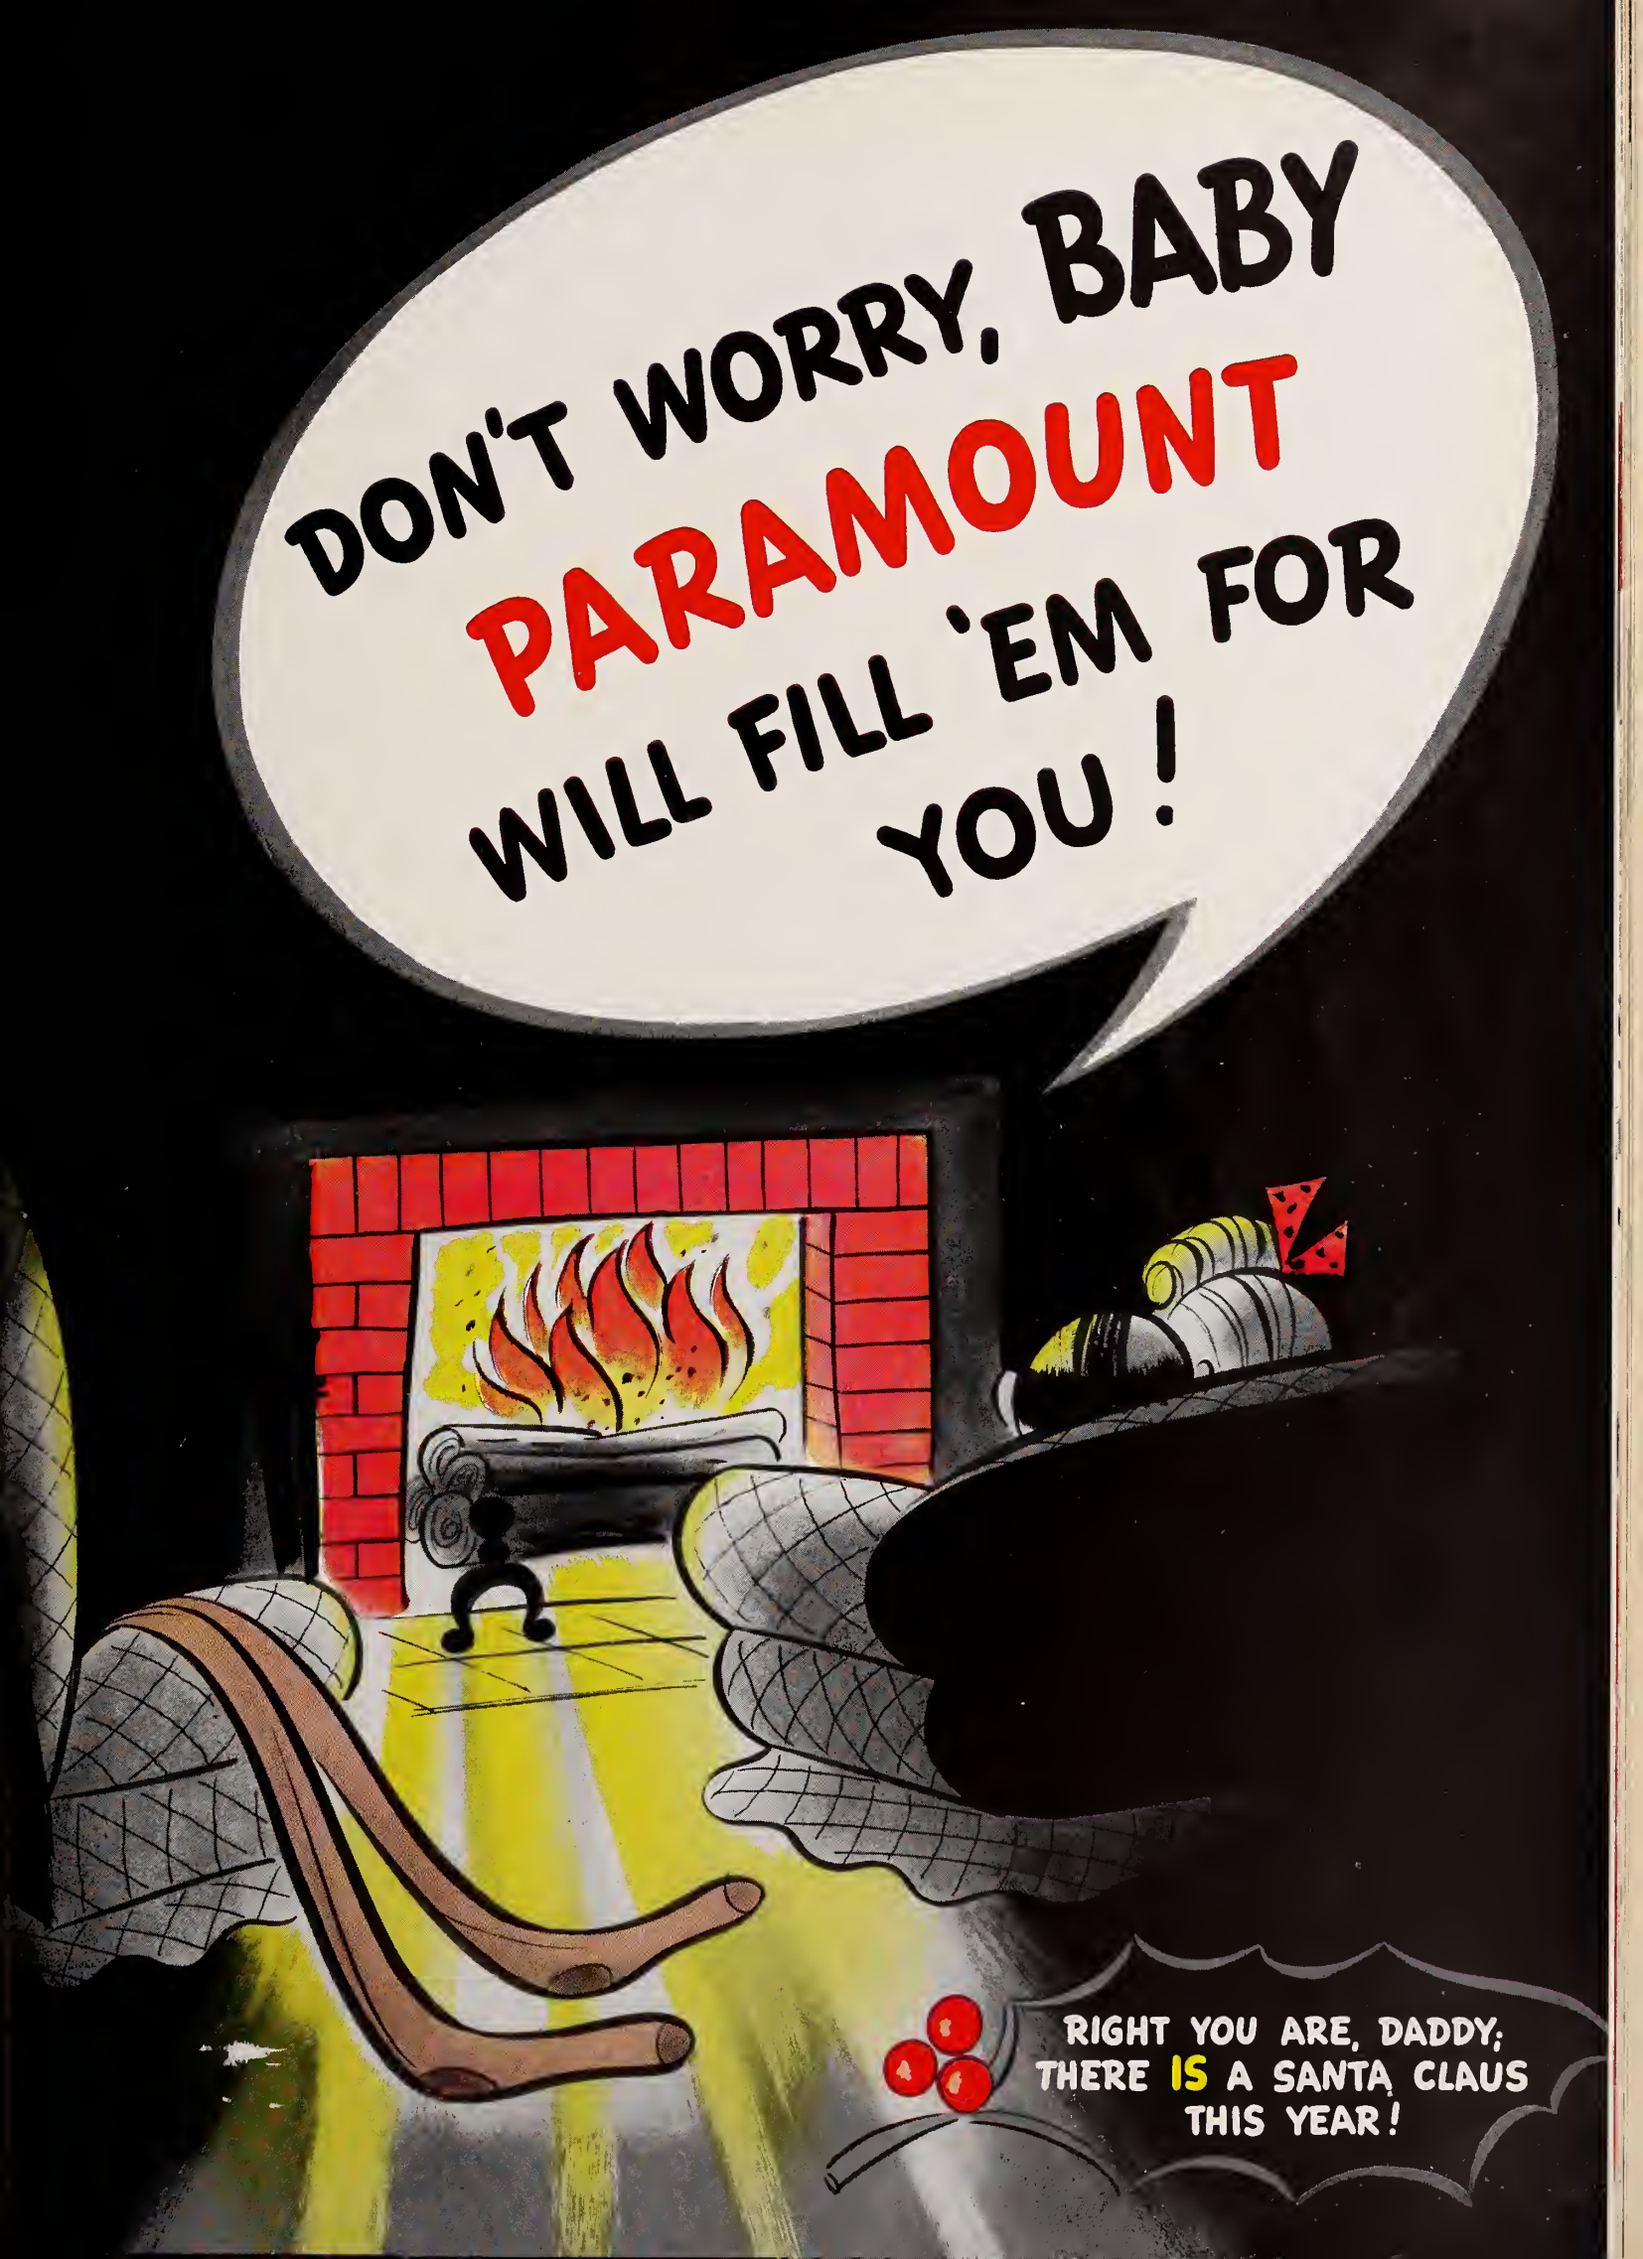
Waters Leads Television Club

The American Television Society on December 11th at New York elected Norman D. Waters advertising agent, as president to succeed Warren M. Caro. The board of governors also named Halsey V. Barrett as assistant to the president. The Society is a group of advertising and business men interested in television and organized for, "the advancement of television as a cultural, educational, advertising and entertainment medium." Mr. Walters' agency placed some of the first commercial television accounts.

Western Stars On Tour

Columbia Pictures has planned a personal appearance tour for four of its cowboy film stars. Bill Elliott, teamed with comedian "Dub" Taylor, is set for a series of appearances through Delaware, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia. Charles Starret will tour with Cliff "Ukelele Ike" Edwards, according to present plans of the company.

William Humphrey Dead



William Humphrey, managing director of the British Colonial Film Exchange, Inc., died last week at his Port-Au-Spain, Trinidad, New York film industry circles learned Tuesday.

Robbers Get $20,204

Two armed men robbed the St. Louis office of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers of $20,204 Friday, December 12th. The large sum was present for cashing of checks. The loss was insured.

Birdwell Back

Russell Birdwell, publicity agent, returned to New York Tuesday, from London, where he opened an office. He was expected to go to Hollywood at the week's end.

EXHIBITORS STRUGGLE WITH WAR ORDERS, BLACKOUTS, READJUSTMENTS

Exhibitors and Distributors Join Cooperation with Police and Fire Authorities; Attendance Rises Slowly After Sharp Drop

The U. S. motion picture industry responded this week with stern rapidity and close unity to the first shocks of war. It began to discern and effect some of the changes and readjustments which it, along with all other peacetime activities, will be required to make. The first shock of the Jap's attack and the initial confusions of a change-over to war had set the nation to settling down to fighting trim.

Exhibition and distribution in all sections of the country, including the blacked out Pacific Coast, reported that patrons were returning to theatres, although business was still far below normal. The first news of war followed by frequent bulletins and presidential messages cut theatre business as much as 75 per cent in many cities.

The motion picture industry was in active cooperation with civilian defense authorities preparing for blackout regulations, and awaiting orders. On the Pacific Coast some theatres had already closed and others were shifting operating times to comply with the blackout.

At New York defense officials outlined the procedure in event of an air raid to theatremen. German motion picture theatres closed quickly as war was declared with the Reich and Nazi film offices here were closed. Operations abroad were also subject to readjustment as shipping facilities were curtailed and credits frozen.

Newsreels of the engagement at Pearl Harbor were still in process of censorship and their editors were not hopeful of securing any action pictures from the Navy censors.

Rules Given for New York

New York City theatre managers got their first official air raid precaution instructions on Friday morning at a special meeting hastily summoned by Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine. Fire and police officials laid down the general rules of air raid safety and outlined what will be expected from theatres in handling audiences and protecting property in the event of an air attack.

Circuit officials, managers and their assistants representing all of the city's 735 motion picture theatres, attended the two hour session in Loew's Ziegfeld theatre. The audience, of about 750 persons, listened intently, and with evident concern, to the official recommendations for air raid procedure.

Theatres, the fire and police officers emphasized, are among the safest type of building construction. In keeping with plans to clear the streets, managers were told to keep audiences in the theatre during a raid.

"Keep the show going" in an emergency, they were told. It is the best way of avoiding panic and preventing a rush to the street.

Immediate measures to prepare theatres and staffs for an air raid emergency were outlined by the police and fire officers and by members of the civilian air raid warden services. They recommended staff training in the proper use of equipment, the handling of crowds and a careful check of all safety devices.

Written instructions on what to do in an air raid should be prepared by every manager at once and all employes should be familiar with them, it was declared. Each staff member should have a specific duty handling audiences or manning equipment. All should know the location of fire and other safety devices and how to use them, it was said.

Police Lieutenant William Maley, aid to the New York coordinator of civil defense, explained why streets must be kept clear and cited the safety factors of most theatres. He said that they provide shelter from flying glass and shrapnel and are generally of fireproof construction.

Additional Equipment Assured

Additional equipment may be secured at the theatres option. Managers, however, were urged to install extra sand in urns, buckets or bags as a fire protection and to see that it was strategically distributed. First aid equipment should also be supplemented and members taught how to use it. Managers were urged to install extra lounges or cots for hysteria cases and to insure an adequate supply of emergency drinking water.

Blackout preparations for theatres should provide for the immediate extinguishing of all exterior lights.

Every theatre should also have an emergency interior lighting system assistant fire chief John F. McCarthy said. Battery or emergency generator systems now in use should be checked constantly and theatres without supplementary power should obtain portable lighting equipment to illuminate the auditorium. Flashlights and hand lanterns are not enough to prevent panic he said.

Stage skylights, dressing room windows and other windows should be painted with opaque paint at once so that shows may continue during the blackout. Managers should provide blackout material for their office windows and other windows which may have to be blacked out.

The firemen on duty at theatres with stage shows will be in complete charge of safety measures during an air raid Chief McCarthy informed the managers. He urged that staffs be instructed to follow orders from the firemen, who are experts in handling crowds or other emergencies. Theatres without firemen on duty were urged to provide direct fire telegraph boxes so that expert aid can be summoned instantly in event of trouble.

Managers were told that they were advised not to notify audiences of the raid unless they learned of it by the noise of exterior sirens or bombs. In that event they were told to make a brief announcement, urge people to remain calm and continue the program. In the event projection power fails it was suggested that theatres prepare copies of old favorite songs to occupy audience attention with community singing.

Children should not be released unattended or until an all clear signal has been heard.

Confer with Police

Managers were advised to confer at once with the Captain of their local police precinct and the nearest fire company chief on plans for the protection of citizens in their particular zone. In some instances, it was said, authorities may use theatres as emergency shelters. In any case managers were told that they should provide public haven to the extent of their facilities.

Ed Sullivan, columnist and chief Times Square air raid warden also spoke. He urged managers to observe the "on with the show" tradition to calm public fear and repeated the "common sense" watchword. Harry Brandt was chairman of the meeting.

Blackout of New York City, has not yet been ordered despite repeated rumors of an early test. Preparations are being rushed throughout the city and by the managers of theatres however to arrange marquee and outside lighting circuits for a quick blackout. San Francisco managers reported difficulty in this respect.

On Monday, police and fire department air raid wardens in a three minute test demonstration for newsreel cameramen cleared the Times Square sector of all persons at 10 A.M. Traffic was halted and all pedestrians and riders forced to take shelter. The films are to be used by the Office of Civilian Defense as part of an instruction reel.

State blackout tests ordered by Governor Lehman last week were started at once in many cities. Practice blackouts were planned in Buffalo, Binghamton, Port Dickinson, Syracuse and Rochester. At New York city also, many buildings have darkened beacon lights on their towers for the duration. The RCA sign and Rockefeller center floodlights have been darkened.

Stringent Rules on Coast

The most stringent blackout measures have been enforced on the Pacific Coast. The Harbor area in Los Angeles, including Long Beach, San Pedro and other sections adjacent to the harbor are under strict blackout orders. Los Angeles has had one blackout alarm, on December 10th, when the city was dark for three hours. The blackout was termed 90 per cent effective by officials.

FILMS, TOO, GO FROM DEFENSE TO OFFENSE

George J. Schaefer, chairman of the coordinating committee of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, announced Tuesday, in New York, that the committee hereafter will be known as War Activities Committee — Motion Picture Industry, and that, in view of the new war conditions the committee had decided to appoint a full-time executive to coordinate the industry's war activities under the direction of the executive group. Francis S. Harmon, who has been acting as coordinator for the committee cooperating for national defense, has been appointed to the position and has been designated as executive vice-chairman of the War Activities Committee. Mr. Harmon immediately resigned from the MPPDA.

The changes were determined upon at a meeting of the executive group attended by representatives of exhibitors, distributors, producers, artists and trade press.

A budget committee to study and arrange for financing the cost of the industry's war activities was appointed, consisting of Si Fabian, R. B. Wilby and Joseph H. Hazen.

RECOVERY SLOW FROM WAR SLUMP

automobile patronage at night foresee practically deserted theatres.

California grosses during the first week of war in many cases were reported to have dropped as much as 75 per cent and the average was said to be less than 50 per cent of normal. Fox West Coast, and other major circuits reported business way down. Theatre attendance, off sharply since Sunday, was reduced to virtually nil in neighborhood and subsequent run houses last night as all Southern California underwent complete blackout when enemy planes reported overhead. As one theatre executive said, "We might just as well have not opened our houses last night."

Upturn Over Weekend

An upturn over the weekend however encouraged West Coast managers and many expressed hope that the public was adjusting itself to wartime conditions and soon would return to the theatres. Charles Skouras, head of Fox West Coast reported that theatre managers had begun consultation on possible changes to daytime and early evening operating hours.

Seattle, Portland and smaller cities of the Pacific northwest were hard hit by the slump and blackout. Estimates of the decrease ranged from 50 to 75 per cent of normal. Only newsreel theatres, aided by special issues, and the installation of radios and news wires were able to maintain a normal pace.

Blackout regulations ordered by the Army and Navy caused a hurried rearrangement of schedules last week. All theatres in Astoria, Ore., and other Columbia river cities, and near the naval base at Bremerton on Puget Sound were forced to close at 5:30 p.m. when blackout orders required the cancelling of evening assemblages.

An 11 p.m. blackout curfew at Portland closed theatres at 10:30 p.m. The J. J. Parker and Hamrick Evergreen circuits and all neighborhood houses changed screenings to the new schedule. Several started noon matinees or early evening openings. Newspaper ads urged patrons to "Attend theatres early".

Five San Francisco theatres abruptly closed during the first week of war with Japan, two of them ostensibly for repairs. Heads of Golden State and San Francisco Theatres circuits, representing 40 houses, after four meetings decided to remain open in the hope business will get better.

During the first three blackouts business dropped 60 to 70 per cent in most theatres. One neighborhood house reported only two patrons during the second blackout. The Telenews and Newsreel theatres are doing the best business, especially during the day, with fair reports also from the Clay Theatre, a foreign language house currently showing "One Day in Soviet Russia" and Soviet war news.

Theatres Used for Shelters

Theatres were used for shelters in Santa Cruz, Watsonville, and other cities in the area between Monterey and Santa Cruz when army officials evacuated a 40 mile long strip of coast line for a depth of half a mile. All families in the area were ordered out on Saturday night but later permitted to return. The evacuees were sheltered in theatres, schools and other places of public assembly.

In mid continent business recovered much more swiftly from the first shock of war as patrons left home radio receivers to resume normal entertainment activities. Detroit daytime business was described as normal although evening patronage continued 20 per cent below par. Neighborhood theatres recovered more swiftly.

In Pittsburgh war killed night business at theatres during the first week. Christmas shoppers and top bookings kept matinee business at normal although figures were below anticipated booms. Grosses perked up last weekend, and although radio news still cut receipts exhibitors looked for normalcy soon. Lush industrial payrolls and a general freedom in spending them despite war tenseness were cited by theatre men as justification for optimism over boxoffice futures.

Rochester Loew houses have installed special auxiliary lighting systems. Manager Lester Pollock of the Rochester has installed a public address system to inform audiences of news and instructions and a special money drawer has been installed in the boxoffice.

At Jacksonville, Fla., theatre attendance has taken a decided drop since the attack on Pearl Harbor. Several theatres made announcements during the show and many patrons left the theatre immediately. Throughout the city the radio continues to hold the attention of everyone.

In Albany the 60 to 75 per cent drop below normal business, which attended wartime's first five days had started to straighten itself out over the past week-end.

Listening to News

It had been reported that one 3700 seat theatre drew less than 100 patrons after 8 p.m. on the Sunday night when war began. The past week-end saw close to normal business in the Fabian, Warner and independent houses.

In every instance, radio was blamed far more than wartime morale for the drop in business. An independent check-up by one advertiser in the territory showed 86 per cent of the people using their radio sets from 7 to 11 p.m. on a night when the President was not listed. The same check-up indicated nearly every set in the area was tuned to President Roosevelt's Tuesday night talk.

New Haven exhibitors report a definite and sudden drop in business following the Japanese war news. Following a record early Christmas rush, retailers too reported a slump.

SOME SPECIAL EVENTS CANCELLED BY WAR

The declaration of war and impending blackouts throughout the country are beginning to show their effect on the entertainment business. It was announced in New York this week that the annual New York Film Critics awards which was held in the Rainbow Room in Rockefeller Center in previous years, has been cancelled.

In New Orleans, for the third time in its 115-year history the Mardi Gras has been called off by officials of 38 masking and pageant holding organizations for the duration of the war.

A. H. Blank, head of Tri-States Theatre Corp., at Des Moines, a Paramount partner, has notified all Paramount partners that the dinner honoring Y. Frank Freeman that was to be held in Hollywood January 28th, as a special award to the winning theatre managers in the nine-week "Salute to Y. Frank Freeman" drive, had been abandoned at the request of Mr. Freeman.

Although business in practically every line in the Cincinnati territory is far above the holiday level of previous years, theatrewise it is considerably below 1940, the traditional pre-Christmas slump being acelerated by the war. Suburbans and neighborhoods are the most seriously affected, exhibitors say. Reports range from a decrease of 20 to 60 per cent to "business being ruined."

In Norwood, Ohio, the closing of the Chevrolet and Fisher Body plants, due to priorities, has thrown several thousand out of work. Theatres in the area are feeling the effects. These are the two principal industries in this Cincinnati suburb. Other situations report similar shut downs either current or contemplated.

St. Louis theatres still remain behind normal grosses although a slight upturn was noted over the weekend. Fanchon and Marco and other circuits were using extra advertising in an effort to offset the drop. The drop during the first week of war was estimated at between 35 and 60 per cent.

Nazi Theatres Close Quickly

The exhibition of German films in the United States ended abruptly last week as the half dozen theatres which had still been exhibiting Nazi and pro-Nazi product closed their doors following the declaration of war between the United States and the Reich. As reported in Motion Picture Herald last week, George Nitze, president of Ufa Films, official distributor of German product in the United States, was seized by Federal officers and taken to Ellis Island. The Ufa office at Rockefeller Center was closed.

Three theatres in New York's Yorkville, German section, closed at midweek. They were the Garden, 158 East 86th Street; the Casino, also on East 86th Street, and the 96th Street Theatre at 96th Street and Third Avenue.

At Milwaukee Joseph Pastor closed his German Kino for alterations, announcing that the house would reopen with American films on December 25th. Theatres in Chicago, San Francisco, Rochester, Buffalo, Brooklyn, and Irvington, N. J., which have shown Nazi and Italian films intermittently for the past five years were reported under investigation by federal officers.

War Again Upsets Overseas Business

Declarations of war between the United States and Japan, Italy and Germany has caused a reshuffling in many of the overseas trade routes used by film companies in the transaction of business in Europe, the Far East and Australasia. Atlantic sea routes used to carry film and executives between the U. S., Lisbon and London were shut down. It is expected that direct communication to Britain by seas would be increased. Film shippers sought cargo space for reels on the grounds that they are important to morale both in the United States and Great Britain.

Australian prints were rerouted around the Cape of Good Hope and through Capetown, South Africa, as the Manila route was blocked. Home offices report that so far all company employees in the war zone, or en route home from it, are safe.

Theatre business in Manila has been completely halted as the island beat off repeated Japanese invasion attempts. Total blackouts have been imposed. Messages received by the foreign departments of 20th Century-Fox, Warners and MGM indicated that no film company property had been damaged, up to midweek, in the air attacks on Manila. Universal from Singapore on Monday received word that

Robert Lurie, its manager there, and the exchange staff were safe.

Blackouts in the Canal Zone, Panama, Costa Rica and Nicaragua have suspended night theatre operations in those areas. Theatres remain open during the daytime, however.

Honolulu theatres are continuing to operate, according to reports from the Hawaiian Islands, although military administrators and the rigid blackout provisions restrict exhibition hours to a period between 10 a. m. and 4 p.m. No closings have been reported, and attendance has been maintained despite civil anxiety. Lobbies and basement lounges have been protected with sandbagging for use as raid shelters.

Freeze Film Funds Here

Funds from countries under Axis domination, said to total some $300,000, deposited in American banks to pay for American motion pictures are expected to go under the control of the Alien Property Custodian, together with all other property of enemy nationals in the United States, it was reported in Washington.

Permits for the withdrawal of such funds by the film companies have been canceled. No action is expected to be taken with respect to their disposition until the Alien Property Custodian has completed the seizure of all such properties, including copyrights and patents as well as physical assets.

It is expected that the procedure followed will be that set up in the first World War, when the APC settled claims of American nationals from the funds and properties of enemies which had been sized. The assets taken over were used to meet the claims of Americans against nationals of enemy nations

Newsreels Delayed By Censors

Whether or not actual newsreel shots of the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor would be released soon could not be determined on Monday. Paramount News, Fox Movietone, MGM-News of the Day, Universal News and RKO-Pathe News spokesmen disclosed that pictures would be subject to rigid censorship by Army and Navy officials. It was understood that the U. S. Government might consider releasing some part of the pictures as a result of the public report given by Secretary Knox of the Navy to President Roosevelt, which received nationwide publicity on Monday.

One newsreel spokesman said that it was quite likely some shots were en route some place between Honolulu and Washington via the Navy. Another declared that a cameraman representing his firm in Hawaii had cabled for "more money and more film," but that the New York office had not yet determined whether or not this newsreelman had secured actual shots of the Pearl Harbor attack.

Meanwhile, in New York on Monday, at a meeting of the heads of newsreel firms with Col. Mason Wright of the Army Intelligence Department, at the Hotel Warwick, war-time regulations for newsreels were discussed officially for the first time. No definite decisions were reached and no formal regulations made. As official regulations are decided upon, additional meetings will be held from time to time.

Colonel Wright asked for data on all news cameramen and, pending issuance of special Army passes or the assignment of cameramen to action zones, each man will be investigated by the Intelligence Department. A maximum of two men may be permitted on assignments in war zones, it was indicated. It reported that cameramen might be classed as semi-official members of the armed forces and subjected to military assignment to the war areas.

Pictures must be turned over to Intelligence for scrutiny before release. Another possibility was the pooling of all war footage with its simultaneous release to all firms by the Government. This has been done in England throughout the war.

In Washington it was reported on Monday that legislation is expected to be enacted this week which would give President Roosevelt sweeping war-time powers to impose censorship on all communications, radio, press, telephone and telegraph, and, presumably, motion pictures, in the rigid censorship planned, the first ordered by the U. S. Government since World War I.

Following Congress' declaration of war on Germany and Italy last week, all telephone, cable and telegraph messages to Continental Europe, except for England and Russia, were examined by Navy censors.

Chairman James L. Fly of the Federal Communications Commission, in a press interview on Monday in Washington, declared that the FCC and the Defense Communications Board were "not going into censorship" of radio broadcasting and press wire service. The FCC, he said, had "no plans, no desires, to go into censorship."

Paramount Theatre Managers Receive Special Emergency Instructions

Dispatched this week to the operators of Paramount's 1,200-odd theatres in the U. S. were detailed instructions for operations and conduct in the event of air raids or warnings thereof. The precautions were compiled by Robert ("Bob") Weitman, who directs Paramount's key house, the Paramount, at Times Square, New York. They are as follows:

SAFETY OF PATRONS is our most important duty. We can avert possible serious calamity by proper preparation, and calm, cool, efficient systematic operation.

Panic can have tragic results even without the aid of fire. The reason why some people become panicky in a crisis is because they never stopped to think what they might do in an emergency.

How many people really "look for the nearest exit" before they settle themselves for the show? How many people, on going to a public building ever think of getting out in a hurry? The upshot is the same in every public disturbance; all the occupants attempt to go out the same way at the same time—the same way they came in, which is the only way they know. And that pathway promptly becomes congested. One impatient shove, one excited scream and a taut crowd becomes panic-stricken. Please study and absorb a knowledge of the following points to guide us in an emergency.

I. WEEKLY DRILLS
- (a) Mechanical.
- (b) To discuss possible situations which might arise in or outside the theatre.
- (c) Impress on employes the importance and necessity of drills and the responsibility of the theatre and its staff.
- (d) Location of all fire fighting equipment in the theatre and proper uses.
- (e) Location and method of turning in a fire alarm.
- (f) Every employe has his post and duties.

II. Engineers and electricians keep Managers' Office informed of whereabouts at all times.

III. The "Show" goes on under any circumstances unless notified by a member of the Management.

IV. An alarm is given only by a member of the Management and in no case is an employe to take it upon himself to give any alarm.

V. An employe is to notify a member of the Management immediately in the event he hears of a disturbance, and air raid or otherwise.

VI. Night Superintendent is to notify Managers and Treasurers and all department heads in the event of an emergency. Detail instructions to night crew.

VII. Stage Manager contact performers and musicians in dressing rooms. Dispatch crew to posts.

VIII. Ushers take posts so that patrons can see them visibly—to give confidence and assurance.

IX. Doormen and Ticket Takers—
If an emergency exists, such as an air raid, and we are approached by people seeking shelter, the Treasurer will be there to assist you in admitting these people, gratis.

X. Stage Doorman—If rushed by people seeking shelter—admit them and call member of the Management.

XI. Treasurer—Immediately assume positions near Box Office and Ticket Doors. Keep only a working cash fund in Box Office at all times. No surplus cash.

XII. Projectionists—Advisability of closing shutters.

XIII. Stage Manager—Asbestos curtain. Skylight.

XIV. Superintendent—General housekeeping in good condition.

XV. Engineer—Determine whether or not to turn off the fresh air intake. If there is an outside fire and smoke can enter the fresh air ducts, turn it off.

XVI. In case of a local emergency such as an air raid, general procedure will be supplemented by an announcement from the stage.
- (a) House lights must be raised before any announcement is made.
- (b) Important to decide whether or not disturbance calls for clearing house.
  1. If necessary to clear house—by prearranged signal—ushers open specified exit doors, depending on their post and return to direct patrons.
  2. Manager announces—"Because of a disturbance in the neighborhood, we have been requested to clear the theatre. Please use the nearest exit. The ushers will direct you."
  3. Play music, whether band, organ or recording.
  4. If stage show is on, it would be best if the personality conducting the show makes the announcement; but only if told to do so by a member of the Management.
  5. Members of the staff serve as an example to the patrons and must manifest calm and must make every move without rushing, excitement or exhibition of fear. We prepare for emergencies, but something unforeseen may occur which requires cool and collected thoughts resulting in good judgment.
- (c) If there is an outside disturbance and we do not clear the house—
  1. Manager announces—"There is an outside disturbance, but there is no danger in the theatre. The show will go on."
     If it is an air raid, the audience is told that they must remain in the theatre by request of the authorities.
  2. All members of staff take posts for quieting and assuring the patrons.

XVII. In event of an air raid—elevator operator follows same operation as he would in case of fire and then brings the elevator to the Loge Floor.

XVIII. We have a trained nurse in the theatre, and because of the current situation, we are putting on an additional nurse. The nurse is located in the First Aid Room on the 10th Floor.

XIX. Our House Doctor has made arrangements to periodically lecture all departments on first aid.

XX. In order to keep calm those whom we have sheltered either in the Lounge or in the lobby, we have a manually operated phonograph, Teri Josefovits at the concert piano, and Frank Judnick with his accordion.

XXI. We have asked our Chief Electrician to point out to the members of the Management the switches which control all outside lighting. This, in the event only that the electrician on duty is not immediately available for the emergency.

XXII. Electric Current—the theatre is supplied by three power houses. We have A.C. and D.C. current.
- (a) D.C. current feeds emergency lighting, such as aisle lights, exit lights, foyer lights and segregated spots. It also feeds the arc for the projection machines.
- (b) A.C. current feeds the sound system and the projection motors and all other lighting equipment.
  1. In the event of failure of the D.C. current, we can generate direct current with our A.C. motor generator (in the Engineers' Fan Room) to feed the arc light in the projection machines.
  2. In the event of failure of the A.C. current, we cannot run the projectors nor could we have sqund. However, we could have arc lights and emergency lighting—and therefore still have a show.
  3. In the event of failure of all electrical current, we are at present getting estimates for purchasing special battery lamps.

XXIII. Check the pamphlet on fire fighting equipment and acquaint yourself with the uses of various extinguishers.

High Adventure a La Dumas

Producer Edward Small's liking for films of adventure in the swashbuckling tradition, which gave showmen "Count of Monte Cristo," "Man in the Iron Mask" and "Son of Monte Cristo," is again displayed in this adaptation of an Alexander Dumas novel. In it Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., portrays twins, fighters both, a device giving him double latitude for his tendency toward heroics, while Akim Tamiroff as the arch villain who rises to domination of Corsica by a process of murder furnishes a characterization that dominates the picture.

The screenplay by George Bruce and Howard Estabrook is designed to pack a maximum of action, thrill and suspense into the running time. The tale is of twins joined together at birth, separated by surgery, kept apart and in ignorance of their twinship until coming of age, when they set out to avenge their parents' death.

By what is called "physical telepathy" one twin reflects the emotions, impulses and experiences of the other, including his love for the girl in the story, until death terminates that relationship.

Incidents in the story, directed by Gregory Ratoff, range from swordplay and knife throwing to torture, banditry of assorted kinds and abduction of the fair lady by both friend and foe. They are given substantial credibility, in part by the basic incredibility of the twinship as treated.

Previewed at the studio for a turnout of press people, who found that the picture took their minds off the war, which is the standard test for entertainment merit at this point.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Hellzapoppin'

(Universal)

Screwy Musical

Deliberately setting out to be the craziest film ever made, this picture uses every known camera and vaudeville trick to attain that end. The sheer novelty will bring laughs from every audience. Patrons who like their comedy on the wacky side may consider it one of the screen's funniest.

The inspiration was the successful Broadway production by Olsen and Johnson, who give the picture what little unity it has. But a plot in most musicals means little; here it means nohing. In fact, although there as a few songs by Don Raye and Gene Paul, including "Watch the Birdie" and "Heaven for Two," the music is secondary to the comedy.

A "Hellzapoppin'" number opens the picture. After this the scene is the studio where the director is trying to persuade Olsen and Johnson to get down to the business of making a film. A writer tells them a story and they get into it. The chief action takes place at a house party and play given on the estate of the parents of the girl in the case, played by Jan Frazee.

Every kind of trick photography is used. Olsen and Johnson talk back to the operator in the projection booth; one character, Hugh Herbert, a detective-magician, steps from behind a curtain and talks to the audience; the projectionist screens part of a western by mistake.

Even without the Olsen and Johnson nonsense, Jules Levey, the producer, has given the picture good entertainment values. It is on an elaborate scale and includes excellent performances, especially those of Martha Raye and Mischa Auer, in addition to those already mentioned. Glenn Tryon and Alex Gottlieb were the associate producers and H. C. Potter, the director, did a good job of organizing the insanity. Jack Otterson's art direction required settings ranging from a swimming pool, complete with waterfall, to backgrounds of every known and unknown origin.

Previewed at the Rivoli theatre, New York, to a late afternon audience there to see "How Green Was My Valley." The customers greeted the opening of the surprise film with applause and laughed loud and frequently but not hilariously.—MARTIN QUIGLEY, JR.

Battle for the Pacific

(Arthur Menken)

Documentary

Two days after Japan struck her first martial blow against the United States and the Far East became a war-embattled zone, Arthur Menken, Paramount Newsreel cameraman, showed 8,000 feet of film taken during a six-month tour of China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Singapore, Java, Dutch Guinea and Hawaii, first victim of Japanese aggression.

"Battle for the Pacific" is the title of Mr. Menken's picture, which runs close to two hours. Mr. Menken travelled 35,000 miles in making these pictures, on land, plane and ship. Since his return to the United States five weeks ago he has been preparing the film for presentation. He will begin a national lecture tour with the picture shortly.

Mr. Menken's commentary for the film was brief, explicit. He pointed out specific details concerning the peacetime agricultural and industrial activities, and military, naval and civilian defense measures of Australia, New Zealand, the Dutch East Indies, Java, Dutch Guinea and the Malay States. His shots of Naval bases in Singapore were exclusives. The filming of Pearl Harbor defenses and Hawaiian land military preparations were particularly meaningful.

Japan's bombing of Chungking, China, 36 raids in one week, were included in the films. Mr. Menken also photographed scenes in Japan, working under Government restrictions, showing the people conducting air-raid precautions and developing at greater intensity war industries.

Viewed at the Hotel Edison, New York, at a meeting of B'nai B'rith.—J.E.S.

War Clouds in the Pacific

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Special

Completed by the Canadian government just prior to the Japanese declaration of war, "War Clouds in the Pacific" has been taken for distribution by Metro Goldwyn Mayer because of the film's prophetic depiction of Japanese policies. Accompanied by a documented commentary, similar to that used by March of Time, the film reveals the immense volume of Trans-Pacific commerce, with Japan in sixth place among the trading nations of the globe; the degree of Nazi infiltration in Nippon's factories, shipyards, laboratories and governmental chambers; the key figures in the Nazi inspired strategy of the New Japan, and the indicated tactics of the Japanese sea and land forces. Also shown are the critical spots for possible attacks in Pacific waters and along the Asiatic mainland from central China to the Philippines; the challenging question of direct bombing routes through the Aleutian Islands to the Pacific Northwest, and the part which may be assumed by the Soviet Union in the current crisis. The film also shows, and the commentary does not hesitate to explain, somewhat anachronously how well Pearl Harbor, Wake Island, Guam and other strategic points in the Pacific are fortified and prepared for any attack.

Documentary

Reminiscent of "Harvests of Tomorrow," a U.S. Department of Agriculture film based on New England's farm life, "Minnesota Document," produced by the Visual Education Service of the University of Minnesota, is another documentary of the good earth, made possible by a grant of $140,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation for a four-year project in educational film production. Its director, Robert Kissack, Jr., who was in New York last week for a press preview at the Museum of Modern Art, said it had not yet been determined whether the film would be distributed theatrically or whether its showings would be confined only to educational and institutional channels.

The 48-minute documentary traces the history of Minnesota from the period following the Civil War and the early days of western expansion, to current times, depicting the important part the soil contributed to the life of its people, the majority of whom are descendants of the Swedish, Finnish, German, Norwegian and Danish immigrants who originally cleared the land, grew the wheat and developed the timber and iron ore industries of the state.

An original musical score, composed by John Verrall, provides an excellent background. For the most part, "Minnesota Document" is interesting because of its factual nature. The direction, however, is too slow in certain sequences, indicative of the fact that earnest, sincere project-workers do not necessarily make expert film-producers.—J.E.S.

Film Alliance to Produce

Film Alliance of the United States, which recently turned over some of its product to Astor Pictures and Monogram for distribution, will become a production organization shortly. Under plans now in work Film Alliance will produce a series of pictures in Hollywood.

BOB HOPE, CROSBY, SKELTON, CROOKS, SMITH AND BRICE TOP RADIO POLL

Best Comedian Wins Champion of Champions Class; Skelton Named Outstanding New Star; Crooks First of Vocalists

Bob Hope is radio's brightest star, the Champion of Champions, as designated by more than 600 newspaper radio editors and columnists.

Bob Hope, laugh man of the Pepsodent program, thus heads, for the first time, Motion Picture Daily's radio popularity poll, conducted each year for FAME, Quigley Publications' annual amusement personality rating guide.

He was second last year. Jack Benny was first. Mr. Benny is second this year.

Third is Bing Crosby.

The Champion of Champions classification is the best in the field which included such categories as the Season's Outstanding New Star, Film Players on the Air, Comedians, Comediennes, Comedy Teams, Masters of Ceremonies, Male Vocalists, Female Vocalists, Commentators, Sports Announcers, Studio Announcers, Dance Bands, Symphonic Conductors, Dramatic Programs, Variety Programs, Quiz Shows, Children's Programs, Daytime Serials, Educational Programs, and Special Events.

Mr. Hope not only is Champion of Champions; he is best comedian; and, again, Mr. Benny is below him. Fred Allen is third, in the radio writers' estimation.

Third in Six Years

The Hope election makes him the third leader, in the six years of choosing Champions. Others were Mr. Benny, last year's, and the first year's choice; and Edgar Bergen, who owes some success to his chum, Charlie McCarthy.

Mr. Crosby, third this year, was third last year, and the year before.

Emergence into the radio writers' field of view, first occurred for Bob Hope in 1939: he was seventh in the Champion category, and second in the Comedian. As noted last year, he was second in both groups.

This year's voting discloses new names which may be Champions next year, or after, and leaders in their categories. Thus Red Skelton enters the lists as the Outstanding New Star of the Season. Kate Smith relinquishes her hold as Best Popular Female vocalist, to Dinah Shore.

It is noteworthy, however, that Bing Crosby, for four years the Best Popular Male Vocalist, took that accolade a fifth time.

Fanny Brice, Best Comedienne for three years, in this poll makes it four.

Fibber McGee and Molly for the third consecutive year are regarded the Best Comedy Team.

Best Film Player on the Air is Edward G. Robinson; Leopold Stokowski received the award for symphonic conducting; and H. V. Kaltenborn is again termed the Best Commentator.

Mr. Kaltenborn had that title two years; but in 1940, Raymond Gram Swing succeeded him, only now again to give the position to Mr. Kaltenborn.

BOB HOPE, Champion of Champions

Guy Lombardo's orchestra was voted the best in the "sweet" classification, for the third year; and Glenn Miller's "swing" band achieved top rating in its field for the second year.

Gladys Swarthout, in the year's poll, climbed from runner-up position to Best Classical Female Vocalist. Richard Crooks is again Best Male Vocalist.

Consolidate Four Paramount Suits

Four stockholders' suits against Paramount, in the New York Supreme Court, were consolidated Tuesday. The suits ask return to the company of monies paid by Paramount executives to George Browne and Willie Bioff, convicted extortionists. Former Judge Alfred J. Talley will be trial counsel for the stockholders, who contend the payments were improper, and who ask accountings.

RADIO OFF TO WAR, BUT TELEVISION SITS ON THE SIDELINE FOR DURATION

Defense Communications Board Receives Presidential Authority to Designate and Control Air Facilities

Radio has enlisted.

Its little brother, television, cannot enlist.

Such were Governmental orders from Washington, last week, immediately upon the declaration of war.

President Roosevelt's Defense Communications Board received authority from him to "designate radio facilities for use, control, inspection, or closure by the War, or Navy Departments, or other agencies of the Government."

At the same time, observers in the capital predicted television development would come practically to a halt during the war.

Not sufficiently advanced at the outbreak of the war to provide anything like a national service, defense officials will not look with favor upon any expension of the industry because of the large volumes of critical materials which would be required, according to word heard in the Capitol.

The Army and Navy will need all the radio equipment that can be made, in the event of extended hostilities, with the very limited quantities of steel, aluminum, rubber, copper and other materials that will be available, it was explained.

To Be "Kept Alive"

On Monday, Federal Communications Commission chairman James Fly said it had not been decided whether the "nucleus" of commercial operations already provided could be maintained, and that that was a problem "to be worked out in light of the existing situation."

However, he declared, television will be "kept alive."

The sweeping authority given the Defense Communications Board last week was qualified Monday by Mr. Fly's assurance that the Board would interfere as little as possible with private radio broadcasting. Mr. Fly is chairman of the Board as well as of the FCC.

He added: "I need not tell you that the DCB is simply not going into censorship. That is not its job, and it has no plans and no desire to go into it.

"The same is true of the FCC. We are seeking only to get communications generally into a state of military preparedness."

He asserted broadcasters thus far had "done a fine job," and need not become alarmed.

Previously, censorship of radio had put in appearance for the first time in this country in the advising of the Mutual Broadcasting System, by its Manila correspondent, Royal Arch Gunison, that the Navy would allow him to broadcast only twice daily, and would censor his script.

General censorship in this country made official entrance Tuesday. The President named Byron Price, executive news editor of the Associated Press, director of consorship. He qualified, that radio, using voluntary censorship, would probably avoid trouble.

The censorship will affect radio mostly in its international communications.

The prime function of the DCB, however, is understood to be that of a master monitor, shutting down stations which may serve as beacons to enemy raiders, or which may interfere with military messages; turning stations over to one or all of the armed forces, when neeessary; and generally coordinating radio in the national defense seheme.

Last week, Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, urged members not to create any unnecessary alarms. The message was issued because of the "war footing" of many stations immediately after the Japanese attack.

Many shifted to 24 hour operations; they flashed news bulletins rapidly, repeatedly; they summoned commentators experienced and new; they informed the public well and quickly in the first few hours of war. And they also, it was feared, unduly alarmed the public in some localities, because they relayed information received without being able to check accuracy.

Most stations interrupted, and even shoved aside, commereial "plugs," and even programs, for war bulletins.

In New York, and on the West Coast, this week stations were preparing standardized alert, alarm, and all-clear signals, to synchronize with those issued by police and the armed forces in each locality.

Announcers will read, in these instances, prepared texts, which will, in general, emphasize speed and calmness.

Monitor Stations Set

On the West Coast, it is reported the station with the greatest power, and on the lowest wave length, will be beacon for air raid signals, the other stations monitoring its signals, and leaving the air when it does.

Air raid alarms caused Los Angeles and San Francisco stations to leave the air last week.

In New York, the city-owned station, WNYC, will be the beacon. WNEW, WMCA, WJZ, WHN all have direct lines to the city station, enabling them to broadeast simultaneously the instruetions received first at WNYC from police and the armed forces.

In all localities, radio stations in some degree added precautions against sabotage. In New York, armed guards were at transmitters; and, at the Columbia Broadcasting System, studio audiences were banned in the home building; and additionally the National Broadeasting Company barred studio tourists from its engineering rooms. In Cincinnati, the Crosley Corporation, operator of WLW, and WLWO, asked civil aeronauties officials to bar the stations' site, Mason, Ohio, to air traffic.

The NBC Red and Blue networks urged listeners not to telephone radio stations or official agencies about news reports, adding that verification of those reports would be duly broadcast.

Both the NBC and CBS operated their stations in key areas, 24 hours daily.

BELIEVE 90,000,000 HEARD ROOSEVELT

The greatest number of persons ever to listen to a broadcast, heard President Roosevelt's speech Tuesday, December 9th, the Cooperative Analysis of Broadcasting, New York, reported this week. C. E. Hooper, Inc., market research firm, also of New York, said that 90,000,000 persons listened.

The DCB, mentioned before, to which President Roosevelt delegated the sweeping powers described, was set up September, 1940. The powers given it, reminded Washington observers, are merely those already delegated to the President by Section 606 of the Communications Act. That section permits the President to operate communications systems in national emergencies.

Anent the "censorship," intent for which was denied by Mr. Fly, Attorney General Francis Biddle said last week in Washington, that J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, would coordinate the censorship activities of several Government agencies under a "Communications Censorship Board." This was in its preliminary stages, he intimated; and Mr. Hoover, it was understood, would relinquish captaincy later to a permanent board head.

On the Defense Communications Board are Mr. Fly; Herbert Gaston, United States Treasury; Major General Dawson Olmstead, Army Chief Signal Officer; Rear Admiral Leigh Noyes, Director of Naval Communications; Breckenridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State; and representatives of the radio, telegraph, and telephone industries.

"Use Care": Miller

Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadeasters, telegraphed the following, last week, to all stations:

"To all newspapers and radio stations—all those who reach the eyes and ears of the American people—I say this: you have a most grave responsibility to the nation now and for the duration of this war.

"If you feel that your government is not disclosing enough of the truth, you have every right to say so. But—in the absence of all the facts, as revealed by official sources—you have no right to deal out unconfirmed reports in such a way as to make people believe they are gospel truth."

Radio stations broadcasting foreign language programs were advised to continue, last week, by the National Association of Broadcasters. Discontinuation, the NAB asserted, would "tend to demoralize large segments of our population."

The NAB said a Government committee was "investigating the subject."

The War Department asserted last week that its interceptor commands in each area would order stations to shut down, in raids, and advise them when to resume. It added that the following announcement, or ones similar, would be made by stations, upon receipt of orders from the immediate interceptor command:

"At this time, ladies and gentlemen, radio station ..... is temporarily leaving the air in conformity with national defense. Keep your radio on so that upon resumption of our service we may bring you the latest information."

The NBC and CBS networks' suits to erstrain the FCC from enforcing its anti-monopoly regulations, was postponed, Friday, December 12th, in New York Federal Statutory Court, to January 12th. The court also denied the request of FCC attorney Thomas Harris that a stipulation, signed previously, and preventing enforcement until trial decision, be vacated.

The FM "frequency modulation" system of broadcasting has been found successful in intertank communication, by the United States Army Signal Corps. It is in use in approximately 100 tanks, now, in the Second Armored Division, and eliminates the possibility of communication interruption by statie, friction, and other manmade and natural electric sources.

STATE BRINGS 'BIG THREE' TO TRIAL IN MINNESOTA BLOCKS-OF-5 FIGHT

Companies Fight Test Case Despite Resumption of Selling After Lifting of Decree Restriction by N. Y. Court

Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, and RKO went into Ramsey County Court, St. Paul, Minnesota, Monday, to defend themselves against a criminal charge of violating the state's anti-consent decree law, and to obtain a ruling that the law is unconstitutional.

The three companies are being tried for selling films in blocks of five and ten, in violation of the law which compels major film companies to sell an entire season's product at one time, to an exhibitor, and which allows that exhibitor to cancel 20 per cent of that product.

A civil suit, instituted by the majors to obtain a permanent injunction against enforcement of the law, and to have it declared unconstitutional, will be tried in that court in February. Previous efforts by the five majors in the decree, and United Artists, to obtain a temporary injunction, failed some months ago; and at the time, Ramsey County Court Judge Hugo Hanft held the state law constitutional.

Meanwhile, selling of films in the state is in full swing, all the decree-bound majors except Loew's having obtained relief in the New York Federal Court; and, Wednesday, at that court, Loew's was expected to ask for similar relief. Its sales manager, William F. Rodgers, promised exhibitor representatives at last week's "unity" meeting in Chicago, that the company, in the interests of that unity, would resume selling in Minnesota in accordance with its law, not, however, yielding the principle that it maintains is at stake, and which will be determined by the criminal trial now in progress, and the civil suit to come.

Expected to Follow Majors

Loew's was expected to follow the relief procedure of other majors, and will resume selling in Minnesota immediately upon signing of the relief order by the court.

The criminal trial in Ramsey County Court, St. Paul, opened Monday with presentation by the state of facts admitted by the three majors; that Paramount and RKO sold blocks of five pictures, with no cancellation privilege, to David Ratner, operator of the theatre at White Bear; and that Twentieth Century-Fox sold a block of five, also with no cancellation, to Theodore Hamm, operator of the Gem and Oxford theatres, St. Paul.

Trial judge is Albin S. Pearson. Defendants waived jury trial. In the courtroom were Herman Wobber, Twentieth Century-Fox general sales manager; Neil F. Agnew, vice-president and distribution head of Paramount; Colonel Jason Joy, Twentieth Century-Fox studio personnel head and scenario director; Louis Phillips, Paramount home office attorney; William Zimmerman, RKO home office attorney, and Frederick Lorenzen and James Kennedy, New York counsel for Twentieth Century-Fox. The defendants were represented also by Joseph Finley, St. Paul attorney, and David Shearer of Minneapolis.

Ben Blotcky, Paramount branch manager in Minneapolis, admitted the Ratner deal. So did L. E. Goldhammer, RKO branch manager there.

Mr. Ratner admitted receiving the contract.

The two majors' branch managers admitted they knew their companies would release other pictures during the season.

Jack Cohan, Fox salesman, admitted selling the Fox pictures to Mr. Hamm.

All testified the deals were in accordance with the consent decree.

They also noted the deals were made before their companies sought and obtained relief from the decree in the New York court.

Observers noted the questioning was merely perfunctory, to establish cases for defense and prosecution, inasmuch as facts are admitted.

Late Monday, Mr. Shearer began for the defense, saying he would prove the state law unconstitutional; and that it was in restraint of trade; and, therefore, that his clients were not guilty.

Questioning for the state was conducted by James F. Lynch, Ramsey County Attorney, who filed the original criminal charges.

First defense witness, Tuesday, was Colonel Joy, who emphasized that the film industry operated under its own codes, and did not need regulatory legislation.

Mr. Finley and Mr. Shearer served notice they would present a complete history of motion picture operation, also emphasizing its ability to govern itself; and that it is in interstate commerce, and has developed particular practices. Mr. Shearer Tuesday covered production. He noted the fierce competition, which itself tempered the industry, for new players and stories, for established players, for picture release. He declared "uncanny judgment" was necesary to forecast public taste, and aserted "showmanship" was not "subject to monopoly."

DETAILS EXPENSES OF FILM LICENSING

Joseph Finley, attorney for the distributor defendants in the St. Paul trial of the companies for a test violation of the state anti-blocks-of-five law, on Tuesday explained to the court the extra expense involved in the licensing of films by distributors rather than outright sale. He said that in 1941, although less than 600 films were made, there were 10,000,000 print shipments and that 350 prints might be necessary for a single picture, at a total cost of about $40,000.

Educational Use of Films Urged

Harry C. Crawford, manager of the Ambassador theatre in St. Louis, referred to the motion pictures as a "sort of candy-coated educational pill because the patron seldom realizes he is being educated," in a speech delivered before the Missouri Teachers Association in St. Louis last week.

"It is our combined duty to interpret for children those things we would like them to know and we in the motion picture business are charged with a certain amount of this responsibility," said Mr. Crawford.

The motion picture, according to Mr. Crawford, is capable of setting a bad example on impressionable minds, "a responsibility we are cognizant of."

Marcus Acquires Theatre

Manny Marcus, who operates houses in Indianapolis, Fort Wayne, Indiana, and Dayton, Ohio, in addition to the Esquire theatre, in Cincinnati, has taken over the Chevwood and Chevron, Cincinnati suburbans, from Peter and William Palazollo and Deno Spaccarelli, who acquired the houses last September 15, from J. Ebersole Crawford and John Luffborrow, owners. Mr. Marcus will completely renovate and modernize the Chevwood, and complete the Chevron, which is still under construction. Work on this house has been delayed due to priority defense contracts.

New New York Firms

The Secretary of State, New York, has reported formation of new firms, and dissolution of one, as follows: Estates Theatres, Inc., New York, by Paul Raisler, William Billow and Edna Sharpe; Bridge Amusement Co., Inc., New York, by Benjamin N. Nathan, Sylvia Denmark and Gladys Barnett, and Empire Productions, Inc., by Robert Weemolsen, Arnold Gross and Janet Lovkov. Foreign Distributors Corp. has been dissolved.

Theatre Has Revivals

The O'Klare theatre, Eau Claire, Wis., is bringing back during "Revival Week," Dec. 14th to 20th, seven of the outstanding motion picture hits of recent years. Patrons were provided with a list of 40 titles from which to select their favorites. Daily vote standing of the various pictures was posted in the lobby of the theatre during the entire period.

Drive Leaders Announced

J. L. Fitzpatrick and Fred DeRado of the Capitol theatre in Binghamton, N. Y., remained the leaders in "Group A" in the Comerford Theatres Managers Drive, according to the third week's standings announced at the circuit's home office in Scranton, Pa., Monday, December 1st.

'TWO-FACED WOMAN' IS REVISED AND RE-RATED; MGM AFFIRMS PCA POLICY

Additions and Eliminations in Picture Bring Reclassification by Legion; Code Is Called "Practical Instrument"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer returned a revised "Two-Faced Woman" to circulation this week with a raised rating from the Legion of Decency, whose "Class C" (condemnation) of three weeks ago stirred nationwide attention from social and religious organizations and the press, causing the distributor to withdraw the film.

The picture came back with a "Class B" classification, after MGM had made changes, both additions and eliminations, which, the Legion announced, were deemed sufficient to warrant its removal from a "Class C" rating. In its original state, New York's Archbishop Spellman had decreed the picture "an occasion of sin and dangerous to public morals."

The Legion, at headquarters, in New York, on Thursday, said Metro was to use the revised version in all future bookings.

"The Legion appreciates the cooperation of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in bringing about this result," it was said in an announcement to the press.

Affirms Adherence

Released to the press simultaneously with the Legion statement was another, from J. Robert Rubin, vice-president of MGM, affirming the company's adherence to the motion picture industry's Production Code. Said Mr. Rubin:

"In response to criticism, which has been expressed relative to 'Two-Faced Woman' starring Greta Garbo and Melvyn Douglas, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has caused certain changes involving additions and eliminations in the production. The original version will be withdrawn from circulation following existing contractual commitments and the revised version will be made available on all future bookings.

"MGM wishes, at this time, to affirm its adherence to a policy of providing only motion picture entertainment of the highest artistic and entertainment quality, all of which is to be in conformity with reasonable standards of morality and good taste.

"To the end of maintaining right moral standards in the entertainment produced by this company, it has been and shall continue to be our policy to produce motion pictures in accordance with the moral standards of the Motion Picture Production Code.

"The Production Code which is the basis of the organized industry's system of self regulation represents a practical application to public screen entertainment of the fixed objective standards of morality which, after several years' experience has proven itself to be a reasonable and practical measure in the public interest."

Last Sunday, in thousands of Roman Catholic churches throughout the U. S., the Legion of Decency pledge was renewed, an annual procedure since December, 1934, following a nationwide uprising by social and church organizations, and the press, against the particularly pronounced off-color Hollywood production trend of the time.

This year's pledge renewal was in response to the invitation of the Bishops' Committee on Motion Pictures, of which the Most Reverend John T. McNicholas, O.P., S.T.M., Archbishop of Cincinnati, is chairman.

A press statement from Legion headquarters, last Friday, announcing the renewal, declared:

"It is confidently hoped that all persons interested in the maintenance of cinema moral standards will support the Legion in its insistence upon decent screen entertainment.

The pledge includes:

"I condemn indecent and immoral motion pictures and those which glorify crime or criminals. I promise to unite with all who protest against them.

"I acknowledge my obligation to form a right conscience about pictures that are dangerous to my moral life.

"As a member of the Legion of Decency, I pledge myself to see only good pictures. I promise, further, to stay away altogether from places of amusement which show pictures that can be an occasion of sin."

Exhibitors Warned Against Excuses of Forced Playing

Approximately a quarter of a million Catholics in the Albany diocese in upstate New York, as elsewhere in the country, renewed the Legion of Decency pledge last Sunday to abstain from seeing immoral pictures, under circumstances which suggested a renewed drive against objectionable films. The Albany diocese was the first in the country to successfully drive smutty magazines from newsstands in the upstate territory by a coordinated campaign a few years ago and there were indications locally that theatres would be closely checked.

A letter from Albany's Bishop Edmund F. Gibbons accompanied the diocesan reading of the Legion pledge, calling attention to the Legion's weekly rating of pictures. He called attention to an industry slackening in observation of its self-imposed regulations (under the Production Code Administration). Economic suasion through attending or boycotting theatres because of a persistent policy of booking films found objectionable by the Legion was suggested.

Priests throughout the Albany diocese cited the film Consent Decree, advising that managers of individual theatres and circuits no longer could take refuge in a plea that they had to "take every picture" offered by a producer. Explanation of the rejection rights under blocks-of-five was generally made.

Of the 14 motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, eight were approved for general patronage, four were classified as unobjectionable for adults and two were found to be objectionable in part. The latest motion picture classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The Blonde Comet," "Melody Lane," "Midnight Angel," "Mr. Bug Goes to Town," "Road Agent," "Sing for Your Supper," "Steel Against the Sky" and "Thundering Hoofs." Cleveland Variety To Honor Bert Stearn

Bert Stearn, recently appointed western division sales manager for United Artists, having been promoted from district manager covering Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Cincinnati and Indianapolis, will be given a testimonial dinner by the local Variety Club on January 5th at the Statler Hotel, Cleveland. Dave Miller, Universal district manager, is general committee chairman. His assistants are representatives of all of the offices in Mr. Stearn's former district and comprise the following: Pittsburgh, Harry Hendel, Nat Beier; Cincinnati, Ike Libson, Harris Dudelson; Indianapolis, Marc Wolf, G. R. Frank; Chicago, Charles Stern; Cleveland, Dave Miller, I. J. Schmertz, James Hendel, Lester Zucker, A. M. Goodman, M. B. Horwitz and E. C. Pearlstein. Mr. Pearlstein is in charge of publicity. Manny Landers, orchestra leader, and Eddie Miller, manager of Warners' Hippodrome, are in charge of the entertainment. And I. J. Schmertz, Twentieth Century-Fox branch manager, is chairman of the ticket committee.

Workers Give $475,826

Thirty thousand studio workers contributed $475,826 to the Los Angeles Community Chest, the motion picture division of that fund reported Tuesday. Last year's contribution was $467,062. The report, in the Biltmore Bowl, at noon, was made during a broadcast, in which Edward Arnold, president of the Screen Actors Guild, represented the industry for Louis B. Mayer, ill.

CIRCUIT-DISTRIBUTOR 'DEALS' HIT BY ARBITRATOR; DECREE ASSAILED

'Inadequacies' in Rules Attacked by Law School Dean in Long Island Case; St. Louis Complaint on Clearance Dismissed

Sharp criticism of "inadequacies" in the consent decree and a charge that distributors and circuits with large buying power restrict new enterprise in exhibition in a manner "inimical to the public interest and unhealthy for the industry" are contained in the first decision on a some run case in the New York tribunal. The opinion was written by Geoge S. Harris, dean of the Newark Law School.

Mr. Harris dismissed without prejudice the some run complaint of the Strand Theatre, Astoria, Long Island, against the five consenting distributors. The Skouras circuit was cited in the original complaint but did not intervene. The Cedar Operating Company owned by Jacob Levy operates the Strand.

St. Louis Case No. 4, clearance action for Victor Thein's Palm theatre was also dismissed this week.

Mr. Harris said that he dismissed the complaint with reluctance and declared that the decree and Section VI were "woefully defective in protecting the rights of new theatre owners in a district where circuit theatres are already entrenched."

Complaint Filed Before Opening

Basis of the dismissal, which specifically permits the complainant to file a new action when further evidence shall have been amassed, was the fact that the complaint was filed on August 15th, 12 days prior to the opening of the new Strand. This, Mr. Harris declared made it impossible to present direct evidence that operation of the theatre was unprofitable. He held that the decree does not permit evidence gathered subsequent to the filing of the complaint.

In his findings of fact the arbitrator held that the Strand was a modern house capably operated in a district which by its growth in population could support an additional theatre profitably. However, he said, the distributors refused to license 1940-41 product on the ground that it would disturb existing contracts with the Skouras circuit, which operates five houses in the competitive area involved. They likewise refused to license 1941-42 product until it had been trade shown, and metropolitan and road show engagements completed he found. The arbitrator held that the Strand however, was unable to show by evidence other than opinion that as of filing date the last run in Astoria offered it would defeat the purposes of section VI.

"The fact is evident," Mr. Harris said, that the distributors "did not and do not intend to deal with the complaining party until Skouras Brothers have been satisfied."

Mr. Harris cited testimony that the Skouras circuit had offered to rent the Strand "at only half the fair rental value of the theatre." He declared it apparent that the circuit by control of the output of the defendants in the district was able to dictate its own terms for the rental of theatres which could not get product.

"'That such a threat to free enterprise remains possible under the consent decree, seems to the arbitrator inimical to the public interest and unhealthy for the industry," he wrote.

Protection by the decree of distributor relations with affiliates was also criticized by Mr. Harris. He said that exemption of 20th-Century Fox because of a long term franchise with the circuit and of RKO because of a 10 per cent subsidiary interest in Skouras was not in keeping with the intent of the decree.

Failure of the Skouras circuit to intervene was likewise attacked. Mr. Harris observed, "Skouras did not intervene because it had complete confidence that its interests would be protected by the defendant distributors. This inference the arbitrator believes is freighted with unhealthy implications."

Mr. Harris said that he dismissed the case with reluctance because he felt that it does not solve the problem presented by the complaining party.

He compared the film business with other forms of retail merchandising and asked if it was not the government's intent in the consent decree "to cut the five major companies . . . down to the size of normal business operations." Other manufacturers he declared have been forbidden to restrict new retailers.

St. Louis

In the St. Louis decision Judge Wesley McAfee dismissed the clearance complaint of Victor Thein operator of the Palm theatre, neighborhood St. Louis house. The arbitrator held that it had not proved that the clearances of the St. Louis Amusement Company's Aubert and Union theatres are unreasonable. Paramount and 20th Century-Fox were named. Costs were assessed against the complainant.

Judge McAfee declared that he had been "considerably influenced by the historical development of clearances" in the area and cited 1931 Film Board of Trade schedules. He warned the Aubert against delaying clearance between the Palm and Union by unduly delaying availability.

Philadelphia

Philadelphia's 13th case, the complaint of the Sansom Theatre Company for the Rivoli theatre, Philadelphia was withdrawn by stipulation on Friday. Columbus Stamper, whose complaint in behalf of the Great Northern theatre was also withdrawn, operates the Rivoli. The clearance demand named all five distributors and the Commodore and several Baltimore avenue theatres. Terms of the settlement were not revealed.

Kansas City

The fourth case for the Kansas City office of the arbitration tribunal was filed December 10 by J. E. Pennington, operating the Cozy theatre, 718 Kansas avenue, Topeka, Kas., under Section VIII, against the five consenting defendants.

It asserted that the Cozy has been held to 120 to 128 days after first-run Topeka, which is stated to be unreasonable. The Cozy asked that it be reduced to a maximum of 50 days, after first-run Topeka. Theatres named in the controversy are the Coed, Kaw, and Princess. Others named whose business or property complainant believes might be affected by an award are Grand, Jayhawk, Orpheum, Gem, Oakland, Glen.

Briefs were filed, and oral arguments ended December 12th in the clearance case of the Dickinson Theatre, Mission, Kas. It is the second case at Kansas City. Arguments were entered by W. G. Boatright, for complainant; Wallace Sutherland, representing Paramount, RKO, Vitagraph, and the Kansas City Operating Company (Newman Theatre) and Missouri Orpheum Company. Paul W. Newlon represented 20th Century-Fox, and Richard P. Brous, represented Fox Kansas City Corporation.

The recent Raritan decision, New York Case No. 13 was reviewed by Mr. Boatright and applied to the Kansas situation. He argued that Section 17 does not permit complete freedom to distributors as to clearances that affect their affiliates. Motions to dismiss under Section 17 had been filed by distributors but not passed on. The arguments were finished in one day. The arbitrator, W. H. Cloud, took the case under advisement.

Hearing of the third case before the Kansas City tribunal, a clearance case brought by D. R. Gifford, St. Joseph, Mo. in behalf of the Louis theatre set for December 15th has been postponed. No new date was set.

New Haven

At New Haven the parties in Joseph Shulman's Plaza theatre, Windsor, arbitration complaint against the consenting distributors, asking elimination of the 30-day Windsor Theatre clearance, will file briefs on or before January 10th. The hearing was continued for six days before arbitrator George P. Murdock, a record for the territory. Over 40 exhibits were marked in evidence. Mr. Shulman filed his complaint October 7th.

U. S. BRIEF HITS CHICAGO MOTIONS

Motions by the consenting distributors asking dismissal from the clearance case of the Oriental theatre, Chicago, on the ground that the complaint is beyond the scope of Section VIII of the decree, were sharply criticized by the U. S. Government this week in its first intervening brief in an arbitration action. Robert L. Wright, special assistant to the attorney general, filed the seven-page memorandum.

Reviewing contentions that the clearance section was not applicable to the 42 day clearance enjoyed by first runs over the Oriental's "Big week" because a change in this interval might mean a change in the relative playing positions on the entire Chicago clearance scale Mr. Wright declared:

"We do not believe that argument is required to persuade the arbitrator that such a position is not tenable.'

He cited U. S. anti-trust prosecutions of the intervenor, Balaban & Katz, and recalled that its consent decree settlement and subsequent contempt actions were dropped at the time the New York decree was approved. This was done, he asserted, with the understanding that B. & K. accepted the New York decree as applicable to the Chicago clearance situation.

through the filing of a brief on December 11th which states that the motions to dismiss, by the distributors and intervenors, constitute an effort to avoid arbitration and are all improper. The time for the filing of briefs and replies in the case has been extended until December 18th and 29th, respectively.

Detroit

The second Detroit case, a clearance complaint of the Booth theatre vs. Paramount, filed in March, was finally heard at Detroit on Thursday. The hearing lasted only one day and Jerome G. Thomas, arbitrator, took the case under advisement.

Dallas

The Appeal Board at New York received its 17th case on Tuesday when B. R. McClendon operator of the State and Texan theatres in Atlanta, Tex., appealed the dismissal on December 6th of his clearance action against MGM, RKO, Warners and 20th Century-Fox. The Paramount-Richards circuit named in the complaint refused to intervene or recognize the arbitration proceeding.

Chicago

Thomas C. McConnell, who was arbitrator in the Portage Theatre case, has been named arbitrator of the Don Theatre, Downers Grove, Ill., case No. 11 which has been set for December 22nd. This is the first time in Chicago that an arbitrator, experienced in a previous arbitration hearing, has been selected to sit in on a second case.

The Annetta Theatre, Cicero, Ill., clearance complaint, filed by Benjamin and Albert Bartelstein, of the Bartelstein circuit, will be heard before James A. Sprowl, arbitrator, on December 30th, Washington.

Washington

Hearings in the clearance complaint of the Bayne theatre, Virginia Beach, Va., Washington case No. 10 were concluded after two days last Friday. Witnesses for the Bayne argued that it was not in direct competition with the Newport theatre in Norfolk. W. G. Barbee general manager of Lichtman theatres told the arbitrator that Newport customers complained of old pictures at the Bayne. Max Cohen, Universal Washington manager testified that he considered the two theatres comparable in appointments and service to their communities. Vitagraph and Newport witnesses said that the Norfolk theatre was larger and in direct competition with the Bayne. John E. Laskey, arbitrator, took the case under advisement.

Miller with Superior

Charles H. Miller, manager of the Producers Releasing Corporation office in Chicago since last March, has resigned to become general sales manager of Superior Pictures, Inc., with exchanges in Chicago, Milwaukee, Indianapolis and St. Louis. They also hold the Producers Releasing Corporation franchise for Milwaukee. Mr. Miller, who had been with the company he is returning to for six years previously to last March, is succeeded by George Topper.

FOX WISCONSIN SETS SERIES OF LECTURES

Acting on the theory that theatregoers are keenly news conscious and are interested in more than entertainment, Fox Wisconsin Amusement Corp. in February will inaugurate a series of five weekly lectures in theatres in twenty cities in the Wisconsin territory.

No movies will be shown in connection with the lectures, which will conclude with a public forum. Speakers scheduled to talk one night each week include Jan Valtin, Elissa Landi, T. R. Ybarra, Dr. Otto Strasser and Cy Caldwell.

Fox hopes to sell tickets for the entire lecture series in advance in blocks. In addition to the Downer, Modjeska and Venetian theatres in Milwaukee, the lectures will be held in Fox houses in Madison, Oshkosh, Racine, Kenosha, Janesville, Fond du Lac, Menasha, Beaver Dam, Manitowoc, Green Bay, Port Washington, Wausau and Stevens Point, Michigan cities to be visited include Houghton, Iron Mountain, Menominee and Ishpeming.

Army Shows May Get Ticket Tax Waivers

Legislation revising the admissions-tax provisions of the 1941 revenue act so as to exempt soldiers attending Army camp motion picture shows may be sought in Congress following a disclosure by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that the tax on such exhibitions cannot be lifted by any regulation.

Secretary Morgenthau, replying to an inquiry from Representative John W. McCormack on the subject, last week, said the department had no objection to such legislation so long as the net proceeds from soldier admission were used exclusively for the welfare of the military or naval forces.

Until last October, the Army camp shows were exempt from tax, but as a result of the termination of the exemptions previously granted to religious, educational or charitable institutions and organizations admissions to camp theatres became subject to the levy. The bill was so written, the Secretary said, that nothing less than legislation would afford relief.

"Because of the apparent purpose to benefit the men in military service and to encourage their attendance at theatres and other activities within the posts, camps, reservations and other areas maintained by the military or naval establishments, rather than to aid the organization conducting the activity," he said, "the Treasury Department would not consider such legislation a precedent for the ultimate restoration of the exemptions so recently abolished."

Only the Army shows would be affected by the legislation, since the Navy makes no charge for admissions to its shows.

Benson Succeeds Jacobs

Earle W. Sweigert, Paramount district manager in Philadelphia, announced the appointment of Albert C. Benson as district short subjects sales supervisor. He succeeds Saul Jacobs. The appointment of Mr. Benson marks his return to the industry, having left for other business fields in 1933 after an association with Paramount Pictures in this territory that originally started in 1919.

Amusement Park Grosses Increase

Amusement park business during the summer and early fall months in western Pennsylvania was from 15 to 35 per cent ahead of the 1940 grosses, a survey of park managers, recently completed, indicated. This, of course, was extra competition to motion picture box offices. Opinion varied on the gate-pulling power of free acts and traveling name-bands. Indications are that 1942 business, judging from industrial payrolls and advance picnic bookers, will be even better than the current year's.

Aided by fair weather throughout most of the summer, the parks enjoyed heavy attendance of booked outings, and brisk transient trade. Although none of the district parks exact gate tolls, and therefore are unable to know exactly the total attendance figures, most park managers believed that per capita spending was up, as well as attendance. Nine amusement parks operated in that area during the past summer.

Gains of 20% to 30%

Kennywood, reputedly one of the nation's three largest parks, reported gains between 20 and 30 per cent in various departments. President A. Brady McSwigan of Kennywood attributed some of his business, particularly on Sundays, to his free acts. Best act draws, he informed, were the Peaches Sky Revue, Eric the Great, the Four Sidneys, the Canestrillis Troupe, Lorenzo with Vicki, and the Walkmirs.

West View Park business increased 30 per cent over 1940, according to president Charles L. Beares, Sr. Unlike Kennywood, however, West View's business was not helped much by free acts, Mr. Beares claimed, and the dance orchestras were sometimes a problem.

Best West View business attraction was the Fire Festival, the park head declared. It jammed the grounds. Also big money-getters were the three roller-coasters and the two merry-go-rounds. An expanded children's playground and an enlarged parking lot accommodating 3,000 automobiles also helped.

At West View, the outdoor acts played seven days and seven nights weekly, were augmented Sunday afternoon and evening by the musical revues in the park's Talkie Temple. At Kennywood, the outdoor acts played seven days and seven nights weekly, were augmented Sunday afternoon and evening by musical concerts presented by the park's dance orchestra of that week.

Bands at West View were Clyde Knight, Jimmy Gamble, Brad Hunt, Benny Burton, Al Kavelin, Joey Shaffer and Buzz Aston.

Banner business was also enjoyed during the past season by Conneaut Lake Park, according to vice-president John H. Lucas of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Co., head of the park company. Managed by Tom Foley, the Conneaut includes two hotels, cottages, lake-side boating and swimming concessions, bowling, and stores, in addition to the amusement park.

Other parks in the area are Olympia near McKeesport, Idlewild on the Lincoln Highway east of Greensburg, Oakford near Jeannette, Rock Springs at Chester, W. Va., Burke Glen on the William Penn Highway near Wilkinsburg, Rakuen Lakes near Bridgeville, and Alameda near Butler.

Robud Acquires Theatre

Robud Theatre Corp., headed by Robert Bernhard, son of Joseph Bernhard of Warners, has taken over the Park theatre in Caldwell, N. J., which was formerly operated by Rapf & Rudin.

HOLLYWOOD PRODUCTION HIT A NEW HIGH IN 1939, GOVERNMENT REPORTS

95 More Establishments Doing Business in 1939 Than in Previous Year; Salaries Decrease, and Wages Increase

Nineteen-thirty-nine was a peak year for Holywood film making.

The United States Census Bureau at Washington, this week made public its final report on the last census to be taken on motion picture production, in 1939, showing that in that year new high levels were reached in the number of units engaged, in employment and in expenditures for production. The report is always released many months following census taking.

The report disclosed that there were 178 establishments in operation against 83 in 1937, employing a total of 35,345 persons against 32,398. A breakdown of the employment figures showed that there were 9,635 salaries officers and employes against 13,060 two years previous, and an average of 24,052 wage earners against 19,338, and in addition 1,658 persons employed preparing films distribution and in construction (no comparable figure for 1937), and that salaries (including talent) amounted to $93,341,137 against $102,393,327 and wages $45,735,926 against $37,157,753.

Total Cost Increases

The total cost of work done during the year was placed at $215,700,084 compared with $197,741,358 in 1937. It was explained that "since the motion picture industry does not sell its products, but rents them, it is impossible to determine the actual value of the output in a given year until long after its close, and it is therefore necessary to use the total cost of work done during the year as the index of production for the industry.

"This total cost of work done includes the cost of work done within the census year on films that were completed after the close of that year, but does not include the cost of work done prior to the census year on films completed within the year. It also includes receipts for laboratory and other work done for others, and rentals received for the use of studio facilities."

Of the total cost of work done during the year, $142,543,420 was for salaries and wages, $43,051,733 was cost of studio supplies, film containers, fuel and electric energy, $3,644,889 cost of contract work and $26,460,042 for other expenses.

Production Figures Only

The report presents statistics only on the production activities of motion-picture studios and laboratories, and does not cover the maintenance and operation of exchanges. References to "distribution" employes in the report relate to employes of the laboratories who are concerned with the final operations in the preparation of positive films. "Although the production of motion pictures is not strictly a manufacturing industry, its commercial importance is so great that data in regard to it have been collected at the biennial censuses of manufactures for 1921 and subsequent years," says the Census Bureau.

"Motion pictures, not including projection in theatres" industry continues the Government, as constituted for census purposes, embraces all processes and activities connected with the production of motion-picture films, such as the preparation and photography of scenes, the development of exposed films, the printing of projection films, and other studio and laboratory work necessary in connection with the production of projection films for use. It does not, however, include the distribution of these films and their projection in theatres. No data was included for establishments that reported less than $5,000 as the cost of work done during the census year.

Publish List of Visual Aid Films

A comprehensive list of sources from which visual aids and equipment for educational purposes, principally for school use, can be obtained was revised recently by the Division of Special Problems, U. S. Office of Education, for teachers and other school officials as well as for individuals interested.

The document consists of the following information areas in which materials are available, state or city; conditions under which materials can be secured, namely, by rental, purchase or free loan, and other additional descriptive informaiton. However, it is reported that the list is not complete.

The materials and equipment are classified in these categories: charts and graphs; exhibits; filmstrips, slidefilms and stillfilms; lantern slides; maps and globes; motion pictures; objects, specimens and models; pictures and photographs; posters and cartoons; cameras; filmstrip and stillfilm projectors; micor-projectors and motion picture projectors.

Classification Sub-Divided

Each classification is sub-divided as to source: Federal Government Departments and agencies; state government departments and agencies; colleges and universities, libraries, museums, associations and commercial dealers.

Under the motion picture division, for example, 32 Government agencies and departments are listed; 26 state departments; 102 colleges and universities; 18 museums; 45 associations and foundations and 238 commercial dealers.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

Esteemed Editor:

Somewhat less than the whole truth about Hollywood's reaction to the fact of war has been conveyed in the dispatches emanating from here since December 7th, thorough as these have been with respect to coverage of the community's doings.

What the community has not been doing is another and mayhap, in the long view, a more significant story.

There has been no outpouring of official utterances from the lips of the mighty.

Executives who were persistently vocal a while back on everything from double-billing to gin-rummy are sitting this one out, so to speak, or so not to speak, and for a reason.

This reason is no off-the-set agreement entered into on advice of counselors in the interest of a solid front, commendable as such a making of covenant might have been.

The reason is the same one that accounts for a conspicuous absence of those wise-cracks, witticisms and behind-the-napkin anecdotes which the personnel of this province concocts habitually and a little resolutely for its own diversion in the face of any and all developments far or near affecting the art-industry intimately or remotely.

No other crisis in world affairs or the course of the nation, unless it were that other World War, has quenched insular Hollywood's flow of executive enunciation and effete flippancy.

Hollywood is neither experting this one nor laughing it off.

At this point the community is engaged in finding out what its responsibilities are to be and preparing to discharge them. Talking is at minimum, suggesting that action will be as notably the reverse. Just what Hollywood shall be called upon to do is not yet fully revealed, but the will to do it promptly and well is everywhere in evidence.

A measure of appreciation of the Town's earnestness is to be had from consideration of some realities dealt with by members of the Association of Motion Picture Producers in arriving at decision to operate all studios on an unexceptioned daytime schedule calling for restriction of operations to the period between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., a step taken for the announced purpose of enabling employees to reach their homes each evening before blackout time.

A detail implicit in this regulation is the elimination of that over-time and double-time compensation which members of organized crafts have depended upon for extra earnings, yet no protest from this quarter has been heard.

Implicit in it, too, is the lengthening of shooting schedules, a matter involving increase in overhead, complications in castings and talent commitments, depletion of product backlog and perhaps in some cases a lag in the meeting of release schedules.

Ramifications in many directions will affect employment and income, adversely or beneficially as the case may be, of just about everybody in the field of production.

Prior to last week, any schoolboy in the neighborhood could have told you a dozen reasons why the studios could not adopt this regulation. The brighter ones could have told you the move would be regarded as suspect if taken.

This week it is in effect and there is no questioning.

C'est la guerre.

The war caught up with your correspondent in person at 8:07 p.m. December 10th on the corner of Los Feliz and Brand Boulevards, which is, you'll recall, the point of left-turning into Glendale and away from Forest Lawn Cemetery.

He was on his way to the Alex theatre in that suburb for a look-see at "Remember the Day" (and he'll remember the night) when his radio ordered him to pull over to the curb, douse his lights and sit still. He did.

Then his radio, after confiding that enemy planes were over Los Angeles, signed off with a promise to speak up again when they had gone.

All the lights in sight went out within a space of minutes and two searchlights, such as the management of the Carthay Circle never dreamed of on its most imaginative night of premiere, started criss-crossing the sky in quest of whatever might be up there. They didn't seem to find anything, which was less disappointing than the statement may suggest.

Two cold, damp, dark hours later Chief of Police Ball of Glendale came down the street in a white car topped by a loudspeaker through which he bawled orders for parked civilians to get the hell out of there and drive home with their lights out. Your correspondent complied with this injunction and will swap the ensuing experiences for his chances of dodging death from the heavens hereafter, henceforward and forever.

Next day your associate abandoned his long waged campaign in behalf of theatre previews for sake of audience reaction and came out flatly for daytime screenings in bombproofed and barricaded projection rooms.

The Messrs. E. Frank Hummert, A. H. Diebold, Hunter Marsten, Jacques Virmont, James A. Miller, Loet C. Barstyn and Herbert R. Ebenstein, of your city, are by way of being unintentional beneficiaries of changes brought by the war.

Their Miller Broadcasting System, which opened offices and studios here this week, offer facilities and equipment for applying to major radio programs those processes of editing and retake which enable film studios to present their talent always at its and their best.

At bottom a system of program recording, the service was in a fair way to collide with the vestiges of that disfavour in which transcribed programs were held at the time of their inception.

PRODUCTION UP

Advent of wartime conditions, which affected life and operations in the production community directly in terms of blackouts and otherwise, did not prevent increase in the number of pictures in camera stage. Nine were started, one of them coincidentally related to martial developments, while five were being finished, raising the count to a total of 48 pictures in work.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

When Mrs. Walter Griffiths, secretary of the North and South Carolina Theatre Owners, wrote a letter to Nebraska for some confidential information recently, her query was found later to be anything but confidential.

She wanted to get all the details on the Nebraska anti-ASCAP bill, which was held constitutional recently by the U. S. Supreme Court, so sent a letter to Bob Livingston as president of the MPTO of Iowa-Nebraska, addressing him at the Park Theater, Omaha, Neb.

Though active, Mr. Livingston isn't president, and his theatre is the Capital in Lincoln, Neb., not the Park in Omaha. The late Charlie Williams, long time MPTO president, ran the Park in Omaha until he died. When he died, he left a note that Eugene Blazer, Omaha attorney, should be executor of his estate. Thus, all MPTO business mail is forwarded immediately to Mr. Blazer for handling.

Mr. Blazer got Mrs. Griffiths' letter, but didn't feel up to taking care of it, so sent it to Mr. Livingston in Lincoln with an explanation as to why he had opened the letter. Mr. Livingston went to the Capitol building, got a copy of the bill, and mailed it to the lady.

Reason Mr. Blazer didn't feel like exerting himself in the matter is that he's ASCAP's representative in Nebraska!

You've heard the stories of home owners being surprised at radio programs strangely picked up by their gas meters. Judging by the yarn which Ed Warn, Western Electric Export Corporation representative, sends from New Zealand, a phenomenon of that sort is nothing at all.

It seems that a doctor in Wellington was making a classroom demonstration of the Western Electric electrical stethoscope at a moment when that usually staid instrument, wearied of ethical behavior, decided to go berserk. A young woman's heart was the subject of investigation. Instead of the expected "thump-thump," something of this sort hit the doctor's ears—

"You, too, should be a 'change-daily' girl. Get your packet of Lux this morning!"

Many manufacturers who expect a sharp curtailment in their production next year are making plans to help their dealers sell non-competitive products. But RCA Victor will go a step further in a full-page ad scheduled in late December weekly magazines. The ad will tell readers if they cannot get an RCA Victrola, "we suggest you follow your dealers' advice on other good phonograph-radios he has in stock." The aim of the campaign, in addition to helping dealers maintain sales volume is to assure continued sales of radio-phonographs in general so that volume of RCA Victor records will continue at a high level. That's sales initiative plus.

U.S. PUSHES 'LITTLE 3' PROSECUTION TO SAVE DECREE TRADE PRACTICES

Justice Department Reported Planning Request for Extension of Deadline; Order Is Obtained for February Trial

Faced by the possibility of the collapse of the consent decree's tradeshowing and selling provisions June 1st, the Department of Justice confirmed in New York, at midweek, that it would petition New York Federal Judge Henry Warren Goddard, for an extension of the decree's "deadline", beyond June 1st, when the five majors bound by the decree have the right to utilize its escape clause. This would exempt them from present provisions of selling and tradeshowing, if—the Government does not successfully prosecute the "Little Three" majors outside the decree, United Artists, Columbia, and Universal, by June 1st.

Wednesday, in New York Federal Court, the Department of Justice obtained from Judge Goddard an order for trial of those majors in February, the date to be decided later by the judge after conferences with both sides.

Thus far, the Department of Justice has been able merely to prosecute one of the many anti-trust cases pending: that against the Crescent circuit and affiliates and Universal and United Artists, in Nashville Federal Court; and decision on that may not come for another month. The Department will begin the second of its "field" trust suits, against a large unaffiliated independent circuit—The Schine—and the three nonconsenting majors, in Buffalo March 3rd. Its third "field" suit, against the Griffith circuit and the same majors, in Oklahoma City Federal Court, is quiescent, and dependent, it is thought, upon the previous suits.

In all suits, the five decree-bound majors have been eliminated; the three small majors named.

Date To Be Set Later

Meanwhile, however, the actual anti-trust prosecution of these three majors, in reality a continuation of the Government's original anti-trust suit in New York against the organized producer-distributors, which resulted in the consent decree for five of them had remained in abeyance.

At the Wednesday court hearing, Judge Goddard asserted he would not allow the decree to fall by fault; meaning, by the Government's failure to obtain a decision against the majors by June 1st.

Benjamin Pepper, attorney for United Artists and Universal, asked that the defendants not be compelled to try the New York suit with inadequate preparation, or at the same time as the Schine case. He added that the Government could apply for extension in a similar decree with General Motors.

Special Assistant Attorney General Robert Wright admitted the Government might consider extension, at a later date, if it appeared the court could not dispose of the New York case before the June deadline.

J. Stanley Thompson, Loew's attorney, in court to obtain relief from the Minnesota anti-decree law, suggested the five consenting companies be heard on the extension.

Mr. Wright and Judge Goddard agreed they would be heard.

Lawyers in the industry believed the Government would ask the judge to make the deadline the end of the year. This would allow the selling and tradeshowing provision of the decree to operate at least during another selling season.

They argued that, unless the consenting companies show that they are at a disadvantage competing with non-consenting companies, and that this disadvantage has produced losses—then Judge Goddard may be impelled to grant the Government request.

Meanwhile, in Nashville Federal Court, the Government suit against the Crescent circuit, affiliates, Universal, and United Artists, wound up last week with submission of a final brief by the Government.

Federal Judge Elmer Davies is already considering the case, and has indicated he may give decision in mid-January, pointing out, however, the mass of briefs accumulated, and the involved points raised.

The Government's final brief said, in part, of Universal and United Artists, that: "If they have combined to suppress competition, the defendants have clearly violated the (Sherman) act, and are subject to such an injunction as the court believes will make competition possible, and thus give effect to the act insofar as this particular struggle for survival is concerned.

"The fact that the form of injunction proposed by the Government may not be completely effective for such purposes, due to the presence of other factors not within the reach of a judicial decree, may be a reason for rejecting that relief in favor of granting other and more effective relief but not for declining to grant relief.

"The most it (an injunction) can do is to provide a better opportunity for competition than heretofore existed.

"No Other Choice"

"We respectfully submit that until and unless the industry advocates and secures for itself legislative recognition that it is a business which may render better service without competition than with it, the Government and the courts have no other choice in enforcing the Sherman Act than to compel it to operate as it claims to operate, that is, upon a competitive basis."

"The film business stands today entirely unregulated by State or Federal authorities as to prices charged to the public and rates of return to investors upon assumption that such matters are subject to the restraint of normal competitive forces. Any time that the industry wishes to exchange competition for a bureaucratic commission as a means of controlling such rates and prices, it is, of course, free to advocate necessary enabling legislation.

"We respectfully submit that until and unless the industry secures for itself legislative recognition that it is a business which may render better service without competition than with it, the Government and the courts have no other choice in enforcing the Sherman Act than to compel it to operate, as it claims to operate, upon a competitive basis."

One signer of this brief was Thurman Wesley Arnold, Assistant United States Attorney General.

In New Haven, a second extension has been granted Twentieth Century-Fox in which to answer the detailed interrogatories filed by the plaintiffs in the Pickwick, Greenwich $5,452,575 anti-trust suit against the eight major film companies, in the Federal Court.

Two Pick "Best Films of Year"

"Blossoms in the Dust" was listed as the outstanding film of 1941 in a poll conducted among the St. Louis moviegoers by Colvin McPherson, Post-Dispatch motion picture critic. Runners-up in the order of their popularity were: "Sergeant York," "Penny Serenade," "Gone With the Wind," "A Yank in the R.A.F.," "Caught in the Draft," "Blood and Sand," "Kitty Foyle," "The Philadelphia Story" and "Hold That Ghost."

The Young Reviewers, junior film critics of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, have made their selection in New York. According to the number of votes received they were: "Sergeant York," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Blossoms in the Dust," "How Green Was My Valley," "A Yank in the R.A.F.," "The Little Foxes," "Dumbo," "Dive Bomber," "Citizen Kane" and "Meet John Doe."

Rename Detroit Theatres

Names of the Detroit theatres are being changed. The Marvel, being erected in Dearborn by the Wisper & Wetsman Circuit, is to be called the Warren. The Town, being opened with vaudeville on December 26th, by Ben and Lou Cohen, will be changed to the Paradise.

Iowa Theatre Destroyed

The Lyric theatre in Seymour, Iowa, operated by Doyle Fear, was completely destroyed by a fire that burned a hardware store, cafe and postoffice, causing an estimated loss of $35,000. The loss was mostly covered by insurance.

Fleischer Recovers

Dave Fleischer, producer and director of Fleischer Studios, Florida, has recovered in New York from recent auto injuries and leaves for California shortly. His latest picture is "Mr. Bug Goes to Town," released through Paramount.

RCA Florida Circuit Pact

RCA National Service has signed an agreement with the Florida States Theatres, Inc., comprising 100 theatres, for service of sound equipment. It is the fourth year of such servicing.

Two Theatre Chains Combine in Havana

by RAMON PEON
in Havana, Cuba

The big news of the week in Havana was the consolidation of Ernesto P. Smith, and Jose Valcarcel, operators of two of the largest circuits of first run theatres in the city. It is expected that this union will establish new negotiations between distributors and exhibitors of the city.

Eldelberto de Carrers, president of the National Union of Exhibitors, is said to have denied any connection with the consolidation, regardless of his close connections with Mr. Smith.

With the preview for the press and theatre managers of "Musical History," the latest Artkino release in Havana, the new distribution organization, Blue Ribbon Films, opened their offices at Consulado 205. Delio Gonzalez and Manuel Fernandes, formerly with Saica Films, are heads of the new organization. The new company will also produce musical short subjects. "Wings of Victory," produced in Russia, will be the next release of the newly formed company.

"El Romance del Palmar," considered the best of Cuban sound productions which was produced three years ago, will be released again and new prints were previewed at the Payret theatre December 1st. This is considered the only occasion in which an old picture re-opened at a first-run theatre and held over for one week. When it was first released the picture grossed only $53,000.

The new Monogram offices in Havana will open shortly at Consulado Street. Candido Caldo, formerly with International Films will handle the Monogram product for Cuba, although no official announcement has been made as yet. The deal was closed recently and preparations are under way to organize the distribution offices.

The new Cuban musical production, "Romance Musical," produced by Continental Films with C.M.Q. Radio Circuit stars, will not be released until early in 1942, it was announced by the producer, Octavio Gomez Caastro. At present the film is being cut and edited.

The 1941-42 edition of the "Cuban Film and Radio Year Book," edited by Peon and Shavez, will go to press the end of December for distribution some time in January.

St. Louis Stage Grosses Increase

Sonja Henie's ice revue grossed $91,000 and played to 65,000 persons in a five-night stand at the St. Louis Arena last week. The attendance and gross exceeded last year's mark for the same show by sizeable margins, promoters said.

"Tobacco Road" played to unexpected near capacity audiences during its week-long run at the American theatre, the only legitimate house in St. Louis. The run ended December 7th. The opening night crowd filled the theatre, prompting Paul Beisman, manager, to engage the play for another week.

"Life With Father" has been booked into the Grand theatre, a burlesque house, for at least three weeks beginning January 1st. The burlesque troupe at the theatre has moved to the adjacent Garrick while the theatre is being renovated and will play there during the run of "Life With Father" at the Grand.

RCA Contract Renewed

Agreements have been signed providing for continuation of RCA service to the sound equipments of the 17 houses of Western Massachusetts Theatres, Springfield, according to W. L. Jones, RCA national service manager. Furnishing of parts and tubes is also involved in the contract. Nate Goldstein negotiated for the circuit, while RCA was represented by J. Mauran, J. P. Ware and J. O'Brien, New England service and sales representatives.

Screen Guild Benefit Show Is Renewed

"Screen Guild Theatre," air show heard over the CBS network, has been renewed through April 19th, raises the income to be received by Hollywood's Motion Picture Relief Fund from the program to $1,120,000.

Stars appearing on "Screen Guild Theatre" (Sundays, 7:30 to 8:00 P.M., EST) donate their services and the sponsor, Gulf Oil, pays $10,000 weekly to the Relief Fund. The money is being used to build the Motion Picture Country House in California's San Fernando Valley—a home for workers from all branches of the film industry who can no longer provide for themselves.

"Screen Guild Theatre" began its CBS run in January, 1939. Its earnings for the Fund to date are $920,000.

BRITISH FILM PRODUCTION AFFECTED IN NEW CALL-UP OF MANPOWER

400 Key Technicians Exempt by Ministry of Labor; Shorts Producers Busy on Propaganda Films, Hit Quota Cut

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With the Government's decision to mobilize the manpower and womanpower of the nation up to the sere and yellow of middle age, and its slashing of the quota schedules of the existing Films Act, the motion picture industry, contemplatively caressing the double bruise on its already damaged cranium, is currently trying to adjust itself to the potential future. Some film technicians, however, have been exempt.

On Monday, however, the Ministry of Labor agreed to accept the findings of the manpower committee on production personnel, which is expected to insure a protective minimum of studio technicians and labor.

The chief recommendation was that all technicians and skilled workers over 25 be exempt from military service, while certain classifications, where women may replace men, are open to negotiation. It was agreed that where possible women will be trained to replace men.

Approximately 400 key technicians of military age will be exempt. The Labor Ministry agreed also not to do anything which would reduce the persent volume of production or total of personnel employed.

Briefly this future as it affects the British exhibitor is likely to be difficult, as it concerns the production industry it is downright calamitous. The wholesale callups proposed by the Government for men up to 51, and for women, removing all previous categories of reservation, are likely to denude both picture houses and studios, not to mention laboratories, renting offices and all the other components which go to make up the industry, of the trained staff necessary to operate them; the reduction of quota percentages will inevitably mean a lowering of the already calamitously low figure of feature production.

Quota Reduced

This week, succumbing to pressure from various sources, taking the advice of a majority of members of the Cinematograph Films Council, the Board of Trade availed itself of its powers and reduced the quota for the next year, to 15 per cent for exhibitors, and 20 per cent for the renters. The short subjects quota is correspondingly reduced to 12½ per cent, and 15 per cent for both sections.

The figure will be static for the next three years.

Thus come to a climax two years of indecision and contradictions, two years in which, despite pleas, expostulations, entreaties, cajolery and calm argument, the industry has failed to persuade the Board of Trade to evolve some wartime plan. A Films Commission, a Credit Bank, protective legislation, all have been discussed or suggested. The Board of Trade's solution is briefly to cut the obligations imposed on the trade.

Major argument propounded in favor of the cut has been that the level of British production, thanks to men being called to the Colors, to studio shortage, etcetera, has dropped so low that it is impracticable for renters and exhibitors to observe their obligations. Major argument against this, and propounded by the producers and labor groups, is that the situation is as it is, directly because of the inactivity and indifference of the Board of Trade itself. Had the Government, they claim, taken protective action earlier they would have prevented the production figure reaching so low a level and thus necessitating an adjustment of the schedules.

Most incensed of all are the shorts producers, who claim, with some apparent justification, that there has been no depreciation in the volume of their production, that, on the other hand, it has increased by some hundreds per cent, and that a cut in the shorts quota is by no means necessary. Both renters and exhibitors have far exceeded their legal obligations.

Feature Releases Decline

With the quota set at 22½ per cent for distributors and 17½ per cent for exhibitors in the current period (the figures remain for twenty-four months) feature productions trade shown in the past year have totalled only 49. The figure is one of progressive decline. With the reduction of the figure for the next three years, and the further removal of personnel from the studios, it is bound to be less, this despite the fact that many of the year's box-office pictures have been produced on a voluntary basis and distributed by organizations to whom the quota is a formula rather than a problem. To organizations such as Anglo-American, for instance, it will not make a great deal of difference.

The American organizations who have found it increasingly difficult to produce marketable films in this country, will find some easing of the strain, though not to any considerable degree. In the main they would be glad to have the opportunity of making world market films here, thus translating their frozen currencies to practicable purpose, and swelling the total of films on their release schedules.

Even though some effort be made to retain a moderate volume of production, the manpower situation is, of course, bound to make it increasingly difficult for the production companies to operate. Day by day, literally, men are being drawn from the studios to serve with the Forces. The gradual but wholesale cancellation of the reservation categories has depleted the studios to the barest working technicians. In some cases, notably at Shepherds Bush, women have been trained into skilled jobs to replace the men.

Now the complete change in the reservations system, under which cases will be considered individually instead of as entities in groups, industries or crafts, will make it even more difficult for the producer. Women, too, are being called to the Forces, and there will, in consequence, be less chance of their replacing men. The shortage of labor will be general and involve both sexes.

The delay in consideration of the findings of the recent Manpower Report, drawn up after the protracted sittings of the Government-Industry Manpower Panel, is now explained. It is obvious that the Minister of Labor deferred any action until the new callup plan of the Government had been finally ratified and announced. In principle, however, the new Government plan will dovetail with the Manpower Panel's report which, making no exorbitant demands upon the Government, accepting the principle of war work first and film work second, saw a solution in the examination of individual cases with a view to registration where essential.

No Leaves for Men

The report has not been published so far, and what the Ministry of Labor, whose representative had so large a part in drawing it up, will do, now that the whole manpower situation has undergone such a dramatic metamorphosis, is not known. That the Government and the Services will insist on the last word is obvious. That some concessions will be made to firms doing propaganda work, either directly or indirectly, is probable. That as the war situation sharpens, as it is likely to do in the next few months or even weeks, it will be impossible for stars, directors and producers to get temporary leave from the Army, the Navy and the Air Force is most certain of all.

Production, then, will have to take a back seat it would seem, and to sit on that seat as a virtual skeleton, to wait until the halcyon days of peace return, before it can get some meat on to its bones and come back to the front rank of British industries.

Not only in production, but throughout the entire industry, in the picture houses and the renters' offices, and elsewhere, the drainage of men and women is taking drastic effect, will do so increasingly during the next few weeks and months. Though conciliation has been shown to all branches of the industry, and though the most amicable relations exist between exhibitors and the various local labor exchanges concerned with calling up the men and women, the mood of the moment has so altered that there is some depression abroad. It is quite clear that the Government means business this time and that all branches of the trade will be called upon to make sacrifices of personnel. Exhibitors, despite that they retain pleasant memories of pious Governmental blessings on the industry's role to maintain morale and in performing propaganda work, realise that in the face of the present situation they are helpless, are holding their horses for the time being.

Army Film Unit Grows

Some idea of the way technical experts are being switched from the arts of peace to those of war is contained in the news that the Army Film Unit, recently developed from its more embryo stage by the new Director of Army Kinematography, aim to gather no less than 78 cameramen as a nucleus for the Unit, have already despatched some 27 to the Middle East. Meanwhile the Ministry of Supply is using its powers and commandeering cameras held by some industry firms, with the object of giving Service cameramen equipment with which to operate.

Production organizations are naturally nervous about this new move, foresee their already limited activities suffering a complete holdup if their equipment is taken away.

Out of the whole industry pattern evolved

COMMONS APPROVES REDUCTION IN QUOTA

The House of Commons Tuesday formally approved the recent reductions in the exhibitor and distributor quotas by 2½ per cent each, to 15 per cent for exhibitors and 20 per cent for distributors. The change, recommended by the Board of Trade, was approved by the House of Lords.

BRITISH PRESS SHORTS PRODUCTION

from the abnormal conditions of war, no detail of design stands out more markedly than the immense impetus given to and the present strength of British short film production. Whilst feature film production has suffered an inevitable decline, the shorts field, as has frequently been recorded in these columns, has widened greatly, thanks to the Government's use of the screen as a vehicle of propaganda, to a dimension greater than at any time in the industry's history.

In the last quota year for which figures are available, April 1940-April 1941, some 192 British shorts were made and registered, equalling 34.74 per cent of British films as against those foreign shorts registered. The legal quota minimum is only 17.5 per cent. With such considerations as these, and the added fact that exhibitors themselves voluntarily showed 1,421,000,000 feet of British shorts—or a percentage of 35.5—British shorts producers took very disconsolately the Film Council's suggestion that the quota percentages should be reduced, claimed with considerable conviction, it would seem, that there was no necessity for a cut in their territory, whatever might have been the arguments on the feature field.

This impetus which the war has given the British short film may well prove a transitory one. The ultimate removal of war conditions and the existence no longer, of the same need for screen propaganda, may lead to a sudden demobilization of the whole battalion. Alive to this, however, the producers, as banded together within the Association of Short Film Producers, have cast a cautious glance at the future, set about devising a long term policy, and arranged a post-war plan for the industry.

They have various protective points in mind. They have not neglected to expose them to the Board of Trade, countering the Films Council's proposals with constructive policies.

They assume a continuance or revival of the Quota in its established form.

Foremost and strongest plank in their platform is the demand for a cost test for shorts, such as is already imposed on features.

So too do they posit:

Minimum film hire charges to enable a short film to take a fair share of a programme's receipts.

Restriction of the trade practice of offering short films to exhibitors either free of charge, or at a nominal rental as an inducement to the hiring of features.

Though it is not the A. S. F. P.'s policy to press these proposals now (their territory needs defensive action before the troops can be thrown into an attack), they are insistent on the truth of the theory that there cannot be too early a start for post war planning.

Any cutting down of present quota percentages would, they believe, make more difficult the chances of voluntary production being maintained and so paving the way to a peacetime industry.

Differences such as exist in the feature producers' camp do not manifest themselves as markedly among the shorts men. There is still a minor cleavage of opinion. The A. S. F. P. campaign firmly for a cost clause, a safeguard which is considered necessary to the higher grade documentaries they for the most part produce. Another body, the British Short Film Makers Society, which appears to represent only some 20 per cent of the whole, is against it. Most of their films are made on a modest basis. There are still shorts producers working on a shoe string budget whose careers would be short lived were a quality proviso to be introduced. The vast majority of producers, however, thanks to the boom consequent on the Ministry of Information's and the Service's sponsorship of production, are of one viewpoint.

Though the vast majority of British shorts producers work for the Ministry of Information, the War Office and the other Service Departments, a section—already referred to in these columns — do considerable production work for the British Council, the Government sponsored body charged with British propaganda in foreign territories. Others continue to make pictures for public corporations, academic and social bodies, etcetera. A few devote their attentions to purely commercial production with both eyes fixed firmly on the quota. Taken as a whole the industry has benefited considerably by the outside stimulus, and British shorts have reached an entertainment and production quality higher than ever before.

Just what challenge they will present to the American short when the war stimulus has been removed it is not easy to say. That it will be less is clear.

Quota Exceeded

Something more than a mere desire to assist war propaganda, rather the natural one of exploiting box-office material to box-office advantage, inspired British exhibitors during the last recorded quota year to show out of all their shorts footage some 1,421,000,000 feet of British film, a percentage, as recorded, of 35.5—very nearly three times higher than it constitutionally need have been.

The figure might have been even higher had the producers not to contend with the difficulties of labor shortage, with the calling of technicians to the Colors, and the shortage of studios and materials. Producers here, of course, have not the advantage enjoyed by Hollywood producers of readily available sets, equipment and staffs.

To quote the Association of Short Film Producers:

"But if the short film industry is to make the transition from war conditions — readily assumed in the national interest — to peacetime conditions without serious dislocation a portion of the industry at least must retain resources and facilities for the making of short films to be released through normal trade channels.

"The industry has been built up and strengthened by the sudden wartime demands made upon it. But when this wartime work ceases the ultimate survival will be made difficult unless this volume of production for ordinary distribution has been maintained."

Canadian Pioneers Committees Named

Haskell Masters, general manager of Odeon Theatres in Toronto, has been named chairman of the Canadian Picture Pioneers membership committee; other members are Clair Hague, A. J. Laurie and Louis Rosenfeld.

The new publicity committee of the Pioneers, now headed by Oscar Hanson, comprises Ed. Wells, Leo Devaney, Ray Lewis, Walter Kennedy and Hague, the latter having retired as president. Entertainment committee embraces Sam Sternberg, chairman; Harry Alexander, Jack Arthur, Charlie Mavety and Syd. Taube.

President J. J. Fitzgibbons of Famous Players has been re-appointed to the special position of director of Public Relations and George Beeston has been re-elected assistant treasurer.

Mexico Approves "Billy the Kid"

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Perhaps as a good will gesture the federal film supervision and censoring board, Felipe Gregorio Castillo, chairman, permitted exhibition of "Billy the Kid" (MGM) which it banned a couple of months ago for exhibition anywhere in Mexico on the ground that parts of it insulted Mexicans. Without citing reasons for this change of front, the board permitted showings at the Cine Olimpia, a leading local first run theatre, where it had been booked and advertised when the ban was clamped down on it.

The outstanding gross for the theatre of $19,500 was scored by "The Little Foxes" (RKO) at the Cine Magerit, the local first run house with 1,600 seats, during its four weeks run at admissions which varied from 65 to 45 cents. "Foxes" is scheduled to start its subsequent run here on Christmas Day at the Cine Orfeon, a downtown theatre.

Christmas Day, too, will witness the opening here of two other RKO pictures, "Suspicion" at the Cine Olimpia and "Fantasia" at the Cine Iris, both first run theatres.

With a fitting ceremony attended by many leading lights of the picture industry, a plaque was unveiled in the Cine Palacio Chino, one of the leading local first run theatres, on December 4th to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the completion in 1931 of Mexico's first talkie, "Santa" ("Saintess), produced and directed here by Antonio Moreno.

Election of officers for the ensuing year by the Association of Mexican Producers of Motion Pictures resulted in the following appointments:

Fernando de Fuentes, president, and directors, Raphael Sevilla, Mauricio de la Serna. Santiago Reachi, E. Carriedo and Salvador Elizondo.

Sr. de Fuentes is a veteran director and producer. Twelve years ago, he was manager of the Cine Olimpia, a local first run theatre. that was then run by Paramount. Sr. Reachi recently quit a lucrative advertising business to head Posa Films, S. A., one of the newer producers. He is a brother of Manuel Reachi, representative of the Mexican government in Hollywood. Sr. de la Serna manages the de luxe Cine Teatro Alameda, first run theatre here, and has done considerable producing on his own, and with various associates.

RKO is being assisted in its quest for good Mexican possibilities for the Spanish language pictures it is to produce by the Cinema Club of Mexico which is composed of rich film amateurs. The Club has made test pictures in color of six stage and screen players it considers good bets.

HALT STRIKES, BUY DEFENSE BONDS, OKLAHOMA IATSE HEAD ASKS UNIONS

Local 380 Stops Picketing, Pledges Money for U. S. Bonds; Walsh Offers Support to Hollywood Unions

"Unity" within the industry, matching national unity, was started last week among exhibitors, producers, distributors. It remained for the leader of an International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes local this week to give voice to what many union members in the film industry have been thinking: that the union can match the unanimity of unions outside the industry—it can join the cause of "unity."

It was Jess Bollman, president of the IATSE Local 380, Oklahoma City, who issued the call. He announced Saturday that he would recommend the union suspend its strike against nine city theatres until the war's end.

Meanwhile, in Hollywood, Richard F. Walsh, new Alliance head, last week opened his program of support to the autonomous studio unions seeking new contracts with altered working conditions and pay increases. The support does not envision assuming charge of the talks with producers, however, he insisted.

Bollman Confident Of Union Approval

Jess Bollman, president of the Oklahoma City IATSE local 380, said last week he was certain the 33 members would approve his recommendation the strike against nine houses be suspended for the "duration." He thought the members would use the $200 per week they have paid for pickets for defense bonds.

Formal action on the proposal was still to be taken by the union this week. Mr. Bollman announced the plan Saturday after a conference meeting with H. E. Bailey, city manager of Oklahoma City.

"We feel," said Mr. Bollman, "that there is no sense in going on with local disputes when the nation is at war. Defense demands full cooperation and unity of the nation and we feel that this can best be served by dropping our own quarrels for the duration of the war, and concentrating our efforts on the big fight.

"We have been spending $200 a week for pickets and we're going to use this money to buy defense bonds. Most of us own our own homes here and many of us are war veterans. We know what war means."

Mr. Bailey said of the union plans:

"This is the most heartening action from union labor in the face of national peril, and I hope it will be a signal for some similar action by others engaged in local disputes. There's no use fighting at home. If we don't win this war, these arguments won't make any difference, and both capital and labor will be ruined."

L. C. Griffith, president of the Griffith Amusement Co., several of whose theatres in Oklahoma City were targets of the strike, could not be reached last week for a statement. However, B. J. McKenna, general manager of the circuit, said:

"It's a very fine gesture on the union's part and should be thoroughly commended in times like these."

Still hanging fire is the question of what will become of assault and battery charges against Mr. Bollman and five other union members growing out of the stench bomb activities. The charges were filed by the county attorney's office last week and preliminary hearing set for the coming Friday. Mr. Bollman denied the union had anything to do with the bombs.

Alliance To Shift Talks to New York

Richard F. Walsh, George Browne's successor as IATSE head, said last week in Hollywood that talks between autonomous Alliance studio unions and the producers would be shifted to New York after January 1st.

He stressed that the locals were conducting the bargaining themselves, but that eight had appealed to the parent union for assistance. The two who did not have won new contracts.

He reiterated that the Alliance will not reenter the studio labor basic agreement. Such re-entrance, he reminded, would revoke studio locals' autonomy.

Mr. Walsh promised that "something might be done" shortly on the jurisdictional dispute between the IATSE photographers' local 659, and the American Society of Cinematographers.

The Seattle stagehands' union reelected all officers. It will be Basil Gray's 18th year as business agent; Emmett Clark's 26th, as financial secretary. Charles Crickmore again became president.

Frank L. Diefenderfer was re-elected president of the Reading, Pennsylvania, musicians' union for his 22nd consecutive term. Other officers elected are: George S. Haller, vice-president; Edward A. Gicker, secretary; George W. Snyder, treasurer, and Daniel H. Gehret, assistant secretary. The officers will be installed at ceremonies on January 4th.

Ruth Martin was reelected president of Theatre Employees Local B-96, IATSE, Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, at the annual meeting. Other officers chosen were: Tom Gurley, vice-president; Robert McWilliams, recording secretary; Karl Thomas, financial secretary; William Tosline, business agent; Eva Davis, sergeant-at-arms; Tom Groves, John Swipes, Mary Freeman, Tina Morgan, executive board; Marion O'Neill, Harry Jones, James Boney, trustees; Ruth Martin, Bill Tosline, delegates to the Central Labor Board.

Ferd Fortunate, Universal booker, was re-elected president of the Philadelphia film exchange employees' union, Local B-7, Saturday night. Edward Reckafus was elected vice-president; James McWilliams, secretary; Marie Hause, treasurer; James Flynn, business agent; Harry Appell, sergeant-at-arms, and Mae Radigan and John Wagman to the board of trustees. The executive board will comprise Charles Donahue and Leo Hannan representing the booking department; Harry Dressler and Charles Smith, shipping department; Mae Smith and Peg Fogarty, inspection department, and Anthony Blase and Edward Freyburger, poster department.

Claire Meeder was re-elected president of the Pittsburgh musicians Local 60, in voting that returned Edward G. Ehberts as vice-president, advanced Nick Hagarty from assistant to secretary, and named as directors Emil Bills, Hal Davis, Mike Hickly, Frank Panella, Gene Urban and George Wilkins.

All incumbent officers of Theatrical Employers' Union No. 18, San Francisco, have been re-elected, including President Al Maass, Secretary-treasurer Nell Joyce, and Business Agent Bill Sutherland.

The IATSE International Photographers of the Motion Picture Industry, Local 644, has elected Larry Williams president; Harry Cuthbertson, vice-president; Jay Rescher, secretary; Edward Hyland, treasurer; Walter Lang, business agent; and Frank Landi, sergeant-at-arms.

The Screen Publicists Guild, New York, now attempting to use "pressure" against the majors' home offices, to force them to aceptable contract terms, is also nearing election time. Some nominations were submitted at the Thursday night, December 11th, meeting, and more are expected, for the elections in January. Joe Gould, United Artists, is president.

END DUALS TO SHOW PATRIOTIC PICTURES

Mrs. Jacob M. Lashly, president of the Greater St. Louis Better Films Council, went on the air last week with an urgent appeal to citizens of that city to protest the triple bill programs. She said 15 theatres in the city were featuring such programs.

Mrs. Lashly urged elimination of the triple bills in order to make room for patriotic short subjects and said the council was planning a renewed drive on the St. Louis theatres using such programs. With 150 contract stars and 400 featured players, Hollywood has sufficient talent to produce 300 feature films a year to provide adequately for single bills, she declared. "The market is over-supplied and what we need is fewer pictures," she added.

The speaker pointed out the triple features were being played on nights the council had designated, after negotiations with the industry, as "family nights."

Warner Personnel Changes

The Warner Bros. Theatre Circuit, Chicago, have switched several assistant managers with the induction of George Finley, assistant manager of the Rhodes theatre, Chicago, into the army. The changes, which took effect December 6, are: Frank Riley, new to the Warner organization, became assistant manager of the Paramount theatre, Hammond, Ind., replacing Fred Nichols, who went to the Parthenon, Hammond, in the same capacity. Richard Fahey, assistant manager of the Parthenon went to the Cosmo, Chicago, and Richard Fahey, assistant manager of the Cosmo, was made assistant manager of the Rhodes.

Grainger to Coast

James R. Grainger, Republic president, left New York Friday, December 12th, for a country-wide tour, which will bring him to Los Angeles during Christmas, and to Toronto January 12th.

Kaufman on Defense Committee

Les Kaufman, head of Fanchon & Marco's advertising and publicity department in St. Louis, has been placed in charge of the newspaper division of the St. Louis Civilian Defense Committee.

Paramount Buys Debentures and Converts Stock

Following its policy of debt reduction, Paramount Pictures, Inc., on Friday, December 12th, paid out of its excess cash $1,336,300 for the retirement of the balance of its outstanding 3¼ per cent debentures, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive, committee, announced this week.

Approximately 90 per cent of the 3¼% debentures, totalling $11,344,700, had been exchanged prior to the call date for the company's four per cent debentures due in 1957. The Manufacturers Trust Company acted as redemption agent.

During the first four days of last week, a total of 151,220 shares of Paramount second preferred stock was converted into common shares of the company, according to an announcement made by Mr. Griffis at that time.

Originally the company issued 644,180 shares of second preferred stock. Previous conversions, plus the 151,220 made during last week, brings the total of second preferred stock which has been converted into common, to more than 56 per cent of the total. There are now outstanding 255,601 shares of the second preferred stock.

Empire Trust Company, the bank designated to handle the conversions, reports the heaviest business in Paramount stock since 1928, and most of the force in the transfer office worked all night to catch up with the work on hand.

Two weeks ago the company announced that it would redeem the second preferred at $10.06 a share on February 3rd and that the conversion right, at the rate of nine shares of common for ten of preferred will expire January 20th. There were 412,200 shares of the issue outstanding, and 22,600 shares in the Paramount treasury.

Universal's Year Gross

Universal's gross for the fiscal year ended last November 2nd passed the $30,000,000 mark, it was reported in New York this week.

This is a $3,000,000 increase over the preceding year and compares with $17,000,000 gross for 1937, which preceded the present management headed by Nate J. Blumberg and J. Cheever Cowdin. Indications are that the last fiscal year will show a net of approximately $4,000,000, according to the report from the company.

Completing its summary of October transactions of officers and directors in the securities of their companies, the Securities and Exchange Commission reported on Wednesday the disposition by Universal Corporation of 220 shares of Universal Pictures first preferred stock, announcing that the company, at the close of the month held 230,927 shares of common and 20,000 shares of second preferred stock.

The commission also reported the acquisition of 70 shares of Keith-Albee-Orpheum common stock by Radio Keith Orpheum Corporation, giving it a total of 1,205,745 shares of common and acquistion of 7,476 shares of preferred stock.

The SEC summary carried a delay report showing that M. A. Hulling, San Francisco, Monogram Pictures director, acquired 2,589 shares of the company's common stock in August through Monogram Pictures of California, and 1,294 shares through Monogram Pictures of the Northwest, at the close of the month holding 5,223 shares through the former and 2,712 through the latter.

REPUBLIC ESTABLISHES DAILY FILM CHECK

Republic's salesmen in the field will hereafter write daily reports of reaction to the company's, and other companies' pictures. These reports are to be compiled at the San Francisco, Memphis, Chicago, and Washington offices; and from there, sent to the studio. The studio expects to find the information invaluable in forming its productions. Not only public but exhibitor reaction will be noted.

It also reported the disposition, by gift, of 10,000 shares of Columbia Broadcasting System Class B common stock by William S. Paley, New York, officer, leaving him with 244,356 shares.

Reports on the holdings of persons becoming officers or directors in registered corporations showed that Louis J. Barbano, New York, held no Columbia Pictures securities when elected to the board October 8, and Herbert Scheftel, New York, held 5,500 shares of Trans Lux common stock when he became a director in that company October 30.

Stanley Company Profit

The Stanley Company of America, Warner Brothers theatre subsidiary, for the year ending August 30th last, had a net profit from operations of $2,079,164, the amount being carried to earned surplus, according to the annual report released over the weekend.

Net income before provisions for amortization and depreciation of properties, interest expense and contingencies was $6,422,760, while profit before providing for Federal income taxes was $2,826,164.

During the year ending August 30th, the Stanley Company declared and paid dividends of $3,166,962.

'Time' To Split Stock

Time, Inc., parent company of Time and Life magazines and March of Time motion pictures announced in New York on Tuesday that legal formalities have been completed for the splitting up of its common stock on a basis of one old share for four new shares, and that trading in the new stock was to start at the opening of business Tuesday. The company said temporary new certificates would be available at the office of the transfer agent, the Bank of Manhattan Company. Definitive new certificates will be available about January 15th.

Hamilton United Theatres, Ltd., in Toronto, now a subsidiary of Odeon Theatres of Canada, Ltd., has declared its first dividend under the new auspices, a payment of 1¼ per cent on the outstanding preferred shares for the quarter ending December 31st.

Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., in Montreal, declaring a dividend of $1.75 in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of the same amount, payable December 31st, erased preferred arrears.

Shanghai Bars Russian Films

French municipal police in Shanghai, China, forbade exhibition of Soviet films this week to "prevent outbreaks of violence," between 25,000 pro-Soviet and anti-Soviet White Russians who live there.

Fire Ruins the Dome

Fire destroyed the Dome Theatre, Lawton, Oklahoma, Wednesday, November 26th. An overheated furnace was reported the cause. The house was valued at $35,000. Patrons left it in order. None were injured.

Personnel Changes in Television Station WPTZ

Personnel changes at Philco's television station WPTZ in Philadelphia, places David Grimes, chief television engineer, in charge of the station having direction over both the engineering and program activities. He replaces Nick Alexander, who resigned after being associated with Philco television from its beginnings 11 years ago. Warren Wright, production head, and Bill Shain, director of publicity, also resigned. Mr. Alexander continues on the company payroll until the first of the year and it is expected that he will continue with the company in another capacity.

C. J. Bingley, a key man in the engineering department, has been named station manager, in a capacity as co-ordinator between the engineering and program departments. B. R. Herr, Philco executive, who has acted as company "trouble shooter" in various capacities, will temporarily fill the post of program director until the vacancy is filled.

A division of duties in the studio activities places Paul Knight, announcer, in charge of all the live programs in the capacity of studio director. Clarence Thomen, cameraman, becomes chief cameraman and placed in charge of all remote control television programs. Gilbert Brown, also of the engineering department, is in charge of the motion picture programs.

In line with reorganization of the staff, the weekly program schedule becomes standardized. The station will continue on the air for 15 hours weekly as required by the FCC, hereafter evenly divided between remote programs which will be primarily sports, live studio programs and motion pictures.

Six Film Companies Formed in New York

Secretary of State Michael F. Walsh has issued papers of incorporation to six motion picture concerns to conduct business in New York state. They are:

Estates Theatres, Inc., Queens, $20,000 capital stock, by Paul Raisler and William Billow, Laurelton, and Edna Sharpe, Hollis, with Martin M. Alpert, 161-19 Jamaica Ave., Jamaica, filing the papers.

Bridge Amusement Co., Inc., Manhattan, 200 shares, by Benjamin M. Nathan, Sylvia Denmark and Gladys Barnett, New York, with papers filed by Kupfer, Silberfeld, Nathan and Danziger, 29 Broadway, New York.

Empire Productions, Inc., 200 shares, no par value, by Robert Weenolsen, Arnold Gross and Janet Lovkov, 1440 Broadway, Gross filing the papers.

"SCREEN HAS TOUGHENED THE FIBRE OF AMERICAN PEOPLE": SEN. PEPPER

"Help in Arming with Spiritual Strength" Comes from Film Industry, Legislator Tells Philadelphia Variety Banquet

United States Senator Claude Pepper (Florida) paid public tribute last Sunday to the motion picture industry for "toughening struggle to come."

"You have served in arming America with spiritual strength and will continue to serve," he declared at the seventh annual banquet of the Philadelphia Variety Club, Tent No. 13, attended by almost 1,000 industry members Sunday night at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. "You men of the entertainment field have an important task and we know that we can count on you."

The part played by motion pictures, radio and other branches of the entertainment field in building public morale was also extolled by Capt. Harold Drew, commander of the British warship, H. M. S. Manchester, station at the Philadelphia Navy Yard for repairs.

The entire affair emphasized the important role the motion picture is to play in the present emergency. The traditional horseplay was dispensed with, and, save for the stories of Harry Hershfield, all the speeches carried a serious note. All touching on the present war, the speakers also included Federal Price Control Administrator Leon Henderson; John B. Kelly, in charge of the health program under civilian defense; Governor Walter Bacon of Delaware; Mayor Bernard Samuels of Philadelphia, and William McGraw, former Attorney-General of Texas and now a Government official.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation of a check in the amount of $4,000 to Superintendent of Public Schools, Dr. Alexander J. Stoddard, to buy equipment for combating infantile paralysis. Edgar Moss, 20th Century-Fox district manager, and newly-elected Chief Barker, made the presentation. Most impressive ceremony was the presentation of a silk flag to Dr. Leon Levy, WCAU president, who resigned as Chief Barker on Oct. 13th, when he was called up for active duty in the U. S. Navy. Dr. Levy appeared in the uniform of Lieutenant Commander and the presentation was made by a police color guard. A parting gift was also presented to Earle W. Sweigert, Paramount district manager, who filled out Dr. Levy's term as Chief Barker.

On the dais were also Joseph Bernhard, ex-Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, Harry Kalmine, Mayor George E. Brunner of Camden, N. J., James P. Clark, Ted Schlanger, Abe Montague, Max Gordon, Rev. Sylvester McCarthy, William J. Clark, Postmaster Joseph J. Gallagher of Philadelphia, Paul Terry, Max Weisfeld, Rube Jackter, Lew Astor, Arthur Silverstone and David E. Weshner.

The affair also marked the opening of the 1941-1942 March of Dimes campaign, in which the local Variety Club has set a goal of $100,000.

Frank L. McNamee and Harry N. Ball were co-general chairmen of the banquet, and James P. Clark and I. D. Levy the associate chairmen. A three-hour program of entertainment, headed by Henry Youngman, Ringmaster, was provided by Harry Biben and Samuel H. Steifel, co-chairmen of the entertainment committee. The variety show included Gae Foster's Roxyettes, Roy Smeck, the Watson Sisters, Romo Vincent, Ben Yost Singers, Ray and Harrison, the Barry Sisters, The Six Honeys, Stuart and Taylor, Peter Lind Hayes, Phil Regan, Dick Baldwin, Mary Healy, Barbara Pepper and Billy Klaiss' Fay's Theatre Orchestra.

JOHN NOLAN LAUDS FILM INDUSTRY

Addressing the Quota Club of Scranton, Pa., John Nolan, film buyer for the Comerford Circuit, told the members the public determined the value of motion picture stars and that the stars were paid only what they were worth. He decried much of the adverse publicity given to them.

Audiences like those of Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, he added, determine the worth of a picture. Almost any picture can be shown in New York, he asserted, but selections are carefully made for other theatres, citing the fact that the cost of the film usually determines the theatre in which it is played.

AMPA Honors the Chiefs of Variety

The National Variety Club and the charitable enterprises of its 25 local tents were honored by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at a luncheon meeting at the Hotel Edison, New York, on December 11th.

Several hundred members and guests greeted John H. Harris of Pittsburgh, founder and national chief barker of Variety, and Robert J. O'Donnell of Dallas, first assistant national chief barker. From the two leaders, and a specially prepared film, they heard the history of the Variety movement and the details of the charitable children's aids sponsored by local Variety clubs.

A New York Variety tent, to carry on the tradition of showmen's charity by bringing the movement to the center of the entertainment industry, was urged by Mr. O'Donnell. He praised the many active showmen's charities already in the city, and individual contributions to Variety work. He predicted that a tent would eventually be organized in the city and urged AMPA members to support the plan.

Mr. Harris described how the club had expanded in 13 years from an informal group of 11 Pittsburgh showmen, who organized to care for a foundling discovered in the Sheridan Theatre. The national organization, through its 25 tents, during 1941 raised $900,000—with a goal of $400,000—Mr. O'Donnell reported. The money, he said, will assist 750,000 underprivileged or ill children.

The Variety movement, the barkers reported, has been a powerful force in creating public esteem for theatre business and theatre men. Mr. O'Donnell cited instances of support for the film industry from pulpit and press attributable to Variety work. The Dallas Variety Club, one of the country's most active, last year raised the largest amount of any charitable institution in the city.

Among the Variety leaders present were: Harry Arthur, Jr., chief barker, St. Louis; M. A. Silver, chief barker, Albany; Hardie Meakin, chief barker, Washington; Earl Sweigert, chief barker, Philadelphia; Paul Short, chief barker, Dallas; Harry Browning, and M. A. Lightman, Tent No. 20, Boston, and James G. Balmer, the Dough Guy, Variety Clubs of America.

William McGraw, former attorney general of Texas, was master of ceremonies. Other guests included:

Barney Balaban, Vincent Trotta, Herman Wobber, T. J. Connors, William Clark, Max A. Cohen, Leon Netter, Leonard Goldenson, Sam Dembow, Louis Ruppel, Charles Freeman, Robert Savini, W. F. Rodgers, Edward Saunders, E. K. O'Shea, Edwin Aaron, Abe Montague, Rube Jackter, H. J. Yates, J. R. Grainger, Ned Depinet, Herman Robbins, J. J. Fitzgibbons, C. C. Pettijohn, Kenneth Clark, Dave Palfreyman, Lou Pollock, Maurice Bergman, Carl Leserman, George Tyson, Sidney Schreiber, Arthur Israel, Lester Thompson and F. J. A. McCarthy.

Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Oklahoma, Missouri Elect

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Atlanta Variety Club held last Thursday, the following officers were elected: Harry G. Ballance, district manager for 20th-Fox, was selected chief barker; E. E. Whitaker, general manager of Lucas & Jenkins Theatres, first assistant chief barker; Willis J. Davis, executive of Lucas & Jenkins, second assistant chief barker; Paul Wilson, Atlanta branch manager of 20th-Fox, property master, and R. B. Wilby, president of the Wilby-Kincey circuit, dough guy.

These officers will serve with the following barkers who complete the roster of board of directors: Wm. K. Jenkins, Dave Prince, Jimmy Harrison, Sid Reams and Dick Ford.

C. C. Kellenberg, retiring chief barker, was elected commander of Variety Legion Post 589 in Pittsburgh last week. Other officers are: Brian McDonald, senior vice-commander, new chief barker; Joe Hiller, junior vice-commander; James G. Balmer, adjutant; Joe Misrach, finance officer, and Archie Fineman, sergeant-at-arms.

Variety tent one's annual Christmas party for children will be held December 23rd in the William Penn Hotel. Variety's ladies' auxiliary are sewing for the Red Cross under leadership of Mrs. Maurice Spitalny. Ladies' Auxiliary officers will be elected December 16th.

Recent dinner guests at tent one clubrooms was the Boystown, Neb., football team.

Tents Elect New Officers

The Variety Club of Kansas City elected directors at its annual meeting last week. The directors then met to name new officers. H. J. Griffith, head of H. J. Griffith Circuit, was named chief barker, to succeed Jerry Zigmond, manager of the Newman Theatre. Other officers elected were: Fred Meyn, first assistant barker; Leo Finkelstein, second assistant; A. H. Cole, secretary, and W. G. McKinney, treasurer. The board of directors, from which the officers were chosen, includes also the following: Charles Potter, Bijou Theatre; Russell Borg, Warner Bros. branch manager; R. R. Bicchele, theatre operator and president of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Operators Association; C. A. Schultz, president, Commonwealth Amusement Corp.; O. K. Mason, vice-president, Commonwealth Amusement Corp.; Lester Durland, booking department, RKO.

Four of NBC's Executives Buy Talent Bureau

Following months of dickering with various bidders for the purchase of the National Broadcasting Company's concert and talent divisions, Niles Trammell, NBC president, announced last Friday the sale of the artists' bureau to four company executives. The sale, which will become effective January 1st, when a new organization is formed to take over the business, was made to Alfred H. Morton, present supervisor of NBC television; Daniel S. Tuthill, a leading radio and concert artist manager; Marks Levine, managing director of the NBC Concert Service and O. O. Bottorff, president of Civic Concert Service, Inc., an NBC subsidiary which is included in the sale. Disposal of its talent services followed criticism of network-controlled talent services by the Federal Communications Commission in its monopoly report. Columbia Broadcasting System sold its talent bureaus last August.

Mr. Morton said on Monday that the Hollywood office of the new company would be an important part of the business by reason of the increasing number of shows emanating from the film capital. He also expressed the view that television, in time, would prove the big source of revenue to National Concert and Artists. No specific plans were announced concerning the "package shows," such as "Information, Please" and "Fibber McGee and Molly," which an NBC executive announced some months ago would continue to be handled by the network's sales department.

Purchase price is reported to be in the neighborhood of $200,000, to be paid for out of earnings of the new company over a five-year period. The new firm, to be known as National Concert and Artists Corporation, will occupy offices at 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, former headquarters of NBC, and will have branches in Chicago, Hollywood and San Francisco, it was announced.

Mr. Morton will be president of the corporation; Mr. Tuthill, Mr. Levine and Mr. Bottorff, vice-presidents. Samuel L. Ross, who founded the first artists' bureau in radio, will be secretary and treasurer. Noran Kersta, present sales head for NBC television, was announced as successor to Mr. Morton as manager of that division. S. Hurok Attractions, Inc., which has given NBC exclusive booking rights to all Hurok-managed concert artists, will continue with the new company.

Approximately 400 artists and instrumentalists now under contract to NBC figure in the transfer, including Kirsten Flagstad, Fritz Kreisler, Serge Rachmaninoff, Ezio Pinza, John Charles Thomas and Gladys Swarthout.

In a letter announcing the sale to NBC artists, Mr. Trammell said he expected the new concert bureau would be able to render a more valuable service to the artists than had NBC. He also declared no "substantial changes" were contemplated in the personnel of the two divisions who have "served so long and faithfully."

Under the new set-up, Mr. Tuthill will be manager of the popular division; Mr. Levine will have charge of the concert department; Mr. Bottorff will continue as president of Civic Concert Service and Mr. Morton will be chairman of the board of the latter concern which will become a wholly owned subsidiary of National Concert and Artists.

Kaltenborn in Films for Newsreel Theatres

Embassy Newsreel Theatres in New York announced last week that H. V. Kaltenborn, radio commentator, had made two shorts of a series entitled, "Kaltenborn Edits the News," produced by Embassy Theatre Photoplays and directed by Ben Parker of that company. The pictures will be distributed to the 15 Embassy theatres in New York, Newark, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, San Francisco, Oakland, Calif., and Dallas.

The films run from six to 10 minutes each. The subject of each film made with Mr. Kaltenborn will be entirely dependent on written questions from his audience. Each week, Embassy patrons will submit written queries on current national and world-wide issues. From these, commentator Kaltenborn plans to select the three most outstanding topics for answers in his newsreel of the succeeding week.

Maffitt Theatre Destroyed

The Maffitt theatre in St. Louis, a third-run house which has been closed since early September, was destroyed by fire last week. The theatre was extensively remodeled last summer at a cost of $50,000. Fire officials estimated the loss of $40,000. The house is owned by the St. Louis Amusement Company and operated by Fanchon & Marco.

Fire Damages Warner Theatre

A fire which was apparently started by a shortcircuit in the emergency lighting system damaged Warners' Washington theatre in Chester, Pa., to the extent of $10,000. The principal damage was confined to the electrical system and the balcony furnishings.

BOARD TO OPERATE UA; OWNERS WILL PRODUCE

New Executives to Be in Active Charge; Plans for Company Production Abandoned

United Artists, which some weeks ago announced the personnel of its new management, including Gradwell Sears as vice-president, and Edward Raftery as president, on Monday, also disclosed that the releasing company's owners had quit its board of directors, to devote themselves to production fully, and that actual management would be in the hands of the working executives.

These owners are David O. Selznick, Mary Pickford, Alexander Korda and Charles Chaplin. The new board of directors comprises Mr. Raftery, chairman; Mr. Sears; Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of distribution and chairman of the finance committee; Laudy Lawrence, vice-president and executive coordinator; George Bagnall, vice-president and chairman of the production committee.

Of equal significance, was the simultaneous announcement at the close of a four-day executive meeting in Hollywood, in which the above decisions were made, that the company had dropped plans for its own production.

This was qualified by the note that United Artists Productions, Inc., successor to the Walter Wanger company, and possessor of its plant, would be available for production, if necessary.

Not reelected vice-presidents, at the meeting, were Harry Gold, and Harry Buckley.

Mr. Bagnall's product committee becomes a "permanent part" of UA, handling all deals under which producers obtain UA release.

On that committee are Mr. Bagnall, Mr. Kelly, Daniel T. O'Shea, and Lloyd Wright. Its headquarters will be in Hollywood.

Six Deals Ready

Mr. Raftery said Monday the committee had "six important deals near completion," but went no further.

The four comany owners said they would in no way interfere with the new directors; that operating control would be in the hands of the management already designated. However, the owners are represented on the board; Mr. Raftery is attorney for Miss Pickford, in addition to being the company's general counsel; Mr. Lawrence has been Mr. Selznick's representative; Mr. Kelly is said to represent Mr. Chaplin; and Mr. Bagnall is associated with Mr. Korda.

Mr. Kelly will divide his time between Hollywood and New York as sales and finance head, and member of the product committee. It is thought he will be primarily concerned, in the coordination of effort which this division represents, with spacing of the company's pictures properly, so there will be no shortages and no undue accumulations.

It is the first time in UA history that the board of directors will be composed of management instead of owners. The company's announcement stated: "The policy is to let this neutral management run the company rather than having it run by owners,."

David O. Selznick, producer-owner of United Artists, said in Chicago last week, en route to the Coast, that Mr. Raftery, elected UA president three weeks ago, be "an active president" and that "his appointment is not a 'stop-gap' as has been talked about in the trade."

Mr. Selznick commented that he had four scripts being readied, and that two would be before the cameras by the end of May. One, he said, would probably be "Jane Eyre," with Joan Fontaine as lead. The others in preparation are "Claudia," "The Anthology of Love and Passion" and "The Keys of the Kingdom."

The latter picture, he added, will not be made before eight months. Ingrid Bergman has been chosen as a lead; but Maurice Evans, wanted for the role of the priest, has not been available.

The lead in "Claudia" will be Dorothy McGuire, he continued.

Mr. Selznick said Miss Pickford would produce one picture per year, and Mr. Chaplin had promised to begin another film for the company within a few months.

Monogram's Peruvian Distributor Named

Norton V. Ritchey, vice-president of Monogram Pictures in charge of foreign operations, has announced that he has entered into a contract with Amauta Films whereby this company becomes the exclusive distributor of Monogram pictures in Peru.

The deal, which was concluded with Felipe Varela La Rosa, managing director of Amauta Films, one of the oldest Peruvian distributors, calls for 36 pictures to be released the coming season, including features and westerns.

Loewenstein Again Heads Oklahoma Unit

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Oklahoma reelected Morris Loewenstein president, and reelected and elected other officers, pledged loyalty to the President of the country, and opposed distributors' film rental to non-theatrical forums in competition to theatres—at its annual convention, Tuesday, in Oklahoma City's Skivin Hotel.

Edward L. Kuykendall, national MPTOA president, a scheduled speaker, was at Chicago's unity meeting, but his message was read by Mr. Loewenstein. Mr. Kuykendall's views on unity were supported by resolution.

In addition to Mr. Loewenstein, new officers are Max Brock, reelected, vice-president; Ralph Talbot, secretary-treasurer.

Directors are: Oklahoma City district, Jack Swiger and Cecil Davis; Tulsa district, J. C. Hunter and Lou Chatham, Tulsa; Southeastern, William Slepka, Okemah, Ed Holt, Coalgate; Southwestern, Glen Thompson, Tishomingo, Ed Crew, Waurika; Northeastern, John Giffin, Miami, John D. Wineland, Picher, Gerald Stettmund, Chandler; Northwestern, Homer Jones, Alva, Vance Terry, Woodward, and West Texas district, Virby Conley, Perryton, Texas.

Hurley to Make Four

Theatre Attractions, Inc., is the name of the company under which Harold Hurley will make two pictures a year for a period of four years for United Artists release, it was announced in Hollywood this week. His first production will start in April. Mr. Hurley is taking space at the Culver City RKO-Pathe studio, but has not decided on any story or director as yet.

Ed Fisher with Loew

Ed Fisher, press representative for United Artists in Cleveland has been named publicity and advertising director of Loew's in that city. He succeeds James Harris, who has left to become a flying instructor at Randolph Field, Tex.

Schenck Names State Chairmen for 'Dimes' Drive

Nicholas M. Schenck, national chairman of the motion picture industry's committee for the 1942 March of Dimes, has completed the organization of state chairmen, with acceptances from leading showmen in every state in the union. "The prompt and enthusiastic response encourages me to feel that our drive in January will be an outstanding success and a great factor in the fight against infantile paralysis," said Mr. Schenck.

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, has accepted co-chairmanship with Mr. Schenck on the committee and the cooperation of all Paramount's affiliated theatres will be enlisted in the lobby collections to be made during the week of January 22nd.

Harry Brandt, co-chairman with Mr. Schenck, has established national March of Dimes headquarters in the Hotel Astor in New York. He has urged all state chairmen to notify him at once how many pledge blanks they need for their states; also to rush lists of county chairmen.

George Schaefer and W. G. Van Schmus were named co-chairmen Wednesday.

The following are the state chairmen: R. B. Wilby, Alabama and Georgia; Harry Nace, Arizona; M. A. Lightman, Arkansas; Robt. H. Poole, Charles Skouras, A. M. Bowles, California; Rick Ricketson, Colorado; I. J. Hoffman, Connecticut; Carter Barron, Delaware and District of Columbia; M. C. Moore, Florida; Oscar Lam, Georgia; I. H. Harris, Idaho; Jack Kirsch, Illinois; A. H. Blank, Iowa and Nebraska; Elmer C. Rhoden, Kansas; Fred Dolle, Kentucky; M. Mullin, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont; E. V. Richard, Louisiana; Sidney Lust, Maryland; J. O. Brooks, Paul Schlossman, Michigan; Eddie Ruben, Minnesota; R. X. Williams, Mississippi; Harry Arthur, Missouri; Joseph English, A. M. Russell, E. K. Taylor, Stewart North, Montana; M. Naify, Nevada; Walter Reade, Don Jacocks, New Jersey; Miles L. Hurley, New Mexico; Fred J. Schwartz, Meyer Schine, Chas. Hayman, New York; H. F. Kincey, North Carolina; Mike Cooper, North Dakota; P. J. Wood, Ohio; L. C. Griffith, Oklahoma; A. Finke, Oregon; Ted Schlanger, M. A. Rosenberg, Sidney Samuelson, Pennsylvania; Moe Silver, Penna. & West Virginia; E. M. Fay, Rhode Island; H. R. Berry, George Parr, South Carolina; Chas. Klein, South Dakota; Tony Sudekum, Tennessee; Julius Gordon, R. J. O'Donnell, Texas; John Rugar, Utah; W. F. Crockett, Virginia; Frank Newman, Sr., Washington; Harold Fitzgerald, Wisconsin; E. J. Schulte, Wyoming.

C. C. Moskowitz, also a co-chairman with Mr. Schenck and Mr. Brandt, has received word that Clark Gable has volunteered his services in the making of the official March of Dimes appeal trailer. Production of the trailer, under supervision of Frank Whitbeck, began Monday. It is planned to distribute at least 7,500 to 10,000 trailers for use during the drive week to stimulate lobby collections for the campaign.

Industry Aids China

James G. Blaine, chairman of the board of United China Relief, announced this week the receipt of a $15,000 contribution from the motion picture industry.

The gift was made on behalf of all branches of the film industry—production, distribution and exhibition—through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hayes is president.

Mr. Hays, in a letter to Mr. Blaine accompanying the check, explained that the donation represented part of the proceeds of "Land of Liberty," which was made and released by the entire industry as a patriotic contribution. The net proceeds of distribution of the picture are being devoted to war emergency welfare work.

One thousand persons representing all branches of the legitimate theatre at a rally at the Hudson theatre in New York Monday night heard speakers appeal for $100,000 to start the Theatre Wing War Service. A total of $70,000 was pledged by 140 of the members. The organization will coordinate all the theatre's war relief and other war activities.

Allegheny county theatre patrons contributed $18,258 to the United Service Organizations drive, chairman Carl L. Peirce, Jr., announced this week.

Dumbarton Theatre Acquired

Peoples Amusement Corp., owners of the Lido theatre in Washington, D. C., has acquired the Dumbarton theatre in that city, and negotiations are now underway for the acquisition of more neighborhood spots, according to an announcement from Charles Freeman, Sr. The Lido theatre, which was acquired by Peoples Amusement some months ago, will be enlarged from 260 to 625 seats as soon as materials are available.

Academy Award Dinner Scheduled for Feb. 26th

The board of governors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has set the 14th annual awards dinner for February 26th, it was announced in Hollywood this week. Achievements, to be eligible, must have been in connection with motion pictures released during 1941, or first publicly exhibited in the Los Angeles area before January 12th, 1942.

MGM Signs Saroyan

William Saroyan, playwright, has been signed to a producer contract by MGM. It is understood he will spend some time at the studio studying film technique before beginning production.

FIVE-POINTS-FOR-UNITY PLAN GOES TO FIELD UNITS FOR RATIFICATION

Universal Counsel Explains Company's Non-Participation Because of Trust Actions but Praises General Plan

The film industry this week settled back to await results from the new Motion Picture Industry Conference Committee, appointed at last week's "unity" meeting in Chicago, to pursue five points which are expected to build a solid and appealing facade to outsiders, and settle problems within. Even as it waited, however, it did not expect immediate action, for the composition of the Committee is temporary, a permanent chairman must be chosen, local units must ratify actions approved by delegates at Chicago, and the unit must meet again.

Meanwhile, with the absence of United Artists and Universal noted at last week's meeting, Joseph Prutzman, counsel and spokesman for the company, explained that Universal, defendant in Government anti-trust actions in Buffalo, Nashville and, possibly, New York, could not risk actions perhaps inimical. He added:

"For the time being, we are going to have to stand on the sidelines and cheer the others, because we believe it is for the good of the industry."

He also said the unity setup was well conceived, and did not depend for success upon his company's participation.

Allied Meets in January

Allied's board of directors, meeting annually in January, will probably have some cogent opinions upon the meeting, and its resultant committee. The directors will not meet in Washington because the city is too crowded. Another locale will be selected, shortly. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America this week began mailing ballots to directors, for ratification of the unity plan. The St. Louis MPTO was to vote Monday.

The full unity program, the personnel of the Committee, and a relation of the events in Chicago Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of last week, were printed in full in the December 13th issue, pages 15 and 16.

Recalled here are the five points unanimously approved Wednesday, after a convention steering committee worked upon them the whole of Tuesday night:

"1. Co-ordination of policy and action in reference to taxation.

"2. Co-ordination of policy and action in protecting the good name and integrity of the industry as a whole.

"3. Formulation of plans for institutional advertising and other goodwill activities.

"4. Protecting the necessary supplies of the industry by securing proper priority ratings.

"5. Formulation of a program providing, if possible, for the adjustment, or modification of the policies or practices of one branch or member thereof which are opposed by any other branch or a substantial portion thereof.

OFFICIAL THANKS TO THE INDUSTRY

President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Navy Knox this week thanked the film industry for its pledges of support given in a telegram from the unity meeting in Chicago last week.

"The President is more appreciative than he can say", according to his secretary, Marvin McIntyre. Colonel Knox remarked, "Such offers of cooperation are extremely heartening, and merit the appreciation of the entire naval establishment."

The unity meeting's resolution of support was its first business and carried the signatures of the national Allied, the MPTOA, PCCITO, the ITO of Southern California and Arizona, the ITO of Northern California and Nevada, the ITO of Oregon, the ITO of Washington, Northern Idaho, and Alaska, the Intermountain Theatres Association, the Allied of Iowa and Nebraska, the ITOA of New York, the MPTOA of Virginia, and those of Paramount, Loew's, Warners, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO, Monogram, Republic, Columbia.

The Motion Picture Conference Committee was then formed, comprising five men from National Allied; five from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; five from independent exhibitor groups; and one from each distributor.

Subcommittees were then appointed Wednesday, to pursue each point.

Wisconsin Unit Appoints

President William Ainsworth of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, last week named committees to function during the coming year, as follows: legislative, Charles W. Trampe, Milwaukee, chairman, Henry Ringling, Baraboo; F. J. McWilliams, Madison; John P. Adler, Marshfield, and Milt Ellis, Beloit; convention, Charles W. Trampe, chairman, Bert Nathan, Oliver Schmidt and Louis Orlove, all of Milwaukee; finance, A. C. Gutenberg, chairman, and Oliver Trampe, both of Milwaukee, and A. C. Berkholtz, West Bend; membership, Miss Lucille Forbes, Merrill, chairman, Charles W. Trampe, Ainsworth, Adler, Berkholtz, George Fischer, Milwaukee, and Mark Morgan, Cedarburg.

Approximately 50 questionnaires have been returned by exhibitors in the New Haven territory to Maxwell A. Alderman, executive secretary of Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut, overwhelmingly opposing the consent decree. Many violations are also reported. The poll will be computed in its entirety in a few weeks, it is reported.

Industry Rises To Crisis: Hays

Parlous times menace the mental, physical, and spiritual health of our people. Greater than ever is the responsibility of the motion picture industry. And that industry, "nurtured in freedom, recognizes its obligation to freedom" and its determined purpose is "to make certain the continual flow of the films so vitally necessary to military and civilian morale." So spoke Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Saturday night, at the 30th annual formal dinner of the Indiana Society of Chicago, in the Stevens Hotel, that city. Mr. Hays, an Indiana native, was guest of honor.

"The show must go on," Mr. Hays asserted, adding: "A gathering such as this in these grave and serious days is proof that whatever demands war will make upon us as a people, smiles can and will lighten the burden, recreate our strength, and give us a perspective to see the ultimate triumph of decency, freedom, and civilization. The fact that we can laugh at our own foibles, face serious news without flinching, and find humor in our fellowship, emphasizes the stuff of which this nation is made."

Another speaker at the banquet was Dwight Green, Illinois Governor. Shown was a sound motion picture, "Hoosier Boy Makes Good," tracing Mr. Hays' career. Incorporated in this were scenes from "The Great Train Robbery" and "Gone With the Wind."

Ampa Sets Dinner To Honor Hays

Plans for a testimonial dinner to Will H. Hays commemorating his twenty years in the motion picture industry were announced Tuesday, in New York, by Vincent Trotta, president of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, which will sponsor.

The banquet will be held at New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, Friday evening, March 6th.

The board of AMPA has appointed a committee consisting of Leon A. Bamberger, chairman; Maurice A. Bergman, John Flynn, Rutgers Neilson, Kenneth Clark, Joel Swenson and H. M. Ritchey to formulate general plans for the dinner.

It was announced that among highlights of the program would be a coast-to-coast radio program emanating from Hollywood which would depict the history of the business during the past 20 years.

Ginger Rogers' Film Set

Ginger Rogers' first picture under her Paramount contract will be "The Major and the Minor," a romantic comedy with an American background. It is being written by Charles Brockett and Billy Wilder, the authors of "Arise My Love," "Hold Back the Dawn," "Ninotchka" and "Ball of Fire."

BOOK REVIEW

STARS AND STRIKES, by Murray Ross. Published by Columbia University Press.

Hollywood, citadel of the entertainment industry and the history of its labor relations is the story which Murray Ross has chosen to explore for his Ph.D. thesis at Columbia University. "Stars and Strikes" is the name of the book published by Columbia University Press.

Mr. Ross is an instructor of Economics at Brooklyn College.

The author says the industry has a working force of more than 250,000 men and women and an annual payrool of $400,000,000; 30,000 in the production branch engaged in making 75 per cent of the world's films; 12,500 service workers engaged in distribution of films and an estimated force of 241,000 including projectionists, doormen, cashiers and ushers employed in the exhibition of motion pictures.

Mr. Ross traces the early beginnings of efforts to unionize the exhibition branch of the industry by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and the American Federation of Musicians. The development of labor groups in Hollywood paralleled the growth of the industry itself. He recounts the IATSE efforts to launch the forming of one big union of all studio crafts and explains how intra-union fights and other factors prevented this achievement until November, 1926, when producers of nine major companies signed the Studio Basic Agreement, which was negotiated and signed by representatives of the stagehands, carpenters, electricians, painters and musicians' unions.

Considerable space is given to the story of the fight Actors' Equity Association waged to gain control of screen actors. The battle was a long and bitter one, fraught with difficulties and disappointments. Mr. Ross credits the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for its part in settling actor-producer disputes during the period when Equity failed as a bargaining agent for Hollywood Thespians and before the Screen Actors Guild came into being. In four years the Academy settled 344 major actor cases, effected more than 3,600 interviews and minor adjustments and collected $112,000 for the actors—an average of more than $500 a week. After functioning successfully for more than five years in labor dispute settlements, the Academy was "suddenly shipwrecked" in the economic storm of 1933.

Traces Development

The author continues to show development of labor unions in Hollywood embracing every phase of production and distribution; traces the stormy course of unionization through the turbulent days of the depression and the NRA. He explains how valuable an asset to Hollywood labor relations is Central Casting Bureau, set up by the producers but mutually benefiting studios and wage-earners alike. When the Wagner Act and the NLRB came along, Mr. Ross detailed how Hollywood began to fight racketeering, no small part of which he attributes to George E. Browne, former president of the IATSE, and William Bioff. The author completed his thesis following the indictment for extortion of Browne and Bioff but conviction of the two union racketeers was not included in his labor story.

Mr. Ross attempts to be fair-minded in recounting labor's part and that of producer companies in Hollywood's unionization. He claims several of Hollywood's recent labor difficulties may be laid at the door of the Nation Labor Relations Act which he said, "stirred into activity many dissident groups which otherwise might have remained quiescent. The act encouraged unionization but it has failed to demand union responsibility as the price of union strength." He termed the depression the turning point in Hollywood labor relations and cited the 50 per cent salary reduction for eight weeks effected by producer-companies with the acquiescence of the Academy as a "costly and irremediable error" on the part of producers, and inferred that these pay cuts and the policies which provoked them gave rise to labor's greater effort towards complete unionization.

In conclusion, the author points out that "diversity of behavior" exhibited by various unions and guilds makes any generalization precarious, but he does say that craft unions have been involved in many jurisdictional disputes which caused no end of embarrassment to the studios. Complete unionization of the studios, however, is of recent date. It came following a long bitter period of factionalism and feuding between different labor groups. Mr. Ross contends that actors, writers and directors' guilds which secured recognition have contributed "to the improvement of producer-talent relations and have also shown a characteristically professional interest in the industry's product." But, he adds, "despite all their solicitude for the industry's welfare, the numerous benefits they secured for their members will considerably increase the cost of film production. Because of this, the film industry may have to undergo some drastic changes in its price-cost relationships in the near future."

UA's "Corsican" and "Shanghai Gesture" Open

Two new United Artists productions "The Corsican Brothers" and "The Shanghai Gesture" debut within the week, the first in Washington, on Thursday, at a world premiere sponsored by the Newspaper Women's Club of that city, and the latter picture opening in New York on Christmas Day (December 25th).

Edward Small's production, "The Corsican Brothers," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., opened Thursday at Loew's Palace Theatre, for a two-week engagement, and is slated to open in Loew theatres on December 24th, in at least nine cities. The Newspaper Women's Club of Washington sponsored the premiere in an effort to bring "a mountain of books" to the armed forces of the United States. Anyone bringing books—from 10:30 A.M. to 1:00 o'clock on the opening day at the Palace, was to be admitted free. The books were then to be transported from the theatre by Army trucks and distributed throughout the country by the United Service Organization.

A number of the Capitol's leading figures among the Cabinet, Army and Navy and diplomatic corps were expected to attend the "Corsican" premiere.

"Gesture" at Astor

Arnold Pressburger's new production for United Artists, "The Shanghai Gesture," screen version of the Broadway play of some years ago, will make its bow at the Astor Theatre in New York Christmas Day on a continuous-run popular-price policy, UA announced. Gene Tierney stars in the film, which was directed by Josef Von Sternberg. "Shanghai Gesture" may be roadshowed in January in about 25 key cities before its general release.

Civic Affair for Bergen Film

The personal appearance of Edgar Bergen and his screen-radio partner, Charlie McCarthy, for the world premiere of the RKO picture, "Look Who's Laughing," at the Golden Gate theatre in San Francisco, was made the occasion of a civic breakfast by house manager George Bole. The event was staged at Southern Pacific depot, with Mayor Angelo J. Rossi as official host.

Drama critics of local newspapers covered the affair. Bergen's radio sponsors, Chase and Sanborn, joined in the film promotion by serving free coffee on the mezzanine of the theatre all through the week's showing of the film. Additional promotion mutually beneficial to the coffee company and RKO, was the arrangement of 800 window streamers in store outlets of the city heralding the picture's engagement, with six special windows obtained in downtown department stores. More than 12,000 patrons attended opening day of "Look Who's Laughing," grossing in excess of $5,000.

"Babes on Broadway" Bows

In addition to its New York premiere at Radio City Music Hall on December 31st, MGM's "Babes on Broadway" starring Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, will be the New Year's attraction in 39 other key city situations on that day and January 1st, the company announced in New York on Tuesday. The bookings follow:

Dec. 31: Baltimore, Toledo, Houston, Dayton, Memphis, Louisville, Cleveland, Canton, Kansas City, Nashville, New Orleans, Akron, St. Louis, Evansville, Washington, D. C.; State and Orpheum, day-and-date, Boston; Atlanta, Harrisburg, Indianapolis, Norfolk, Pittsburgh, Providence, Reading, Richmond, Rochester, Syracuse, Wilmington, Philadelphia, Seattle, Denver, and London, Ont., Can.

Jan. 1: Bridgeport, New Haven, Waterbury, Springfield, Hartford, Worcester and Buffalo.

The film also will start a run at Loew's, Toronto, on Jan. 14.

FILM LIBRARY IS SCREEN CLUB GIFT

Housed in the new dust-proof and fireproof wing of the University of Denver in Colorado, the Library of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences at the college has been endowed by the Rocky Mountain Screen Club in the hope that it will become the most complete source of reference and information in the world on the history of the film industry.

To further enlarge and complete the collection the Screen Club has sent letters to students and pioneers of the industry requesting books, rare editions, mementos and souvenirs that will be invaluable in years to come. The donors of any gifts will be listed in the brochure of "Friends of the Library" to be published for the official dedication of the Library and as part of the commemoration of the 27th Anniversary of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club, March 28th, 1942.

Joseph C. Hare, at the university's film library, is receiving all donations for the film archives.

Child Matinees at Museum

Morning movie matinees for children will be given by the Museum of Modern Art Film Library at 10:30 A.M. every day except Sundays, Christmas and New Year's Day in the auditorium of the Museum in New York City, from Saturday, December 20th, through Saturday, January 3rd. Admission to the showings is included in the admission to the Museum, which is ten cents for children up to the age of 16, plus one-cent tax. Members' children will be admitted free if accompanied by a parent.

There will be five programs, each composed of several films and each shown twice on identical days during the two weeks' period. The pictures range from a film of George Melies, "The Conjurer," produced in France in 1899, to the 1933 French version of Walt Disney's "The Three Little Pigs."

Miller Hollywood Studio

The Miller Broadcasting System, Inc., has announced the opening of its Hollywood studios and offices at 7000 Santa Monica Boulevard. The company at the same time announced the formation of Miller Radiofilm Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary, organized to handle the distribution and sales of Miller Equipment and the facilities of its studios.

Fama Pictures Formed

Nat Wachsberger, former head of the Film Alliance of the United States, has formed a new company, Fama Pictures Corp., which has been chartered in New York.

Banning of Sunday Films Ruled Unconstitutional

At Asheboro, Randolph County, North Carolina, the city ordinance in force since September 17 banning Sunday movies has been declared unconstitutional by Judge Felix Alley in Superior court. The State of North Carolina will appeal to the Supreme court. Francis White, Asheboro city alderman, and operator of two of Asheboro's three theatres, was acquitted of charges of violation of city ordinance.

Judge Alley in his charge to the jury indicated that, though the principle of the ordinance which had public morale as its interest, the ordinance itself was invalid in a number of constitutional points. The law in effect was discriminatory in that it specified only the showing of motion pictures to which admission was charged. As far as validity was concerned, Judge Alley said, it should have specified the showing of any motion pictures on the Sabbath, whether there was a charge of admission or not.

The ordinance was passed by the Asheboro city council last September when the Asheboro recreational committee was considering opening theatres on Sunday for the entertainment of soldiers on maneuvers in the Carolinas. Prior to action of city council Asheboro theatres had remained closed on Sundays under an agreement between Councilman Francis White and Cecil Rosson, manager of the third theatre in the city. This they did in deference to the religious sentiment of the people of Asheboro. On October 5th Councilman White opened his Sunset theatre in defiance of the city's ordinance and was charged with violation of the law.

Warner Managerial Shifts

There have been several transfers of managers in the Warner circuit Philadelphia zone, as follows: George Kemble to the Levoy, Milleville, New Jersey, from the Orient, Philadelphia; Harry Orlow, from the Levoy to the Clementon, Clementon, New Jersey; Harold Branson, from the Leader to the Diamond, Philadelphia; Gerald Weissler, from the Diamond to the Columbia, same city; John Sassenroth, from that theatre, same city, to the Orient, also that city.

Christmas Party Planned

Plans are progressing for the annual Will Horwitz Christmas party at the Houston, Tex., City Auditorium for thousands of the children of that city. It will be the 22nd year and about 15,000 youngsters are due to attend the performances, including motion pictures, stage shows, giveaways of toys and fruits and a gift. Girls and boys up to 10 years are included.

Cohen Selling Newsreel

Sherrill Cohen, operator of the Downtown theatre, Los Angeles, is now selling nationally a newsreel which he and his associates are producing on the west coast. The reel concerns national affairs. Mr. Cohen formerly used the newsreel exclusively for his own theatres.

Monta Bell Resigns

Monta Bell, producer of "Birth of the Blues" and "Aloma of the South Seas" for Paramount, resigned his post with that company, it was announced in Hollywood last week.

INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS THINNING, IN FAVOR OF BERTHS WITH MAJORS

Only 19 Now Producing for Major Company Distribution, Compared with 32 Last Year; Seven with United Artists

Ranks of independent producers have thinned strikingly during the last two years with but little infusion of new blood into the field of making pictures for major release.

There were about 32 independent production companies with major distribution contracts at the start of 1940. There are now 19 thus engaged, seven of them, however, with United Artists deals.

A number of the independent unit heads of former years are producers and executives at major studios, doffing the responsibilities of complete unit production and finance.

Some of the independent companies are dormant, waiting, perhaps, to see the full effects of consent decree selling conditions upon the companies conforming and not conforming to the decree's mandates.

Few Active

The producers active two years ago and continuing as independents are:

Frank Lloyd and Jules Levy, releasing through Universal.

C. B. DeMille and Harry Sherman, through Paramount.

Orson Welles, through RKO.

Samuel Goldwyn, then through United Artists, now through RKO.

Larry Darmour, through Columbia.

The United Artists group of David O. Selznick, Charles Chaplin, Alexander Korda, Edward Small, Hal Roach, Loew-Lewin and, recently signed, Harold Hurley.

The "new blood" comes with the following:

William H. Pine and William C. Thomas' company making six pictures for the Paramount program.

Jerrold Brandt's Pyramid Pictures making the "Scattergood Baines" series of three for RKO.

William Hawks' United Producers, Inc., making three this season for RKO, one of which has been delivered.

William Dieterle Productions, Inc., working on one for RKO, with the remainder undetermined.

Jack Votion's making a second "Lum 'n Abner" feature for RKO.

They all have definite release commitments.

One producer, John Hall, has finished his initial production and is now arranging a distribution deal.

Gone from the field to executive and production posts at major lots are:

Sol Lesser, last with United Artists, now executive producer at RKO.

Frank Capra, now associate producer-director at Warners for "Arsenic and Old Lace," at least.

Graham Baker, who dissolved his partnership with Gene Towne in The Play's the Thing Productions releasing through RKO, to become an associate producer for that company.

Boris Morros who released one through RKO and one through Paramount and then became a producer at 20th Century-Fox.

Harold Lloyd, who dropped activities on behalf of his own company to join RKO's producer ranks.

Other changes have marked the arena of independent-major production. Harry Edington, whose Famous Players company two years ago produced "Green Hell" for Universal and had a commitment for one more, held in the meantime the post of executive producer at RKO. He left the studio last month upon settlement of his contract.

After making one picture, "Li'l Abner," for RKO, Lou Ostrow shuttered his Vogue Pictures, Ltd., and became a 20th Century-Fox producer. He left this month after producing four pictures there.

Inactive List

Inactive, or active but without release arrangements set, are the following producers who were making pictures two years ago:

Walter Wanger, who last month sold his 50 per cent interest in Walter Wanger Productions, Inc., to United Artists. He has a unit shooting footage in England for "The Eagle Squadron."

Charles R. Rogers, who produced several independently for Columbia release and who, upon severing the connection some time ago, retained his unit.

William Stephens, who has dropped his production activities as partner of Howard Lang on the "Dr. Christian" series for RKO and returned to the agency business. The "Dr. Christian" series have been dropped.

Franklyn Warner, whose Fine Arts company has been dormant since delivery of "Isle of Destiny" to RKO.

Richard Rowland, whose last production was the hit, "Cheers for Miss Bishop," for United Artists, released in February of this year. Should he resume production, it would be for United Artists distribution.

Max Gordon and Harry Goetz' enterprise which went somnolent with RKO's distribution of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

Lee Garmes, who produced one picture for RKO, "Beyond Tomorrow," under his Academy Productions aegis.

Harold B. Franklin, who made "The Villain Still Pursued Her," from the old play, "The Drunkard," for RKO.

Howard Hughes, who had a two picture deal with 20th Century-Fox, produced with much expense and publicity "The Outlaw," starring two unknowns, and has not delivered it yet.

Exclusive of the United Artists group of independents, there will be approximately 37 pictures delivered to the majors this season from the unit companies. Eighteen of them have been finished, or are shooting.

Frank Lloyd will do three for Universal—"Saboteur," which Alfred Hitchcock will direct; "River Lady," and "The Spoilers." The last is a "package deal" arranged by Agent Charles K. Feldman in which Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne and Randolph Scott will star and Lee Marcus will be the associate producer.

Jules Levy's Mayfair Productions has finished the Olsen and Johnson vehicle, "Hellzapoppin'," and has had assigned to it by Universal the production reins on "Pardon My Sarong," Abbott and Costello picture.

"Reap the Wild Wind," with a star studded cast, has been delivered by C. B. DeMille to Paramount.

With five "Hopalong Cassidy" pictures and "Tombstone," a special, finished, Harry Sherman has one more "Cassidy," and another, possibly two, specials to do for Paramount.

Welles Plans Four

Orson Welles and RKO announce that he will do four pictures this season. He's currently shooting one, "The Magnificent Ambersons."

With "The Little Foxes" and "Ball of Fire" having been already released by RKO, Samuel Goldwyn has one more to do on his current RKO deal.

An indeterminate number of "Ellery Queen" detective mysteries will come from Larry Darmour to Columbia. One is finished, one is in work.

Three Chester Morris and three Richard Arlen vehicles are on the Pine-Thomas slate. One of each is finished.

Jerrold Brandt is starting on the first of the new series of three "Baines" stories. He delivered three to RKO last season.

William Hawks has delivered "My Life with Caroline" to RKO for the new season, and has announced "Red Pony," from the John Steinbeck story, and "The Gilded Pheasant," location work for which is now being done in Mexico.

An elastic deal has been given William Dieterle, producer-director and head of his own company with Charles L. Glett as his associate. He's working now on his "Syncopation," and is considering the biography of Samuel Gompers, late labor executive.

Another "Lum 'n' Abner" picture will be put to work shortly by Jack Votion, now divorced from his partner Sam Coslow with whom he produced one last year titled "Dreaming Out Loud."

"The Captain of Koepenik" was made by John Hall as an independent venture. Peopled with a cast headed by Albert Basserman in the title role, the picture will be offered to major companies as soon as final scoring and editing are completed. Hall also plans the filming of Gorky's play, "The Lower Depths."

Gallagher Plans Set

John J. Gallagher has established headquarters for his John J. Gallagher Productions at the Hal Roach Studios in Culver City, Cal. He plans to make "The Gypsy Cavalier" for Columbia release in English and Spanish versions.

HOLLYWOOD SETS NEW CAMP SHOW

Hollywood participation in entertainment activity for servicemen in Army camps and Naval stations, is continuing with good progress it was announced last week by Edward Arnold, president of the Screen Actors Guild and vice-president of USO-Camp Shows, Inc. Mr. Arnold reported from Hollywood that a Fanchon and Marco stage show was being produced in the film capital for the Red, White and Blue circuit of 206 camp posts which will be toured by the USO theatrical division.

Harry Delmar, meanwhile, left New York last Saturday to meet commanding officers in all corps areas. Mr. Delmar is production manager for USO-Camp Shows. He will visit Atlanta, Chicago, Omaha, San Antonio and San Francisco to discuss the shows which are to be given by the USO-screen-stage unit.

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Associated British Film Dist.

IT'S IN THE AIR: George Formby, Polly Ward—Good old slapstick comedy, just what the public wants. Business terrific. A real mortgage lifter as the distributors are reasonable.—B. N. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

Columbia

ANGELS OVER BROADWAY: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell—Just a fair feature and just that. Plot just fair. Running time, 80 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

FACE BEHIND THE MASK: Peter Lorre, Evelyn Keyes—Fairly good week end program. Running time, 65 minutes. Played December 5-6.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GIRLS UNDER 21: Paul Kelly, Rochelle Hudson—This type of picture has a definite following and does business. Running time, 64 minutes. Played December 1-3.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GO WEST YOUNG LADY: Penny Singleton, Glenn Ford—The best western made by anybody this year, including all the super epics. Right up every small town exhibitors alley with a swell cast, good music and lots of action in a fairly plausible story. Played to capacity business. Played December 2.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES MR. JORDAN: Robert Montgomery, Rita Jonnson—One of the most screwball comedies of the year, which gave us a good shellacking. Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 3-4.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LONE WOLF MEETS A LADY, THE: Warren William, Jean Muir, Victor Jory—The plot is the same as the rest of the series. Beginning to become a bore here. Know what's going to happen before the feature is over. Very, very weak story. Running time, 71 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

MUSIC IN MY HEART: Tony Martin, Rita Hayworth—A fair musical feature. Will do only as a second. Running time, 72 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

OUR WIFE: Melvyn Douglas, Ruth Hussey—This picture gave us the first outstanding grosses for the first of the week that we have enjoyed in some time. Thought it very entertaining. Running time, 95 minutes. Played December 1-3.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RETURN OF DANIEL BOONE: Bill Elliott—A definite draw for an action house. Running time, 58 minutes. Played December 4-6.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RETURN OF WILD BILL: Bill Elliott, Iris Meredith—A good western with good timing and a well presented plot that furnished a really good hours entertainment. Everyone liked this one. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 11-12.—W. J. Overstreet, Director of Motion Pictures, Florida State Prison Theatre, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

ROYAL MOUNTED PATROL: Charles Starrett, Russell Hayden—The first with these two western stars. Good business and I believe this combination will click. Not a western, but has enough outdoor action to satisfy. Running time, 60 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

SHE KNEW ALL THE ANSWERS: Franchot Tone, Joan Bennett—We enjoyed very gratifying business, customers seemed well satisfied. Running time, 86 minutes. Played December 1-2.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SING FOR YOUR SUPPER: Jinx Falkenburg, Buddy Rogers—Played on Bank Night to better than average business. This is another swell little picture from this company with better than average music and capable acting. The Mad Russian of radio fame offers new comedy that really gets the laughs. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 9—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

STORK PAYS OFF: Maxie Rosenbloom, Rochelle Hudson—Just a fair picture with a good idea that might have turned out much better. Played on Bank Night and seemed to please an average crowd. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 25.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

TEXAS: William Holden, Claire Trevor—Right good business and a very appreciative audience. Doubled gross on "Arizona" and personally considered it far superior to this old special. Running time, 94 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

TEXAS: William Holden, Glenn Ford—For all action fans. Not enough star names to hold up a Sunday date which we gave it but will please all your western fans. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 6-8.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

TEXAS: Claire Trevor, William Holden—A week end natural thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. Running time, 92 minutes. Played December 4-6.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THREE GIRLS ABOUT TOWN: Joan Blondell, John Howard—Mediocre screen fare—to fair business. My patrons didn't seem to appreciate this comedy or could it be possible that they couldn't see anything humorous in dragging a presumably dead character around throughout the length of the feature. Running time, 73 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

WILDCAT OF TUCSON, THE: Bill Elliott—Poor, poor, poor. All of these Elliott's are for the dogs. Acting corny. Title sounds better than the picture. Running time, 59 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

YOU BELONG TO ME: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda—Swell picture with two top notch stars playing their parts to perfection. Business only fair but not the fault of the picture. Many favorable comments. Running time, 98 minutes. Played December 6-8.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

YOU BELONG TO ME: Henry Fonda, Barbara Stanwyck—Very good feature—but a small item like the Japanese bombing of our possessions, with every radio cemmentator going full blast—and a rain, sleet and snow storm were just too much competition for us. Normally this should do good business. Running time, 97 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

YOU'LL NEVER GET RICH: Fred Astaire, Rita Hayworth—Very good. Business good. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 23-24.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex. Small town patronage.

YOU'LL NEVER GET RICH: Fred Astaire, Rita Hayworth, John Hubbard—The title is wrong on this one. We did almost get rich, at least compared with other shows we have run this Fall. Swell comedy, swell dancing, nice music and a peppy plot were just what my patrons ordered and they really turned out for it. Rita Hayworth is Fred Astaire's best dancing partner since Ginger Rogers. It should do well everywhere. Running time, 89 minutes. Played December 4.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BIG STORE, THE: Marx Brothers, Tony Martin—Very good. Why are they quitting, or are they?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy—Excellent picture on which business was very disappointing. Maybe I expected too much but I did think it would be a natural.—B. N. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire—A truly great spectacle and a delight to all who saw it. Astaire, Powell and Murphy made a great team and their dancing was superb. It was well received here as many compliments were made on it. Running time, 91 minutes. Played October 15-16.—W. J. Overstreet, Director of Motion Pictures, Florida State Prison Theatre, Raiford, Florida. Prison patronage.

COMRADE X: Clark Gable, Hedy Lamarr—An average picture held up by star names. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 8.—R. V. Seaman, Central School Theatre, Gilbertsville, N. Y. Small town and rural patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S CRISIS: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Not the best of the series, but the others hold up attendance on this. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 22.—R. V. Seaman, Central School Theatre, Gilbertsville, N. Y. Small town and rural patronage.

FEMININE TOUCH, THE: Rosalind Russell, Don Ameche—Swell entertainment but will not appeal to most small town customers. Don Ameche and Rosalind Russell never better and there are lots of good laughs. Running time, 97 minutes. Played December 3-4.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Vivien Leigh, Clark Gable—An epic drama that was well received. Vivien Leigh excellently portrayed every possible emotion and rendered a splendid performance. The entire cast kept the audience spellbound throughout the entire running time. Running time, 228 minutes. Played August 20-21.—W. J. Overstreet, Director of Motion Pictures, Florida State Prison Theatre, Raiford, Florida. Prison patronage.

HONKY TONK: Clark Gable, Lana Turner—Not as good as "Boom Town" but very good. Played to above average business and everyone satisfied. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 20-December 1.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY HARDY: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—To me, this seemed about the poorest of the Hardy series. Too much of the sordid and tragic for an Andy Hardy picture. Attendance for a Sunday-Monday playdate was not up to expectations.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MEN OF BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney—Opened by new Roxy Theatre with this picture and business was all that could be desired. Excellent in every way.—B. N. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

PHILADELPHIA STORY: Katharine Hepburn, James Stewart—The boys will have to work long and hard to make a picture that will surpass this in story, acting, and last, but not least, in the use of "standing room only" signs. Silver cups and Oscars were not misplaced on this, to which our patrons overwhemingly agreed. Play it again and again any place and at any time. Excellent business on a repeat run. Running time, 112 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

THEY MET IN BOMBAY: Clark Gable, Rosalind Russell—An entertaining picture and our audience as a whole enjoyed this one. But many seemed to think the plot superficial. Gable and Russell are up to standard and their talents are weakened by the fact that the script is a bit too good, and everything happens at exactly the right time. In other words, Gable is riddled by machine gun bullets and in the next scene is blooming with health in a hospital—such a transition brought criticism. However, the comedy is good and the picture is entertaining. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 28-29.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

YOUNG TOM EDISON: Mickey Rooney, Fay Bainter, George Bancroft—Had played "Edison the Man" to good business, but this let me down. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 26-27.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

Monogram

BOWERY BLITZKRIEG: Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall, Warren Hull—See review on "South of Suez," Warner Bros.-First National.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GANG'S ALL HERE, THE: Frankie Darro, Marcia Mae Jones, Jackie Moran, Mantan Moreland—Fair program picture. Not as well liked as the others in the Darro-Moreland series, despite the added stars in this.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

HER FIRST ROMANCE: Edith Fellows, Wilbur Evans—Weak in every aspect. As far as we were concerned here we were sorry they wasted the time to make this film. The fake singing and recording was below average. If you are looking for compliments from this one, don't. In our estimation the picture is not good as a second feature. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

WANDERERS OF THE WEST: Tom Keene—Only fair. It seems peculiar that he same company that makes the Ritter's and Keene's also makes the Range Busters. The Range Busters are fine, but the other two series are only fair. Tom Keene is good, but he didn't have a chance in "Wanderers of the West." Also, too much "Slim" Andrews.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Lynne Overman—This is a splendid picture. It will ring the bell at the box office; furthermore, those who see it will like it. Running time, 77 minutes.—J. L. Thayer, Leddy's Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Lynne Overman—Another enigma of the business. With the weakest of stories and generously dosed with hokum, this film did the best business we have had in two years. It must be Dottie, God bless her. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 30-December 1.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

BUY ME THAT TOWN: Lloyd Nolan, Constance Moore—Good action picture to average Saturday crowd. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 29.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex. Small town patronage.

CAT AND THE CANARY, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard, John Beal—First time in this location double-billed with RKO's "Scattergood Meets Broadway." Good business helped restore our patrons' faith in the calibre of our double bills. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 28-29.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Lynne Overman, Eddie Bracken—We did average business on this. I thought it should have done much better. It's a good show. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 22-23.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—Fair comedy, Hope's radio program helps and Dorothy's glamour doesn't drive away patrons when this pair appear together. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 1.—R. V. Seaman, Central School Theatre, Gilbertsville, N. Y. Small town and rural patronage.

HENRY ALDRICH FOR PRESIDENT: James Lydon, Charles Smith, June Preisser—Nothing big, but pleased the Friday-Saturday crowd. Juvenile cast. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche, Oscar Levant—Average musical. Patrons enjoyed the singing. Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 15.—R. V. Seaman, Central School Theatre, Gilbertsville, N. Y. Small town and rural patronage.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche, Oscar Levant—This was a flop at the box office and any further remarks are only conducive to indigestion and high blood pressure. Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 19-20.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

NEW CONTRIBUTORS TO DEPARTMENT

Two new contributors reported to the What the Picture Did for Me Department this week, and two others resumed after a lapse of some time. The new contributors are

G. W. McLEAN, State Theatre, Big Timber, Montana.

R. V. SEAMAN, Central School Theatre, Gilbertsville, N. Y.

The contributors who resumed after an absence are:

H. M. GERBER, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D.

SIMON GALITIZKI, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas.

Read the reports from these and other contributors in the adjoining columns.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche, Oscar Levant—Notwithstanding that this picture had plenty of stars, it did not click. It just seemed to be a misfit from start to finish. It might have been poor directing or it might have been something else, but something was wrong all the way through it. Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 7.—J. L. Thayer, Leddy's Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

LAS VEGAS NIGHTS: Constance Moore, Bert Wheeler, Phil Regan—Missed the boat. In a spot like this, no war industries, the best orchestras, even Tommy Dorsey's name, has no draw. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 19-20.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

LIFE WITH HENRY: Jackie Cooper, Leila Ernst, Eddie Bracken—Our customers went for this in a big way. Played November 8-9.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

MYSTERY SEA RAIDER: Henry Wilcoxon, Carole Landis—Above average program picture, but did good business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NEW YORK TOWN: Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin—Poor and very poor business—MacMurray good but less said about Mary Martin the better—only she's got no business in a drama of this sort. My youngsters are all firmly convinced now, that when you're going to lose the gal—or something—that all one needs to do is get tight and everything is yours. Drinking scenes in pictures hurts my business and I for one, have given too much publicity or advertising on the screen to the liquor industry, free. Of course, a complimentary case or two of the brands the stars are supposed to be drinking might take the bad taste of punk business away, and leave me with the idea that the drinking scenes aren't in such bad taste. Running time, 75 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

NIGHT OF JANUARY 16TH: Robert Preston, Ellen Drew, Nils Asther—A "C" picture that is as good as a lot of "B's" that I have been stung by. It's a good safety-feature for a bad date. Running time, 79 minutes. Played December 4-6.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard, Edward Arnold—Good picture and good business. Very funny show. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

REACHING FOR THE SUN: Joel McCrea, Ellen Drew, Eddie Bracken—Same old story. One grade above Class "C"; several miles below Class "A" and way off at the box office. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 3-4.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

RYTHM ON THE RIVER: Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Basil Rathbone, Oscar Levant—Played this late, but what patrons I had to see it seemed to like the show, but no raves. Struck the worst storms here for twenty years, two feet of snow and 20 below zero. Fancy, in November. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 22.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—This is a grand picture and was well received here. Although he received no official credit from the producers, Harry Carey turned in another of his splendid jobs of acting. Too bad for the exhibitors in general that Carey failed to click with

There is a mechanized defense against your subtlest enemy

As essential as aircraft detection equipment to national defense, is the Altec Service man's electrical and mechanical equipment, by which he diagnoses and cures hidden maladjustments before they cause breakdowns.

The subtlest enemy to your investment in good projection and sound is deterioration of the equipment and its parts. You can checkmate this enemy—by protecting your projection room with Altec Service. The accumulated scientific experience of Altec Service is your prime mechanized defense against preventable replacement costs. To the forward-looking exhibitor, faced with the effects of metal shortages, Altec Service is, more than ever before, a prime essential of good showmanship.

the Hollywood moguls. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 12-13.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS RIDE AGAIN: John Howard, Ellen Drew, Akim Tamiroff—A good western. Story different than the usual drag of the other westerns. Running time, 67 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

VIRGINIA: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray—Along about tbis time of the year when the weather and business aren't so hot, a good, well-known "oldie" like this often belps me to put the wolf back out on tbe doorstep wbere he belongs. My folks tbought "Virginia" was great, Fred MacMurray swell, Carolyn Lee very sweet, the color gorgeous. And as for Madeleine Carroll, Wow! Running time, 110 minutes. Played December 1-3.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town patronage.

WEST POINT WIDOW: Anne Shirley, Richard Carlson—Played this on bargain night to average business. Comment was best summed up by two words, "cute picture." Running time, 63 minutes. Played November 26.—G. W. McLean, State Theatre, Big Timber, Mont. Small town patronage.

Republic

CAROLINA MOON: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey, Mary Lee—A small town life-saver that we always do well on and made more popular with the singing of Mary Lee who is well liked here. Running time, 65 minutes. Played December 4-6.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

GAUCHO SERENADE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—The public in our situation critize these pictures but I noticed that most of them stayed after seeing our feature attraction. The criticism on this was mild. Many patrons here doubtless follow the musical classics, but I could not help being amused at people keeping time with their number elevens during the singing of a western ballad. Business fair. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 28-29.—Simon Galitizki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

HURRICANE SMITH: Ray Middleton, June Wyatt—Very nice picture. Jane Wyatt and Middleton good. This Middleton looks very much like Tom Tyler. For some reason he reminds me of William S. Hart. Let's see him more often, Republic.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

ICE-CAPADES: Dorothy Lewis, James Ellison, Jerry Colonna—Republic emerges with a picture that equals the major leaguers and goes many of their pictures one better. The story is not very complicated but it serves nicely as the framework for a gorgeous ice-show, and many folks pay real dough to see ice shows without any story at all. While this was no record-breaker as to attendance, it did satisfactory business for us. This was doubled with "The Black Cat" Universal, which was tops for the thrill-seeking fans.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MELODY AND MOONLIGHT: Johnny Downs, Jerry Colonna—Everyone liked this good musical and the comedy supplied by Jerry Colonna. The singing and dancing was good and Johnny Downs played his part exceptionally well. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 18-19.—W. J. Overstreet, Director of Motion Pictures, Florida State Prison Theatre, Raiford, Florida. Prison patronage.

PITTSBURGH KID, THE: Billy Conn, Jean Parker—Played midweek to good business. Story is okay and the name of Billy Conn brought many strange faces into the house. He is no great actor, but have seen lots worse that were supposed to be better. Running time, 59 minutes. Played December 3-5.—Ritz Amusements Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

PUDDIN' HEAD: Judy Canova—My patrons were disappointed in this one. This star not mucb of a following here. Just a picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 8.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

ALL THAT MONEY CAN BUY: Edward Arnold, Walter Huston, Simone Simon—Ran this with "Great Guns" to a very good crowd. It is a fantasy but not necessarily a class film. It is very different from the general run of pictures and, therefore, I can only tell you that my patrons praised it highly. Part of tbe good turn-out was due to the fact that my patrons praised it highly. Part of the good turnout was due to the fact that the university students put on the play, "Devil and Daniel Webster," some months ago. This helped arousing interest here a great deal. What it will do for others remains to be seen. See it first if you get a chance. However, it is a masterpiece. Running time, 105 minutes. Played December 5-6.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small town college patronage.

CITIZEN KANE: Orson Welles—While this picture was very pleasing to me and to a few of our better-informed patrons, it was very disappointing from the box office viewpoint. We had a good many walkouts and the general consensus of opinion was that it was terrible. Would not recommend it for small town situations. Running time, 120 minutes. Played November 23-25.—G. W. McLean, State Theatre, Big Timber, Mont. Farming community and general patronage.

CONVOY: Clive Brook, John Clements—Very interesting and thrilling picture which I feel should be good in any town either side of the line.—B. N. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

DREAMING OUT LOUD: Lum 'n Abner, Frances Langford—This is a bit of homespun down-to-earth philosophy with a story that becomes increasingly fascinating as it unfolds. Frances Langford supplied the romantic angle and though she sang but one song her entire part was well played. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 22-23.—W. J. Overstreet, Director of Motion Pictures, Florida State Prison, Theatre, Raiford, Florida. Prison patronage.

FOOTLIGHT FEVER: Alan Mowbray—Doubled billed with Universal's "Hit the Road" starring the Dead End Kids. I agree with the patrons both were pretty awful and decided my double bills must be stronger if I want to stay in business. Running time, 69 minutes. Played November 21-22.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

MARINES FLY HIGH, THE: Richard Dix, Chester Morris, Lucille Ball—Real good action feature. Suited best for week-end. Running time, 67 minutes. George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklaboma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

MEN AGAINST THE SKY: Richard Dix, Edmund Lowe—All the patrons enjoyed tbis unique plot and the excitement that attended its unfolding. Running time, 75 minutes. Played August 27-28.—W. J. Overstreet, Director of Motion Pictures, Florida State Prison Theatre, Raiford, Florida. Prison patronage.

MEXICAN SPITFIRE OUT WEST: Lupe Velez, Leon Errol, Donald Woods—Terrible. It should never be taken out of the can. It's not funny; it's foolisb. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 29-30.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

PARACHUTE BATALLION: Robert Preston, Nancy Kelly, Edmund O'Brien, Harry Carey—Good picture and good business. Pleased the action fans. Running time, 75 minutes. Played December 2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TOO MANY GIRLS: Lucille Ball, Richard Carlson, Ann Miller—Good college picture where tbey go for this type of stuff. Eddie Bracken is tbe whole show. It would have been much better if tbe last noisy scenes were cut out. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 15-16.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BELLE STARR: Gene Tierney, Randolph Scott—Bad title kills this excellent picture. The name does not mean a thing to the average person. Recommend that rural towns advertise the pix "Belle Starr, tbe Bandid Queen". Business not very good but all pleased with the performance.—B. N. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

FOUR SONS: Don Ameche, Mary Beth Hughes, Alan Curtis—A good drama feature. Wortb showing. Running time, 89 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neigbborbood patronage.

GREAT GUNS: Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Sheila Ryan—Typical Laurel and Hardy comedy that managed to get good laughs here from a good crowd, especially the shaving and long plank episodes. Ran it to good attendance with "All That Money Can Buy," RKO Radio. Running time, 73 minutes. Played December 5-6.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small town patronage.

HUDSON'S BAY: Paul Muni, Gene Tierney, John Sutton—Business above average and many favorable comments. Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 4-6.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold—Fairly good feature for its type. Running time, 83 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

MARK OF ZORRO, THE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Basil Rathbone—A good western which failed to draw. Running time, 93 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

MARK OF ZORRO: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell—Played this second run. Satisfactory business. Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 4-6.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MARYLAND: Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, Brenda Joyce, John Payne—This feature was good. Color beautiful. Running time, 92 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

NIGHT TRAIN (Distributed in Canada by METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER under title of "NIGHT TRAIN TO MUNICH"): Margaret Lockwood, Rex Harrison—Nothing to rave about. Just a mediocre spy story, but how MGM salesman raved about this you would think that it was one of the outstanding productions of the season. Also, very poor print and sound terrible. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 15.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE: George Montgomery, Mary Howard—Have played this perennial every few years during my exhibiting career and it has never let me down yet. The latest version was no exception and business was terrific. Played November 13-15.—B. N. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

SUN VALLEY SERENADE: Sonja Henie, John Payne—Good, and business excellent. Picture would have been far easier to listen to if 98% of Millers blah-blah had been cut out. A dance band is all right in spots, dance halls mostly. Otherwise, like the bagpipes, they sound fine when about a mile away. Played November 6-8.—B. N. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

THAT NIGHT IN RIO: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Carmen Miranda—Good picture, results good business. Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 1-3.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

WESTERN UNION: Robert Young, Randolph Scott, Dean Jagger, Virginia Gilmore—Done in beautiful color, this picturization of the heroic task of spanning the western part of the U. S. with wires, during the exciting days of the '60's, is a remarkable production. Perfect casting of the leading roles in making this a great picture and there is plenty of action for everyone. Humor is injected by Slim Summerville who supplies the laughs with his part as the Indian-shy cook. A corking out-of-doors drama that is choice fare for both young and old. Running time, 93 minutes. Played Dec. 6.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WESTERN UNION: Robert Young, Randolph Scott. Dean Jagger, Virginia Gilmore—A great show produced in color that was a big success here. Good story, beautiful color and lots of action, suspense and comedy. A small town natural. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 24-26.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

WILD GEESE CALLING: Henry Fonda, Joan Bennet—Very disappointing. Nothing to it.—B. N. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

United Artists

CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP: Martha Scott, William Gargan—Here is a picture to rave about. It has all the appeal of a "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," only the woman angle instead of the man angle. Our patrons mostly go for action and thrill pictures, and we played this just before Thanksgiving which are usually quiet days for us, but, at that, the picture did a fair average. You can get behind this with all you have. If you can get them in, it will please. At the end, this got a big hand from our patrons.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neigbborhood patronage.

GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Jack Oakie, Paulette Goddard—Good picture and good business. Some said it was too long, and I had some walkouts. Running time, 126 minutes. Played November 30-December 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAJOR BARBARA: Wendy Hiller, Rex Harrison, Robert Morley—This British picture from U. A. was evidently taken in to fill the required quota. It is poisonous fare for a small town audience. We had more walkouts on this one than any picture in our rememberance. "That Hamilton Woman" did go over, and that was British, but it had a known cast in it. And this one has two that were never heard of. Let it lay if you have U. A. under contract.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MAJOR BARBARA: Wendy Hiller, Rex Harrison, Robert Morley—Good picture that didn't pay its freight. Personally thought the preview was terrible and didn't do the picture justice. But then a small town has to cater to more than this class element. Running time, 116 minutes. Played November 17-18.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

ROAD SHOW: Adolphe Menjou, Carole Landis, Charles Butterworth—This is a real good picture, but for us it did below average business for a Sunday and Monday playdate.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SO ENDS OUR NIGHT: Frederic March, Margaret Sullavan—Splendid picture and acting unusually good by all cast. Glenn Ford should have a future if given the breaks. Business not so good but all that came went out with something to think about.—B. N. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

SON OF MONTE CRISTO: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, George Sanders—The first costume-drama I didn't have to controbute my shirt to. In fact, now I feel prosperous enough to have some of the patches embroiddered. It was Joan Bennett and the story that brought them in; Louis Hayward was better as a fop than as a gallant swordsman. Running time, 102 minutes. Played November 27-29.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

THAT HAMILTON WOMAN!: Vivien Leigh, Laurance Olivier—See review on "Major Barbara," United Artists.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TOPPER RETURNS: Joan Blondell, Roland Young, Carole Landis, Eddie (Rochester) Anderson—A good comedy that was a scream from beginning to end. Word of mouth advertising brought more people the second night and many more again the third night. Eddie "Rochester" Anderson stole the show. Would like to see more of him. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 27-29.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

TURNABOUT: Carole Landis, Adolpbe Menjou—This was a sparkling comedy with an entirely new angle that pleased everyone. Carole Landis and Adolphe Menjou gave a really good performance and the patrons were convulsed with laughter over the many situations that were presented in this marital comedy. Running time, 83 minutes. Played October 25-26.—W. J. Overstreet, Director of Motion Pictures, Florida State Prison Theatre, Raiford, Florida. Prison patronage.

Universal

APPOINTMENT FOR LOVE: Charles Boyer, Margaret Sullavan—Definitely not a small town picture with no action. Our customers as a whole do not like Boyer although both the principles in this picture were swell. Played midweek to very poor business. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Ritz Amusements Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

ARIZONA CYCLONE: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight—Good action western to poor business—two westerns in one week were too much for my patrons. Running time, 60 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

BLACK CAT, THE: Basil Rathbone, Hugh Herbert—See review on "Ice-Capades," Republic.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BURMA CONVOY: Evelyn Ankers, Charles Bickford—Good little program picture that our patrons seemed to enjoy. Lots of action. Running time, 59 minutes. Played November 27-28.—Ritz Amusements Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE MCCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen and "Charlie McCarthy" and "Mortimer Snerd"—Good comedy farce with murder angle. Plenty of wisecracks that brought lots of laughs. Running time, 77 minutes. Played December 1-3.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland. Small town patronage.

IN THE NAVY: Bud Abbott and Lou Costello—This picture is a crib full of "corn" but it is entertainment and good for many laughs from those accustomed to more subtle plots and humor. Business fair. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 23-25.—Simon Galitizki, Coed Theatre, Topeko, Kansas. General patronage.

SAN ANTONIO ROSE: Jane Frazee, Robert Paige, Eve Arden—For a cheap budget picture, this one is surprisingly good. Some catchy songs, and this Eve Arden, as the hard-boiled hostess had plenty on the ball. They don't bave to cost a million dollars if some care is taken to develop the story and keep the picture moving with some logical plot.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SOUTH OF TAHITI: Brian Donlevy, Broderick Crawford—If this had been in color, it would have been just as good as any jungle picture ever made. Good story, and Maria Montez very capable actress that can sing as well. We can use more pictures of this type with same cast. Played to capacity. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 21.—Ritz Amusements Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

THIS WOMAN IS MINE: Franchot Tone, Joan Carroll, Carol Bruce—No draw, but well liked by those who saw it. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 24-25.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS: Irene Dunne, Robert Montgomery, Preston Foster—Title not right for small town as people in these situations are not acquainted with picture and pick largely on title. Had no complaints from any of those who saw the picture, but played to below average business. Picture was interesting entertainment even though it contained nothing to make it outstanding. Running time, 96 minutes. Played November 30-December 2.—G. W. McLean, State Theatre, Big Timber, Mont. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

BAD MEN OF MISSOURI: Dennis Morgan, Jane Wyman, Wayne Morris—An A No. 1 picture. Not a big box-office drawing power, but the regular movie crowd will like it. Running time, 74 minutes.—J. L. Thayer, Leddy's Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

BRIDE CAME C. O. D., THE: James Cagney, Bette Davis—This drew above average for a midweek playdate. Our patrons seemed to like this offering. The second day was almost as good as the first.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BRIDE CAME C. O. D., THE: James Cagney, Bette Davis—Davis badly miscast in this and with almost any other player this would have been one of the big pictures of the year. As it was, business exceptionally good. Played November 10-12.—B. N. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

BRIDE CAME C. O. D., THE: James Cagney, Bette Davis, Stuart Erwin—It looked like I was going to get a break on this one, but it folded on the third night when the power failed. It pleased 100 per cent, and, although the humor is kind of broad like a poolhall accent, still my folks found it quite inoffensive. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 24-26.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

CASTLE ON THE HUDSON, THE: John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien—Just the usual prison picture. Which keeps the people away. Running time, 76 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

DIVE BOMBER: Errol Flynn, Fred MacMurray, Ralph Bellamy—We do not understand why this picture failed to draw. But it certainly did not. Running time, 133 minutes. Played November 23-24.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

DIVE BOMBER: Erroll Flynn, Fred MacMurray, Ralph Bellamy—If one was looking just to criticize this picture, the only thing they might say was that it was too long. Aside from that, it was excellent entertainment. When you can hear a pin drop among over 150 kids, all through the picture, it must be good. Running time, 133 minutes. Played December 5.—J. L. Thayer, Leddy's Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SQUADRON: Ronald Reagan—Good picture to extra business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 30, December 1.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex. Small town patronage.

MANPOWER: Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Dietrich, George Raft—Another futile effort to create entertainment from a distasteful story. With thousands of charming young American girls available, why would anyone care to pay money to see Madame Dietrich. She certainly has no corner on the leg market, what with the prevailing feminine styles, short skirts, et al. Running time, 105 minutes. Played November 16-17.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

MEET JOHN DOE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck—A real good picture which did above average business on a second run. Running time, 123 minutes. Played December 1-3.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MEET JOHN DOE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Edward Arnold—This picture is all the publicity department claims for it. Capra can point with pride at this picture; not only Capra, but everyone associated with the making of this, but somehow or other, our patrons did not come out for this in a big way, not what you would expect for a super-colossal as this was advertised to be, but we did a little better than average at that.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

NAVY BLUES: Ann Sheridan, Jack Oakie, Martha Raye, Jack Haley—Did a little above average business for last of the week playdates. Had read that the comedy parts of this picture were below par, but our patrons enjoyed all of it and only wish that we had been able to play this on a Sunday date. Running time, 108 minutes. Played November 27-29.—G. W. McLean, State Theatre, Big Timber, Mont. Small town patronage.

ONE FOOT IN HEAVEN: Fredric March, Martha Scott—One of the best. Many favorable comments from audience. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 27-28.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex. Small town patronage.

SEA HAWK, THE: Errol Flynn, Brenda Marshall, Claude Rains—I dodged this picture for months as costume dramas are dynamite in this situation, but finally used it to polish off my contract. It held up nicely for three days, but one lady complained that there was not enough romance in the picture. She was old enough to know better, too. Running time, 125 minutes. Played November 20-22.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SEA HAWK, THE: Errol Flynn, Brenda Marshall—Errol Flynn and Brenda Marshall gave a superb performance in this fine adventure story and supplied the love angle. All patrons were well pleased with this picture. Running time, 126 minutes. Played October 4-5.—W. J. Overstreet, Director of Motion Pictures, Florida State Prison Theatre, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

SMILING GHOST, THE: Wayne Morris, Brenda Marshall—If they come any worse than this one, may I never run it. This Morris is all ham. It has the distinct odor of the woods' pussy cat. Looks like the result of a bad hang-over from the night before.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SOUTH OF SUEZ: George Brent, Brenda Marshall, George Tobias—Played with "Bowery Blitzkieg," Monogam. This program gave us a pleasant surprise with the best Sunday and Monday business in weeks. As to which to give credit, it is hard to say, but I am inclined to give "Bowery Blitzkrieg" the major part of the credit. So much so, that I picked up an old "Dead End Kids" picture for a later day showing. "Bowery Blitzkrieg" is about the most refined picture that these rough and ready boys have appeared in. "South of Suez" is an above the average drama.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THREE CHEERS FOR THE IRISH: Priscilla Lane, Thomas Mitchell, Dennis Morgan—A weak feature which failed terribly at the B. O. Don't show it. Running time, 100 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

UNDERGROUND: Jeffrey Lynn, Philip Dorn, Kaaren Verne—This was too melancholy, or something, even though the subject matter was timely. It failed to draw. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 26-27.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ACHE IN EVERY STAKE, AN: Stooges—Good comedy. Brought down the house and contributed to good business. Running time, 18 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT CHEESE MYSTERY, THE: Fables—Best cartoon from this company in two years that I know about.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

ACROBATIC ACES: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Very interesting. These lads and lasses have a technique all their own and are beautiful to watch as they go through their routines. Suitable for any theatre. Running time, nine minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

COPACABANA REVUE, THE: Headliner—Good musical reel with rhumba dancer. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

IT'S A HAP-HAP-HAPPY DAY: Gabby Color Cartoons—Average color cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

QUICK RETURNS: Sportlights—Good sport reel on tennis. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

MEET THE STARS, NO. 7: "Meet Roy Rogers"—Very good. If you use the Roy Rogers westerns from Republic, don't fail to run this.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

CHEF DONALD: Walt Disney Cartoons—Best in a long time. Enjoyed by all and especially the women. Running time, 10 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN-I-CURED: Leon Errol—The best Leon Errol comedy in years. It had the audience in an uproar. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 2: "Norway in Revolt"—March of Time is always good, but I don't believe this issue is quite as good as some of the rest of them. It's still good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 4: "Main Street, U. S. A."—Propaganda with a punch. Didn't do us any business in this locality. Running time, 18 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11: "China Fights Back"—For my spot, the pick of the short subjects. Many come to see this reel. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SWORD SOLDIERS: Sportscope Series—Interesting reel on fencing at West Point, concluding with scenes of marching cadets. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

WHALERS, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Too short to be of any value for the price paid in a small town. Good subject. Running time, seven minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town patronage.

WHEN WIFIE'S AWAY: Leon Errol Comedies—Good where Leon Errol is appreciated, but not here. Running time, 18 minutes.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ANZACS IN ACTION: World Today—Good short on Australians in action.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BOOGIE WOOGIE BUGLE BOY OF CO. B.: Color Cartoons—Very musical and peppy cartoon in color. Plenty of cleverness shown in its humor. It had the audience keeping time with its rhythm. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY PANDEN: Lantz Colored Cartune—Good cartoon. Running time, 8 minutes.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CAGEY CANARY, THE: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Good color cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CAGEY CANARY, THE: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Another of those very entertaining and clever color cartoons from Mr. Schlesinger. As usual, the ending is a knockout. This is one series you can depend upon without waiting to read reviews. Running time, nine minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

FREDDIE MARTIN AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—We liked this one. Freddie Martin has a good band and gives out on some swell numbers in this film. You could have heard a pin drop when they played "Tales from the Vienna Woods," it was so enchanting. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

NOTES TO YOU: Looney Tunes Cartoons—Average Looney Tune. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SNOW TIME FOR COMEDY: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—A nice little cartoon that seemed to please. But I personally thought it was too timely to be funn. Running time, seven minutes.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Miscellaneous

Canadian Ministry of Information

CHURCHILL'S ISLAND: "Canada Carries On"—Good shots of the R. A. F. in action, including film from the automatic cameras of the Spitfires in actual battle. "Life" magazine featured some of these pictures. You can sell this stuff. Running time, 18 minutes. Played December 1-2.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

HEROES OF THE ATLANTIC AND BATTLE OF BRAINS: "Canada Carries On"—This series is catching on, but some of them lack punch at the finish. Stronger modulation on the background music would improve the dramatic effect throughout. Would like to see some reports from other Canadian exhibitors on this series which is fast becoming my best box-office bet. Running time, 16 minutes.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town patronage.

ROUND TABLE IN PICTURES

Realistic touch was given the lobby display of "Last of the Duanes" at the Keystone Theatre, in Williamsport, Pa., when Manager James Frailey had house artist Bud Rothermel mount 24-sheet cutout of George Montgomery into standee poster. Base of display carried cast and playdates.

Entire staff of the Omaha Theatre, in Omaha, went nautical for Ted Emerson's date on "Navy Blues". Chief of Service, dressed as an admiral, kept patrons amused with his antics during breaks.

Going patriotic in a big way, Joe Goldstein at Schine's Webster, in Rochester, N. Y., sells his new product with cutout of "Uncle Sam".

Planting promoted record machine in lobby of Warner's Orpheum, in Philadelphia, Lee Kline ahead of "New Wine" played tunes from the picture, offering guest tickets to those recognizing titles of songs played.

To inject a little humor into his lobby display ahead of "Shadow of the Thin Man" at Loew's, in Harrisburg, Pa., Round Tabler Sam Gilman planted cutout of "Asta" which he stationed alongside water hydrant. Opposite side of lobby featured cutouts of Loy and Powell with title and playdates.

LATE EXPLOITATION FLASHES

PROMOTES MIAMI TRIP ON "SOLDIER" QUIZ

What the Loewmen report as one of the biggest picture contests ever pulled in Baltimore was the 16-day newspaper quiz on "Chocolate Soldier" at the Century, tied to the News-Post by Bill Saxon and George Avis. Prize was an all-expense trip to Miami, awarded to the reader who answered correctly two questions run daily having to do with the stars and composed in the best short letter on "Why you would like to spend a vacation at Miami," etc. Since it all was a promote the daily gave the resort, railroad and cooperating hotel a nice publicity ride, plus plenty of neat breaks for the picture.

Station WCAO hooked in with daily announcements and had the winner appear on "Frank Fan's Hollywood Program", a sustainer for the theatre, broadcast weekly. Elaborate lobby display and trailer also had to do with maintaining high interest in the doings.

ACE "TARGET" CAMPAIGN PUT ON BY ASSISTANT

During the recent illness of Manager J. M. Robertson of the F. P. C. Capitol, Victoria, B. C., Martin Cave, assistant, took over the job of exploiting "Target for Tonight", to break through with a commendable campaign especially pointed at the usually conservative local press. In recognition of which, Larry Bearg, division manager, reports a half-page illustrated feature story and out-of-the-ordinary attention to a special public preview put on by Cave where leading officers of the various Canadian services were guests of honor, in addition to the Lieutenant Governor who usually is "hard to get".

The showing was hooked up to a broadcast over Station CJVI at the theatre, and advertised accordingly in the papers and by the station. The broadcast was given further importance by an interview with the Governor whose praises of the picture aided in bringing in capacity business for the date.

LANDS FEATURE YARN WITH USHERETTES

As a result of the inroads of the draft and defense jobs, Manager Bob Fulton has recently replaced male ushers at the Tri-States Des Moines, in Des Moines, with usherettes. To give the new policy a proper sendoff, Fulton sold one of the papers on the story value of the switch, which brought a two-column break illustrated with a shot of one of the girls being measured for her uniform. The story detailed the care with which the Round Tabler selected the six usherettes from applications of over 150, the yarn going on to tell of the training in their duties given the girls before taking over their posts.

Editorial

There should be no confusion among managers in dealing with the close-to-home war crisis.

By their calling and training, theatremen are equipped to act spontaneously in the face of any danger—air raid or otherwise.

Theatremen take disaster in stride. Time and again, this department has told of how Round Tablers, immediately and automatically, have gone into action to prevent panic.

They will continue to react, immediately and automatically in the face of war peril.

Detailed instructions have been issued by the authorities on what to do—and how. These are to be studied and, when occasion arises, to be followed with the calm judgment and plain horse-sense which identifies the theatreman who calls himself one.

A-MIKE VOGEL.

(Official air-raid instructions are detailed in the news section of this issue.)

LIGHTWEIGHT CONTENDER APPEARS ON "KID" DATE

The manager of Ray Robinson, well-known fighter, a prominent Staten Island sports figure, gave Elihu Glass an opening to have the leading lightweight contender appear in person at the Fabian Paramount in connection with "The Pittsburgh Kid". Before the boy's appearance at the theatre, he and his party were guests at a special dinner together with sports editors and other about-towners. As a result, there was added notice in the dailies on the date, plus a shot of the fighter posing with Harry Black, division manager.

"HONKY TONK" PEEP-SHOW MAKES ACE LOBBY DISPLAY

Animation above boxoffice and in the lobby brought a lot of attention to Dave Sablosky's date on "Honky Tonk" at the Norris, Norristown, Pa., the former composed of two cutout heads of Gable and Turner mounted on and attached to variable motor to bring heads together.

The peep-show was a 12-foot fence in the lobby, with peep-holes every 2 feet. Behind fence was an endless belt holding mounted action stills of the stars, moving slowly so that patrons at the peep-holes could catch an idea of the sequences of the story. Around the display were roulette wheel, bird cage, crap table, etc.

"CLAYTON" ALUMNUS WRITES THE PAPERS

The Washington, D. C., sports editors recently received indignant wires fulminating as follows: "As an interested alumnus of Clayton College as well as a subscriber to your paper, cannot understand reason your sports pages ignore greatest All-American prospect, Fullback Bolenciecwcs of Clayton. How about giving Boley and Clayton a break?" Wire was signed "Nad Llerret, Clayton, '19".

The sports editors accordingly published the beef, plus the fact that there was no "Clayton", that the signature to the wire was Dan Terrell, spelled backwards, and that the whole thing was a plug for "Rise and Shine" at Loew's Capitol. They even included the date.

THEATRE "NICKEL CLUB" AIDS XMAS BASKETS

To aid the work of the Lions Club Christmas Fund, Manager Bob Berezin is again set with his "Nickel Club" at the Elgin, Ottawa, Canada, wherein anyone contributing 5 cents to the fund has his or her name acknowledged over the air on Station CKCO. The broadcasts are a part of the promotion and put on every night for 10 days ahead of Christmas.

Well ahead of the first broadcast, Berezin sent letters to all firms with large personnel forces inviting them to forward lists of employees, plus a nickel for each name, and explaining the reasons why. Letter also notes pick-up service to make collections easier. At the theatre, trailer invites patrons to drop nickels in lobby container and to sign their names in register provided for the purpose.

Bob finds the promotion an excellent goodwill builder and added advertising medium, since the club is always identified by the theatre name and the broadcasts include a plug for the current and coming attractions. Last year, the tiein brought over $600 in nickels which the Round Tabler anticipates doubling in the current drive.

FRESHMAN IS "PUNISHED" WITH ATTRACTION BOARD

Freshmen at Penn State who do not familiarize themselves with the current attractions at the Warner theatres in State College, Pa., are liable to have their memories "refreshed" by wearing attraction sandwich boards, according to Chuck Shannon's latest report. The Warnerman tells of a student so "punished" who had to make the downtown area and the campus, in accordance with fraternity initiations. In addition, the freshman was required to wear a town crier's costume and call out the names of the pictures and the theatre where they were playing.

Hits Masses With 'Falcon' Campaign

Since the population of Johnstown, Pa., is made up largely of mill-workers, miners, and others of lower income groups, Manager Bob Neilson sold his "Maltese Falcon" date at Warners State and very successfully, too, with a campaign directed at these elements, keeping away from any general appeal to the local intelligensia. In illustration, was copy on riser cards on steps, on mezzanine mirrors, on window cards spotted throughout the house — "Wow! What a Picture." The "wow" slant was also used on one-sheet shadow boxes placed on each side of the stage, lighted during running of the shorts. Out front, Neilsen planted a cartoon-type cutout figure of a falcon, saying: "Man, you ain't seen nothin' 'til you see my pitcher Maltese Falcon comin' here soon. It has moider, thrills, mystery, action, and best of all, ME."

Action heralds were distributed at the steel mills, as were throwaways with "wow" copy in the downtown area. Boy in Santa Claus costume made the business district with a sign: "I'm in town early but I want to see," etc. And during the run, Neilsen hooked the date to a citywide chain-store herald distribution, the boys with signs: "If I wasn't distributing these handbills, I'd be seeing," etc. Another outside attention-getter was a loud speaker atop various main street buildings, broadcasting "thrill" copy, proving a crowd-stopper as the curious wondered about the source of the announcements which Neilson kept concealed.

Advertises for Live Falcon

The "wow" appeal was carried out in the newspaper advertising, and further stimulated by an unusual two-column endorsement signed by Neilson, reproduced on this page. Interest also was aroused by a want ad asking for the loan of a live falcon for lobby display. Though none was forthcoming, sufficient curiosity was aroused to make it worth while. At the schools, English classes were contacted to allow students to see the picture to make up compulsory book reports. The Round Tabler also secured splendid results from a series of congratulatory telegrams sent to organizations during their meetings, the copy tied to the picture. As an instance, to the head of the local Czecho-Slovak group on the occasion of a meeting to honor one of their nationals, he wired: "Congratulations to your entire group for helping to keep freedom alive. I know it gives you all a tremendous thrill. Another will be yours when you see," etc.

I HAVE SEEN 2,000 MOTION PICTURES!

. . . and for the very first time in my life I am recommending and urging you to see the 2,001st picture that had me practically standing on my head.

It's no bargain to go on record with a word of honor, but "THE MALTESE FALCON" has given me a wallop I just can't forget! It's a smashing knockout of a picture with the best ingredients I have POSITIVELY ever seen in a mystery thriller . . . and that's on My Word of Honor.

If you ever believed that a showman could tell the truth, now's the time I want you to believe me. I know that out of 2,000 pictures, I've seen plenty of good and plenty bad, but here's my personal recommendation, and I know you'll thank me for calling this to your attention.

Believe me, you'll enjoy this dynamic suspenseful photoplay unusual.

Sincerely,
BOB NEILSON,
Manager State Theater.

Teaser Novelties Exploit "Whistling" for Cohn

Ahead of "Whistling in the Dark" at the Warner Frolic, in Chicago, Ben Cohn distributed on University campus shipping tags attached to which were small whistles. Copy on tags read: "For more fun see," etc. Tieing in with Station WIND, community commentator gave teaser plug "Who is the Fox? You'll find out when you see," this followed by sound effects. Another teaser was the distribution of imprinted bags containing small black balls on which was painted in white the number "eight." Copy on outside: "Red Skelton gets behind the eight ball in," etc. Cutout skeletons were hung from under marquee week ahead, paper napkins were imprinted and programs carried plug well in advance.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"ROLLING PIN" STUNTS SELL THAT TOUCH

On the opening of "Feminine Touch" at Loew's Park, Cleveland, Arnold Gates hooked up one of the leading radio commentators to note the award of 25 rolling pins to women patrons accompanied by men. Much was made of the rulings that the "prizes" be used exclusively for cooking purposes.

In Trail, B. C., Les Campbell also used the rolling pin to sell "Married Bachelor", giving guest tickets to women who could drive a nail through a lobby "dog-house" display with one blow of the pin.

'Keep 'Em Flying' —and Members Do

It was Dave Bachner's idea that the army could use a slogan for the entire soldiery, the Cleveland Warner adman selling the thought of a contest to the Plain Dealer, stemming from the "Keep 'Em Flying" slogan of the air corps, which also happened to be the title of the picture at the Hippodrome. The paper went for it for the week ahead of the date, crediting the idea to the picture, the theatre supplying some modest cash prizes and 12 pairs of guest tickets for the best answers, in exchange for the daily publicity plugs.

Contest-minded also was Ev Callow, when Carol Bruce came to town ahead of the date at the Stanley, Philadelphia, the Warner ad head hooking up with the Evening Ledger on a competition to find an escort for the star while in town. The answer here was a raft of story stuff and pictures, the star shown with the winner at the Army-Navy game, and in other newsworthy spots, all of which bringing the expected attention to the picture.

St. Louisans Stage Mock Raid

In St. Louis, F. & M. ad head, Les Kaufman and Manager Clyde Brown "kept 'em flying" with an Army hookup wherein a mock raid was staged above the Fox theatre by a fighting plane. Machine gun and rifle squad with powerful spotlights centered on the plane added realism to the promotion, witnessed by Army heads and city officials. Earlier in the day, the Round Tablers had a squadron of planes flying about the city to plug the showing.

Reported a first-time in Bridgeport, Conn., for the featured exploitation on "Keep 'Em Flying" at Loew's Poli, was Matt Saunders tiein with the Air Corps to induct a group of recruits on the stage. Working with Milt Harris, Universal exploiteer, and Otto Esposito, publicist, Saunders had a group of top officials on hand from a nearby base, the Mayor and Governor also being on hand for the unusual occasion.

Mayor Aids Chicago Campaign

The campaign in Chicago might be best told in the wire forwarded to the home office by Milt Crandall, Universal exploiteer which ran as follows: "Batteries of 800-million candlepower and anti-aircraft searchlights fill entire city block and equipment from Fort Sheridan surrounds City Hall. Picture first to have two-day opening program. Tomorrow parade and celebration in front City Hall. Prominent speakers, headed by Mayor Kelly, and induction ceremonies swearing in cadets, followed by searchlight spectacle, front Palace at night. Two hectic days of sirens, motorcycle cops, broadcasts, Miss Keep 'em Flying, mobile units and air circus. Lined up 11 full page and double-truck from merchants to appear first week of showing."

The American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Army Recruiting Corps gave wide cooperation to Manager Carl Hermann, Capitol, Pottsville, Pa., for his campaign opened with the Mayor issuing a proclamation on "Keep 'Em Flying Week."

1941 QUIGLEY AWARDS NEARS END

As to be expected, the Awards pace goes "all-out" as the finish looms within touching distance and noted here in the large number of entrants represented in the Sixth Fortnight of the final Quarter. In all, 76 "Fortnighters" are voted on 72 entries, the added four for double-credits, as usual.

The Seventh Fortnight, now current, is the last of the 1941 Awards. Deadline for the Fortnight and the Fourth Quarter is Monday, January 5, 1942. The year's final Fortnight listings will appear in the issue of January 10 and the Fourth Quarter-Master Awards the week following.

Ministers Aid Feldman On "One Foot in Heaven"

Basing his approach on the fact that two members of the Advisory Committee during the filming "One Foot in Heaven" were residents of Syracuse and in the ministry Dick Feldman at the Paramount Theatre there, personally called all Protestant ministers soliciting their cooperation in plugging the picture from their pulpits. Private screening for a select group of ministers, educators and newspaper and radio people was held three weeks ahead, and women's commentator on WSYR gave the film a good sendoff. Additional publicity was gained since the brother of Frederic March is a localite and attended opening night.

For "Weekend in Havana" Dick tied up Sears, Roebuck which sponsored a weekend trip to Havana in connection with a newspaper contest based on why readers would like to go to that cruise resort and why they liked to shop at Sears. In addition, the store gave theatre 10 weekly plugs on their regular local commercial spots on WAGE, WSYR and WOLF. Dancing academy was tied in on a rhumba contest with guest tickets going to winners and music stores devoted window displays to Latin music albums, and a display of records of songs from the picture.

Parachutists Tell All For Bickerstaff's Date

To further create interest in "Parachute Battalion" at the L&J Palace, in Athens, Ga., Frank Bickerstaff contacted the manager of the local radio station and also the instructor of the University of Georgia airport which resulted in some of the student parachutists being interviewed on how it felt the first time they jumped.

Local five and dime store devoted entire window to picture display in which toy parachutes and planes were featured. Title and scene stills were prominently displayed, together with play dates.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

To herald his opening of "Sergeant York" at the Blair, in Hollidaysburg, Pa., Doug Mellott placed a three-foot by 28-inch banner under his marquee which he painted himself. Worked out with heads from a six-sheet and done in red, white and blue, the front attracted the anticipated attention. Through cooperation of Superintendent of Schools, a special school matinee was arranged, classes dismissed early for the occasion.

A four-day Limerick contest opened Jack Cotter's "It Started With Eve" date at the Colonial, in Erie, Pa. Additional publicity was gained through a three-day tieup with daily in their classified page, with passes awarded those placing ads in the paper. Full week tieup on sports page, brought tickets to those correctly guessing football scores.

"What is a 'Sleeper?'" was the question put to the public in the "Whistling in the Dark" campaign put over by Stanley Benford, Colonial, Germantown, Pa. He used signs throughout the lobby and distributed 10,000 envelopes asking the question. In addition, Stan landed a newspaper contest on readers' most harrowing experiences; used a man dressed as a skeleton for street ballyhoo and had a mechanical lobby display.

When the Long Beach, N. Y., auto dealers held a parade of 1942 models, Floyd Fitzsimmons, Laurel Theatre, tied it in with his showing of "Life Begins for Andy Hardy" by offering a silver cup to the dealer having the cleverest banner displaying the film's title.

A giant banner plugging "Honky Tonk" was hung across one of the city's busiest streets as a highlight of the campaign for the film put over by W. R. Leddy, Orpheum, Green Bay, Wis.

One thousand envelopes carrying candy kisses, with the copy: "Don't miss the kiss Lana Turner gets from Clark Gable," were used by R. E. Russell, Loew's Poli, New Haven, as part of his "Honky Tonk" campaign.

Two novel tie-ups have been affected by John Higgins of the Capitol in Hazleton, Pa., for "Little Foxes" and "You'll Never Get Rich." For the former Higgins tied up with local fox farm to display two live silver foxes in an empty storeroom and also silver fox furs in the lobby and local store windows. A large glass bowl filled with broken records was placed in the window of one of the largest stores; suspended above was a large hammer with copy: "Breaking All Records—You'll Never Get Rich starring Fred Astaire and Ritz Hayworth."

Stoltz Novelties Continue to Click

What goes on in Utica, N. Y., in the way of trick advertising for the box-office of Warners' Avon, and cooperating merchants, is reported by the "Novelty Champ," Arnold Stoltz, most recently a smart die-cut idea for a change-container at the ticket window on "Sundown" and the theatre's candy counter. About six inches long by three wide, the novelty was in card form, topped by a silhouette of Gene Tierney, labelled the "sweetest girl in pictures," followed with picture copy, then tiein copy: "Save your pennies for this show and come again next week. Use the enclosed nickels for our pure and tasty candies on sale inside."

Bottom part was enclosed in cellophane to make a container in which were placed a penny and a nickel, two of the cards given to patrons purchasing two 44-cent tickets, as change for a dollar bill. When a five-dollar bill was tendered for two tickets, the procedure was the same, plus, of course, the extra bills in change. Entire cost of cards and cellophane containers was paid for by the candy company supplying the theatre.

Thanksgiving Novelty Clicks

For a Thanksgiving Day tiein on "Thin Man," Stoltz put out a co-op foldover with a leading restaurant for the pay-off. Cover carried a shot of the "Thin Man" family, plus "Asta," with this underneath: "What are the two biggest joys in Utica on this Thanksgiving Day"—all encircled with a large question mark. Bottom was made up of two red circles, a turkey illustration and a bit of Stoltz poetry reading: "Cranberries are red, turkeys are keen; on the page ahead the answers will be seen." When the page was turned, as directed, the spread revealed a layout, labelled "Thanksgiving Joys," space divided between the restaurant's special holiday dinner and the picture. The two were tied together with theatre copy.

Ties "Squadron" to R.A.F.

Since the initials of the Royal Air Force are universally known, Arnold identified his ads on "International Squadron" more closely to the famed British outfit by retitling the picture "International Squadron of the R. A. F." To make it stand up better, he clipped an extra "R" and "A" out of the pressbook ad titles, getting an "F" by knocking off the bottom of an "E." The three added letters were then pasted down in the layout to conform with the rest, and the result was distinctly box-office.

As an added program attraction, the Warnerman has been doing well with a series of "Book Reviews," on Fridays, at the theatre, at 12:30, tied in with one of the department store's lending libraries. The reviewer is a well-known local clubwoman, the feature publicized by the store in ads and in the book department. Prizes are given to those attending, the cost of which plus the reviewer paid by the store.

Amateur radio operator sending message by Morse Code in the lobby of the Rialto, in Dallas, Tex., proved attractor for Louie Charninsky's date on "Underground." Entire front was covered with stock copy including blowup scene stills which stressed the "Hitler's doom" angle. Window cards were spotted, special art landed in all papers and heralds distributed well in advance. Ahead of "Puddin' Head," girl dressed as Judy Canova was stationed in lobby and out front conversing with patrons, front in this instance playing up the comedy angle.

Tying up the Hudson Bay Company for one of their main windows, Pete Egan, manager and publicist George Shafer for date on "Dive Bomber" at the Palace, in Calgary landed display of airforce uniforms and stills from the picture with credit card. Local tobacco company also came through with lobby display and windows in distributors' stores. The Alberta-News bannered their fleet of trucks while picture copy and special mat was planted in the society section of the Herald featuring Alexis Smith and introducing her as a new star.

Recruiting station for naval aviation cadets was set up in the lobby of the Warner Theatre, in Lynn, Mass., as part of Harold Cummings advance on "Dive Bomber." On opening day, a squadron of navy dive bombers flew in and executed manoeuvers over the city. Through cooperation of the local General Electric Company, Cummings succeeded in running trailers at their noon-time motion picture show four times a week. Reported as a first time for his city was the radio broadcast from lobby which was obtained gratis by Cummings.

With a local gal winning a prize from the Illinois Bell Telephone Company for resembling Ginger Rogers, Ben Cohn cashed in on the attendant publicity by securing the services of the girl in connection with his opening of "Tom, Dick and Harry" at the Warner Frolic, in Chicago. Promoting switchboard for lobby use, girl was stationed there week ahead calling subscribers and acquainting them of the picture's opening.

Through tieup with his local daily, J. W. Shaffer, publicist and W. D. Galligan, manager of the Commercial Theatre, in Chicago, a box is run at the top of the front page offering guest tickets to certain people. The paper has the theatre's permission to give two courtesy tickets each day to subscribers whose names are listed in the box together with title of current attraction.

Due to a little manoeuvering, Clyde Smith at the Paramount, in Hot Springs, Ark., was able to grab the spotlight in the local Pilot Club's annual Pre-Christmas parade. With the judge's stand located on the sidewalk directly in front of the theatre, spotlights and flood lights were used in the best advantage in making the theatre a target for newspaper photographers. Smith's cooperation in the civic affair was rewarded with plugs over the air and in newspapers.

Merchants Aid On "Gene Autry Day"

To build up his early December showing of "Down Mexico Way" and to secure the cooperation of the Tupper Lake, N. Y., merchants in a campaign to stimulate holiday shopping, Clayt Cornell sold the idea of a citywide "Gene Autry Day," on the Saturday of the date. It was built around the slogan, "Shop now and save and see this show at Schine's State," headed with theatre copy, all of which was used in window stickers, heralds and co-op ads.

Autry assisted the promotion with a letter of congratulation carried by the local paper in addition to other publicity for the event. On the big "day" the star sent along a wire which Clayt posted in the lobby. Further assistance was given the project with a proclamation from the Mayor, also widely publicized. Autographed stars photos were distributed to the youngsters who were again intrigued with a 40 by 60 giant postcard addressed to Autry at the Monogram studio and placed in the lobby. It carried congratulatory copy on the picture signed "Your Pals," and each youngster after buying his ticket was allowed to sign the card. Postmaster appeared on the stage during the show to weigh the card and affix the necessary postage. With this, a lucky number stunt allowed the winner the privilege of carrying the card through the streets to the postoffice for mailing.

Aims at Defense Payrolls

In Glendale, Cal., Ed Harris found it profitable to work with his merchants for the purpose of stimulating sales to the increased number of defense workers in the area. The local paper co-sponsored the promotion, a series of prize drawings, weekly and grand, held at the theatre for the purpose. Over $500 in merchandise awards were made, with coupons available only at participating stores.

Cincinnati Christmas shopping and RKO theatre grosses in that sector are being hypoed by Dinny Dinerman in a classified page hookup with the Times-Star, a "Giggle-Ad" contest for daily prizes of theatre tickets, on ads run in a special Christmas Gift Guide section. Readers are required to select one full line of type from four or more ads and to combine the lines into one paragraph of four lines or more to make up a "giggle." Names of merchants from whose ads the lines are taken are to be included in the entry. In exchange, the paper is running a banner head properly crediting the theatres.

Lamm Sets Holiday Drawings

At Warners Uptown, Cleveland, Julius Lamm is also working hard with a merchant's prize drawing tieup for weekly awards given at the theatre, culminating on the night of December 24. Entry coupons are distributed by the participating stores to be signed by holders and deposited at the theatre. To finance the entire project, Julius got out a four-page Shopping Guide, carrying outside ads of cooperators, and distributed these widely in the area. The returns, Lamm notes, are enough to take care of the prizes, entry blanks, window cards and other effective advertising.

Student Cooperation Sought By Waltmon on "Smilin' Thru"

Aiming part of his campaign on "Smilin' Through" at college students, Burgess Waltmon for that date at the Princess, in Columbus, Miss., landed contest in school paper "prettiest smiles". Through cooperation of professor of English, students were urged to see the picture, heralds distributed from room to room and hit tunes played at Chapel program. Newspaper coverage brought a contest based on best 100 word story on a personal experience on "How I Came Smilin' Through." Guest tickets were awarded and stories and scenes plugging the picture were run. Numerous window displays were promoted, each carrying card reading: "You'll come Smilin' Through with this fine merchandise."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Newspaper Contest Aids Blank on "Suspicion"

Nat Blank of the Orpheum Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind., staged a chuckle-ad contest as the highlight of his campaign on "Suspicion," sponsored by the Morning Star and Evening Tribune. Ten pairs of seats were awarded to the persons submitting the most chucklesome ad.

Another phase of the campaign included a street ballyhoo featuring a wicker bench on sidewalk in front of the theatre, for ten days in advance of opening, with signs on front and back, reading: "Reserved for Those Waiting To See." Blank also tied-in with Liberty Magazine for the distribution of 3,000 heralds by carrier, in return for single passes. Liberty trucks also carried banners crediting the attraction. In addition printed summons were placed on automobiles, day before, requesting owners to appear at any matinee or evening performance of "Suspicion" and window cards were displayed in prominent downtown stores.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Neatrour Hosts "Sextette"

Now that Joseph A. Neatrour, former assistant to Jim Keefe at the Warner Cambria, in Pittsburgh, has been inducted into the Army and is stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., it appears he still can't get showbusiness out of his system as witness the stunt he pulled recently when the "Navy Blues Sextette" were on tour. Joe contacted the Warner home office and arranged for the girls, currently appearing in Washington, to be brought down to the camp for luncheon. Special four-fold menus were prepared for the occasion, front covers of which each carried cut of one of the girls, with her name. Girls further cooperated by posing with boys for photos.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Burke Gives Dog on "Lady"

Taking over recently at the F P C Capitol, in Sarnia, Canada, Bill Burke broke out with a merchant co-op page on "Lady Be Good" with an offer of a double of the dog in the picture for the most appropriate name for the pet. Burke secured the top banner for the attraction with the line: "Lady Be Good to yourself. Shop and Save," followed with theatre credits and contest rulings. Coupon was included for entries and the paper got behind the venture with helpful publicity for wide attention.

Marlowe Conner Pays a Few Dues

From his new assignment at Warners Capitol, Madison, Wis., Marlowe Conner catches up with his Round Table "dues" long enough to forward some delayed reports on recent engagements, principally on "One Foot in Heaven," with which he covered a lot of ground. Conner, of course, took care of all the expected slants, such as preview for heads of the ministerial association who followed through with letters to all the local clergymen. Notices were placed on church bulletin boards and Marlowe also addressed groups of young church workers.

For more cororful exploitation, the Round Tabler hooked up a lobby animation of cut-out man's head, smiling, and moving from side to side. Copy: "Good? Man, that's putting it mildly when speaking of," etc. Novelty banner attracted. Hung over the front doors, it stated: "Next week you will step through these doors with 'One Foot in Heaven.'" A series of teaser one-column ads also lightened the mood of the campaign and most helpful of the newspaper publicity was a front-page full column praising the date editorially under the by-line of a popular columnist.

Ties "York" to Convention

Conner also put in some good licks for "Sergeant York," playing the date during the state convention of the American Legion, held in Madison. Highlight was an elaborate proclamation by the Mayor setting aside the period as Sergeant York Week, which the Warnerman used as the feature of his newspaper and herald publicity. "Welcome" window cards to the Legion delegates were used extensively, giant head of Cooper, uniformed, extending greetings to the conventioneers and plugging the picture. Marlowe got another break when he discovered a local veteran who had served with the famed Yorke in the World War, the vet's reminiscences being good for a feature treatment by the press.

Ebersberger Follows Through

With Conner's reports, come others from Jack Ebersberger, at the Sheboygan, in Sheboygan, Wis., Marlowe's old stamping-ground, Jack keeping up the consistent box-office pace of his predecessor, as noted in his exploitations for "One Foot in Heaven." The campaign was tied principally to the local Better Films Council on a benefit basis, which secured the support of all the clergymen as well. Through the tieup, Ebersberger was able to get into all the schools in addition to the churches, his expanded drive allowing him publicity in spots otherwise difficult to secure. Newspaper emphasis was given the date with a two-column review in the news columns, a rare promotion, according to the Round Tabler, and which contributed much to the success.

For "Yank in the R. A. F.," Jack wangled a mighty tiein with the Red Cross to aid the organization's drive, the executives appointing one of the city's good lookers to serve, in uniform for the week ahead as "Miss Yank in the R. A. F." The girl occupied herself with securing subscriptions for the drive, posing with the Mayor and other local prominents, all of which duly broke the papers.

OBITUARIES

Frank Conrad, Radio Pioneer

Dr. Frank Conrad, since 1921 assistant chief engineer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company of Pittsburgh, whose interest in wireless telegraphy led to the founding of Station KDKA, died in Miami, Fla., Thursday, December 11th, at his winter home.

He suffered a heart attack on November 6th while driving to Florida from Pittsburgh and had been under the care of a physician since.

Dr. Conrad started his career in the original plant of the Westinghouse Company in Garrison Alley near Pittsburgh. During the World War he joined the Army and developed an airplane radio apparatus, one of the first of its kind, and also devised a special hand grenade and thrower.

After the war he took up his hobby of wireless. He enlarged his home-made station and soon began broadcasting phonograph records, having tired of conversation with other wireless fans. When he ran out of records he borrowed some from a local music store with the stipulation that he tell his listeners where he got them—the first "sponsored broadcast."

Later his sons began putting on home talent programs, enlisting amateur singers. One day a department store advertised sets on which the Conrad programs could be heard. This advertisement gave Dr. Conrad an idea. He in turn gave the idea to the Westinghouse publicity department. Westinghouse got a license for Station KDKA from the Federal radio authorities, a new station was built and commercial radio was launched.

Dr. Conrad leaves a widow, Mrs. Flora Selheimer Conrad; two sons, Francis H. Conrad of New York, and Crawford Conrad of Pittsburgh, and a daughter, Mrs. Edwin Durham of Massillon, Ohio.

C. E. Van Duzee

Charles Edward Van Duzee, connected with the motion picture industry in Minneapolis in its early days and at one time operator of a film exchange which served more than 100 theatres in the Minneapolis territory, died in Oakland, Cal., Friday, December 12th. He has lived in California since 1917.

Austin W. Ensminger

Austin W. Ensminger, 48, a partner since 1930 with his brother-in-law, George J. Gammel, in Gammel theatres in Buffalo, N. Y., operating the Unity, New Ariel, Colonial and Columbia, died in that city, Tuesday, November 9th, after a six weeks' illness.

Oscar E. Wee

Funeral services were held in Wayland, Mass., Saturday, December 13th, for Oscar E. Wee, 60, who died in Cambridge, Mass., Tuesday, December 11th. Mr. Wee was a noted road-show producer. He is survived by his widow.

William Nesbitt

Funeral services for William Nesbitt, film exchange employe in the Pittsburgh territory for many years, were held in that city Sunday, December 14th. He died Friday, December 12th, and is survived by his widow and seven children.

Louis Kapner

Louis Kapner, 61, died November 29th after a lengthy illness. He had been in the picture industry for 30 years and owner of the Park and Jefferson theatres, Philadelphia, both operated on a lease by the Warner theatre circuit. His wife and three children survive.

Otto J. Rohde Dies; Vitagraph Branch Head

Funeral rites were held in Oklahoma City, Okla., December 15th, at the Hahn funeral home there for Otto J. Rohde, 47 years old, Oklahoma City branch manager for Vitagraph, Inc., who died of a heart ailment, Saturday, December 13th at his home there. He had been ill for two weeks. Burial was in Memorial Park cemetery, Oklahoma City.

Active pallbearers were Fred Jack, Doak Roberts, Walter Dolin, Warner Brothers office manager; W. C. Blackstone and J. W. Loewe, Warner Brothers film salesmen; Benny McKenna, general manager of the Griffith Amusement Company; Dewey Gibbs, Columbia branch manager, and Mark Holstein, Universal head booker in Oklahoma City.

Charles Benesch, 73, Theatre Operator, Dies

Charles Benesch, 73, one of Chicago's oldest motion picture theatre owners, died Tuesday, December 9th, at the Norwegian-American Hospital in that city.

Mr. Benesch, who retired two years ago, had been in the motion picture business in Chicago for 28 years, during which time he operated the Madlin, Century, Avon, Bell, Garfield, Liberty and Lindy theatres. He is survived by his widow, Minnie; two daughters, Tillie Gilford and Blanche Alexander, and a son, Elmer, who operates the Madlin, Century and Lindy theatres at present.

John Comerford, 80, Dies in Los Angeles

John Comerford, oldest brother of the late M. E. Comerford, founder of the Comerford circuit in Scranton, Pa., died Thursday, December 11th at his home in Los Angeles, Cal. He was 80 years old and had been ill for some time.

Surviving are his sister, Mrs. M. J. Cary of Scranton, Pa., and two daughters. Postmaster General Frank C. Walker is a nephew.

IN COURTS

Three Film Companies Form in New York

Papers of incorporation were issued at Albany by Michael F. Walsh, Secretary of State, to three motion picture concerns intending to conduct enterprises in New York state. They were:

Buckeye Theatre Corp., $20,000 capital stock in $100 shares, by David M. Broudy, 305 Riverside Drive, F. P. Koppel, 89-07 169th Street, Jamaica and S. G. Myers, 1835 Grand Concourse, Bronx. Papers were filed by Schlesinger and Schlesinger, 17 East 42nd Street, New York.

Telemanagement, Inc., 200 shares, no par value, by Herbert Scheftel and Alfred G. Burger, 32 East 57th Street and Richard Reiss, 30 Broad Street, New York. Attorney filing was Abraham L. Bienstock, 30 Broad.

Budco, Inc., $20,000 capital stock in $100 par value shares by Melvin B. Lambert, Marion Pitcher and Bertha Cohen, 50 Court Street, Brooklyn. Attorney filing was Theodore Blatt, same address.

Ask Assessment Cut

Greater Rochester Properties, Inc., of Rochester, N. Y., owner of Loew's Rochester Theatre Building asssesed at $1,074,200 is suing the city for a $249,200 cut in assessments.

Court Upholds Critics Statute

Designed primarily to make the legitimate theatre "safe for drama critics" the constitutionality of a new state law was upheld Friday, December 12th, by a New York State supreme court at Hudson Falls, in its first court test.

Justice Leon M. Layden held that the Forty-sixth Street Theatre Corporation and the Select Operating Company, Inc., of New York City, violated the statute in refusing to admit Robert W. Christie of Niskayuna, Schenectady County, to a performance of "Panama Hattie" on May 27th, although he had a ticket.

The defendants contended that the law was unconstitutional because it constituted "deprivation of property without due process of law" and "restraint of free right to contract." Enacted this year, the statute prohibits the refusal of admission to any one purchasing a theatre ticket.

Ruling on the defendants' claim that failure of a statute to include motion picture theatres within its provisions constituted a denial to them of equal protection of the laws, Justice Layden said:

"While legitimate theatres and moving picture theatres are both places of amusement, still there exists between the two essential differences, and I am unable to say that the classification adopted by the Legislature is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable."

Loew's Named Defendant

A stockholder's suit against Loew's, Inc., and its officers and directors brought by Edward F. Wagner was disclosed last Friday, December 12th, in the New York supreme court when Loew's filed application to dismiss the complaint on the ground that the statute of limitations had expired.

Remember the Day

(20th Century-Fox)

Romance in the American Tradition

Make way and make playdates, for a motion picture in aid of the American tradition which is packed with entertainment for every customer on your list regardless of age, sex or experience.

"Remember the Day" is the story of an American girl's romantic and professional career from 1916 to the present.

It is also the story of American life, manners, interests and attitudes of the period as they are reflected with clarity and without fanfare in the background of the narrative.

It is a presentation, without attempting to be a glorification, of the loyalties, ideals and standards which are bundled up in most citizens' conception of what has come to be called "the American way of life." There is no preaching or declaring about it in the picture—but there it is.

Claudette Colbert out-Colberts herself as the girl in the story and John Payne, seen until now in light assignments, distinguishes himself as the man she marries. Douglas Croft and Ann Todd furnish portrayals far beyond their years, and there isn't an inch of over-acting or the opposite thing on the part of any member of the large cast.

Miss Colbert and Mr. Payne enact members of an Indiana grammar school faculty, and that is the extent of the similarity between this picture and "Goodbye Mr. Chips" or "Cheers for Miss Bishop," films to which the synopsis of this one might suggest comparison. Point, treatment and theme are not parallelled.

In the story, the boy destined to become a statesman forms a juvenile attachment for his teacher which terminates in heartbreak when he sees her in the embrace of the school coach, whom he also idolizes, without knowing that they are married. Lack of this information, also withheld from the school principal for a time, brings about a state of affairs resulting in the husband's resignation and leavetaking. It is not divulged until the end of the picture, and then without heroics, that he is killed in the first world war.

Key interests are the relationships between teacher and pupil and wife and husband. Incidents in the two strands of the story overlap and are played with the power of understatement. At no time does the script foretell outcome and there is never an overstressing of sentiment nor a pointing of lesson. Neither is there a word or incident or piece of business to limit the suitability of the whole for any and all of the purposes of general exhibition.

William Perlberg, producer of the picture, has surpassed all of his earlier productions by a wide margin.

Henry King, director, has in this a notable addition to a rich portfolio of successful undertakings.

The five writers credited with the picture have upset completely the standing rule that a multiplicity of pens spells ruin for the project. They are Tess Slessinger, Frank Davis and Allan Scott, who prepared the screenplay, and Philo Higley and Philip Dunning, who wrote the play.

Screened for the tradepress at the studio on the morning after the gentlemen of the press had been caught up with by the community's first blackout whilst on his way to attend a screening of the film at the Alex theatre in Glendale the night before. It is custom, form and something of a tradition for this group of press people to talk of nothing more pertinent than the weather when emerging from one of these studio screenings. On this occasion they threw custom overboard and engaged heatedly in a discussion as to whether this may not turn out to be the finest attraction the studio ever turned out.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER

The Bugle Sounds

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Beery as an Army Sergeant

With America's new position on the battlefield of the world, all pictures dealing with the current war or related subjects will bear a new significance, and since Wallace Beery, that hardy perennial, dons an army sergeant's uniform in "The Bugle Sounds," the picture falls into the category mentioned.

Beery takes the part of a first sergeant of the 19th U. S. Cavalry, who, because he is of the old school, loves horses and detests tanks and mechanized equipment. When a tank catches on fire, due to sabotage, and causes the ultimate death of his favorite horse, Beery goes completely berserk and is dishonorably discharged from the army. In reality, however, this is merely a stratagem to enable him to ascertain the saboteurs who have tampered with the tanks. His mission is successful and he is honored with another medal.

The elements thus involved in the plot are preparedness, the training of our troops, operation of mechanized equipment, espionage and sabotage, the stuff of which our daily news headlines are made.

Beery heads an effective cast of players, which includes Marjorie Main, who supplies the hero with friendship and the film with comedy, Lewis Stone, George Bancroft, Donna Reed and William Lundigan.

The picture will have particular appeal to Beery fans and to those who are interested in today's panorama of history, which means just about everyone.

Music and Romance

This is an entertaining little piece in the lighter vein. It is concerned all out with music and romance and comedy and has no other connection with the troubles of America and the world today except that of an antidote. And, as such, it is an hour worth the spending. There is need now, more than ever, for respite.

Reviews

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

the proceedings together-the proceedings being on the variable side because of the contrasting nature of the cast. There are, to list them, and they all consume about the same amount of footage; The Merry Macs, Judd, Ted and Joe McMichael and Mary Lou Cook, a quartette of rhythm singers; Sandy, the child star; Leon Erroll, of the rubber legs; Butch and Buddy, two precocious youngsters described by Universal publicity as a miniature Abbott and Costello team, and the romantic pairings of Anne Gwynne with Robert Paige and Don Douglas with Miss Cook of The Merry Macs.

Douglas portrays the head of an advertising agency whose chief headache is obtaining a name band for a balmy client (Leon Errol), who insists on sitting in with the band. As a last resort Anne Gwynne travels to a small Iowa community to sign a little known jive combination, brings them East, falls in love with the leader and his little niece, the niece being Sandy. Errol complicates things but, as to be expected, they are smoothed over and the show goes on.

The musical score is extensive. The Merry Macs sing "Cherokee Charlie," "Peaceful Ends the Day," "Caliacabu," "Listen to the Mocking Bird," and, with Robert Paige, "Swing-a-Bye My Baby." Paige and Miss Gwynne, who has been described as the TNT Girl—Trim, Neat and Terrific—sing "Changeable Heart" and "If It's a Dream." Still another tune, "Since the Farmer in the Dell."

Ken Goldsmith was the associate producer and Charles Lamont, the director.

Mr. and Mrs. North

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Gracie Allen Mystery-Comedy

"Mr. and Mrs. North," a film based on Owen Davis' play, has retained all the zest and speed and comedy and mystery which made it such a success when it opened on Broadway early in 1941. In the cinema role which drew criticis' raves for Peggy Conklin in the stage presentation, Gracie Allen, after a protracted absence from the screen, returns as the scatterbrained wife of a man suspected of murder who talks her husband into and out of many a predicament with the police—often to the bewilderment of the police.

Outstanding in the assisting ensemble are William Post, Jr., smooth and competent as "Mr. North," Paul Kelly and Millard Mitchell whose actions as the detective assigned to uncover the murderer are a high spot in the film. Felix Bressart, a "Fowler Brush" salesman, lends many moments of comedy and mirth with his visit to the police station to submit evidence which is misinterpretcd and, as a result, is bounced from office to office. Others in the cast include Rose Hobart, Virginia Grey, Tom Conway, Stuart Crawford, Porter Hall, Jerome Cowan and Lucien Littlefield who extract the utmost from their performances.

The story is slight but ofttimes complicated with the number of suspected murderers. It concerns a husband and his very-talkative wife who return home to find a man murdered in their apartment. Circumstantial evidence at various times points to a great number of suspects. However, as in all good cinema mystery stories the entwining complications are straightened out and the least suspected proves to be the murderer.

Irving Asher, the producer, and Robert B. Sinclair, the director, have kept the picture progressing at a swift pace—a pace in which the element of comedy is predominant since there is but a modicum of romance. Miss Allen and supporting players, some of whom will be unfamiliar to many in the audience, distinguish themselves in their portrayals.

U. A. DISTRIBUTING "LOVE ON THE DOLE"

United Artists is distributing "Love on the Dole" in this country. Produced and directed by John Baxter in England, the picture was adapted from the Ronald Gow-Walter Greenwood play, which has been one of the major successes of the English stage in recent years. The picture was reviewed from London and appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, issue of April 19, 1941.

The reviewer said that the film "is a photographic, human, but gloomy glimpse of life in an industrial town during the bad, unemployed days of a few years back. The pawnbroker's queues, the three-penny nips of 'red biddy', the squalid homes, the unemployment exchange, the ceaseless, futile search for the job that means life, as against mere existence—or death—are all here.

"Here, too, is a gloomy but all too truthful story of people who can love and live only if they have work, of a girl who wants to exist decently, whose Socialist lover dies, and who becomes a bookmaker's mistress so that she can get jobs for her menfolk."

The reviewer reported that a normally representative London audience attended the screening and was notable for "its hushes, its stifled sobs and its escapist laughter, and for the burst of applause accorded at the close". The film, which stars Deborah Kerr and Clifford Evans, was classified as adult fare.

Red River Valley

(Republic)

Roy Rogers Western

Continuing their recently inaugurated policy of producing western pictures with a modern theme, Republic brings to the screen a story of a cowboy band, high powered automobiles, big city racketeers in a gambling town and remote control radio broadcasts. Produced and directed by Joseph Kane "Red River Valley," starring Roy Rogers, is an entertaining, tuneful and action packed story photographed against the hill-and-plain background familiar to most western fans.

It is a story of a radio band led by Roy Rogers and supported by "The Sons of the Pioneers," and their efforts to rid their home town of the criminal element which threatens to gain control of the construction of a new dam and eventually the water supply of the valley ranchers.

In between the many moments of action and suspense Roy and his band are given the opportunity to render a few musical compositions including "Red River Valley," "Love Begins at Sunset on the Trail," "Springtime on the Range," "When Pay Day Rolls Around" and "Chant of the Wanderer." Sally Payne as the daughter of George "Gabby" Hayes lends comedy to the picture and sings "Lily of Hillbilly Valley." Others in the supporting cast include Trevor Bardette as the leader of the gang and operator of the gambling den, Gale Storm who lends romantic interest as the daughter of Robert Homans, the Sheriff, and Hal Taliaferro.

Reviewed at a screening for the trade press in the Republic projection room in New York. Those in attendance generally conceded that this production was equal in entertainment to others in the series.—G. S.

Hatter's Castle

(Paramount British)

Scots Melodrama

Cronin's novel, whence this is taken, is still among the more thumbed books in British circulating libraries. Presumably on this titular pull the British exhibitor will aim to sell the film. Whether audiences already weighted with the cares and sorrows of totalitarian warfare will take readily to its gloomy flavours, is for the exhibitor to decide. "Hatter's Castle," at best, is a sombre subject and there are no shafts of humor or gaiety to relieve the film's melodramatic tensity and gloom. Most dominating factor is Robert Newton's powerful reading of the personality of James Brodie, the egomaniac, a heavy, slow, but studied piece of work in exact line with Lance Comfort's treatment.

"Hatter's Castle" is a house built by this Brodie, a Scot's hatter crazed with power mania, subduing family and friends to his insatiate lust for self strength. The story traces Brodie's bitter career, his callousness to his wife, his turning of daughter out into the snow because she is going to have a child, his financial struggles with the mortgage on the shop, and his destruction of Hatter's castle when he finds he has lost all.

In essence it is really heavy melodrama of the Victorian genre and the pedestrian pace of direction, the gloom of the atmosphere and the dramatic clichés—daughter cast into the storm, mortgage and all, are in the same dramatic line.

The portrayals, however, are for the most part studied and effective, and apart from Newton, Deborah Kerr's Mary, Henry Oscars' rival ironmonger, and Beatrice Varley's persecuted and ailing Mamma help to infuse some breath of life into the picture.

Technically the film is of sound standard though there is a spot of model work not above criticism.

Camerawork is effective.

An audience of press reviewers saw it at the Carlton previous to its West End premiere. Plaudits went for the most part to Newton for his characterization but there were criticism of the film's slowness and old fashioned flavour. That there were audiences, mostly among the older generation for heavy "Meller" was no less agreed.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Blue, White and Perfect

(20th Century-Fox)

Topical Mystery

This Michael Shayne detective story fits right into the Hawaii war headlines which will be fresh in the minds of every American for a long, long time. Part of the action takes place in Honolulu and most of it on a steamer bound there. The plot involves a private detective, enemy agents engaged in stealing industrial diamonds, an FBI man, the girl who is aiding the spies and another girl who is waiting, not too patiently, for Shayne to marry her.

A good performance is given by Lloyd Nolan, as the private detective. But without the special attention created by today's headlines there would be nothing to distinguish this from other program pictures. Now with interest centered on the war, "Blue, White and Perfect" may be expected to compare favorably with others in its class and hold attention of the audience.

Detective Shayne takes a job at an airplane factory and immediately the diamonds used for special instruments are stolen in what he suspects is "an inside job." The trail leads him to a dress manufacturer who is a German agent, smuggling diamonds to Hawaii in buttons. On the boat he finds that an old friend, played by Helene Reynolds, is working with the smugglers. There is some excitement when the FBI man, George Reeves, and Shayne chase each other and are trapped by the gang. Finally the case is solved and Shayne and his girl, played by Mary Beth Hughes, make peace.

Herbert I. Leeds, director, did well with the material, though the script was uneven. Sol M. Wurtzel was the executive producer.

West of Cimarron

(Republic)

Western

This latest of the Three Mesquiteers series gives the impression of being hastily thrown together. The story could be at fault—it is a minor item concerned with "carpet-baggers" versus "bushwhackers" in a small Texas outpost town—but the impression in this corner is that the trouble lies in its handling. There is not enough of vim and vigor, not enough of the dramatic to hold one's attention. The scenes are all too stilted for a type of picture whose primary function is action.

This time the Mesquiteers are caught between the two warring factions until, realizing that the Texans are being systematically robbed under the guise of taxes by the civilian aide at the army post and his chief henchman, an army captain, they enlist in the troop—but neglect to wear the uniform—so that they can bore from within. Their maneuverings are soon detected and it takes one of those "shootin" climaxes to straighten matters out.

The Mesquiteers are Bob Steele, Tom Tyler, and Rufe Davis; the girl is Lois Collier, and the principal heavy, Hugh Prosser. James Bush is the head man on the "carpet-baggers" side of the fence. Louis Gray was associate producer and Les Orlebeck directed.

The Royal Mounted Patrol

(Columbia)

Cowboys Join the Mounties

There's enough action in this film about the Canadian woods and its guardians to please the patrons used to seeing Charles Starrett and Russell Hayden riding the range, and enough story and good production values to hold the interest of some who are not strictly western fans.

William Berke has produced a simple story of the first assignments of three recruits to the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police with a bit of imagination and some excellent photography. The friends are separated in their duties, two going to open a new post near a lumber camp, and one joining the aerial scouting patrol. But a forest fire at the climax finds them working together to rescue the threatened villagers and bring the cheating foreman to justice. The fact that the foreman is a brother of the girl in whom both "Tom" and "Lucky" are interested is a complication never fully realized in the picture.

Lambert Hillyer directed the film which should help answer the demand for action pictures.

Law of the Timber

(Producers Rel. Corp.)

Melodrama

Taken from James Oliver Curwood's story, "The Speck on the Wall," PRC's "Law of the Timber" is an outdoor melodrama replete with thrills and suspense for the derring-do trade. The plot deals with the efforts of several men to take over, through sabotage, a lumber mill engaged in filling a national defense order. Murders, fights, a forest fire and dynamite blasts are thrown into the story, along with items of comedy.

The cast consists of Marjorie Reynolds, Monte Blue, J. Farrell MacDonald, Hal Brazeal, Earle Ebe, Sven-Hugo Borg, George Humbert, Milt Morani, Betty Roadman, Eddie Phillips and the dog, Zero.

B. B. Ray, who produced and directed and George R. Batcheller, Jr., in charge of PRC production, executed surprisingly effective results within the budgetary limitations. Some of the acting and some of the dialogue, however, is right "off the cob."

The Blonde Comet

(Producers Rel. Corp.)

Automobile Racing Picture

"The Blonde Comet" is almost exclusively an automobile racing picture, and as such will appeal largely to action fans and those interested in this particular type of sport.

The plot is of necessity incidental. Virginia Vale enacts the "Blonde Comet," who is shown making a name for herself as a racing automobilist in Italy, France and England, when those countries presumably had time for that sort of thing. Coming to America, she meets Robert Kent, another racing automobilist, and a state of rivalry is created. Between races, however, Cupid finds time to fling his arrows, and at the close of the picture, the Blonde Comet sacrifices a possible victory at a race, has Kent use her car, and he wins. His triumph also means a triumph for the carburetor which he had invented and for the tires manufactured by the Comet's father.

Besides Virginia Vale and Robert Kent, the cast also includes Barney Oldfield, famous in automobile racing circles, and Vince Barnett, who supplies the film with a dash of comedy.

With so much of the footage of the picture devoted to automobiles in action, there is plenty of opportunity for spills, thrills and chills, and they appear in abundance.

Ships with Wings

(Ealing Studios-United Artists)

Naval Drama

Made by Michael Balcom's organization, with the complete and enthusiastic collaboration of the Fleet Air Arm, this picture reconstructs many of the exciting and inspiring passages in the history of the navy's Aircraft Carriers, floodlights the routine and the mechanism of these hitherto more or less secret weapons of defense and attack.

Many of the sequences were shot on the "Ark Royal" and the intimacy of the glimpses of the life and routines on the vessel, plus the dramatic gusto of the actual flying itself, make tip-top entertainment, with a flavour of actuality.

There is a love story—two love stories in fact—and a dramatic thread running through, one strand in which is John Clements as an impulsive F.A.A. pilot who is drummed out of the service, but who returns to his ship and sacrifies himself in pancaking a fighter onto a Nazi bomber and blowing up a dam. For four or five reels these personal elements wander about indifferently.

At no time do they reach the intense drama of the passage on the "Ark Royal." Here the work of naval fighters, the air combats above the ship, the bombing attack on the vessel, and the heroism of pilots ready to take off through a blazing ammunition dump, to meet the enemy, are stirringly handled.

There is model work which the practised eye will spot with no apparent difficulty, but the film has been brilliantly edited, and the various elements laid together something more than skillfully. Camerawork throughout is lucent and crisp but Roy Kellino's work on the "Ark Royal" and in the air is excellent.

Leslie Banks as a naval father, John Clements as the erstwhile pilot who comes back with such heroic force, Edward Chapman as a Greek Air Line owner, are probably best of a capable cast. Serge Nolbandox has handled them as he has handled his material—with intelligence and zeal.

A feature of the film is its sartorial flavour, many front rank dress designers having collaborated under the wing of Dorthy Broomham.

A critical press preview audience was critical, but moinly of the romantic element ond its lingering laziness. They paid high tribute by applause and word of mouth to the naval and flying possages. Trade personalities present seemed to agree on the film's saleability on the "Ark Royol" ongle.—A. F.

Workers Let's Go

(HEJ RUP!)

(Czech—Trans-Oceanic)

Comedy and Communism

The struggle between labor and capital is sweetened by slapstick in this picture which was made in Czechoslovakia five years ago. Circulation here would appear to be limited to the few theatres specializing in "art" pictures, with a Leftish twist.

Exuberant acting and broad comedy in the Chaplin and Laurel and Hardy tradition float the story along in an entertaining and occasionally gleeful plane. The class message remains dominant nevertheless.

The story tells of a milk baron who is broken by the canned milk trust. In a series of comic wanderings with another worker he discovers that he still owns a half finished apartment house. They rally the workers and complete the building for a collectivist dairy. The cooperative flourishes and after a climactic chase, with police, pratt falls and crashes, the workers buy out the milk trust and live happily ever after.

This story and the exaggerated characterization of the milk baron as a capitalist villain and of the workers as heroes offsets the entertainment quality. The acting and antics of Jan Werich, as Simon the ruined milk millionaire, Jiri Voskovec, his vagabond pal, and Helen Busch do not offset the left wing preaching.

By way of historical note F. Jerhot produced the picture from a story by F. Formen. Mac Fric directed and it was filmed at the AB studios in Berrandor. Jaroslav Jezek's musical score is helpful.

Bahama Passage

(Paramount)

Carroll and Hayden in Technicolor

One thing for showmen to do by way of promoting attendance for "Bahama Passage" may be to stress the presence of Madeleine Carroll and Stirling Hayden in the leading roles, by way of reminding the customers of the newsreports of a Carroll-Hayden romance.

Another thing to do might be to mention that much of the footage was shot in the Bahamas, which also have had a lot of newspaper publicity lately, and in Technicolor.

A thing not to do, on grounds of audience satisfaction, would be to link the picture with Producer-director Edward H. Griffith's several previous productions starring Miss Carroll, for that proceeding would engender expectations of entertainment which this film does not fulfill.

The story told is about a "girl who has been around," to quote the introductory title, who arrives with her father to take over business management of an island in the Bahamas owned by a young man, descendent of many ancestors who have handled it to the satisfaction of its 250 native residents, married to a wife who stays away from the place because she's lonely when there. He doesn't want her or her father there, and they don't want to be there, but proximity breeds mutual attraction for the young folks and, when his wife conveniently divorces him and their respective parents conveniently die, they decide to get married and stay.

Not much happens on the screen. Four or five episodes of violence and tragedy which figure in the narrative occur offstage and register only in dialogue. Many, many scenes between Miss Carroll and Mr. Hayden which the dialogue suggests are intended to depict his scrupulous resistance to her desire lack conviction to such an extent that the preview audience haw-hawed them. Some individual stretches of dialogue which seem to have been intended to leave hearers their option of extracting a clean interpretation or the other kind miss both ways and impede such progress as the story is making at the time. The script belies the credit line attributing it to the experienced Virgina Van Upp, who based it on a story by Nelson Hayes which may have been better reading than seeing.

Scenes of the Bahamas are pictorially fascinating.

Riot Squad

(Monogram)

Melodrama

Monogram's "Riot Squad" starts out with a well founded promise and premise, but fall far short in both screenplay and thespian departments. The dialogue is stilted and unnatural; the actors show visibly their struggle with it.

Richard Cromwell as the young doctor who plays along with a gang in order to trap them for the police, Rita Quigley as his sweetheart and hospital nurse, John Miljan as the head of the gangsters, and Mary Ruth as a youngster who supplies some of the motivation of the plot but whose part is not made indispensable, head the cast which in addition consists of Herbert Rawlinson, Mary Gordon, Donald Kerr, Jack C. Smith, Richard Clarke, Novel Cravat, Arthur Space and Sparky, the dog.

Ed Finney produced and directed the film, which had good melodramatic potentialities, but his work, too, is hampered by the inept script. Al Herman was associate producer.

The story, the title of which has no apparent connection, has a young doctor joining the forces of the gang in order to bring them to justice. Sworn to secrecy, his romantic attentions to his fiancee, a nurse, are misunderstood by her. However, all turns out right in the end.

Wolf Man

(Universal)

Werewolf Again

That tale about the werewolf, filmed every now and again as a contribution to the chiller-diller school of entertainment and sometimes to the box-offices of the nation, is told again here without much change.

Strength of the attraction is in the names of the cast, which add up to promise more than the picture supplies in satisfaction.

Weaknesses are familiarity of the subject and inadequacy of dialogue. Photography, settings and some performances worthy of distinguished purpose fail to cope with these.

Producer-director George Waggner owes more to his players than to Curt Siodmak's script, which falls far short of the Universal standard of effectiveness in the field of the horror film. The picture is for the inveterates in the audience sector to which it is pointed, and the wolfman's makeup is something to test the credulity of the willing addict.

BATTLEFIELDS OF THE PACIFIC (RKO)

March of Time Special

March of Time has prepared an interesting atlas of the Pacific war zone, "Battlefields of the Pacific," which is offered to exhibitors not as spot news but as a special issue to be used as background to help the public understand and interpret the news from the war zone. Compiled from clips from such previous films as "Crisis in the Pacific" dealing with Hong Kong and her defensive preparation; "The Philippines: 1898-1946," and "Spoils of Conquest," a film survey of the Dutch East Indies, this special release has incorporated all scenes relevant to the current situation which includes compulsory military training for Filipino youths, the industrial and agricultural wealth of the islands in the Pacific, and the preparation for war and defense each country has taken to protect its possessions. Exhibitors who have found previous issues of March of Time profitable, entertaining and informative face no obstacle in presenting this subject.—G. S.

OUR AMERICA AT WAR (RKO)

March of Time—(23,105)

Concurrent with Japan's bombing of Hawaii, December 7th, the March of Time staff in New York began production of this subject. Four days later it emerged with its format as slick and smart as any previous release.

This subject draws a striking parallel between the united effort of the American people during the first World War 24 years ago, and the country's combined effort in the present crisis. Taking many of its compelling scenes from March of Time's feature presentation, "The Ramparts We Watch," the film sketches the invasion of neutral Belgium, the sinking of the Lusitania, the unrestricted submarine warfare in violation of America's traditional principle of freedom of the seas, the first bombing of London from the air, American troops in France, and other memorable phases of the conflict a quarter of a century ago. Also shown are the diplomats, governmental and military executives of the last war, including President Roosevelt, then the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, President Wilson, Theodore Roosevelt and many others. Alongside such sequences as these March of Time strikingly depicts the parallels of today's crisis, concluding with the President's speech on the bombing of the Philippines.—G. S.

A LETTER FROM HOME (UA)

Life in London

"A Letter from Home" is an English-made production, directed by Carol Reed and imported into this country for distribution by United Artists. It is designed, primarily, to present the British way of life in war-torn London. Opening with scenes of a letter from a London mother being read to two children safe from bombs, the film flashes from the various passages in the message and compares them with the events and duties of the English people. Noticeable throughout is the British penchant for understatement and it is from this factor that the picture derives most of its charm.—G. S. 16 Minutes

THE STREET OF GOOD CHEER

[Reprinted from the Herald of December 27, 1924]

THERE is a Street of Good Cheer.

It is not marked out in any city plan; it is not merely a thoroughfare from one place to another.

It is not a busy artery of commerce where man and beast, by sweat of brow, toil their heavy burdens to the market-place.

It is not a boulevard where the pleasure-mad recklessly rush along in pursuit of vanishing rainbows.

It is not an exclusive avenue, only to be coursed by the rich and powerful.

It is not a winding road of deceit and disillusionment which leads only to misery and despair.

It is, instead, a broad and open highway which bids cheery welcome to all mankind.

It leads far away from the humdrum cares of daily life.

It gladly receives the traveler, regardless of youth or age, power or poverty, position or obscurity, and leads him on to fairy heights where the bitter world of reality is dispelled; where he may become an Alexander of conquest and win the heart of the story-book princess.

The bright lights of welcome are never dimmed upon this Street; it is never barricaded against the hungry heart of humanity, yearning for inspiration and contentment.

The portals of this Street are always ajar to bid a cordial greeting of good cheer to all who would travel its way.

It is, indeed, the Street of Good Cheer, this highway whose waysides are banked with those havens of happiness—the Motion Picture Theatres.

Business Rebounds

THE first week following Japan's attack upon Hawaii and America's declaration of war against that country, Germany and Italy, the public reaction affected the nation's box offices. However, grosses for the seven days from December 7th through December 13th were above grosses for the same period a year ago, according to home office circuit reports.

Over the week-end, business was good all along Broadway. "H. M. Pulham, Esq." grossed an estimated $62,000 at Radio City Music Hall, Thursday through Sunday, with a stage show. At the Paramount, "Birth of the Blues," with Orrin Tucker's orchestra, grossed $19,000 Saturday and Sunday, and ended its second week with an estimated $38,000. "Blues in the Night," at the Strand, with Count Basie's orchestra, now in its second week, pulled an estimated $14,000, Thursday through Sunday. "Confirm or Deny" at the Roxy, with a stage presentation, from Thursday to Sunday, hit an estimated $23,800. In its eighth week at the Rivoli, "How Green Was My Valley" brought an estimated $9,000, Friday through Sunday.

Hold-over grosses throughout the country record that "Citizen Kane," in a nine-weeks run at the Hawaii Theatre in Hollywood, returned $20,000 to RKO in film rentals, according to Al Galston, theatre operator. RKO also reports that Walt Disney's "Dumbo," currently in its 11th week at the Broadway Theatre in New York, was held over for second weeks in Boston, Chicago, Newark, Providence, San Francisco and Washington.

ASCAPers on Their Own

IN a move designed to provoke repeal of the anti-ASCAP law of Nebraska, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers announced on Tuesday that it was releasing its members for that state, "in view of the inability of the Society to protect the rights of its members" in Nebraska. ASCAP declared this action would permit the individual composers, authors and publishers to issue licenses for their copyrighted musical compositions in Nebraska as well as to take measures to protect themselves against and seek redress for unauthorized public performances of their compositions.

In effect, the ASCAP release forecasts a series of copyright infringement suits by individual members against theatres, radio stations and other music users in Nebraska. ASCAP members may be expected to refuse license for their music and start prosecutions whenever their music is played.

Price Climb Continues

THEATRE admissions are continuing to rise indicating that exhibitors have advanced prices to eliminate handling of pennies, under the Federal tax, joining operators in scores of cities who previously had acted similarly.

For the first time in Seattle, the Palomar operated by John Danz, is charging a higher rate weekends. Second-runs in Portland, Ore., have advanced from 15 to 20-cents, including all taxes, and third-run houses, 10-11-cents, increased prices to 15.

Starting Christmas Day, Balaban & Katz theatres in Chicago advance admission charges under 40 cents about 10 per cent, bring admissions to even money. Changes are as follows: 17-cent tickets to 20; 22 to 25; 28 to 30; 33 to 35 and 39 to 40 cents, including tax. Children's prices of 11, 17 and 28-cents remain. It is understood there will be no change in prices above the 40-cents' level.

Boys and girls of Houston, Texas, between the ages of 12 and 16 years got a break with the inauguration on December 19th of a new "junior" admission price policy for Fridays and Saturdays at Interstate's Majestic and Metropolitan theatres. Heretofore, juniors had paid adult prices but under the cut rate pay 20 cents for any seat at any time on the two days plus the regular Federal tax of 3, 4 or 5 cents according to the time the ticket is purchased. Adult admissions to both houses remain at 40 cents during the day and 55 cents at night.

On Monday, the Internal Bureau of the U. S. Treasury Department reported in Washington that admission tax collections increased almost 50 per cent in the first month of application of the all-admission levy which became effective on October 1st.

The bureau announced that receipts from the tax in November aggregated $10,411,197, compared with $6,812,275 in October and $7,124,225 in November, 1940. The report also showed that for the first 11 months of the year admission tax collections reached $76,407,121, compared with $36,829,403 for the corresponding period in 1940.

Keep 'Em Smiling

PARAMOUNT'S New York theatre of that name this week went to a war wary public, via trailer, and newspaper advertisement, with the essential message: Cheer up; keep calm; have faith.

A special screen trailer, over the signature of Robert Weitman, the theatre's managing director, and a chief air raid warden for the Broadway sector, read:

"Relax, New York.

"Relaxation and Recreation are more essential now than ever before. For the Duration The New York Paramount Theater Will Continue to Provide the Best in Entertainment. The Highest Quality Screen and In Person Shows. Entertainment guaranteed to make you relax and forget your troubles will be our chief aim for 1942. In the Presentation of these Bigger and Better Morale Building 2 for 1 Shows, The New York Paramount is thoroughly prepared for any emergency. . ."

New Deals for Skouras

GEORGE P. SPYROS AND CHARLES SKOURAS, long prominent in circuit operations have been given new contracts in connection with their theatre operations in the west for Chase-Fox-National Theatres, it was learned in New York this week. George P. Skouras has been given a 15-year extension of his present contract as operator of Skouras Theatre by Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, New York.

Spyros and Charles signed a new five-year contract as operators of National.

Skouras Theatres operates houses in New York and the metropolitan area and National Theatres operates more than 400 houses in the Midwest and on the West Coast. Spyros Skouras is president of National, Charles Skouras is in charge of Fox West Coast, and George P. is president of Skouras Theatres Corp. which is not affiliated with National.

For a number of years Spyros and Charles Skouras have headed the National circuit which consists of the Fox West Coast, Fox Intermountain, Fox Midwest, Wisconsin Amusement Enterprises and Evergreen State Amusement Enterprises and Fox Michigan Corp.

Happy New Year!

CANADIAN exhibitors get off to a bad start for the New Year. The Dominion's War Time Prices and Trade Board, at Toronto, issued a ruling last week prohibiting Canadian theatres from increasing prices for special New Year's Eve performances and from passing along to their patrons the 20 per cent Federal amusement tax in connection with admissions for any such performances. It is expected that exhibitors, as a result of the order, will suffer a 20 per cent loss in grosses for that one night's business.

This is the first time the Dominion Government has ordered theatres not to pass on the 20 per cent tax to the public, and showmen in Canada regard the ruling as a "dangerous precedent."

The order limits admission charges to the scales in effect for the midnight shows last New Year's Eve.

Quota Violation

ALLIES of course, Britain and the United States may be, before long, partners in a federation.

But—"business is business".

Last week, some evidence of that attitude appeared in the fining—50 pounds each—of two American owned theatres in London's West End, the Carlton and the Plaza, owned by Paramount, after conviction on charges of failing to fulfill their quota act obligations by giving 15 per cent of their screen time to British films.

They defended themselves by pointing out rejection of 100 British films as unsuitable. The trial magistrate retorted that the British films were available, and that the theatre operators could not convincingly conclude that the films rejected would be failures.

Ready for QP Awards

ACCEPTANCES of over 75 industry executives to serve on the Judging Committee for 1942 have been received to date, marking the opening of the ninth year of the Quigley Awards, sponsored by MOTION PICTURE HERALD through Managers Round Table, A-Mike Vogel, chairman.

Representing distribution, advertising and exhibition, the judges are listed in the Round Table section of this issue. They will participate in the examination of entries in the Quarter and Grand Awards judging.

Quigley Awards are offered to theatre managers and theatre publicity men for outstanding advertising and exploitation. Entrants are invited to submit campaign material for preliminary judging in each two-week period to determine winners of Fortnight Appointments, with those most frequently represented in the "Fortnights" considered for "Quarter-Master" Awards given at the expiration of each quarter.

Climax of the 1941 competitions will be the Grand Awards Judging, in New York, to be held early in the year, when the Committee, sitting as a whole, will decide upon the two theatremen to be voted the year's honors. In the past, the winners, as guests of Quigley Publications, were taken to Hollywood to receive the Grand Awards at ceremonies witnessed by studio heads, directors and stars.

Over the eight years of their existence, the Awards have been credited widely for promotions, salary rises and bonuses to winners.

To Boo or Not to Boo?

THE long established newsreel audience habit—vocal disapproval—appears virtually drowned under the wave of national unity.

One who did not see that wave, Edward Loos, Jr., 23 year old Chicago youth, this week was serving out, in jail there, a $200 fine. In the Telenews Theatre, Chicago, two weeks ago, he booed the screen image of President Roosevelt.

Attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union, and the National Lawyers Guild may intervene for Mr. Loos. They say his act was "foolish tactlessness, rather than treason" and term him "a victim of war hysteria in the courts."

Ominous Note

FOREBODINGS of an Axis alliance with Portugal were heard in several motion picture theatres at Lisbon on Tuesday when audience demonstrations halted the screening of views of Sydney, Australia. The New York Times reported the anti-British note in the catcalls and protests against the pictures was at variance with the pro-British tone of the press in Portugal. Previously Prime Minister Winston Churchill had been frequently cheered by Lisbon audiences despite a ban on demonstrations. The ominous note from the theatres came at a time when press reports of massing German troops on France's Spanish border indicated that the last outlet in continental Europe for American films might soon be closed by Nazi domination.

Harvard on Advertising

ADVERTISING has been an "essential ingredient" in raising our living standards. Although it has increased costs and prices of merchandise, competition has counterbalanced this tendency. In essence, "advertising's outstanding contribution to consumer welfare comes from its part in promoting a dynamic, expanding economy."

Such is the gist of a study of the economic effects of advertising, by Professor Neil H. Borden, Harvard. The study, published in 1,000 pages, was four and one half years in preparation. It is based upon case histories, interviews with business executives, and industry studies made at the Harvard Graduate School of Business.

Tribute to Ungar

THE CALIFORNIA State Legislature, last Saturday, in a resolution commended Arthur Ungar, editor of Hollywood Daily Variety, for his efforts in "assisting and securing" the conviction of Willie Bioff and George E. Browne, former IATSE executives now serving jail terms for extorting almost $1,000,000 from producer-distributors.

The Money-Making Stars of 1941

THE TEN BEST OF THE YEAR IN EXHIBITOR POLL

	Combined Vote	Percentage of Possible Votes	Independent Only	Circuit Only
1.	Mickey Rooney	51	Mickey Rooney	Clark Gable
2.	Clark Gable	48	Clark Gable	Mickey Rooney
3.	Abbott & Costello	35	Spencer Tracy	Abbott & Costello
4.	Bob Hope	33	Abbott & Costello	Bob Hope
5.	Spencer Tracy	31	Bob Hope	Spencer Tracy
6.	Gene Autry	21	Gene Autry	Gary Cooper
7.	Gary Cooper	19	Gary Cooper	Bette Davis
8.	Bette Davis	18	James Cagney	Gene Autry
9.	James Cagney	16	Bette Davis	James Cagney
10.	Judy Garland	13	Judy Garland	Judy Garland

THREE significant highlights mark the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME poll of exhibitors' selection of the money-making stars of 1941.

¶First, Mickey Rooney has done it again. The screen personification of American youth for his generation and his elders, Mr. Rooney holds Number One position for the third consecutive year. Only Shirley Temple, leader in 1935, 1936, 1937 and 1938; Marie Dressler, Number One star in 1932 and 1933 and Will Rogers, top star in 1934, have held this place of exhibitor-honor since the poll was instituted.

¶Clark Gable, taking second position in 1941, chalks up an unchallenged and enviable record as the only star voted a place among the top ten in all of the ten Fame compilations. For consistent box office service to showmen throughout the country, down the years, Mr. Gable is pre-eminent.

¶And third, proving conclusively that 1941 was a banner year for screen comedies in general and army training camp comedies in particular, Abbott and Costello and Bob Hope were in third and fourth positions.

Another newsworthy consideration in the poll is the fact that eight of the ten top positions in 1941 are held by stars whose screen performances earned them similar exhibitor-attention in polls of previous years.

Highlight of last year's poll was Gene Autry's entry into the ten top-ranking money-making stars' hall of Fame. He was first cowboy star to attain this eminence since Will Rogers achieved first position in 1934.

Mickey Rooney who has held top spot as a box office winner since 1939, again proved his ability to give dollar service to theatremen in these 1941 films: "Strike Up the Band," "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary," "Men of Boys Town" and "Life Begins for Andy Hardy."

Clark Gable, voted 8th in 1932; 7th in 1933; 2nd in 1934; 3rd in 1935; 2nd in 1936; 2nd in 1937; 2nd in 1938; 4th in 1939 and 3rd in 1940, continued his consistent money-making record in 1941 in "Gone With the Wind," "Comrade X," "Boom Town," "They Met in Bombay" and in early runs of "Honky Tonk."

The duo zanies, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello who gagged their way into motion pictures following years of vaudeville and radio laugh-provoking, in record time, leaped to third place, with their films "Buck Privates," "In the Navy" and "Hold That Ghost." These pictures followed "One Night in the Tropics," inconspicuous as a money-maker but a vehicle which forecast their popularity with exhibitors and public alike.

In 1940, Bob Hope held 18th position in the poll. His comic antics earned him fourth place on the 1941 list of grosses piled up for exhibitors in "The Road to Zanzibar," "Caught in the Draft" and early runs of "Nothing But the Truth," which began widespread distribution just as the poll was completed. His radio popularity—he was named champion of champions in the Motion Picture Daily's poll last week, and his show lines up as one of the top five programs on the air according to the Crosley ratings—has been a significant factor in the Hope screen career.

Spencer Tracy, voted 5th in 1938, 3rd in 1939 and 2nd in 1940, ran 5th this year, again proving his box office value in "Boom Town," "Men of Boys Town," and "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde," the latter released late in the period covered by the poll.

Gene Autry's position, sixth this year, is unchanged with respect to those of Rooney, Gable and Tracy, who outranked him in 1940. Autry's eight 1941 pictures, showing in the 11,143 theatres in which his popularity commands bookings, exceeded by a substantial margin his 1940 yields of profits to exhibitors.

Gary Cooper jumped from 20th place in 1940 to 7th position this year. He was 10th in 1936 and 9th in 1937. "Northwest Mounted Police," "Meet John Doe," "The Westerner," pre-release showings of "Sergeant York," accounted for his 1941 leap up the ladder of money-makers. The latter picture will give him a good head start for exhibitor-attention in naming box office winners of 1942.

Comedy Stressed By Money Makers

Bette Davis, twice an Academy Award-winner, is now a second-time winner of place among the top ten, voted 8th place this year as compared with 9th position in 1940. She was sixth in 1939. This rise is attributed to her pictures "The Letter," "The Great Lie," "The Bride Came C.O.D." and early showings of "The Little Foxes."

James Cagney holds 9th position in 1941, appearing a fourth time among the top ten. Achieving 10th place in 1935, Mr. Cagney retired from screen work for a period and then came back to run 9th in 1939, 6th in 1940, "Strawberry Blonde," "The Bride Came C.O.D" and "City for Conquest" brought him into the Fame fold again.

Judy Garland, personifying the American Girl on the screen, who rose from obscurity in the 1939 poll to 10th place in 1940, retains her last year's position. Her career has been closely identified with Mickey Rooney's by reason of co-casting. During 1941 she was seen in "Strike Up the Band," "Ziegfeld Girl" and "Life Begins for Andy Hardy," three pictures of which two were also among Mr. Rooney's four films.

For the record, it is noted that among the next 15 stars ranking as money-makers for 1941, Tyrone Power, voted 11th position this year, took 5th place in 1940, 2nd in 1939 and 10th in 1938. Alice Faye, 12th in 1941, ran 7th in 1939 and 9th in 1938. Bing Crosby dropped from 7th position last year to 17th this year. Wallace Berry, 8th in 1940, ran 19th this year. He rated 7th in 1932; 5th in 1933; 4th in 1934 and 8th in 1935.

Robert Taylor, voted 21st position this year, ran 4th place among the top ten money-making stars in 1936, 3rd in 1937, 6th in 1938, and had not achieved listing among the top ten in 1939 or 1940. Errol Flynn, 14th in 1941, received top-ten-ranking only once, in 1939. Sonja Henie, 8th in 1937, 3rd in 1938 and 10th in 1939, was not listed among this year's honor-fifteen. James Stewart, who never got into the top ten ranking, comes close to it this year, in 13th position. Ginger Rogers, who with her former film-dancing partner, Fred Astaire, was voted 4th place in 1935, 3rd in 1936 and 7th in 1937, was placed 18th in 1941. William Powell, 25th this year, rated 5th position in 1937.

Among the others ranking in the 11th to 25th positions in 1941 are Dorothy Lamour, 15th; Betty Grable, 16th; Jack Benny, 20th; Don Ameche, 22nd; Cary Grant, 23rd and Deanna Durbin, 24th.

Gene Autry Leads For Fifth Year

The poll of money-making Western stars of 1941 gives Gene Autry leadership. He maintains a five-year record of sustained supremacy without parallel in motion picture history. William S. Hart once dominated the Western field in comparable fashion but his film career pre-dated the inauguration of the Motion Picture Herald-Fame poll.

William Boyd, second again in 1941 and closing the gap between himself and the leader as the figures prove, parallels the Autry record of consistency with five consecutive years in position of runner-up.

Roy Rogers' hold on third place is duplicated without substantial change. Moving up one position from 5th in 1940, Charles Starrett was voted 4th this year. Smiley Burnette took fifth place for 1941 and Tim Holt, a newcomer to Westerns, carves a conspicuous niche with 6th place, a spot held by Johnny Mack Brown in 1940, who ran 7th this year.

Duplicating their 1940 positions, The Three Mesquiteers were voted 8th in 1941. Bill Elliott rose one position to 9th, and Tex Ritter, who lost some screen time during the launching of a new series, is in 10th place.

PRESIDENT CALLS SCREEN TO WAR, DEFINES NATURE OF RESTRICTIONS

Lowell Mellett Is U. S. Liaison with Motion Pictures; Heads All Official Film Activity; Will Assign Wartime Tasks

The motion picture industry was officially called for wartime service on Tuesday by the President of the United States.

The President, with the declaration that he wanted no censorship of motion pictures, appointed Lowell Mellett Coordinator of Government Films for the duration of the war. Mr. Mellett, who is director of the U. S. Office of Government Reports, will be the government liaison with all branches of the motion picture industry.

The appointment was made known in a letter from Mr. Mellett to George J. Schaefer, (RKO) chairman of the motion picture industry War Activities Committee. Mr. Mellett forwarded the President's instructions and acknowledged receipt of the committee's offer of December 12th of full wartime service from the industry. He asked that the committee designate someone to represent it in its relations with the government.

Mr. Schaefer announced that Francis S. Harmon, executive vice chairman of the War Activities Committee would fill the post.

To Advise Industry

Mr. Mellett's duties, as listed in the President's letter dated December 18th, will consist of acting as liaison officer between the government and all branches of the motion picture industry to advise it on ways of national service, to establish a clearing office to arrange exhibition of government films, and to supervise existing government film production and plan new government films "to inform and instruct the public during the war time crisis."

"The American motion picture is one of our most effective media in informing and entertaining our citizens," the President wrote, "The motion picture must remain free insofar as national security will permit."

The President said that he wanted no censorship, or restrictions other than those necessary for national safety and declared that the motion picture industry has a very useful contribution to make during the war emergency. He placed all government film activities under Mr. Mellett's direction and designated him as the principal contact between the U. S. and the industry.

In his letter to Mr. Schaefer Mr. Mellett said that the appointment of a coordinator meets the industry's recommendation that a single agency be designated to handle government requests for motion picture service. Mr. Mellett said that during the past fifteen months he had filled such a post to a limited extent.

"During that time I have been greatly impressed by the sincerity of the motion picture industry as a whole in its purpose to aid our national defense in every way," he wrote. He expressed confidence that this cooperation between government and motion pictures could be made very effective.

Mr. Schaefer in a telegraphed reply on Tuesday to Mr. Mellett reported the designation of Francis Harmon as industry contact. He thanked Mr. Mellett for the reference to the sincerity of the industry's efforts in behalf of national defense and added, "You may count upon our vigorous cooperation in the achievement of complete victory in this war against those who threaten all freedom."

The text of the President's letter follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE
December 18, 1941

Dear Mr. Mellett:

The American motion picture is one of our most effective media in informing and entertaining our citizens. The motion picture must remain free insofar as national security will permit. I want no censorship of the motion picture; I want no restrictions placed thereon which will impair the usefulness of the film other than those very necessary restrictions which the dictates of safety make imperative.

The motion picture, especially as used by the Federal Government, has a very useful contribution to make during the war emergency. In order that the Federal Government's efforts in the field of motion picture production and distribution may serve most effectively and efficiently, it is desirable that all activities of the Federal Government be coordinated under the direction of one central office.

Therefore, as President of the United States and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces, I direct that you, as Director of the Office of Government Reports, act as Coordinator of Government Films for the duration of the war.

The functions you will discharge in this capacity are:

(1) Act as liaison officer of the Federal Government with theatrical, educational and industrial producers and distributors in connection with the preparation, production and distribution of films;

(2) Establish a clearance office through which all of the Government's civilian films must clear, whether they are to be distributed through theatres or through non-theatrical organizations;

(3) Plan, so far as necessary, such Government motion picture production and distribution as is deemed necessary to inform and instruct the public during the war-time crisis;

(4) Consult with all Government departments in conection with film production and distribution program and consult with and advise motion picture producers of ways and means in which they can most usefully serve in the national effort.

I further direct that you transmit a copy of this letter to the heads of all Federal agencies.

Franklin D. Roosevelt

Lowell Mellett, the new chief of wartime film activities is a former newspaperman who has been director of the Office of Government Reports since 1939. Previously he directed the National Emergency Council. From 1921 to 1937 he was editor of the Washington Daily News and manager of the Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance from 1925 to 1937. He was born in Elwood, Ind. and worked on newspapers in Indianapolis, St. Louis, New York, Seattle and for the United Press in Washington and Europe. He is 57.

The resolution sent to President Roosevelt by Mr. Schaefer on December 12th for the War Activities Committee reiterated the pledge of loyalty in the telegram dispatched for the industry immediately following the declaration of war. It pledged the services of more than 12,000 theatres, all artists, distributors, newsreels, producers and the trade press.

It also recommended to the President that "a single agency or individual be designated to deal with requests from all governmental departments and bureaus (with the possible exception of the Army and Navy Departments), which are made upon the industry in connection with the production, distribution, or exhibition of motion pictures; and that all requests which may be approved for presentation to the industry by the Government representative so designated, be transmitted to a similarly designated representative of this committee which represents all branches of the American motion picture industry."

Machinery for the war-time censorship of all media of public information was set up at Washington last week by presidential order naming a special Cabinet committee and appointing Byron Price, director of censorship. They were reported busy drafting procedures to keep military information out of newspapers, radio, newspaper photographs and, presumably, newsreels.

Cabinet Censor Committee

Postmaster-General Frank Comerford Walker, of the Comerford circuit family, is chairman of the Cabinet censorship advisory committee. Vice President Henry A. Wallace and Attorney General Francis Biddle complete the committee. Lowell Mellett, director of the Office of Government Reports and motion picture coordinator will attend the committee meetings as press relations advisor.

Mr. Price, who took over the direction of war censorship at Washington last week is on leave from the post of executive editor of the Associated Press.

General press coverage of Washington news sources was the principal subject of Mr. Price's activities it was reported from Washington. "Cooperation" of the newsreels with the war and navy press departments was said to be continuing on a satisfactory basis.

Privately, several newsreel editors expressed the opinion that the review of newsreels would remain in the military offices. They predicted that army and navy censors would be reluctant to let any uncensored pictures pass out of their offices. Also, the newsreels are dependent on military channels for the transport of pictures from the fighting area.

"Mr. Price will build his own house as the needs determine," Stephen Early, presidential secretary commented, according to the AP. He made it clear, however, that the present war censorship would differ widely from the practice of the Creel Committee during 1917-18. News now will be checked at the source to eliminate military information, it was said, and reporters would be permitted to maintain established contacts with government press offices and officials. Reporters will be asked to clear stories through Mr. Price only if they get information not generally distributed, it was said.

Radio news controls will also be under Mr. Price, it was said, with supervision of facilities under the Defense Communications Board cooperating with the Federal Communications Commission. The National Association of Broadcasters this week pledged the elimination of all "carelessness, sensationalism, and second-guessing" from radio news reports. A guide prepared by the NAB listed general rules and such specific bans as radio reports on weather, casualties, and troop or naval movements. It warned against commercializing news reports and ad lib broadcasts.

Lieutenant Commander Paul C. Smith, editor and general manager of the San Francisco Chronicle this week became press relations officer for the navy department.

Fly Urges Radio Control

Quick action on legislation investing the President with war-time control of all communications facilities was urged upon the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee on Tuesday by James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

Mr. Fly explained that the measure, already approved by the House, would enable the Army and Navy to control and operate such facilities as might be required by war conditions, but gave assurance that no wholesale expropriation of broadcasting or other facilities is contemplated.

The only basis for the taking over of all facilities by the Government, Mr. Fly said, would be the spread of total war throughout the United States.

THEATRE SWITCHES ITS JAPANESE NAME

The war-conscious management of the Mikado Theatre, deluxe second-run house operated by Fanchon & Marco for the St. Louis Amusement Company in St. Louis, intends to change the name of the theatre. A contest, offering prizes of $10, $15, and $25 for the best names submitted, has been started by Manager Joseph J. Goldstein, and more than 500 entries have already been received. Most popular names so far include Pearl Harbor, Victory, Roosevelt, Colin P. Kelly, Unity and Westbrook (the name of the first St. Louisan reported killed in action).

The Mikado, one of the once-elaborate theatres built by O. T. Crawford, was constructed 30 years ago at a cost of $30,000. About $50,000 was spent two years ago to streamline the theatre, a process which removed everything Japanese except the name.

SEC Approves Stock Transfer

The Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington approved on Tuesday the proposed sale by Pathe Film Corporation to E. I. duPont de Nemours and Company of 3,500 shares of duPont Films Manufacturing Corp. stock in exchange for 56,750 shares of E. I. duPont de Nemours common stock. The SEC also held that the transfer of 300 shares of the stock to T. C. Davis as compensation for his work in arranging the transaction would not be excessive compensation.

The SEC found that on the basis of stock exchange quotations at the date of the agreement, the duPont stock would have a value of $9,080,000. The stock of duPont Film has no quoted market value and the commission was unable to determine its actual value. It held that the exchange would be beneficial to Pathe.

The 300 shares to be awarded Davis will have an approximate value of $48,000, to which the commission held he was entitled, in view of the nominal compensation which he previously had received for services.

PLAY IT WHILE IT'S HOT!

Paramount filmed "PACIFIC BLACKOUT" under the title "MIDNIGHT ANGEL." It was originally set for February 2nd release, as a part of Paramount's third block.

It was intended to use title "PACIFIC BLACKOUT" while the picture was in script form. We eliminated this title, however, because we felt it might be too alarming.

TODAY ALARM IS FACT. Blackout came to the Pacific Coast only a few days after the completion of the picture. "PACIFIC BLACKOUT," therefore, comes to you one of the most timely pictures ever made.

PLAY "PACIFIC BLACKOUT" WHILE IT IS HOT. We realize the TIME LOST in negotiating for this hot box office shot WILL COST DOLLARS so we have decided that ANY PARAMOUNT CUSTOMER MAY BUY THIS PICTURE NOW and play it JANUARY 2nd. Terms will be settled when the third block of pictures is negotiated for. For those exhibitors who are not at present Paramount customers, the picture is IMMEDIATELY AVAILABLE FOR SALE and CAN BE PLAYED JAN. 2nd.

GOVERNMENT LOOKING INTO RENTAL TAX, AND BLACKOUTS FOR MARQUEES

WAR NOTES: Exhibitors hurry raid and blackout preparations . . . Daylight time a new problem . . . Front house lights seen hit by raid threats, power shortages . . . No war censorship of screen, says Roosevelt, appointing Mellett and Harmon Government film coordinators (see page 17) . . . Public returns to theatres after "scare" . . . Studios prepare for air raids . . . Coast workers organize for war . . . War cancels annual Academy banquet . . . Producers add more war themes to production schedules . . . Hollywood gets U. S. assignment to produce for civilian defense . . . Industry's war committee sends more films to theatres . . . Distributors in Britain split over rental war (see page 53) . . . "Industry Has Enlisted": Hays . . . Soviet film industry not napping (see page 38) . . . No strikes during war: IATSE (see page 60).

Revival of the World War I film rental tax was seen this week in Washington if Congress adopts a general manufacturers' sales tax, now being advanced as a substitute for the U. S. Treasury's proposal for a wage-and-salary tax to be withheld from employes' pay envelopes.

There is considerable opposition to Secretary Morgenthau's proposal for a "withholding" tax on workers' incomes, and members of Congress are engaged in a search for substitute levies.

The withholding tax is estimated as raising possibly four to five milion dollars. Leading members of the Ways and Means Committee are understood to be figuring out a substitute, which would include savings of possibly as much as one and one-half billions in non-defense Government expenditures and two and one-half to four billions from a manufacturers' sales tax and other levies which may be decided upon.

It is not believed that there is any thought at this time to an increase in the rate of admission tax. With all admissions taxable, the Treasury expects to secure something over $125,000,000 a year from that source, probably almost all that the traffic will bear. The only other way seen in the Capital to tax the industry is through a levy on rentals, which was applied during World War days.

Blackouts Face Theatres In Many Sectors

Exhibitors in many sections of the country may eventually have to operate without marquee and advertising lighting as a result of raid threats and power shortages which threaten in a number of areas.

Blackouts will be imposed in cities which might be subjected to air raids because of enemy dangers, but they will also be imposed in other cities, even in the deep interior, because of the need of diverting power to the production of defense materials.

The southeastern states will have recurrences of their recent power shortage, and they may have the company of Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana, Buffalo, St. Louis and the Pacific northwest, it was warned this week by the Office of Production Management at Washington.

Signs and show windows will be darkened, theatre marquees will be blacked out, night sports events will be prohibited, and all non-defense consumers will be asked to conserve.

How serious the shortage of current may be is indicated by OPM estimates that the defense power requirements next year will run between 70,000,000,000 and 100,000,000,000 kilowatt hours.

It is a foregone conclusion, OPM officials said that the southeast, the southwest, the Pacific northwest and Buffalo and St. Louis and the surrounding areas will suffer from shortages of power. Other sections may feel the pinch if it becomes necessary to drain them of power to feed the shortage areas. The situation may be worse if there are more droughts.

Hurry Blackout And Raid Plans

With an eye to the unseeable future, but certainly with acumen of showmen, theatre owners throughout the country—and, especially, the circuits—are formulating detailed instructions to staffs and patrons in the event of air raids and blackouts, precautionary or necessary.

Exhibitor units, with an eye to the service they attempt to render their members, are surveying effects of the war, and its possibilities affecting theatre business.

These things are happening even in Canada where the Famous Players Canadian circuit has already issued a bulletin-manual to all managers on procedure for blackouts.

The circuit's affiliated U. S. chain, the Paramount circuit, has issued general instructions on "civilian defense," covering not only blackouts but cooperation with defense authorities, management of patrons, conduct of theatres, issuance of regulations, and training of staffs, to its many theatre partners and associates.

The Theatre Defense Bureau of Los Angeles over the weekend distributed a bulletin containing "26 pointers" for emergencies. Stressed above all is the reminder patrons are to remain in theatres and shows continue.

Exhibitors, state police, and the Civilian Defense Council in Connecticut are now formulating a program.

The OPM warned from Washington many theatre marquees might be darkened, not by danger but by power shortage in certain industrial localities.

New York police have already issued instructions to theatre managers for action in emergencies.

Generally, the scenes are similar in most key theatre localities of the country.

"INDUSTRY HAS ENLISTED": HAYS

Recognizing its "responsibility" to America to maintain a supply of entertainment, the "motion picture industry in all its branches is enlisted for the duration" . . . such was the message Friday, December 19th, from Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producer and Distributors of America, following the regular quarterly meeting of the directors. Mr. Hays added the industry was geared to give "greatest possible service" through its War Activities Committee, and reiterated that the "screen, nurtured in freedom, recognizes its obligations to freedom —its duty is to serve."

Daylight Time A Film Problem

Senator Sheridan Downey of California introduced a joint resolution in the Senate on Monday approving any steps which President Roosevelt might take in extending daylight saving time the year 'round as a war-time defense measure, aiming to save fuel and light and to prevent fewer accidents due to blackout precautions.

Majority Leader Barkley, however, warned against taking any hasty action which, he said, might be regretted later. He suggested the resolution be studied before it was passed. The Downey proposal was referred to the Interstate Commerce Committee.

Meantime, exhibitors expressed some concern over the Downey resolution, according to reports. Opposition to daylight time extension centers around the fact that it is not yet definite whether blackouts will be necessary as daily precautions. It was felt by some exhibitor spokesmen, therefore, that adoption of such a measure at this time may be premature. In England, theatres have been compelled to close early in the evenings because of air-raid precautions and blackouts. Contrarywise, daylight time in the U. S. may offer exhibitors additional operating time if blackouts become necessary, it was observed.

The California State Senate, meanwhile, by voice vote on Monday, tabled Senator Ed Fletcher's resolution urging Congress to vote daylight time. The Senator withdrew another resolution to place California on daylight time when he was advised that the matter was outside the scope of the Governor's special session proclamation.

The Los Angeles city council and county board of supervisors, meantime, recommended last week the passage of daylight saving time legislation by the Legislature as a war-time measure. Similar proposals have been defeated about four times in the last 13 years in California, with theatre groups usually heading the opposition.

Patrons Return to Theatres After Scare

Theatres throughout the country, earlier reporting public shock and consequent desertion of the films for radio receivers at home, this week are reporting a situation nearer normal, as the traditional need for relaxation reasserts itself. The only exceptions noted are those in the areas most immediate to the war—the Pacific Coast cities, San Francisco and Los Angeles in particular.

Seattle grosses have fallen, with indication they may remain lower for several weeks. Four nights of blackouts during one period cut theatre operations almost in half. With these blackouts suspended until further notice, patronage still remains below par.

It is thought the public remains away for fear of public assembly and dangers therein; because of radio war coverage; because of increased hours of work at nearby defense plants. It was also noted usual leaves of armed forces are not available, so their patronage is not being felt.

WEST COAST GRIM BUT PREPARED

Minneapolis business is reported almost normal. The post-war drop was aggravated by usual pre-Christmas slump in attendance.

Relieved from blackouts and scares prevailing in the first days of war, the Los Angeles area reported better business. Grosses were lowest December 11th. Army officials have assured no more practice blackouts for the while.

Hampered somewhat by a continuing ban on neon and marquee lights, Portland theatres are recovering from sharp cuts in attendance.

Sacramento theatres report business back to normal. What losses are occasioned by civilian absence, theatre managers say, is counter-balanced by visitations from nearby soldiers and aviators. Although stores are darkening, marquees remain lit.

One direct effect of the war was noticed in Los Angeles theatre business. The Klieg-light premiere of "Dumbo" was cancelled at police request. However, it opened without fanfare at the Fox West Coast Carthay Circle, that city, Friday, December 19th.

San Francisco theatre operators proceeded with "business as usual" manner, observing, of course, precautions dictated by police and civil defense orders. Earlier, there had been efforts to shut all theatres until after January 1st. Theatres expect installation of daylight saving time.

Business is bounding back to St. Louis houses, which had suffered 35 to 75 per cent losses in receipts. Last week, surveys showed business only about 20 per cent below normal.

Suburban blackouts in Detroit to protect defense factories have somewhat disturbed theatre operation, insofar as marquee lighting was affected.

Studios Prepare For Air Raids

Typical of physical studio preparations being effected for air raid emergencies were actions taken this week by Warner Brothers. To protect its employes against possible daytime air raid attacks the studio had divided the Burbank lot into four zones, each of which has an air raid shelter.

Blayney F. Matthews, studio coordinator of defense program, is in charge of the safety plan. Frank Mattison, Al Allsborn, Chuck Hanson and Whitey Wilson have been chosen as zone commanders. Air raid wardens will receive special instruction and training for emergency duty. The four air raid shelters are located at strategic places on the lot.

Pending establishment of uniform system for all studios, Warners has adopted following alarms: Repeated short sharp blasts of studio whistle will be warning system. Ten minutes is maximum time employes will be allowed to reach shelters following air raid alert warnings. Paramount has taken extraordinary precautions to preserve lives and property in the event of bombings. Measures taken include the designation of various basements as air raid shelters, filling of studio water tanks to capacity for fire fighting, distribution of sand around the lot and installation of alarm equipment. Blackout window coverings were placed about the lot in departments which might be used at night.

Hollywood studio art directors and their aides perfected organization of a "Motion Picture Camouflage Unit" in cooperation with the Army, following a meeting at which Lionel Banks, head of Columbia Pictures' art department and originator of the proposal, was named chairman by Army representatives and film producers.

Art departments of every studio were represented at the meeting and assured prompt, wholehearted support of the plan to give the Army immediate, expert assistance in conducting vital camouflage work in the Pacific coast defense area.

The Army was represented at the conference by Captain T. George Hazenbush, commanding officer of the 604th Engineers, and a letter from Colonel Edwin C. Kelton, district army engineer, confirmed the plan and urged prompt action. Jon Peacock, a member of Mr. Banks' staff at Columbia and a reservist of the 604th Engineers, was appointed liaison agent to coordinate the efforts of all studio experts, of whom several hundred will begin functioning immediately on camouflage plans to be executed by the Army.

The Association of Motion Picture Producers Publicity Directors' committee will start immediately compiling lists of all persons engaged in war work so that official records on the industry will be available.

About 200 freelance publicity men at a meeting in Hollywood last week voted to cooperate with the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Civilian Defense. The group, consisting of film, radio and publicity writers, has been formed to aid national and local defense officials. The freelance unit met Tuesday to adopt a permanent form.

The Screen Directors Guild, many of whose members are serving or have served with the armed forces, wired a pledge of loyalty to President Roosevelt, which said in part: "We are doing our share now and will gladly assume any additional sacrifices you may consider necessary in the prosecution of the war . . ."

War Cancels Academy Banquet

The board of governors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences last week cancelled the annual Academy Awards banquet which had been set for February 26th in Hollywood. War conditions were cited as the reason for the cancellation, which was reached by unanimous vote.

The step is in line with the cancellation of the Rose Bowl football game, the Pasadena Tournament of Roses, the Santa Anita race meet and other public gatherings, which tend to produce traffic congestion, hampering military forces in an emergency.

Rules which have applied for balloting in past years will be followed with little or no change, with nominating ballots distributed to eligible voters January 25th and final voting ballots mailed February 12th. The date, place and manner of the award presentation will be announced later.

Rush to War Themes Continues at Studios

Hollywood continued this week an upheaval of production subject matter, turning to subjects about the war with Japan. Typical themes are Paramount's proposed "Wake Island," a story of the current defense of America's Pacific outpost. "Listening Post," another tale of present-day defense activities, also will be filmed by Paramount, telling about isolated radio stations set up by the Army and Navy at secret points for spotting enemy planes and ships. Republic will have "Remember Pearl Harbor," "Yanks Over Burma Road," "International Bandit," "Interceptor Command," "Wings Over Alaska," etc., etc. Edward Small registered "Yellow Peril" and "Yellow Menace." Columbia followed with "Bombing of Honolulu," and 20th Century-Fox has "Secret Agent of Japan," while Metro filed "Sunday in Hawaii" and "Wings Over the Pacific." Fox also has "Pearl Harbor Pearls" and "Men for the Fleet". David O. Selznick has "V" for Victory" and "Aloha Oe." Columbia scheduled "The Stolen Bombsight" and also "Salute to Tobruk." Warners joined the rush with "My Four Years in Japan." (Warners, following the last war, produced "My Four Years in Germany," written by the World War I American Ambassador to Germany James W. Gerard.)

Paramount also has scheduled for production, "Pacific Blackout," which in spite of a general impression, was not a title invented because of the outbreak of the Japanese-American war. That was the film's original title, but it was changed to "Midnight Angel" because it was felt that the first choice was too fright-provoking, said Paramount. Japan's attack on Hawaii, however, prompted the studio to revert to the original name. The picture is a story of a Los Angeles blackout.

Many Titles Available

In addition to those reported in Motion Picture Herald on December 20th, Hollywood has scores of war titles and stories and other films which in one way or another reflect America's war-time and defense activities, either in production, contemplated, completed or ready for release.

Twentieth Century-Fox added "Prison Ship" this week to its schedule. Bryan Foy will produce the picture story which is based on the experiences of the S. S. Zamzam survivors.

Warner Bros. announced that "Bullet Scars," with Regis Toomey and Adele Longmire in the principal roles, had gone into production at the Burbank studio. D. Ross Lederman is directing.

Warner's "You're in the Army Now," starring the new comedy team of Jimmy Durante and Phil Silvers, opened on Christmas Day at the Strand Theatre in New York. M-G-M's "The Bugle Sound," starring Wallace Berry in a story of the country's mechanized armed forces, will have its premiere on January 15th at Loew's Theatre, Louisville, Ky.

James A. FitzPatrick, Travel Talk producer, is rushing the editing and commentation on two new Travel Talks for M-G-M—"West Point on the Hudson" and "Historic Maryland." The film was shot last Summer with release planned for next Spring, but Mr. FitzPatrick is hurrying the pictures for earliest possible release.

Other Films Planned

Alexander Korda is planning production of a picture based on "War and Peace," the Count Leo Tolstoy's novel, in which he will star Merle Oberon, it was reported in Hollywood this week. Mr. Korda plans to start production early next Summer, with release by United Artists expected toward the end of the year.

M-G-M announced in Hollywood on Monday that it would produce "Six Girls in Uniform," a story of women replacing men in national defense factories, with Ann Southern, Marjorie Main, Ann Rutherford, Virginia Grey, Virginia O'Brien and Patricia Dane in the cast.

Twentieth Century-Fox also announced on Monday a new war film for early production, "Ground Pilots," the story of Army Air Corps ground crews.

Republic announced that it would make "Interceptor Command," with Leonard Fields as producer.

A two-reel special release, "War Clouds in the Pacific," is being rushed to theatres by M-G-M this week. The film graphically pictures immediate danger zones and summarizes the events which led up to Japan's attack on the United States. Compiled by the Canadian Government, with appropriate commentary, "War Clouds" shows in rapid succession, the degree of Nazi infiltration in Japan's factories, shipyards, laboratories and halls of state; the key figures in the Nazi-inspired strategy of New Japan; the indicated tactics of Japanese sea and land forces and the critical spots for possible attack in Pacific waters and along the Asiatic mainland from central China to Pearl Harbor.

M-G-M has completed "China Caravan," a film story of the Far East and Burma Road, presenting Laraine Day and Barry Nelson in the leading roles, with George B. Seitz as director and Sam Marx, producer.

Helen Westley, stage star who has appeared in innumerable screen parts portraying irascible aunts and mothers-in-law, was signed for an important role in the Kay Kyser production, "My Favorite Spy," which Harold Lloyd is producing for RKO Radio, with Tay Garnett directing.

Hollywood Sets Up Special Defense Films Production

Collaboration between the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood and the U. S. Army Signal Corps in the making of training films with Hollywood talent has been expanded to include a series of 10 to 12 pictures on civilian defense, it was announced last Wednesday, by Lieut. Col. Darryl F. Zanuck, chairman of the Council. The Office of Emergency Management will do half of the series and the research council the remainder.

First of these new films, all of which will deal with military information of vital concern to civilians, will tell the public how to safeguard military information, to prepare for blackouts, and to cooperate with military officials during an emergency. The pictures probably will be distributed without charge through the motion picture committee cooperating for national defense.

Production on the first film started last Wednesday at 20th Century-Fox studios in Hollywood, under Irving Pichel's direction, from a script written by Nunnally Johnson and Owen Crump. Don Ameche, Milton Berle and Thomas Mitchell are the "stars."

Orson Welles is doing the narration for the initial office of Emergency Management short in the new series. "Tanks," an informative short subject for general release produced by OEM, is now being scored on the West Coast, it was disclosed in Washington this week. The film was made at the Detroit Arsenal and shows how the land battleships are made and their performance in action.

More Films from Harmon Group for Theatres

Two more short subjects for free distribution to more than 12,000 theatres participating in the work of the industry War Activities Committee were released Wednesday by Francis S. Harmon, executive director, in New York. The committee was formerly known as the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense.

One of the pictures is a ten minute reel on keeping military secrets which was made by Hollywood for the Army. It is the first army training film approved for theatrical exhibition.

Three thousand prints of a two and a half minute Red Cross trailer were shipped to 33 exchanges for distribution to cooperating exhibitors. It is an important part of the American Red Cross publicity campaign for a $50,000,000 war fund.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the Red Cross, in a letter to industry committee said. "I wish to express appreciation for the American Red Cross for the promptness of your action in approving the distribution of the Red Cross trailer." It will be shown throughout January.

"Safeguarding Military Information" one of the subjects produced in Hollywood by Lieutenant Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck for the war training films program of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences was also approved by R. B. Wilby, chairman of the program board of the War Activities Committee.

The picture was designed for exhibition exclusively at training camps. At the request of the War Department the industry committee arranged clearances from talent guilds, producers and distributors for the free exhibition of the reel in all theatres, because of its timeliness.

Prints are now being prepared under War Department supervision and will be sent to exchanges as soon as completed. General distribution through the 12,000 or more theatres cooperating with the committee is set for soon after the first of the year.

The Army picture stars Walter Huston and was produced by top Hollywood talent.

"Safety for the Citizen"

The Museum of Modern Art in New York launched two film programs on Tuesday, each 45 minutes in length, called "Safety for the Citizen." Each program, shown at 3 P. M. daily except Sundays in the Museum's auditorium, is composed of six short films made in England, designed to show citizens what to do and what not to do in the "modern warfare which has turned the great cities of the world into battlefields and front-line trenches."

Two of the pictures on the program arrived recently from England and had their first public showing at the Museum on Tuesday. They are "Citizen Army" and "Shunter Black's Night Off." The former depicts the organization and duties of England's new citizen army, the Home Guard, and the latter shows how a railwayman off duty deals with some incendiary bombs.

The other films picture the routine of a typical British anti-aircraft gun crew in detecting enemy aircraft, in preventing accurate bombing and in bringing down Nazi planes; how volunteer organizations provide temporary shelter and food for Londoners when they are bombed or blasted out of their homes; a first hand account of police duties during wartime; demonstrations of how to deal with incendiary bombs in the streets or in the homes

CALIFORNIA MOVES TO WIDEN DEFENSES

California, home state of movie making, moved this week to widen its defenses. Because of its exposed position, emphasized during the past three weeks by aid raid warnings and blackouts, which were attributed by the Army to the presence of enemy aircraft, State officials indicated that they would look to the Federal Government to finance operations clearly classed as national defense. At the same time Governor Olson proclaimed a state of emergency and asked the legislature which convened last week, to consider defense appropriations, which eventually, it is said, may reach $50,000,000.

The Film Library of New York University has been named depository of the Middle Atlantic states area for the three dozen films of the Canadian National Film Board, which will be used to educate American civilians in defense.

Twelve of the films deal with Canada's war effort and depict the evacuation of children, women's efforts in defense and related problems. The remainder deal with Canadian industries, education, natural resources, history and social planning. The films, which will be made available to both defense and education groups, were obtained through the cooperation of Wesley Greene, regional supervisor of distribution in the United States for the National Film Board of Canada.

The library reported that several films had arrived in New York early last week and already were being shown five and six times a day to various groups throughout the city. The first arrivals dealt with the physical and morale problems of children in war time.

Harmon Urges Greater Effort at New York Meeting

"Each has a contribution to make," and each should "pitch in" now, in the film industry's contribution to the country's war effort, Francis Harmon, aide to the industry's War Activities Committee, told a "defense" meeting at New York's Hotel Picadilly, Friday night, December 19th. The meeting was called by the Screen Publicists Guild, and a steering committee representing those industry units there, trade press, unions, the guild, and the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, was appointed to cooperate with the industry committee, especially on local matters.

Other speakers were Garson Kanin, film consultant with the division of information of the Office of Production Management; Eugene Plichet, Times Square sector warden; Captain John Green, of the New York State Home Guard; and Joseph Gould, president of the SPG.

Mr. Harmon noted that the British thought films necessary to morale, and that the Neutrality Act had been amended to allow export of U. S. films to Britain. Such, he indicated, was the regard of our Government for films, in the national effort.

The U. S. industry started preparing for the war more than a year ago, he reminded; and the committee was but the fruition. He outlined its activities, and asserted that one result of the film industry's cooperation with the Government and its armed services will be the recognition by the Government of films as a tremendous aid in training, and he predicted there would result, after the war, a great expansion of films for teaching.

He also asked economy in materials, from studio to projection booth, warning that virtually every material was important.

Films Needed, Says Montague

In a message sent to his sales department members last Thursday, A. Montague, Columbia Pictures' general sales manager, in New York urged his force to "carry on with everything you have" during the war emergency. His statement said, "You must know that there has never been a greater morale builder invented by man than the motion picture. We in this business are obligated to see to it that nothing happens to keep it from giving full benefits to the greatest number of people, he said.

Mr. Montague reiterated Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's plea of last week, "'For heaven's sake, keep them laughing.' Mrs. Roosevelt is right. Keep them laughing and they will work harder —fight harder—and win."

WAR TAKES UNCLE SAM'S ATTENTION AWAY FROM U. S. FILM PRODUCTION

Washington's Bureaus, Agencies Slow-down "Extra-curricular" Film Making; Made Only 25 in 1941; Hollywood Chief Source

by FRANCIS L. BURT in Washington

Pre-occupied this year with war-and-defense preparations, U. S. Government agencies in Washington in 1941 produced only 25 pictures, many of them started in 1940, compared with 44 in 1940.

In contrast with the early years of the New Deal Administration, when nearly every newly-created agency—and there were many—embarked upon an effort to enshrine itself pictorially in the history of the Nation, the films of the past year have been devoted largely to subjects within the purview of a producing agency.

Thus the Department of Agriculture, accounting for 17 of the 25 pictures, has been devoting itself to subjects of interest to the farmers for whose benefit the films are made; the Bureau of Mines made one picture on the principles and use of the Diesel engine, and the United States Public Health Office produced a film on the importance of good nutrition to health.

Of the remaining half-dozen films, one—"Men and Ships," made by the United States Maritime Commission—was designed specifically to boost the defense program by emphasizing the facilities set up for the training of seamen.

NYA Produces Four

The National Youth Administration, a branch of the Federal Security agency, which in past years put out 16 films boosting its work, has produced four more, one of them a 22-minute silent film depicting the 1941 inauguration of President Roosevelt and the other three dealing with NYA work.

The final picture was put out by the Tennessee Valley Authority and is a 20-minute sound description of the work and accomplishments of the TVA in developing the Tennessee Valley.

A survey of the various Washington departments and agencies shows that a total of 481 motion pictures have been produced for distribution. Some of these pictures were made as long as 15 years ago; a few were made by outside sources and given to the departments, as in the case of various films made by steel and other companies for the Bureau of Mines.

In number of films, the Department of Agriculture leads with 164, all dealing with subjects for farmers, stock raisers or entomologists. The Department of Interior is second with 131 films, but many of these depict the adventures of the Civilian Conservation Corps in the various National Parks and 44 are Bureau of Mines pictures.

The American Battle Monuments Commission has one film showing the various World War monuments to American soldiers killed in the World War.

The Department of Commerce has four pictures; the Federal Loan Agency, two; National Youth Administration, 20; Social Security Board, three; Public Health Service, seven; Public Roads Administration, 12, and United States Housing Authority, one.

The Department of Justice has one picture; Labor Department, 16; National Defense Advisory Commission, one; Navy, 29; Tennessee Valley Authority, seven; Treasury, six; Maritime Commission, two; Veterans' Administration, one, and the War Department, three.

At the moment, the Government itself is engaged in little or no motion picture production and what has been undertaken is designed primarily to advance the defense effort. Hollywood, however, for the emergency, is participating in a vast war-and-defense-and-offense motion picture production program for the Government.

Aside from some trailers which are being produced by the U. S. for defense (not including the pictures being produced by the film industry for the Government) the most ambitious Governmental production undertaking is a program contemplating the making of some 50 reels for the United States Office of Education, specifically designed to be of assistance to instructors in the training of defense workers.

Forty of these films will cover the care and operation of machine shop tools such as the lathe, milling machine, shaper, drill press and vertical boring mill; and such precision measuring tools as the micrometer, the vernier, standard gauges, indicators, etc. The other ten pictures will be on the work of the shipwright and the shipfitter in ship construction.

The contract for the printing and distribution of these films was recently awarded to Castle Films, Inc., New York, at a base price of $8.47 per 400-foot 16-mm sound film, on reel and in can, at destination.

RAILWAY EXPRESS RAISES COSTS

In filing tariffs with the Interstate Commerce Commission providing for an emergency increase of ten cents on all "less than car load" shipments, which becomes effective January 20th, 1942, L. O. Head, president of Railway Express Agency, explained that the added charge was essential to enable the company to pay wage increases recently put into effect upon recommendation of the mediation board appointed by President Roosevelt, together with other recent increases in labor costs which will cause an annual increase of more than $16,000,000, including payroll taxes of six per cent. The motion picture industry uses Railway Express as one large source of shipping films to exchanges and theatres.

New Theatre Construction Hit $18,386,000 in '41

According to new-construction statistics compiled by Dodge Statistical Research Service, and based on contracts awarded for theatre building in the 37 Eastern states, there was but little decline for the first ten months of 1941 compared with the same period of 1940. The compilation shows that the aggregate for 1941 was $18,386,000, against $18,496,000 in 1940.

August was the peak month when expenditures totalled $2,842,000, compared to $2,920,000 spent during May, 1940. The least amount of construction money was spent, during July of 1941, some $1,137,000, while January in the preceding year was the low period—$1,316,000 was expended.

Month by month expenditures follow:

WHITNEY COMMITTEE FILMS READY, ON MOLECULES, CARDIACS AND COWS

List of 42 Pictures Ready for Shipment to South America by Government Committee to Aid "Neighborly" Policy

The identities, titles and descriptions of the non-theatrical motion pictures which the United States is sending to South America in its program of cultural relations became available officially, and in part, for the first time Wednesday. The subjects cover a wide range, from military and child training, to molecules, cows and cardiac cases.

John Hay Whitney, director of the motion picture division of the Office of Inter-American Affairs listed 42 short subjects as "the preliminary program of non-theatrical films assembled under the direction of Kenneth McGowan."

Spanish and Portuguese 16 mm. versions of nine of the pictures have already been shipped southward, according to the announcement. The balance of the short subjects, culled from the libraries of all the major producers and the documentary, educational and scientific fields are still in preparation. They will go south soon after the first of the year it was said.

First Report

The list of 42 pictures marks the first public report on the activities of the film division of Nelson A. Rockefeller's Office of Inter-American Affairs. Formation of the motion picture exchange program was announced by Mr. Rockefeller 11 months ago, on January 14th. Mr. McGowan, on leave from his post as producer at 20th Century-Fox took over the direction of the non-threatrical program in April under Mr. Whitney.

Subject matter of the initial films ranged from reports on the training and equipment of the U. S. armed forces through travelogues, history, "Basketball Technique," "The Molecular Theory of Matter" and cardiac disease to the Alaskan salmon run. A substantial number of classroom films and government-made documentaries were on the list.

Three of the first nine pictures shipped were Hollywood product. Eight other subjects from the short subject files of five producers, Warners, MGM, Columbia, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount are in preparation. The films are being scored with foreign language sound tracks at the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

Distribution of the pictures, for non-theatrical exhibition only, throughout South and Central America is under the direction of Phil Reisman, vice-president and foreign manager of RKO Radio. Mr. Reisman said the pictures were being shipped as expeditiously as possible.

Circulation in Latin America is arranged by local committees in all principal cities. These groups, composed of Latin American educators, businessmen, scientists and members of the U. S. colonies handle all requests from schools or educational groups for exhibition of the pictures. Projectors, and a traveling technician, have already been sent to the principal U. S. embassies and consulate. The cultural attaches of each embassy will have general charge of the circulation of the pictures, which will be available without cost.

The purpose of the Latin American films is to "show the truth about the American Way" Mr. Whitney declared, following his return from a two-month tour of the American republics. "Films sent to Latin America, as far as possible, will be utterly truthful and authentic picturizations of American life and objectives," he said.

A budget of approximately $125,000 was earmarked last spring for the assembly of the Latin American 16 mm. films, according to a Washington announcement published in Motion Picture Herald on June 28th. This was expected to provide for about 60 short subjects during the first year of operation. In July the documentary division of Mr. Whitney's office reported that it had already selected approximately 65 subjects. Mr. Whitney in November said that Mr. McGowan and his staff had viewed approximately 2,000,000 feet of film and had almost 100 titles in preparation.

Productions for Brazil have received sound tracks in Portugese while those for other countries are narrated in Spanish. Several pictures are receiving French commentary for release in Haiti and possibly Martinique.

Nine Films Shipped

The nine pictures already shipped, with their Spanish and Portugese titles, producer, and a brief description are:

"AIRACOBRA" (Spanish: La Cobra del Aire, Portugese: A Serpente Do Ar) one reel, color, made by Bell Aircraft Company to depict the world's swiftest fighting plane.

"THE BATTLE" (Sp: La Batalla, Port: A Batalha) one reel, MGM, shows the striking power of the U. S. fleet.

"EYES OF THE NAVY" (Sp: Los Ojos de la Armada, Port: Os Olhos da Esquadra) two reels, MGM, how Navy aviators train at Pensacola.

"ALUMINUM AND THE TWO AMERICAS" (Sp: La Dos Americas y el Alumino, Port: As Duas Americas e o Aluminio) two and one half reels, Office of Emergency Management, showing the importance of bauxite from South America and how it is processed into aluminum.

"BASKETBALL TECHNIQUE" (Sp: El Basketball, Port: Tecnica do "Bola ao Cesto") one reel, MGM, how to play the game, fast and slow motion.

"NORTH AMERICAN COLLEGES" (Sp: Vales Lo Que Sabes, Port: Vales Pelo Que Sabes) one reel, color, H. V. Hoagland, a tour of the principal American colleges and universities.

"EXCURSIONS IN SCIENCE", two reels, General Electric Company, popular science subjects.

"CHOOSE TO LIVE", (Sp: Quiero Vivir!, Port: Prefiro Viver) two reels, U. S. Public Health Service, the prevention and cure of cancer.

"CLOUD IN THE SKY", two reels, National Tuberculosis Association, the prevention and cure of tuberculosis.

Six classroom films from the ERPI educational catalogue are to be shipped this week, with the remainder to follow soon. Each is one reel and is intended as a teaching aid for school children from the first year of primary school through high school.

The titles are: Grey Squirrel, An Airplane Trip, A Boat Trip, Passenger Train, Farm Animals, New England Fisherman, The Wheat Farmer, The Machine Maker, Body Defenses Against Disease, Sound Waves and Their Sources, and Molecular Theory of Matter.

They will be sound tracked in Portugese as soon as all Spanish prints are completed. Shipment to Brazil will start January 1st. In addition three other subjects have been given prior Portugese sound tracking and are being shipped at once, to be followed in two weeks by Spanish versions. The titles are:

"SOLDIERS OF THE SKY" (Sp: Soldados del Aire, Port: Soldados do Ar), one reel, the training of parachute troops by the U. S. Army.

"POWER FOR THE AMERICAS", (Sp: Energia y Poder de America, Port: Forca e Energia da America), one reel, OEM, showing the highlights of the 15 greatest dams in the United States.

"ALASKA'S SILVER MILLIONS", three reels, Rev. Bernard Hubbard, S.J., describing Alaska's glaciers, salmon runs and canning industry.

Two additional subjects have been prepared in Spanish and Portugese for January distribution. They are:

"AS BIRDS LINK THE AMERICAS", two reels, Irving Jacoby, bird migration in the Western hemisphere.

"ARCHBISHOP CANTWELL'S PILGRIMAGE", one reel, color, Arthur Carter, a record of the Los Angeles' prelate's visit to Mexico.

"THE CITY OF WASHINGTON", two reels, color, Louise Branch and Frances Payne, the U. S. capital and South American agencies there.

"QUICKER'N A WINK", one reel, MGM, high speed photography.

"SKY FIGHTERS", one reel, 20th Century-Fox, the training of army aviators.

"SANTA BARBARA FIESTA", one reel, color, Shirley Burdon, the annual Spanish-American festival in Southern California.

DISCOUNTS BRITISH, GERMAN BROADCASTS

Only two per cent of our people listen to German and British short wave broadcasts, in the estimation of E. P. H. James, sales promotion manager for the NBC Blue network, who spoke last week to the Advertising and Sales Executive Club of Montreal. Mr. James also asserted that more Canadians listened to United States standard programs, than vice-versa.

The Shanghai Gesture

(U·A.-Pressburger)

Melodrama as of Yesterday

A title that demonstrates potency as applies to a stage play of yesteryear and the names of several players whose popularity as of today are the assets in hand for showmen offering their customers this first of Arnold Pressburger's contributions to the United Artists program.

Producer Pressburger's presentation of a revised and considerably renovated version of the stage play is performed by Gene Tierney, Walter Huston, Ona Munson, Victor Mature, Phyllis Brooks and a good many other able actors who are handicapped by dialogue veering from the trite to the inane and by direction which holds proceedings to snail's-pace in what appears to have been an effort to stress mood, tone or spirit. Protracted silences leading up to speeches which do not advance the story combine with sustained camera studies of gestures and grimaces to produce the effect of a melodrama from the pre-talkie era minus its subtitles.

The approach of the production, in apparent acknowledgement of unadmitted but real lines of demarcation between the sophisticated stage serving the minority and the motion picture serving the multitudes, is typified by the change of the cast name of "Mother Goddam" to "Mother Gin Sling."

At the core of a script stretched thin over costly and handsome settings is the tale of a Shanghai gambling queen's debauching of the daughter of an Englishman for purposes of revenge and her killing the girl on discovery that she is her own daughter as well. Overdeliberation in the telling and persistence in accentuation of the obvious deflate the story of whatever drama the plot suggests on paper.

Josef von Sternberg directed and adapted with the collaboration of Geza Herczeg, Karl Vollmoeller and Jules Furthman. As reconditioned, the item is by no means a shocker for adults, unless they supply connotations out of memory, although it retains enough of the original flavor to suggest telling the kiddies to skip it.

Previewed at the Four Star Theatre to a large invited audience which accorded it polite response.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER

Loew's Completes Refunding Loan Of $18,000,000

Loew's Inc., on Tuesday completed arrangements for a refunding loan of $18,000,000 from the First National Bank of Boston and eight insurance companies. The money will be used to retire all of the company's 3½ per cent debentures and 136,000 shares of first preferred stock.

The refunding plan is expected to save the holders of Loew common stock $700,000 in dividends and interest during the loan's first year. David Bernstein, treasurer and vice-president of Loew's, Inc., conducted the negotiations for what the Wall Street Journal called the lowest cost financing in the industry's history.

The financing will be used to retire $10,500,000 outstanding 3½ per cent sinking fund debentures, due in 1946 and 136,022 shares of no par $6.50 cumulative dividend preferred stock. The company will also use about $7,000,000 of its large cash reserves to retire the securities.

Of the total amount of the loan, $13,000,000 was borrowed at three per cent from the following insurance companies: Massachusetts Mutual, John Hancock, Sun Life, Pennsylvania Mutual, New England Mutual, State Mutual of Worcester, Mass., Union Central of Cincinnati, Continental Casualty of Chicago and Continental Assurance Co. of Chicago.

The remaining $5,000,000 came from the First National Bank of Boston. It is a five-year, 2¼ per cent loan.

Mississippi Theatre Levies Set Record

Collections of admission levies at Mississippi motion picture theatres set a new all-time monthly record during November at $43,270 bringing the eleven-month collections during 1941 thus far up to a new period peak at $458,233. Collections in November, 1940, were $34,890 and for the 11 months of 1940, $420,859.

Good cotton yields in the Delta area, a recordbreaking of summer and fall vacationists to the Gulf Coast "playground" area and increasing payrolls resulting from heavy sales of lumber, cotton textiles, cotton and other native raw materials combine to bring about the betterment in conditions in the state, officials of tax commission announce.

National Theatres Pays Dividend of $1,650,000

The directors of National Theatres voted an annual dividend of $1,650,000 Monday on the circuit's single issue of stock at their year end board meeting in Jersey City. The payment is equivalent to 91⅔ cents per share on 1,800,000 shares outstanding.

Twentieth Century-Fox which owns 42 per cent of the circuit stock will receive $693,000. The remaining 58 per cent, or $957,000 will go to the Chase National Bank of New York which holds majority control of the National Theatres stock.

Hoffberg Promotes Unger

Hoffberg Productions, New York, has signed with Oliver A. Unger, present sales manager, to become vice-president in charge of sales for five years, according to J. H. Hoffberg, president. Mr. Unger at the same time was elected to the board of directors, along with Edmund Souhami, who was also appointed secretary.

Lester Tours with Sabu

Allen J. Lester, circus press agent, will be the advance agent for the personal appearance of Sabu, it was announced by United Artists. The tour, which will cover ten or 12 key cities, has been arranged in connection with Alexander Korda's new production, "The Jungle Book."

Schwartz Opens Exchange

Murray Schwartz, formerly branch manager of Peerless Exchange, Philadelphia, has opened his own independent exchange in that city to be known as Astor Corporation, obtaining the franchise for Astor Pictures. In addition, he will handle the product formerly carried by Peerless.

Prize for Higgins

Maurice L. Huggins, of Eastman Kodak, Rochester, has been awarded one of the two A. Cressy Morrison prizes in natural science for a paper written for consideration by the New York Academy of Sciences.

E. E. Lewis Elected RCA Vice-President

Edward E. Lewis has been elected vice-president of RCA Manufacturing Company by the board of directors, it was announced Monday by G. K. Throckmorton, president.

Mr. Lewis will direct the finance and accounts division, and will also continue as director of the priorities division.

Teck To Be Rebuilt

The Teck theatre, Buffalo, will be rebuilt into a one-story, 1,300-seat Shea circuit theatre, according to Vincent McFaul, president and general manager of the circuit. The addition would bring to four the number of Shea houses in Buffalo's downtown district.

Botsford in New York

A. M. Botsford, Twentieth Century-Fox director of advertising and publicity, returned last week from Hollywood, where he had been consulting with production chief Darryl F. Zanuck and Harry Brand, studio publicity director, on advertising and promotion plans for spring releases.

Warner Managers Meet

C. J. Latta, new Warner Circuit Management zone manager, presided in Albany, N. Y., Monday, at a meeting of the 16 western New York managers. Accompanying Mr. Latta, who outlined the company's policy for 1942, was Charles A. Smakwitz, zone publicity head.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

Esteemed Editor:

Tom Bailey, long of National Screen Service and now also of service personally to the community hereabouts in its preparations for whatever more in the way of blackouts and such the future may hold, was on the 'phone but now to inquire whether we hadn't printed considerable material, in the last two years, pertaining to the experiences of British exhibitors coping with similar problems.

He was referred to Aubrey Flanagan's many excellent London dispatches on the subject and you'll be hearing from him directly.

What with blackouts or their imminence a new factor in showmanly plannings on this coast, and presumably elsewhere, a republication of excerpts from the Flanagan reports of wartime theatre operation in Britain would appear assured of a wide rereading.

We are in receipt of a letter from Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, notifying us that "Effective immediately, the studios will have to consider all previous agreements regarding sneak-previews as abrogated" and that "the studios shall in the future select any theatre, regardless of location, for this purpose. . . . The hardships to the studio personnel involved in the necessity of having to travel long distances at night (under present emergency conditions) are evident."

Asks Cooperation

His letter closed with, "We therefore request that the newspapers and trade papers give the studios their complete cooperation and not review any pictures until formal notification of trade or press showing."

We have replied to President Freeman assuring him that "the Quigley Publications will of course cooperate with the studios in this and all related moves in industry interest" and added the suggestion that "as one such related move clearly indicated by the same considerations" he also "abrogate the rule under which press-previews are held at Glendale, Inglewood and other remote points, requiring members of the press to subject themselves to hardships identical with those referred to."

The abrogated agreement governing placement of sneak-previews dates back several years to a catch-as-catch-can system under which trade and lay press people dashed around Southern California, at great waste of mileage and sleep, to sneak up on the unedited film unawares and sprint into print with a review of same.

Everybody got pretty tired of that, whereupon an understanding was achieved in which the press promised not to report sneak-previews occurring outside of a zone which some unknown cartographer conceived as constituting "the metropolitan area" and studios promised to screen the finished product inside of that zone, with due process of invitation, at an appropriate time.

The placement of press-previews in the suburbs is a recent and unofficial arrangement arrived at by hedging and compromise after inception of the exhibitor-ordained ban against lay press reviewing of films in advance of release. After a good deal of fussing, the newspapers consented to ignore trade press screenings if they were not held in theatres inside still another zone which still another unknown geographer figured out as constituting private domain or something equally unrelated to the issue.

That was pre-war, of course, but a formal notice of abrogation may be required to change the condition.

What's to be done will be done when need demands its doing. Haste is made slowly in all these matters. Up to now there is no visible or audible reason for doubting that commonsense will prevail at long last in a muchly-muddled field of necessary and functional activity wherein fear and threat have wielded influence beyond belief.

Maybe it required a state of war to establish in this outpost of journalism that word-of-honor basis upon which publications in general have so long and satisfactorily handled such material as the text of a fireside chat, the review of a four-bit novel and a diversity of materials made available for linotype composition but not for publication in advance of eventuation.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences chagrined fewer than it pleased by cancelling its annual Awards Banquet.

Some matrons of the Town who don't make the hot spots regularly but do show up for this more orthodox outing may have experienced a moment of irk. Their men didn't.

Dinner a Trial

The Academy Dinner had developed into something of a trial in more ways than one. It was in the nature of a "must" affair, wherefore it had become a crowded one, and it had grown long to the point of exhaustion before being shortened somewhat last year by the then president, Walter Wanger, who had survived a great many of its predecessors running into the wee, small and extremely dull hours.

Retention of the practical features of the institution, the balloting and the presentation of the Oscars, safeguards against sacrifice of the generous and helpful publicity which the Academy's annual declarations of distinction have received in the past.

Winners of the 1942 Oscars will be winners no less, and profit no less by the winning, than if hailed before an audience of sleepy diners and compelled to push a few halting remarks through a microphone already glutted with too many.

The Academy gained respect, admiration and prestige by its decision.

National Board Urges Attack On 'Censorship'

"Now that the Legion of Decency has approved the revised version of 'Two-Faced Woman,'" it becomes possible to draw some general conclusions about the whole episode," an open letter to the industry from Quincy Howe, president of the National Board of Review, declares. "In the first place, the Legion had every right to ask its members to boycott the film. Nor was it in any way obligated to approve of the revised version. Any group, large or small, should always be free in a democracy to urge members of that group and the general public, too, to boycott a film, a book, a play or any other artistic representation. This does not mean, however, that the public authorities, the motion picture industry, or the Hays organization has any obligation to follow the advice of the Legion of Decency or of any other group."

"The public authorities have but one obligation—to enforce the law; if any public official believes that a film violates the laws of obscenity, he always has recourse to the courts, but any other interference on the part of public authorities constitutes censorship," continued the statement, added: "The motion picture industry and the Hays organization can, of course, go much further. They can censor their own products in the interests of good taste, public morals, popular approval, or anything else. This is a free country and the motion picture industry is free to produce or not to produce pictures as it sees fit.

"But once a big company has issued a picture and once the Hays organization has passed that picture, it then becomes the duty of the industry and the organization to back up its own judgment, especially if a public official censors a picture as officials in Providence and Boston censored 'Two-Faced Woman.' In such instances the motion picture company, the motion picture exhibitor, and the Hays organization should challenge in the courts the right of public officials to overstep their proper functions. The National Board of Review urges that responsible leaders of the motion picture industry draw these conclusions from what happened to 'Two-Faced Woman,'" concluded Mr. Howe's statement.

Schwarz Leaves Agfa, Eckler Succeeds Him

The board of directors of General Aniline and Film Corporation, in New York, on Tuesday, accepted the resignation of Ernst Schwartz as director and vice president of General and as general manager of the Agfa-Ansco Division.

At the same time, President John E. Mack announced the appointment of Leopold Eckler, assistant vice-president of General, as acting general manager of Agfa-Ansco Division. Mr. Eckler has been for many years director of production for Afga.

Levy with Warners

Ted Levy, formerly with the RKO exchange in Chicago, has been named chief booker at the Warner exchange there.

National Decency Legion Classifies Fourteen Films

Of the 14 motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in this listing for the current week, eight were found unobjectionable for general patronage, five were approved for adults, and one, "Two-Faced Woman," was reclassified as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Babes On Broadway," "Borrowed Hero," "Corsican Brothers," "Land of the Open Range," "Lone Star Law Men," "Red River Valley," "Remember the Day" and "The Vanishing Virginian." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "All American Co-Ed," "Among the Living," "Ball of Fire," "Blue, White and Perfect" and "No Hands on the Clock."

The Legion has also announced that MGM has made changes in "Two-Faced Woman." These changes have involved additions and eliminations. After reviewing the revised edition the Legion has removed the film from the condemned list and given it a B rating—Objectionable in Part.

Callaway in United Artists West Coast Post

W. E. Callaway was apointed West Coast district manager of United Artists, it was announced in New York on Tuesday, by Carl Leserman, general sales manager of the company. Mr. Callaway who assumes his new duties immediately, enters the post recently left vacant by Ben Fish, who resigned.

For many years, Mr. Callaway was associated with Warner Brothers as both west coast district manager and Los Angeles branch manager. Prior to his Warner connection, he was western division manager for RKO.

10,000 Theatres for 'Dimes' Drive

A goal of 10,000 theatres to cooperate in the industry's March of Dimes drive to aid infantile paralysis sufferers as part of President Roosevelt's birthday celebration has been set by Nicholas M. Schenck, chairman of the industry's drive committee, it was announced Friday, December 19th, in New York.

Although the drive has only begun, more than 2,500 theatres have already agreed to participate.

A message of appreciation from President Roosevelt to Mr. Schenck was received Monday in a letter from Keith Morgan, national chairman of the March of Dimes campaign.

In a message to exhibitors Mr. Schenck said: "The motion picture industry has been called upon to help many worthy charity causes, but, in my opinion, none touches the heart more deeply than does the annual campaign to raise funds for the fight against infantile paralysis.

"Really, not too much is asked of us," Mr. Schenck said. "We are merely asked to take collections in our theatre lobbies during the week of January 22nd to 28th. If we do that with the proper organization and enough enthusiasm, we can make a worthwhile industry contribution to the good cause."

At the same time Mr. Schenck said he would appreciate hearing from every theatre as to the plans of each for the March of Dimes.

On Monday, state chairmen of the drive started reporting to Harry Brandt, national co-chairman, at the Hotel Astor in New York. Those who have reported include Harry C. Arthur, Jr., St. Louis; W. F. Crockett, president of the MPTO of Virginia; L. C. Griffith, Oklahoma City, Okla, and H. F. Kincy, Charlotte, N. C.

Chicago Show Brings Quarter of a Million

An audience estimated at 25,000 crowded into the Chicago Stadium on the night of December 17th to see and hear Mayor Kelly's annual "Night of Stars" show for the benefit of poor children. Ticket sales brought in $250,000 while program sales added another $25,000. From the proceeds at least 80,000 underprivileged youngsters will receive Christmas gifts of warm clothing and shoes.

Conceived by Mayor Kelly in 1933, the extravaganza has always been the leading money-raising event of Chicago's Own Christmas Benefit and is one of the biggest affairs of its kind held annually in the country.

The Stadium was packed with customers who were entertained from 9 o'clock until early hours the next morning by a steady procession of Hollywood stars, name bands and performers from leading night spots, radio, the legitimate theatres and the opera and concert stages. James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, led the orchestra in a selection. The Paulist Choir sang a group of Yule songs. Mayor Kelly spoke briefly.

Among those from Hollywood who participated in the event were Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, Humphrey Bogart, Mayo Methot and Jimmy Durante. Performers from "Louisiana Purchase," "Claudia" and "Native Son" were present besides numerous radio personalities.

Harry Warner Heads Drive

Harry M. Warner has been appointed head of the Motion Picture Committee on the Red Cross drive in Hollywood. Plans are being set for a thorough canvas of the industry.

"Ushers! Get out the tape for Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland in M-G-M's 'Babes On Broadway'!"

Here is a picture in the best traditions of show business which has just about everything needed to bring crowds to the theatre and joy to the hearts of patrons of all ages, and to the exhibitor.
—M. P. HERALD

One of the most palatable and substantial entertainments ever to find its way into celluloid. Talent and versatility are apparently boundless, and in this toe-tickling, heart-warming musical, are employed to their best possible advantage. There are enough breath-taking highlights in the film to have assured successful reception for three motion pictures. —BOXOFFICE

Entertainment-laden money show. A showman's natural and can't miss being a big money picture. —EXHIBITOR

Great show; sock entertainment. As great a job as has ever been put into one picture. Any ticket buyer will go out raving. A whale of a box-office attraction with Mickey Rooney, the nation's top male draw, and Judy Garland, heading the cast and doing the best jobs of their careers. The answer to every exhibitor's prayer. Boys and girls, it's a show, and what a show!
—HOLLYWOOD REPORTER

Just about everything the average movie fan could desire. Place "Babes On Broadway" right on top . . . the best Rooney-Garland co-starrer to date. Head and shoulders above all other recent musicals. Bound to be a hit with any audience, will shoot box-office grosses upward in every situation.
—SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW

Should do as well as its predecessors, "Strike Up The Band" and "Babes In Arms," at the box-office—which was very good.
—VARIETY (Weekly)

In exploiting this attraction, showmen are warranted in going the limit. The picture contains 15 musical numbers, among them some of the best they've ever seen. Busby Berkeley, director, has seen to it that all of his past experience in the field of dance direction is reflected in the enterprise . . . Audience shrieked their delight. —M. P. DAILY

Will be a box-office smash of the season. One of the most refreshing and enjoyable musicals to ever grace the screen. It has everything, and exhibs. can prepare for holdovers and top grosses.
—FILM DAILY

An avalanche of sure fire entertainment, paced by the certified box-office names of Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland. It has everything with which to mop up—youthful zest, heart-tug, infectious rhythm, constant amusement and excitement, stirring performances, substantial story interest, captivating music and lavish production. —DAILY VARIETY

400 HAPPY NEW YEAR DATES LAUNCH 1942's FIRST TRIUMPH!

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

EASTMAN KODAK researchers at Kodak Park in Rochester, dig deep into the archives and come out with Christmas-time nuggets of foible, fancy and fact of practices and procedure of the day.

The Christmas Day dinner of our forefathers centered around the pie which has come down to us as mince pie. It should be called Christmas Pie, the term "mince" having been given it by the Puritans, who are said to have deemed it, " A superstitious abomination." This pie was baked in the form of a crèche, a cradle, the crossed bands at the top representing the manner in which a child is secured in its crib. Beneath this crèche was a combination of flesh, fish, and fowl. . . . A recipe dating from 1394 says the original pie was 9 feet around and weighed 168 pounds. It was neatly fitted with a case and four small wheels, and was rolled from guest to guest at table.

All Christmas dishes are heavy with spices, symbolizing the gift of the Wise Men. The turkey gobbler is America's addition to the festive board (and if there is any left after the Christmas dinner, it may be served as hash, creamed, or in soup or sandwiches).

To set a bough or branch in water is an old custom, and indeed this may be the real origin of the Christmas tree. It is supposed to be symbol of love of the out-of-doors and the mysteries of the woodland. The Christmas tree that has become a twinkling fairy palace started out as a little tree in Germany and was loaded with cookies and candies and made bright by candlelight.

In winter, when most plant life is dead or dormant, evergreens were used in decorations to signify light everlasting. Plants which actually bear fruit at this time are the mistletoe and holly, and they were used for that reason. Decorating with mistletoe is an old English custom and it is supposed to have "healing" properties. Maybe it does - - for the early folk festivals permitted kissing under the mistletoe; and each time a boy kissed a girl he plucked a berry from the bough. When the berries were all picked, there was no more kissing allowed!

The Christmas-card custom is of rather modern origin, but there was a custom in Poland that much resembled it. A few weeks before Christmas, monks took around small packages of wafers made of flour and water, with figures stamped on them. They were sent in letters to relatives and friends as we send Christmas cards. When the first star appeared on Christmas Eve, the whole family broke one of these wafers and divided it, at the same time exchanging good wishes.

Every country has added some touch to Christmas lore, but the custom of hanging stockings beside the chimney originated in Belgium or France, where shoes or sabots were set out.

Santa Claus, that jolly old man who is so affectionately a part of childhood began life in Asia Minor. He was, legend relates, tall and lean, and he rode around on a white horse searching out needy persons and secretly helping them—usually with a sack of gold. Later he became identified with St. Nicholas, the patron saint of children.

Then, the imaginative Dutch changed him into a fat, jolly, rosy-cheeked old man and replaced his old gray mare with the dancing and prancing reindeer. Someone else added a beard and a red suit and a cap, and it is thus he reigns today.

A grimly realistic but accidental effect, like that of an Orson Welles' broadcast, was obtained by the Newsreel Theater in San Francisco during one of the city's first blackouts, when sound effects of a British government short called "The Warning," depicting a London air raid, were relayed via loudspeaker from the screen to the street. A blackout came suddenly during the showing of the film, and a large sidewalk crowd listened to the grimly realistic voice of the screen commentator describing the attack, in which bombs bursts could be heard plainly. When the management learned that newcomers to the crowd thought they were hearing a local radio broadcast, describing an enemy attack on San Francisco, the loudspeaker was turned off.

A young patron who shouted "Boo" during the showing of a newsreel clip of President Roosevelt's last fireside chat precipitated a near riot in the Telenews Theatre, Chicago. The audience had just finished applauding the President's words when the "boo" was heard. Patrons fell upon Edward A. Loss, Jr., 23 years old, of Oak Park, and cuffed him until he was rescued by an attendant. Apparently there's to be no booing.

MARSHALL FIELD'S new newspaper, The Chicago Sun, takes its first pick on the picture business, to wit:

"Napoleon shaved with a downward stroke, except for his Adam's apple which he scraped upward. Louis XV of France wouldn't eat a three-minute egg on a bet, but he loved the hard-boiled variety.

"How do we know? Because a Hollywood press agent dipped superficially into his studio's super-duper library of 1,000,000 clippings, 16,000 books and 1,200 maps and found these facts.

"It seems film script writers and directors are always trying to send the Scots Grays into battle on black horses or feed Louis XV soft-boiled eggs, so the studio keeps this library as a check against historical boners.

"Personally, we don't care how Napoleon shaved—or even whether he did. What we'd really like to know is why a studio that can build up such an expensive library couldn't pay some asthmatic copyreader $75 a week to do a professional job on the eight-column headlines for the newspaper closeups that tell about how the slick gal reporter got her man."

SOVIET FILM INDUSTRY NOT NAPPING WHEN NAZIS BOMBED, SAYS 'WORKER'

Communist Paper Reports Studios Had Been Moved; Soviet Films Replace Nazis' in German Yorkville; FBI Moves in

"The Soviet film industry was not caught napping when the bombs began to drop on June 22nd" says The Daily Worker, New York, considered No. 1 press mouthpiece of the Soviet Union in the U. S. "In the five months since then production plans have been revamped and in many cases expanded. Studios evacuated from Kiev, Leningrad and Moscow are now operating full blast in Kiubyshev, Kharabovsk, Tiflis and Novosibirsk. A new raw film manufacturing plant is operating in Kazan, reports the newspaper.

The Communist paper added, "Entertainment films with war themes, of which many were scheduled even before the Nazi invasion, are being rushed to completion. Script changes have been made in some instances to convey imaginary enemies into real ones. When the invasion came, there were on hand half a dozen films suitable for the new mood which permeated Soviet film audiences. Several of them will soon be released in the United States, Canada and South America.

"All of these shifts," said the Worker, "were relatively easy because the Third Five-Year Plan, when it was inaugurated in 1938, made provisions for the expansion and decentralization of the movie industry."

MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on December 13th, reported that since June 22nd, according to Artkino, Inc., distributors of Soviet films in America, there has been an "increase" in Russian pictures which are "making money" in the U. S.

Soviet Films Replace Nazis'

A curious twist on the international scene where films are concerned, came this week with the announcement from Artkino that beginning on Christmas Day, the Casino Theatre in Yorkville, New York, former U. S. "home" for Nazi films, changes to Soviet pictures. Opening program feature is "Stalin Speaks."

Since the U. S. declaration of war, the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors has modified its policy in respect to foreign films. According to Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman, five Russian pictures have been approved, two of which are admittedly propaganda films, "A Day in Soviet Russia" and "View of the Soviet World." A court action is pending in the Philadelphia Common Pleas Court against the board for refusing to pass two other propaganda films submitted by Artkino shortly after the start of the Russo-German war.

Mrs. Carroll indicated that while the two approved pictures are propaganda films, the board considers them as documentaries, since they are pictures of Russia's armed forces which are now allied with the United States in the fight against Hitlerism. She stated that the board is making a distinction between military and Communistic propaganda pictures. In view of present conditions, military propaganda is considered in a favorable light.

Meanwhile, in Hollywood, Walter Huston completed the commentary last week for the full-length documentary feature which Lewis Milestone and Joris Ivens have edited from Soviet newsreels which Artkino has distributed in America since June 22nd. The picture was to be released this week.

The United States Government has taken no "official" steps to close down German-language theatres in America which have been showing Nazi propaganda films distributed by Ufa Films, Inc., and other agencies, a spokesman in the Federal Bureau of Investigation in New York said on Monday. It is understood that those theatres which have closed since the U. S. declared war on Japan, Germany and Italy, did so voluntarily. Houses which didn't shut down altered their policy quickly, as in the case of Yorkville's Casino Theatre in New York, which shifted this week from Nazi to Soviet films.

U. S. Takes Over Ufa

The Treasury Department, however, literally "took over" the management of Ufa Films, Inc., last Thursday. Visitors entering Ufa's office in the RKO Building in Rockefeller Center, New York, have been stopped by a Treasury officer inquiring as to the nature of their business with Ufa. It is understood that Ufa's operations, since George Nitze, company head was taken by FBI men to Ellis Island, are being inspected by Treasury officials, and that the company's funds are blocked. FBI guards at the UFA offices in New York are "on guard" 24 hours a day.

Meanwhile, check up of one of the Ufa film storage offices in New York revealed that the place was locked, identification of the office destroyed on the door front. It was understood that Treasury Department officials confiscated the reels in this and other Ufa storage plants. Elevator operators in the building admitted seeing "plainclothesmen around last Thursday," and also reported that employes of the Ufa storage office had not been seen since then.

Other theatres which have been showing Nazi films prior to and since Hitler's regime in Germany, beginning with 1933, are the 96th Street Theatre and Garden in Yorkville, the Wagner and Mozart, in Brooklyn; Hindenburg, Irvington, N. J., Transfer, North Bergen, N. J.; Kino, Milwaukee; German Kino, Chicago; Little, Buffalo and the Princess in San Francisco. The 96th Street and the Wagner are continuing to operate, it is reported, playing old German film fare which cannot be construed as "propaganda." The remainder are reported to have closed down, but whether temporarily or permanently, could not be determined.

In announcing the "switch" from Nazi to Russian pictures, the management of the Casino in Yorkville announced, "The Casino Theatre feels the public wishes to study films of this sort," referring to "General Suvorov," Soviet screen glorification of a Russian general who lived 140 years ago. "Provocative films," the announcement continued, "whether short of full-length, documentary or fairy tale, propaganda or not, just so the picture makes you think, will be presented in times which call for a more serious slant to entertainment."

INDUSTRY STUDIES ALIEN TRADING

Since the FBI seized George Nitze, president of Ufa Films, Inc., distributors of Nazi pictures in the U. S., and the Treasury Department has virtually taken over Ufa operations, film industry leaders are faced with a problem concerning trading with aliens of another enemy country—Japan.

Under the Trading With the Enemy Act, U. S. distributors are not permitted to deal with theatres owned or operated by Japanese, it was learned in Washington last Thursday. According to reports, industry executives are considering the situation and may act to obtain a close check of such theatres which are chiefly on the West Coast.

Major film companies made a request last week to the Alien Property Custodian in Washington asking that the approximately $1,000,000 in drafts from foreign banks in enemy countries standing to their credit at the outbreak of the War be placed in a special fund and credited to them instead of going into a general pool.

Monogram Sets a 1941-42 Budget Of $5,000,000

Monogram has plans for the production and delivery of 34 features for the 1942-43, it was disclosed at a sales meeting of the company's franchise holders at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, last weekend. In addition there will be eight "Rough Riders" and eight "Range Busters" westerns with a possibility of a third western series.

The features will be classed in four groups, produced at various costs and will include four top pictures, of a calibre never before released by the company; six pictures in the second group; 12 pictures in the third group and 12 in the fourth group. Budgets will not only be increased from $3,500,000 to $5,000,000 on the new season product, but will be upped $1,000,000 for the balance of this year's program. No titles were released to the press at the convention.

Steve Broidy, general sales manager, said Monogram sales so far on the 1941-42 program exceeded the entire sales of 1940-41 and added that the company for the first five months of the current fiscal year, starting July 1st, showed a profit, before taxes, of $101,000, with indications toward $250,000 for the year.

Among the subjects discussed at the meeting were plans for the special handling and exploiting of the John Boles picture, "Road to Happiness" and a trade-paper campaign to acquaint exhibitors with the timeliness of the Monogram product.

Executives Attend

Besides the franchise holders, those who attended the meetings were Trem Carr, Monogram studio head; George Weeks, producer; Steve Brody, of the DeLuxe Laboratories and a member of Monogram's board of directors, and Lloyd Lind, assistant sales manager.

Franchise holders were: W. B. Hurlbut, Detroit; Forrest Judd, Des Moines; Henri Elman, Chicago; John W. Mangham, Atlanta, chairman of the franchise holders committee and President of Monogram Southern Exchanges, operating Atlanta, New Orleans, Charlotte and Memphis; Lou Fiddler, Denver; Henry Berkson, Buffalo; Ben Nathanson, Dallas; Sol Francis, Omaha; John Francone, Dallas; Nate Sodikan, Albany; Bill Onie, Cincinnati; Nate Schultz, Cleveland, and Herman Rifkin, Boston.

National Theatres Meeting

A conference of all divisional heads of National Theatres, of which Fox West Coast is part, was held last week, with Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres, and Charles P. Skouras, president of FWC, presiding. Represented at the meeting were Fox-Intermountain, Fox Midwest, Fox Michigan, Fox Wisconsin and the Evergreen State Amusement Company.

RCA Contract Closed

Five Paramount-affiliated theatres in Florida have contracted for new RCA Photophone sound equipment. Affected by the contracts are the 1,100-seat Victory, the 800-seat Garden, and the 800-seat Seminole, all in Tampa; the 800-seat Ritz, in Winter Haven; and the 800-seat Roxy in St. Petersburg.

ASCAP Payments Up to $3,500,000

The board of directors of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, authorized a final quarterly dividend in New York last week which, according to present indications, will amount to between $800,000 and $850,000. Final computation has not been completed but it is estimated that the dividend will make a total of approximately $3,500,000 distributed by ASCAP for 1941 as compared with $4,500,000 for 1940.

Meanwhile, the Society signed an agreement with Station WWL, Columbia Broadcasting System outlet in New Orleans. Studebaker Lucas, attorney for ASCAP in that city, announced the deal on Monday, reporting that other local network affiliates, WSMB of NBC-Red, WDSU of NBC-Blue, and WNOE of Mutual, are still negotiating.

Pittsburgh Film Competition

Offering competition to film houses in Pittsburgh, the Gardens, owned by Harris Amusements, which also operates seven films theatres, opened a 16 performance stay with "Ice Follies" on Christmas Day and expects to gross $10,000. Following the "Follies", The Gardens will present a schedule that includes professional tennis matches, hockey, collegiate basketball, boxing and ice skating. In April, the annual rodeo will come to the amusement center, to be followed by a roller derby.

"Icecapades," owned by the Arena Managers Association, headed by John H. Harris, grossed $78,000 in an 11-show engagement recently at The Garden.

Three Firms Incorporate

In Albany, N. Y., three new concerns were incorporated to do business in New York state and another filed papers of dissolution, according to Michael F. Walsh, Secretary of State. New concerns were:

Adro Productions, Inc., 1,000 shares, by Arthur Leff, M. D. Bober and Sally Rubin, 52 William Street, filed by George L. Cohen; Kafra Theatre Corp., by E. M. Phair, Sylvia Denmark and Gladys Barnett, New York, was filed by Kupfer, Silberfeld, Nathan and Danziger, 29 Broadway; and Hall-Dell Productions, Inc., by W. E. Jordan, Barclay Shaw and Sara Gilbert, New York, was filed by Chadbourne, Hunt, Jaeckel and Brown, same address.

Papers of dissolution were filed on behalf of North American Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., New York, through The Co Newark Opera House, Newark, N. J.

Honor Midwest Chiefs of RKO

Ned E. Depinet, RKO vice-president, and Andy Smith, RKO sales manager, attended. Johny Jones, of Jones, Linick and Schaefer, was toastmaster, and introduced J. J. Donahue, Paramount Chicago branch manager, J. E. Flynn, MGM central division manager; Eddie Grossman, Isle Theatre, Aurora, Ill; Sam Meyers, operator of the Teatro del Lago, Wilmette, Ill; Clyde Eckhardt, 20th Century-Fox Chicago branch manager; Jack Kirsch, president of the Allied Theatres of Illinois; Andy Smith, Ned E. Depinet and Walter Branson, as speakers. Sam Gorelick was the recipient of a framed testimonial of congratulations, presented by William Weinshenker, president of the Reelfellows Club.

The guests of honor were given travelling clocks, and the announcement was made that the net proceeds of the affair would be donated to the American Red Cross.

Among the out of town visitors were RKO branch managers, Herb Greenblatt, Pittsburg; Morris Lefkow, Indianapolis, and Arch Schmitz, Milwaukee.

Pascal To Sign With United Artists

Gabriel Pascal announced in Hollywood last Thursday that he expects to sign a deal shortly for release of three pictures through United Artists. Mr. Pascal's projected deal for distribution via RKO, recently announcer, failed to terminate, it is understood.

The films include "Arms and the Man," by George Bernard Shaw, for which Ginger Rogers and Carey Grant have been announced; "The Millionairess," and "Snow Goose."

Nelson Eddy Concert Set

The first concert of Nelson Eddy's winter tour will take place in San Diego, Calif., on February 2. The MGM star will finish work in "I Married an Angel," in which he is co-starred with Jeannette MacDonald, about the first of the year, and will then take a vacation. He will tour the west during February and will make his first eastern appearance in Washington, D. C.

Dunn Reports from Shanghai

Harold Dunn, far eastern supervisor for Warners, has advised the home office that he is in Shanghai, China. Mr. Dunn's whereabouts was not known when the war started and at that time it was believed he was in Tokio.

Altec-Intermountain Deal

Altec has closed a servicing deal with the Intermountain Theatres circuit, of Salt Lake City, for the Capitol, Studio, Utah, and Victory, of that city, and for the Orpheum, of Twin Falls, Idaho.

The Subject: MOTION PICTURE AND COMEDY'S PART IN THE WAR EFFORT

"Americans are never too busy to laugh. In the middle of the greatest national emergency, they can still go to the movies and laugh. And when they come out, they're tougher and harder to lick."

"My talents are like those of Einstein. He's got that head of hair. I have the schnozzle. And nobody understands him either!"

"If I had more education, I could be a script writer. But I never got past the fourth grade. The teachers was prejudiced. They favored the kids under twenty."

"I'm ripe for making a speech. I just got through with "You're In The Army Now". Top sergeants all over the joint. They made me shoot off everything but my mouth!"

"My new picture "You're In The Army Now" is great. You ought to see it. Everyone ought to see it. The whole world ought to see it. How they will adore me!"

"This is my message. Keep studying, keep your nose to the grindstone and you'll end up like me. You have been warned!"

MPTOA VOTES FOR UNITY, KIRSCH, OF ALLIED URGES IMMEDIATE ACTION

MPTOA Convention May Be Postponed Because of War; Connecticut Allied Unit Polls Exhibitors on Decree Selling

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America may not hold its annual convention—because of the war. This possibility was admitted by Edward L. Kuykendall, its president, in New York last week after the Chicago "unity" meeting, and prior to departure for his Columbus, Mississippi, home.

Mr. Kuykendall, added, apropos of the meeting, that the local units had turned in most of their votes on pledges made by him at the meeting, and all were favorable, indicating the whole organization would accede in actions to be taken by the Motion Picture Industry Conference Committee, formed at the Chicago affair.

Meetings of the national board of directors may take the place of the annual convention, Mr. Kuykendall said, adding he would consult the directors shortly.

Meanwhile, in Chicago, Jack Kirsch, temporary chairman of the MPICC, mentioned above, called upon its subcommittee in charge of institutional advertising and good-will activities, to begin their work immediately, remarking: "Let's not wait for the next meeting. Let's get in our licks while they are most needed."

Mr. Kirsch added: "The trade papers reflect the devastating effect on theatre attendance of the entry of this country into the war. Maybe this is a temporary condition and will right itself. But, coming on top of the pre-holiday slump, it is particularly severe. It is not a good thing for the national morale for the people to neglect amusement and recreational pursuits and spend too much time at the radio listening to sombre accounts of the war."

Kuykendall Expects Approval by All

Noting no dissent thus far, in reaction of MPTOA units, to the pledges of support, made in Chicago two weeks ago, to the Motion Picture Industry Conference Committee, Edward Kuykendall, MPTOA president, said in New York last week that the replies coming from large and affiliated circuits showed over-all industry approval, inasmuch as independent exhibitor units have already approved.

Mr. Kuykendall added he expected the first concern of the MPICC to be a meeting in January at which it should elect a permanent chairman, a full-time secretary, ascertain how it will be financed, and define subjects amenable under Point Five of the "unity" proposals, covering internal adjustments at the complaint of any branch of the industry.

Connecticut Unit Dislikes Decree

Approximately 98 per cent of independent exhibitors in Connecticut oppose the decree, and desire a return to the previous selling system, the Allied unit of that state asserts, after a poll.

In a letter to Abram F. Myers, National Allied general counsel, the executive secretary of the unit, Maxwell Alderman, said: "The main objections of the independent exhibitors indicate that the consent decree retained all of the evils of the old block booking system without offering any relief; that shorts and newsreels were forced upon the independent exhibitor, together with the forcing of prior blocks of pictures as a condition precedent to the purchasing of subsequent blocks; that under the consent decree no provision has been made for any cancellation privilege, whereas under the old system, many contracts contained a cancellation privilege of anywhere from 10 to 20 per cent."

The exhibitors, according to the letter, suggest that an "alternative plan be evolved whereby we return to the old block buying, which should carry with it a reasonable cancellation privilege on all groups of pictures without any strings attached, and the elimination of the forcing of shorts and newsreels."

SPORTS COMPETE WITH THEATRES

Any slack business at the box office which Milwaukee county exhibitors may have experienced during the past six months might possibly be explained in attendance figures covering high school football games and park sport activities.

Attendance at Milwaukee high school football games for 1941 totaled 75,977, an increase of nearly 2,000 over last year, despite bad weather and several postponements.

Of interest to exhibitors is the fact that night football accounted partly for the increase with these games, drawing 35,480 persons, nearly 1,000 more than last year.

Up to the end of September, cash receipts from all park sports activities totaled $335,792, as compared with $311,949 at the corresponding period in 1940, according to Jerome C. Dretzka, executive secretary of the Milwaukee county park commission. Golf fees showed one of the biggest gains, totaling $18,840 compared with $13,475.

In November, however, the picture had reversed so completely that only 1,330 permits were issued, a drop from the 1,887 issued in November, 1940. War activities are believed responsible for this drop since good golfing weather prevailed all fall.

National Allied's "Letter To Santa"

"Johnny Exhibitor," writing Santa Claus through the medium of a National Allied States Association bulletin to members (and the press) desired the following national victory; industry unity through success of the MPICC; an "acceptable substitute" for the decree's selling system; abolition of the decree arbitration system's appeal board, or change of its personnel; a ceiling for film rentals, and fair dealing.

"Johnny" complained about the trend in film rentals, at some length, thus:

"My buddies and I are genuinely alarmed by the ever-increasing film rentals demanded by the distributors. A few years ago a spokesman told a Congressional Committee that film rentals averaged only 25% of the expense of theatre operation. We were frightened when the distributors asked 30% and 35% on percentage engagements. We were shocked when this reached 40%, paralyzed when the distributors asked 50% and even 75% for a few special attractions. We are afraid the day will come when we can no longer earn a profit and we will have to relinquish our theatres to the distributors.

"So Santa, please give us a ceiling on film rentals that will assure us a fair profit. We hope this can be accomplished without governmental action. All that is needed is vision on the part of the producer-distributors who must realize the inevitable consequences of profiteering when the country is at war. They should, for their own protection, view the rentals being currently demanded in the light of their reported earnings and then consider the impression which these will create in the minds of officials charged with preventing inflation."

Entertainment Gets Behind Bonds, Stamps

Not only are major film companies offering bonuses to employees in defense bonds and stamps, theatres throughout the country, without coordination, merely resultant from individual inspiration, are offering defense stamps to patrons in lieu of change.

They urge acceptance of the idea by voice—the cashier—by placards in boxoffices, and by special screen trailers.

Thus, the Rialto, New York, by such placard and trailer, asks customers:

"Do your share—ask for your change in Defense stamps."

The new policy, as of last week, is meeting "enthusiastic response," the Rialto management asserted. On Saturday alone, the theatre sold $137 of stamps.

Sidney Lust's chain of neighborhood theatres in Maryland and the District of Columbia is pursuing the same policy.

Cleveland exhibitors are cooperating with special Christmas holiday childrens' matinees, in which they buy defense stamps for ten cents offer them as admissions.

The staff of the RKO Chicago exchange pledged purchase of approximately $100 worth of stamps each week, on a payroll allotment plan.

The annual dinner-dance of Loew circuit managers in New York last week became a Defense Bond rally, when executives such as Nicholas Schenck, president, and others, donated $100 bonds as door prizes.

Heads of theatrical unions met in New York's Lambs Club last week to form plans for plugging stamps and bonds purchase, via performers' routines.

The Treasury Department also last week, revived the First World War method of selling bonds: the "four minute" men speakers, who will be of national prominence, and will talk over networks and local radio stations.

It is thought exhibitors will shortly ask, or offer, their stages for such messages.

Paramount Signs McDonald

Frank McDonald, director, has been signed by Paramount producers William Pine and William C. Thomas to a three picture contract. His first assignment is "Wildcat."

DISTRIBUTORS AND EXHIBITORS IN HOT DEBATE WITH APPEAL BOARD

Appeal Board Calls Conference "In Chambers" to Clarify Wording of Previous Ruling; Clearance Award Questioned

To explain the meaning of a decision already on the record the Appeal Board of the motion picture arbitration tribunals on Wednesday, December 17th, for the first time, summoned all parties to a case to its chambers in the RCA Building, New York.

The meeting was described as "strictly off the record." It was authoritatively reported however that the board and attorneys for both the consenting distributors and the exhibitors involved engaged in long and animated discussion of what the board meant in its decision on the clearance complaint of the Esquire theatre, Great Neck, N. Y.

There was hot debate too, it was said, over the regularity of the special conference called in chambers to explain part of the award. The Esquire decision, the Appeal Board's twelfth, was dated December 5th and reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on December 13th

Called Irregular

Attorneys pointed out that although post decision conferences sometimes take place between judge and attorneys in regular court proceedings, to smooth out disputed points or explain the language of an award, it is somewhat unusual in an arbitration proceeding. They also pointed to Section XVIII of the rules of arbitration in the consent decree which prescribes the course of proceedings subsequent to a decision of the Appeal Board.

Section XVIII provides that "within ten days after the decision of the Appeal Board has been filed with the clerk of the tribunal the Appeal Board may reopen the proceeding for the purpose of correcting inadvertent errors."

It also stipulates that "unless the Appeal Board remands the proceeding to the Tribunal "or reopens the proceeding, as provided by the decree, its decision" shall become the final award and shall become binding on all parties ten days after it is filed with the Clerk of the tribunal.

Attorneys at the meeting on Wednesday, it was said, argued that the board should have formally reopened the Esquire case under Section XVIII rather than calling the parties together for an informal discussion of the opinion and its wording.

At issue in the Esquire decision, it was reported was the meaning to be implied from the section of the opinion which said:

"The maximum clearances which may be granted, in licenses hereafter entered into by the said five distributors, to the Playhouse over the Beacon, Manhasset and Little Neck, to the Beacon over the Manhasset and Little Neck, and between the Manhasset and Little Neck, shall be sufficiently short in point of time so that the right of the Squire to exhibit pictures 14 days after the last playdate at the Playhouse shall not be restricted in any way."

The scope of the phrase "in any way" was said to have raised a question in the minds of some parties to the case as to its effect on future contract bargaining. A distributor sought an interpretation and the Appeal Board, admitting to the possibility of some ambiguity called the conference, it was reported.

The Appeal Board refused to make any statement on what transpired at the meeting or what it had ruled in respect to interpretation of its own award.

It was reported, however, that Van Vechten Veeder, chairman of the Appeal Board and his colleagues George W. Alger, and Albert W. Putnam indicated in their conversations with the lawyers that the opinion was to be interpreted as meaning "just what it said." The phrase "in any way," it was declared, applies to any future clearances between the theatres in the case which might tend to negate the 14 day maximum awarded the Squire.

The Board was unwilling, it was said, to call the case back under section XVIII for an amended decision elaborating on the meaning of "in any way." Also it declined to deliver an opinion as to what distributors should do or not do to comply with the award.

Certain of the distributors, it was reported, were of the impression that the Esquire award interfered with their rights under the paragraph in Section VIII of the consent decree which states:

"Nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to restrict, and no award made in any arbitration under this section shall restrict, the exhibitor's right to license for any theatre any run which he is able to negotiate with any distributor, nor the distributors right to license for any theatre any run which it desires to grant."

All Parties Summoned

Although this is the first time that the Appeal Board has summoned all parties to a case to conference, it is reported that it has delivered explanations of its awards to attorneys, for both distributors and exhibitors, on several occasions. The instances were described as informal interpretations of language or definition of terms in a decision and usually involved only an exchange of correspondence.

Such a proceedure is not unusual in regular court cases, attorneys said. A spokesman for the American Arbitration Association said however, that is has never been the practice, either in the Association's 14 years of experience in administering commercial and industrial arbitrations or with the motion picture arbitration system for an arbitrator to deliver an informal opinion on his opinion.

The entire Portland, Ore., clearance schedule was altered this week in an arbitration award agreed to by all parties. The New York tribunal received its 30th case and at Philadelphia the Colonial theatre, Phoenixville, Pa., withdrew its clearance complaint.

Portland

The Portland clearance agreement, between Paramount, RKO and Warners, William Graeper, complainant, and half a dozen intervenors, was entered in the record in the form of a consent award by Irving Rand, arbitrator. He is a Portland attorney.

Under its terms the clearance after first run Portland theatres is cut in half, from 91 to 42 days, and the clearance of all subsequent runs materially reduced. The agreement and subsequent award was reached after Mr. Graeper had withdrawn in November his clearance demand in behalf of the Egyptian theatre, and then, at the request of Warners agreed with the other parties to reopen the case. This permitted formal entry of the new clearance scale as an arbitration award.

Product from the three distributors involved will now be available to second run theatres 42 days after the end of the first run or after the end of the third week of first run, which ever date is earliest. Mr. Graeper's complaint had protested a 95 day clearance imposed on his second run Egyptian.

Third run theatres will receive product 14 days after seconds; fourth run 14 days after third; and fifth run seven days after fourth run. The award does ont apply to pictures which had completed their first run at the date of its entry.

Loew's, Inc., named in the original complaint was dismissed from the action by agreement while 20th Century-Fox was dropped by reason of affiliation with the Fox West Coast circuit. The long list of intervenors included the majority of Portland houses and the award is expected to affect every theatre in the area.

Among the intervenors were Fox West Coast, the Hollywood, and Oriental theatres, the Paraport Leasing Corporation for the Paramount theatre, and the Multinomah Theatre Corporation, Orpheum and Liberty theatres.

New York

New York's 30th arbitration demand was filed this week by the Coy Operating Company asking for a specific run for the Savoy Theatre, Jamaica, Long Island. The complaint entered under Section X by Daniel A. Weber, attorney, names RKO, Paramount, and 20th Century-Fox.

The Savoy charges that Fox and RKO have refused to give it second run pictures, licensing them instead to the Skouras Jamaica theatre. Paramount, it asserts, refuses second run to the Savoy in order to favor Loew's Hillside theatre. The complaint, in accord with the terms of Section X, declares that such refusal is based on preferential status afforded the theatres because of their circuit membership.

Philadelphia

Lewen Pizor and Herman Coane, operators of the Colonial theatre in Phoenixville, Pa., on Friday withdrew their clearance compaint against the Big Five. The action, Philadelphia Case No. 14, was reported on November 15th. It asked a reduction from 28 to 21 days after first run Philadephia theatres.

Indianapolis

Indianapolis' first and only arbitration case will have its first hearing January 7 with Paul G. Davis, Indianapolis attorney, as arbitrator. Hearing date was set for December 17th, then postponed. The case is a some run complaint

AAA JOURNAL REPORTS COSTS

Costs of the motion picture arbitration system are analyzed in the mid-winter Arbitration Journal, quarterly review published by the American Arbitration Association. The figures cited are within a few cents of those reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on November 22nd.

Attorneys were hired for 86 per cent of the cases heard in the first six months, the AAA reported. Exclusive of legal fees each complaint, on an average cost exhibitors $58.23 and distributors $29.64. The figures cover only filing costs and items assessed in an award.

by Charles G. Bowles of Elizabethtown, Ky., who is building a theatre there. He names the Big Five and Crescent Amusement Company.

Kansas City

In the fourth case at Kansas City brought by J. E. Pennington, for the Cozy Theatre, Topeka, Kan., Loews' Inc., has filed a list of parties that might be affected by the award.

Named by MGM are the Co-ed, Kaw, Cozy, Glen and Ritz.

Hearing of the third case before the Kansas City office, Arbitration tribunal, brought by D. R. Clifford, for the Louis theatre, St. Joseph, Mo. has been set, after postponements, for Dec. 29th. Henry M. Shugart is the arbitrator.

Chicago

First hearings of the Don Theatre, Downers Grove, Ill. clearance case were heard at Chicago on December 22nd. Arbitrator Thomas C. McConnell refused motions for dismissal on the part of Alvin Landis, attorney for the Westmount Theatre, Westmount, Ill., intervenors, who argued that the arbitrator could not give an award under the consent decree. The case has been set over until December 29th. This is Mr. McConnell's second arbitration. He also heard the Portage case.

Chicago's 12th case, the demand of the Benjamin and Albert Bartelstein for reduced clearance for the Anneta theatre, Cicero will be heard December 30th by James A. Sprowl, Chicago attorney.

Samuel Meyer has filed a brief asking dismissal of his Teatre del Lago, and circuit, from the clearance complaint of the Alcyon theatre, Highland Park, Chicago Case No. 9.

Washington

At the conclusion of hearings on the Bayne theatre, Virginia Beach case at the Washington tribunal on December 11th and 12th both sides asked permission from John E. Laskey, arbitrator to present written depositions from patrons in the Norfolk area. They were given until December 20th to do so.

Pittsburgh

Testimony in David Green's demand for "better clearance" for his Beacon theatre Pittsburgh concluded last Wednesday. Felix A. Jenkins, general counsel, appeared for 20th Century-Fox while J. Berkowitz represented Warners.

Flood with Columbia

Harry E. Weiner, Columbia branch manager in Philadelphia, announced the addition of Joseph Flood to the booking staff, now giving the exchange four bookers. Mr. Flood has been associated with several independent exchanges in Philadelphia.

Century, Moses Close Contract

Century Circuit in New York has closed a deal with Charles Moses whereby four of the latter's houses, the Victory, Lane and Strand theatres in Staten Island, and the St. George in Brooklyn, will be booked by the theatre chain.

Warner Employee Publishes Book

Blaynay F. Mathews, director of plant protection at Warner Bros.' Burbank studio, is the author of "The Spectre of Sabotage," which is being published by Lyman House.

RKO Offers Theatres To Junior Americans

RKO Theatres in metropolitan New York have turned over the facilities of their houses for every Saturday morning to the Junior Americans of the United States, Inc., a non-profit organization formed to aid in the recreational development of young people under 21 years of age and to combat juvenile delinquencey.

The group will bring to youths of various communities a recreational program by radio, the theatre screen and lobby display. The plan will function wherever the neighborhood theatre may be used as a headquarters, operating under paid, resident and profestional supervision.

Van Wagner New RKO Comptroller

George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, announced Monday that the board of directors of the corporation had approved the recommendation of the management that all accounting and auditing activities of the organization be unified under the supervision of one person who would become the comptroller of the corporation and all subsidiary companies. This continues the policy recently inaugurated of streamlining the company's setup and operations. Mr. Schaefer also announced that the board had approved the appointment of Garrett Van Wagner as comptroller.

Mr. Van Wagner has been connected with the organization for approximately nine years, first as a representative of the Irving Trust Company, the trustee in the reorganization proceedings, and subsequently assistant to the president and an assistant treasurer.

Mr. Schaefer also announced that Robert H. Dann and William F. Whitman had been elected assistant secretaries of the RKO parent company.

Hartford Company Forms

Certificate of organization has been filed with the Connecticut Secretary of State for The Eastwood Theatre Company, Incorporated, of East Hartford, naming Peter Perakos of New Britain president and treasurer, Joseph Quittner, of New York City, vice-president and secretary, and Ruth Hoffman of New Haven, assistant-secretary.

Barron Party Held

Carter T. Barron, Loew's zone manager in Washington, was host at an annual party Saturday night, December 20th, at the Hotel Shoreham for the heads of Loew theatres operated under his general direction. In attendance, with their wives, were managers of houses in Harrisburg, Reading, Wilmington, Baltimore, Richmond, Norfolk and Washington.

Charles Crickmore Reelected

Charles C. Crickmore, chairman of the Seattle Board of Theatre Censors, was reelected president of the Stage Employees' Union, Local 15, in Seattle, Wash. Ernest Clark was reelected financial secretary for the 26th term, and Basil Gray was reelected business agent for the 18th term.

More in Films Granted Bonuses

Paramount, Monogram, Columbia, Agfa Ansco, the Columbia Broadcasting System and various theatre circuits throughout the country gave bonuses or increases of one kind or another, adding to those previously reported.

A Christmas bonus was distributed last Friday to all Paramount home office employes whose salary does not exceed $75 weekly, employes receiving a week's salary up to a maximum of $50, in addition to their regular weekly salary check.

A cost-of-living bonus also was distributed to all home office employes with salaries up to and including $100 weekly, this bonus being four per cent of present salaries retroactive to July 7th, 1941.

Paramount exchange employes also received a Christmas bonus.

Other Companies

Charles P. Skouras, in Los Angeles, Tuesday, announced distribution of $96,000 in Christmas checks to Fox West Coast Theatres' employes, including those who have left the company to join the armed forces. This exceeds by $40,000 a similar disbursement made last year.

In an address to the organization, at the Los Angeles Ambassador Hotel, Mr. Skouras said, "The first duty of every member of our organization is to our government.

Columbia Pictures gave a $25 defense bond as a Christmas bonus to all home office and exchange employes who have been with the company six months or more and whose salaries do not exceed $50 weekly.

Monogram gave bonuses in the form of defense bonds and stamps to employes of the home office and the New York, Philadelphia and Washington exchanges.

Columbia announced in Hollywood last week that cash bonuses in ratio to years of service would be paid to employes volunteering for military service.

In Binghamton, N. Y., approximately $171,000 in Christmas bonuses was distributed among 3,281 employes of Binghamton and Johnson City plants of the General Aniline and Film Corp., John E. Mack, president, announced.

About $155,000 was distributed to 3,000 workers of the Agfa Ansco film plants in Binghamton and the remainder will go to 281 employes of the Ozalid Products Division in Johnson City.

CBS Increase

All Columbia Broadcasting System employes earning up to $75 weekly have been granted automatic increases ranging from $104 to $221 annually, it was announced last week by William S. Paley, president. The increases will go into effect January 4th and affect all employes except those covered by union agreements and those who have received salary adjustments since October 1st.

Each employe earning no more than $75 weekly will receive ten per cent of the first $30 of his salary; 7½ per cent of the next $10. Thus a person earning $25 will receive an additional $2.50 weekly, while one earning $50 to $75 will receive an additional $4.25 weekly.

Managers and office employes of the Warner theatres in the Philadelphia zone received a Christmas bonus equivalent to two weeks' pay.

The Interboro Circuit of New York, of which Samuel Strausberg is president, gave a Christmas bonus in the form of defense bonds or stamps instead of cash this year.

In Chicago the Essaness and H. and E. Balaban circuits also distributed bonuses in the form of defense bonds and stamps.

Variety Tents In Kansas City, Detroit, Elect

Variety Club elections were held this week in Kansas City, Detroit, Atlanta and Boston.

H. J. Griffith has been elected chief barker of the Kansas City Variety Club. Other officers are: Fred Meyn, first assistant; A. H. Cole, secretary, and W. G. McKinney, treasurer. Directors include the officers and Charles Potter, Russell Borg, R. R. Biechele, C. A. Schultz, O. K. Mason and Lester Durland.

In Detroit David M. Idzal, managing director of the Fox theatre, has been elected chief barker of the Variety Club for 1942. Chosen first and second assistant chief barkers, respectively, were John R. McPherson, manager of National Screen Service, and Earl J. Hudson, president of United Detroit Theatres.

Re-elected were David Newman, theatrical attorney, as property master, and John L. Saxe, treasurer of Monogram Pictures, dough guy. Both have served since the founding of the tent.

The Atlanta Variety has elected the following officers for 1942:

Harry G. Ballance, Twentieth Century-Fox district manager, chief barker; E. E. Whitaker, district manager of Lucas & Jenkins Theaters, first assistant chief barker; Willis J. Davis, Lucas & Jenkins executive, second assistant chief barker; Paul Wilson, Twentieth Century-Fox Atlanta branch manager, property master, and R. B. Wilby, president of Wilby-Kincey Theatres, dough guy.

In addition to these officers the following will also serve on the board: Dave Prince, RKO; Jeff Davis, UA; Jimmy Harrison, Wilby-Kincey circuit; Sid Reams, president of Theatrical Printing Co., and Dick Ford, Twentieth Century-Fox.

The Boston Variety Club has elected four to serve three-year terms on the board of trustees. They are: Joseph Levinson, Paul Baron, Murray Weiss and Harry Rogovin.

The local club will sponsor the first night of the "Icecapades" on December 29th at the Boston Garden, the proceeds of which will go to the club's charity fund.

Reel Fellows Elect Van Dyke

A. M. Van Dyke, of Twentieth Century-Fox, has been elected president of the Reelfellows Club of Chicago, an organization composed of film salesmen working out of Chicago exchanges. He was formerly secretary.

Other new officers are Nat Nathanson, vice-president, and Frank Young, secretary, both of United Artists, and Al Kent, Universal, sergeant-at-arms. Robert Frink was reelected treasurer. W. E. Weinshenker, former president, was elected a trustee as was Harry Goldman.

The club's annual dinner dance, originally scheduled for January 30, has been moved to February 6 so as not to conflict with the President Roosevelt Birthday Balls.

Motion Picture Associates in Philadelphia have decided upon a testimonial dinner to be held next March in honor of Jay Emanuel, founder of the local group. The Associates also donated $50 to the charity fund of the Variety Club and announced that a check of $500, as the result of insurance, had been given to the widow of the late William J. Heenan, Paramount salesman.

'Time' Receives Injunction Against MGM War Short

Judge John Bright in the New York district court on Monday signed on application from the March of Time an order against Loew's, Inc., and Warwick Productions, Inc., ordering them to show cause why they should not be restrained from publicly exhibiting a film entitled "War Clouds in the Pacific," compiled by the National Film Board of Canada, unless scenes contained in that film, alleged to be the property of March of Time, were removed. Loew's on Tuesday agreed to a temporary injunction.

In announcing the action which his company had taken against Loew's Inc. and Warwick Productions, Louis de Rochemont, producer of The March of Time said: "Exclusive scenes recently taken by our cameramen in Japan, the Philippines, Hong Kong, and Hawaii are used in this film. Since the same film material is included in a special March of Time release, "Battlefields of the Pacific," which was given to our own distributor, RKO Radio Pictures Inc. last week, we have no choice but to seek an injunction.

"During the past three years," Mr. de Rochemont said, "upon request we have frequently given the National Film Board of Canada scenes from The March of Time films for use in Canadian Government defense pictures. However it has always been with the distinct understanding that such pictures were for exclusive Canadian distribution or for the governmental war archives"

Los Angeles Police Draft Stage Show Rules

The Los Angeles police commission proposed regulation of stage shows and theatre performances other than motion pictures, in the draft of a local ordinance sent to the city council last week.

The proposed measure, discussed by the council last Thursday, would empower the police, under the permit section, to take necessary steps "for the maintenance of public order, the promotion of public morals and the orderly conduct of such places."

Los Angeles councilmen expressed the view that film houses should be exempt from all regulation inasmuch as the police now have the power to seize salacious films.

Linda Rivas Film Set

Linda Rivas, daughter of General Manuel Rivas, Ambassador to the United States from San Salvador during the first World War, will make her film debut in RKO Radio's "Sing Your Worries Away," a film musical with Bert Lahr and Buddy Ebsen.

Baker, Edgerton Club Chiefs

R. W. Baker has been elected president, and George W. Edgerton, secretary and treasurer, of the Reel Fellows Club, Milwaukee, formed October 4th. The club is reported planning an all-industry meeting in Milwaukee, February.

Tashlin with Columbia

Frank Tashlin formerly of the Leon Schlesinger studios has joined Columbia Pictures' animated cartoon division. His first production, "The Fox and the Grapes," was recently completed and will be released next month.

British Producer Tells Importance of War Insurance

British Government insurance of property against war damage has enabled film producers in that country to continue operations, after hesitation in the early days of the war, according to I. Goldsmith, producer of "Hatter's Castle" for Paramount, who arrived in New York Monday, preceding the print of his picture, and then flew to the Coast for conferences with Paramount top officials, and others.

The British insurance, a little more than one year old has improved the production scene so, that seven pictures are now in work, Mr. Goldsmith said, adding that the rates were relatively reasonable, and that producers might have premiums refunded at the war's end. He also noted no damage to studios, except some at the Denham plant. In that instance, production ceased for only two days, he commented.

"Never has the theatre business been so big" in Britain, Mr. Goldsmith said, ascribing this to the need for escape from war, and to the population's inurement against the alarms of war.

Manpower Shortage

Lack of actors, technicians, and production material are main problems now, he asserted. the actors in Government service often refuse to leave it for "any sum," only coming when assured by their Government that the work is necessary, in the interest of national morale. The technicians have been called into the service of supply, and armed industry; and can only be procured for actual production. They may not be withdrawn from national service for the mere unchanneled employ of a producer, Mr. Goldsmith pointed out.

Mr. Goldsmith, producer of the recent Dr. A. J. Cronin novel, "The Stars Look Down," released here through MGM, will make his next picture for C. M. Woolf, British producer and head of General Film Distributors.

Apropos of the good theatre business in his country, the British producer said American companies had shared the prosperity. He insisted the financial arrangements made by them with the British Treasury, however they might "freeze" some American funds in Britain, nevertheless were regarded with envy, and the American film industry with jealousy, by other industries in Britain, who feel the film industry is especially the darling of British officialdom.

Mr. Goldsmith, mentioning a forthcoming picture for C. M. Woolf, said it might be made from Dr. Cronin's "The Grand Canary," several years old; and that he would like to make it in color.

He arrived in a convoy; he will fly back in a bomber.

Levine Made Booker

Sidney Levine has become booker at the Warner New Haven exchange. For eight years, he had been assistant booker there. He succeeds Victoria Cusanelli, who married and resigned. Jack Mullen takes Mr. Levine's former post.

Ritchey Closes Peru Deal

Norton V. Ritchey, Monogram's foreign sales manager, has wired from Peru to the New York office that he has closed a distribution deal with the Amauta Films Company, Peru.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Pre-Holiday Spurt

Though they plan a production holiday next Spring when it is intended to close the studios for six to eight weeks, British National, consistently most active of British production organizations have announced plans for another five pictures to follow the two in current production. They are varied in type and include drama, comedy and musicals.

In production at present for British National is "Let the People Sing" an adaptation of Priestley's original. Being given the finishing touch before trade show is Michael Powell's "One of Our Aircraft" which report suggests is likely to be one of the war's best pictures.

With these two finally complete, George Parish will put director Lance Comfort and producer Richard Vernon to work on "Children in Exile," a subject dealing with the evacuation of children from blitzed towns to country centres. In this a number of British National discoveries will appear. Rushes already shown indicate that some of these may well enter the sensational category. Two in particular, a couple of Cockney newsboys, are certain to make a hit.

Leslie Hiscott will produce and direct another, "Strangers at Sea," John Baxter will make another Priestley film based on "When We are Married." A comedy, as yet unselected will be produced. Arthur Lucan, the "Old Mother Riley" of stage radio and screen, one of the Ten Best in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S Poll, will be starred in another comedy. A musical will also probably be added.

Leslie Arliss, one of the industry's established scenarists and authors is now at work at Welwyn directing a film, "The Night Has Eyes," a thriller in which Wilfred Lawson, James Mason and Mary Clare are in the leading roles. Joyce Howard and Tucker McGuire also are in the cast. Location work has already kept the unit for a fortnight on the Yorkshire Moors, where Gunther Krampf's camera is said to have captured some memorable pictures of moorland desolation and misty dawns.

Will Hay, another of the Ten Best Moneymakers, goes to work immediately on a new comedy for Ealing Studios. "The Ghost Steps Out," a tale of a British agent masquerading in Germany as a Nazi professor. Among the supporting cast is an Englishman, John Williams, who, it is stated, left the New York stage to come home and join the R.A.F.

Back to screen stardom goes this week Leslie Fuller, who, save for one or two lesser manifestations, has been absent from British pictures for some time. Maclean Rogers directs Leslie in "Front Line Kids," a subject which is inspired by the Blitzes, evacuation, and other juvenile problems provoked by the war. Fuller has the role of Head Porter in a West End Hotel.

Against the picturesque background of a Norwegian Village hall, both before and after the Nazi occupation, cameras have been turning this week on Paul Soskin's "The Day Will Dawn," which Harold French is directing at Denham with Hugh Williams and Deborah Kerr. The peace of pre-war Norway is recreated, with scenes of a village wedding, enlivened by real Norwegian folk dances and music. Later the impact of war is seen when the Nazi occupation begins, the swastika flutters from the flag staff and piles of "Mein Kampf" are on every table.

Another dramatic highlight of "The Day Will Dawn" has been shot during the past few days, and reconstructs a raid by British planes on a German submarine base on the coast of Norway. Deborah Kerr, according to Soskin, has turned in some of the most brilliant acting of her career, while notable performances have also been registered by Hugh Williams, Griffiths Jones, Francis L. Sullivan and Finlay Currie at the head of a cast of nearly 100 speaking parts. These include to date Roland Culver, Patricia Medina, Bernard Miles, Anthony Shaw, Barry O'Neill, George Merritt, Ronald Adam, Breni O'Rorke, George Woodbridge, D. J. Willams, Gus McNaughton, Beckett Bould, and George Street.

Elsewhere at the Denham Studios Leslie Howard continues work on "First of the Few" the screen story written around the life of Leslie "Spitfire" Mitchell. Howard and David Niven co-star. Newcomers to the cast this week have been Tony Edgar Bruce, who is cast as Lady Houston, and Derek de Marney, who has the role of "Jefferson" a character based on that of a former famous Captain of the Schneider Cup team.

Seven A.M. Calls

Luxury lives for the players in British films are things of the past, and will be for some time, it would seem. Leading actors and actresses who in more peaceful days were wont to quit the studios at late afternoon, and spend the rest of the night in the Savoy Grill or the Embassy, awaking next day to be whirled to the Studios in white Rolls Royces, can do that no more. Petrol shortage and transport restrictions have changed all that.

At more than one studio, now, the stars sleep in their dressing rooms and are awakened by a thump on the door at seven a. m. from the firewatching gang. Breakfast in the canteen, with studio police or the first shift plasterers, as like as not, is as near they get to damask pillows and tea in bed . . . The local pub rather than a Regent Street-night spot sees them after blackout, and more than one, instead of mastering the complexities of the Konga can be seen in the saloon bar taking instructions from the local farmhands in scoring a double too on the dart board.

At Islington, "Big Hearted" Arthur Askey, another of Britain's Moneymaking Ten, is at work on "Backroom Boy" which Gainsborough subject is for release by General Film. With Maurice Ostrer in charge of the production and Edward Black direct producer, the film is in its fifth week. Askey has a new director in charge, this time, Herbert Mason.

"Backroom Boy" uses a lighthouse as setting for many of its adventures, adventures in which German agents, mannequins, shipwrecked sailors and bird watchers are used in the appropriate proportions.

Howard Busy

After many weeks of careful preparation and research, Leslie Howard, in his triple capacity of star, producer and director is now in full swing filming "The First of the Few" at Denham. This is an ambitiously planned pictorial biography of the late R. J. Mitchell, designer of the "Spitfire," presenting this highly dramatic life story of yet another great Empire figure on a broad canvas. In the role of Mitchell he is recreating the character of the man with all its human qualities against a lively background of eventful happenings in the sphere of aviation. The Schneider Cup disappointments and successes, culminating in the Trophy coming to Britain for all time, through Mitchell's Supermarine S.6, will have their proper places in the picture.

Co-starring with Howard is David Niven, now a Major in a Reconnaissance Unit, Rifle Brigade, and given special leave to appear in the Film. Two young actresses, both comparatively newcomers to the screen get chances opposite Howard and Niven in "First of the Few." Rosamund John, blue-eyed, red-haired and 27 years old, plays "Mrs. Mitchell." Anne Firth, whose only other film was a Ministry of Information short portrays Mitchell's secretary. Vickers-Armstrong, builders of the "Spitfire" who took over the former Supermarine Aviation Works where Mitchell was employed, have loaned hundreds of photographs from their extensive collection to assist in reconstruction of incidents in Mitchells professional life.

The famous "Supermarine S.6," the Mitchell designed seaplane which won the Schneider Trophy outright for Britain, has been brought out of its safe place of retirement, loaned to Leslie Howard by the Southampton Corporation and re-assembled at Denham. George Pickering, former associate of Mitchell contributed some hair-raising dives and loops in an old "Walrus," another amphibian with a pusher airscrew.

Rich pageantry highlighted the action last week on Twentieth-Century's latest production, "The Young Mr. Pitt" at Shepherd's Bush. On Lime Grove's biggest stage appeared the London Guildhall, draped in scarlet hangings, guild banners flashing from the high roof, armoured figures looming from the stone niches. Here Carol Reed staged the climax of the picture, the Lord Mayor's Banquet of 1805. Hundreds of guests filled the glittering tables, with here and there a red splash of alderman's robes among the silks and satins. Clustered pin-points of candlelight lit the great assembly. On the top table, beneath the massed banners, sat the Lord Mayor, the ex Lord Mayor, Lady Mayoress, Ambassadors, Admirals, Generals, Lord Chancellor, Sheriffs, Archbishop of Canterbury and important ladies of the land.

The focal point was Robert Donat as William Pitt. Trafalgar had been won and Pitt's task had been achieved. As guest of honour on this great day in 1805, Pitt was the saviour of Britain, the "Pilot who weathered the storm."

Approximately two weeks' work remains on the schedule before Maurice Ostrer and Edward Black can announce the completion of "The Young Mr. Pitt."

BRITISH DISTRIBUTORS SPLIT IN FLAT OR PERCENTAGE RENTAL WAR

Policy of Renters Society Is Undecided on Newest Clash with Exhibitors; Effect of U. S. Entry into War Feared

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Although so far no categoric formulation of policy on rentals has been adopted by the Kinematograph Renters' Society the indications are that circumstances are blowing up in the direction of a first class gale. Action taken already by the renters in regard to one particular exhibitor has provoked unsympathetic reaction from the C. E. A.

The question upon which the whole of the other revolved is briefly whether anything can or should be done to maintain the system of percentages for films as opposed to flat rentals. The indications are that disunities within the distributors' group itself stand in the way of an effective materialization of this idea. Some exhibitors see in the situation evidence that they hold the key to the problem, that they have the last word.

Flat Rentals Gaining

Although percentages have been for some time the established, though not the formalized, policy of the K.R.S., it is stated by K.R.S. members themselves that flat rentals are gaining an increasing hold throughout the country, that they are having a detrimental effect upon the renters' revenue, but equally that no immediate possibility of enforcing percentages generally is visible.

One leading American renter has stated categorically that the considerable increase in box office income during the last few months has meant that some renters hiring their films on a flat rate are getting only the equivalent of 5 per cent to 10 per cent rental.

As already recorded in these pages, an attempt has been made to prevent the rot extending by getting agreement amongst K.R.S. members that they will not sell on a flat basis to a certain exhibitor who has apparently broken down the percentage routine with more than one K.R.S. member. The case is, of course, individual, but it is being treated as a precedent. Endeavors to bar this particular exhibitor from trading on any but percentage terms have been countered by a defensive movement on the part of the C.E.A. who, at the moment of writing, have determined to approach the K.R.S. with a view to discussion and solution of the individual problem.

Determined to prevent the spread of the disease by sterilizing it on one particular sore, K.R.S. members recently endeavored to secure an agreement amongst themselves that they would not trade in this particular instance on any but a sharing terms basis. As already reported in Motion Picture Herald, no formalization of policy was adopted, no resolution put forward, the contention being that it would be contrary to the Constitution of the K.R.S. to impose provisos on the trading terms of its members. A "gentlemen's agreement" was considered and it was thought adopted. Within a week or two it was found that two of the "gentlemen" had failed to observe the agreement. Now it transpires that a third, like the other two, a leading American organization, has warned its K.R.S. fellows that unless the first two recalcitrants are brought to heel they may not consider themselves bound by any agreement, gentlemanly or otherwise.

The situation briefly is that the K.R.S. itself is not at the moment in a position to insure unity amongst its members on trading policy. A majority of renters are, of course, completely in favor of the sharing terms principle, but so far have been unable to bring all their fellows to heel. Certain among the K.R.S. members regard the situation as potentially serious. If, claimed one leading renter, a capitulation is made in this particular instance, then it will be a considerable defeat for the Society. As pointed out, if this first difficult customer gets away with it then other exhibitors, and still others, and then others, will follow suit, and the renters will find themselves faced with an entirely new and difficult trading situation.

K.R.S. members are quite alive to the essential fact that the situation would not have arisen if K.R.S. members themselves had not been willing to go against admitted K.R.S. policy and sell their films on a flat basis. In this particular instance it is pointed out that the exhibitor in question will be quite able to secure all the films he wants from three leading renters, who will supply him with approximately 150 films from which to select 52 weeks' programs.

No Ruling Likely

The difficulty arises, of course, from the pivotal fact that the K.R.S., as a Society, has always been against issuing formal instructions to its members on their trading policy. No formalization is likely, partly because of the difference of opinion, partly because of the impolitic nature of a ruling which might be interpreted as restraint of trade.

The C.E.A. are, nevertheless, alive to the manner and direction in which the situation is developing, and their protective action will not probably be confined to friendly talks with the renters. If the situation develops further approaches to the Board of Trade are not improbable.

Either way, the matter has, as already suggested, all the appearance of a potential fight.

Meanwhile, exhibitors are much alive to other dangers facing them on the horizons of the immediate future, dangers actual and potential; corollaries of the worsened war situation. Major problem, but one which is at present wrapped in obscurity, is that of product supply, as affected by the entry of the United States into the war. It is realized here that there will be inevitable and immediate repercussions on the Coast studios and that the production schedules of the majors must inevitably suffer. Without indication from across the Atlantic, they foresee a definite restriction of supplies, a restriction not only of productions themselves but also of the raw stock upon which they are imprinted.

Little is known as yet of Hollywood's future and the role which the industry will be called upon to play in its country's war effort. It is felt that since British production, despite the closeness of the war in which it has lived for the past two years, has not expired, it is likely that Hollywood production will not expire either. Nevertheless it is felt that the geographical position of California places it in a danger zone and it realizes that with bombings, restricted materials, and the enrollment of artists and technicians into the Forces, plus the diversion of much production work into a more definite war armor, the present flow of product cannot possibly be maintained.

Some concern here, too, is felt at the effects of the Japanese war on the Democracies upon the celluloid base situation. Raw stock is already at a minimum in this country, and it is felt that drastic readjustment of the whole situation will be necessary to fit the circumstances to the available raw product.

On the immediate home front the exhibitor has another problem, the general one of paper shortage. Already strict curtailment of posters and advertisements has been enforced, with consequent decreasing of the picture theatres' publicity outlet. Posters are now limited to 10 advertising any single program, and paper generally is rationed to the *n*th degree. Posters ordered before mid-November can still be used, but the future is doubtful since the poster printers are in possession of only the most limited stocks and have had no supplies for some months past. Animus is taken against the fact that the order imposing restrictions does not apply to the "live" theatre until February next. It is the larger cinema, rather than the smaller, which is hit since it can use more poster material than its lesser fellow.

The likelihood exists, too, that there will be a drastic restriction on the use of stills. Prospects are that the Board of Trade will prohibit the exhibition of stills or their distribution for other purposes than the most limited uses of the trade papers, et cetera. American renter interests endeavored to get a permit to import stills, but efforts have been made from the exhibitor side to prevent any privilege making the situation unequitable from the producer point of view. The fact is that the still will, in all probability, cease to exist, save in the most limited degree, until the war is over.

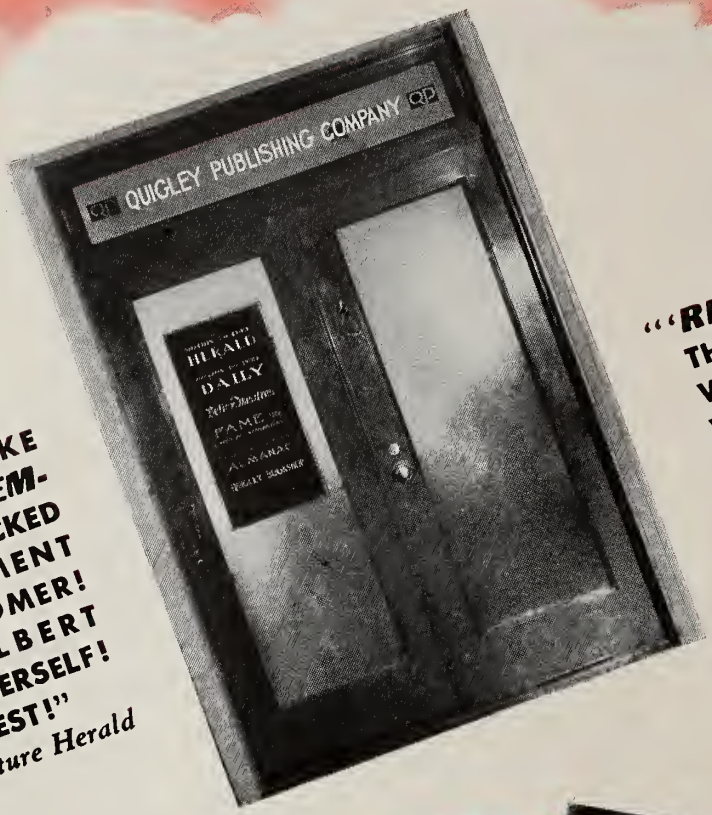
BRITISH EXHIBITORS REASSURED ON DRAFT

Following conversations between representatives of the CEA and the Ministry of Labour this week British exhibitors now are confident that all chief projectionists will be reserved. Those over 35 already are assured of not being called and under the new Government scheme it is expected that although not technically reserved those below 35 will have deferments.

The decision eases the personnel situation although the Government demands on women and the new female conscription plan will deplete the reserves available for substitute trainee labour.

Leaves PRC

Charles H. Miller has returned to Superior Pictures, Inc., Chicago office, resigning as manager of the Producers Releasing Corporation office in that city. George Topper, former exhibitor, succeeds him at PRC.



Lou Singer Promoted

Lou Singer has been appointed advertising manager at the Paramount Theatre, San Francisco. He had been treasurer. He succeeds David Richards, now studying law.

Wolfish Joins PRC

Mike Wolfish has become Producers Releasing Corporation booker and office manager at Buffalo. He had been RKO booker at Philadelphia.

'CORSICAN BROTHERS' TOP FIELD PROMOTIONS

Olsen and Johnson Startle the Audience with Screen Version of "Hellzapoppin'"

Official Washington took time out from war-time duties to attend the premiere of the Edward Small-United Artists production, "The Corsican Brothers," at Loew's Palace Theatre in the capital last Thursday, and this week brought two Christmas packages to New York in the gala openings on Thursday of Universal's "Hellzapoppin'" at the Rivoli, and "The Shanghai Gesture," Arnold Pressburger's first Hollywood-made film, at the Astor.

Celebrities and officials joined with 1,300 standees at the Palace in Washington for the opening of "Corsican Brothers," starring Lt. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., U.S.N. Highlight of the pre-opening campaign was the success of the "Mountain of Books," an idea, sponsored by the Women's Newspaper Club in the Capital. From 11 A.M. to 1 P.M., opening day, all persons donating books in good condition for soldiers and sailors, were admitted free to the theatre. The books were collected by two army trucks supplied by Fort Belvoir. Local newspapers, Washington's local radio station WWDC and Loew's Palace management cooperated in giving the affair widespread publicity. By opening night, the "Mountain of Books" had over 5,500 volumes in the lobby of the theatre.

Among those scheduled to attend the "Corsican" premiere were:

William S. Knudsen, Senator Hattie Caraway, General Charles W. Kutz, Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Lieutenant-Commander William Smedberg, Commander Olds, Lieutenant-Commander Norville Sharpe, Paul V. McNutt, Jesse Jones, Congressman Samuel Dickstein, Congressman Lex Green, Congressman Wilburn Cartwright and Congressman Jennings Randolph.

Also Robert Montgomery, Commander H. G. Sickel, Lieutenant-Commander Spitzel, Lieutenant-Commander Bronte, Tony Martin, John Ford, Captain G. B. Wilson, Lester Cowan, Captain Chapline, Sol Rosenblatt, Colonel Joe Phillips and Captain Harry Badt.

The picture, a United Artists release, was directed by Gregory Ratoff. George Bruce wrote the screen play, adapted from the famous Alexandre Dumas' story. Akim Tamiroff, J. Carroll Naish, H. B. Warner, John Emery, Henry Wilcox and Walter Kingsford are featured in the cast.

"Hellzapoppin" Debut

Olsen and Johnson planned a "Hollywood premiere to end all Hollywood premiere" for the opening of their Universal film, "Hellzapoppin" at the Rivoli Theatre in New York on Christmas Day. The two comics are currently starring in the new stage edition of their earlier antics, "Sons o' Fun," on Broadway. Celebrities were invited by Olsen and Johnson to arrive at the theatre in different types of vehicles, ranging from a high wheel bicycle to a 1910 bearcat Stutz auto. The climax was to be the arrival of the two stars themselves in a horse-drawn wagon-load of hay. While the luminaries were arriving, Olsen and Johnson stooges were to engage in legalized brands of insanities in front of the Rivoli. Fifteen sidewalk salesmen were given permission by the theatre management to establish pitch locations in the vicinity of the box office for the convenience of patrons who might experience a sudden need for neckties, razor blades, shoe strings, fruit juices or little dogs that run on wheels and run over.

The management persuaded Olsen and Johnson that it would not be practical to install a wild animal menagerie in the lobby of the theatre, one of the "great ideas" which the two thought up in connection with the picture premiere.

Celebrities scheduled to put in an appearance at the "Hellzapoppin" affair at their own risk, were Edna Mae Oliver, Merle Oberon, Hedy LaMarr, Governor Lehman, Mayor LaGuardia, Bob Hope, the Marx Brothers, Edward G. Robinson, Ned Sparks, Slim Summerville, Lewis Stone, Freddie Bartholomew, Leslie Howard, Tommy Manville, Rosalind Russell, Ida Lupino, Eddie Cantor and George Jessel.

"Shanghai" Bows

In contrast with the highjinks opening of the Olsen and Johnson picture, "The Shanghai Gesture," a United Artists release produced by Arnold Pressburger, bowed at the Astor Theatre in New York in dignified fashion. Phyllis Brooks, one of the principal players, arrived in New York on Monday from Hollywood to attend the press preview of the film prior to its Christmas Day premiere.

Gene Tierney, Walter Huston, Victor Mature and Ona Munson star in the picture, directed by Josef von Sternberg, and based on the Broadway play of some years ago written by John Colton. The supporting cast includes Albert Basserman, Maria Ouspenskaya, Eric Blore, Clyde Fillmore, Ivan Lebedeff and Rex Evans. Director von Sternberg adapted the play for the screen in collaboration with Geza Herczeg, Karl Vollmoeller and Jules Furthman. The picture is reviewed on page 32.

"Ball of Fire" Debuts

Samuel Goldwyn's "Ball of Fire," his second production of the season for RKO Radio, starring Barbara Stanwyck and Gary Cooper, will start a series of 20 premiere engagements throughout the country on December 31st. The following cities will have "Ball of Fire" openings on this date:

Boston, Chicago, Columbus, Des Moines, Kansas City, Lowell, Omaha, Providence, San Francisco, Syracuse, Washington, Trenton, Waterloo, Dubuque, Cedar Rapids, Champaign, Sioux City, Marshalltown.

It is expected that "Ball of Fire" will also open on the last day of the year at the Pantages and RKO Hillstreet theatres in Los Angeles.

"Bugle Sounds" Premiere

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Bugle Sounds," starring Wallace Beery, will have its world premiere on January 14th, at Loew's Theatre in Louisville, Ky. The picture is a story of America's mechanized armed forces and was filmed with the cooperation of the U. S. Army, including authentic scenes of armored divisions at Fort Knox, Ky., Fort Lewis, Wash., Ford Ord, Calif., and of the Louisiana battle maneuvers.

"Chocolate Soldier" Closes

Following eight weeks at the Astor Theatre in New York, MGM's "The Chocolate Soldier" which closed last Sunday, will be released soon to theatres generally. MGM reports that the picture was one of the most popular attractions at this Broadway house, attendance figures running on a par with those for "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Pygmalion."

"Chocolate Soldier" marked the screen debut of Rise Stevens, Metropolitan Opera star. Nelson Eddy co-starred with Miss Stevens.

Essaness Shifts

Managerial changes have been made at the Essaness circuit, Chicago. Carl Levine succeeded Isadore Comode, at the Biograph theatre; Mr. Comode went to the "400" theatre; Roy Zermain went from that house to the Buckingham; Earl Silverman went from the latter to the Vic. Walter Gessler returned to the circuit as assistant manager at the Crawford theatre, replacing Raymond Kanoff, who became assistant manager at the "400."

Norfolk Grosses Up

MAJORS ADMIT 'PECULIAR PRACTICES', BUT INSIST THEY ARE NECESSARY

Executives Testify in Minnesota Trial on Selling Policies of Pre- and Post-Decree Eras; Hearings Postponed to Jan. 7

The state of Minnesota, and three majors —Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, and RKO, charged with violating the state's anti-decree law, called a temporary truce for Christmastime in the bitter court battle over the blocks-of-five sales clause of the motion picture consent decree, which the state opposes, by law.

The criminal suit against the majors in Ramsey County Court, St. Paul, which began on Monday, December 15th, was adjourned Friday, December 19th, to January 7th.

The one week of trial had produced state's evidence, freely admitted by the majors' exchange managers, that they had sold pictures in blocks of five and ten to three theatres, one at White Bear, and the Gem and Oxford, St. Paul.

The state law compels majors to sell an entire season's product at one time, and allows a 20 per cent cancellation privilege.

Executives Testify

The one week of trial also produced testimony from the majors' lawyers, David Shearer and Joseph Finley, and majors' executives, Herman Wobber, Colonel Jason Joy, and Neil Agnew, the gist of which was that the industry has produced practices peculiar but necessary, and that they are not monopolistic; certainly, that they should be allowed in Minnesota, whatever they are, rather than be trammelled by legislation.

The majors' representatives undertook to give the court a history of the industry and an outline of its producing and distributing methods. They hope to gain a decision from the court that the state law is inapplicable to the film business, and unconstitutional. Failing that, they have pending a civil suit, to have the law declared unconstitutional, and to obtain a permanent injunction preventing its enforcement. If unsuccessful in one or both efforts, they have indicated they will take the case to higher courts.

Meanwhile, all have obtained relief from the decree in New York Federal Court, and are selling in Minnesota in accordance with its law.

Last of the majors to obtain that relief, was MGM, Wednesday, December 17th. It immediately began selling.

The criminal trial in the St. Paul court has been of interest to the industry, not alone for the efforts to smash state interference with the Federal decree, but also for the sidelight statistics and general information about the film industry, related to the court by the majors' executives.

Neil Agnew, Paramount's general sales manager, testifying Friday, December 19th, in noting risks of production, cited evidence that public reaction to pictures was unpredictable.

Cecil B. DeMille's "The Crusades" was a "financial failure of the first magnitude," and "Alice in Wonderland" did not return its production costs, he said.

He listed other big financial failures: "Little America," "Peter Ibbetson," "So Red the Rose," "Maid of Salem," "The Angel," "The Light That Failed," "The World in Flames," all of which were Paramount's; and "The Little Princess," "The Great Waltz," "The Howards of Virginia," "Romeo and Juliet."

These failed, while "light and frothy" films succeeded, Mr. Agnew pointed out, naming as successes, "Going to Town," "Klondike Annie," "The Bride Comes Home," "Waikiki Wedding," "Artists and Models" and "The Road to Singapore."

Previously, Colonel Jason Joy, Fox personnel director, had testified that the Minnesota law would "seriously hamper" majors' distribution in the state.

And Herman Wobber, vice-president in charge of distribution for that company, had described 34 years in the industry, and the work of his department. He also noted that the Minneapolis exchange serviced the Dakotas and part of Wisconsin; thus it faces a problem selling according to the law in Minnesota, and according to the decree outside.

He also asserted the Minnesota measure prevented short and split deals, and spot bookings.

Revenues have increased with the introduction of sound, air conditioning, and other improvements, he admitted.

Continuing to limit distribution, he said a feature's average playing life is nine months; and noted that one, "The Covered Wagon," cost $200,000 in license fees, for a 34 week run.

Before the decree, there was no uniform system of sales, he claimed.

GOVERNMENT TAXES BANNED SLOT-MACHINES

A paradox exists in Pennsylvania because of conflicting state and federal laws. Under the state law, slot machines are illegal in the state, but the U. S. Internal Revenue Department is levying a $50 per annum tax on the slot machines and is collecting.

While many of the newspapers in northeastern Pennsylvania have cited the paradox and admitted that slot machines are in appearance in the region, many wonder, editorially and in news columns, just what measures would be taken by the state if a business place or club paid the federal tax and vice versa.

Academy Committee Meets On Special Effects Award

Studio sound and photographic special effects technicians met at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences last Friday night, to consider rules to be used to govern the Special Effects Award this year.

Membership of the rules committee, appointed by Bette Davis, president of the Academy, follows: Farciot Edouart, chairman; Lionel Banks, McClure Capps, John Cosgrove, John Fulton, Arnold Gillespie, Byron Haskin, John Hilliard, Russell Kimball, Harry Leonard, Charles Lootens, Louis Mesenkop, Jack Otterson, Elmer Raguse, Gordon Sawyer, Roy Seawright, Fred Sersen, Hal Shaw, James Stewart, S. J. Twining, Vernon Walker and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Research Council.

May Delay Schine Suit In Buffalo

It appears this week the Government's field and anti-trust suit, against the Schine circuit, affiliates, and Universal, United Artists, and Columbia, may not be tried in Buffalo Federal Court March 3rd, as scheduled.

Willard S. McKay, counsel for the Schine companies, told the court last week the defendants would not begin trial on that date "or at any time soon," and served notice for reargument of the order for trial that day.

The judge set hearing on Mr. McKay's motion, next Monday, after the lawyer asserted he had not been present when March 3rd was selected, and that he hadn't received a letter notifying him of the hearing.

In New York, attorneys for the three majors indicated that at the Monday hearing, they would ask the court for a lengthy postponement, citing the scheduled trial of the Government's New York anti-trust action against them, as non-consenters to the decree entered into last year by the five other majors.

Last week, the Department of Justice had the New York action placed on February calendar, and indicated it might ask for extension beyond June 1st, of the "deadline" for the decree's selling and trade showing provisions.

Crescent Decision Soon

Meanwhile, the industry's attorneys awaited Federal Judge Elmer Davies' decision, in Nashville, on the Government's anti-trust trial of the Crescent circuit, affiliates, and Universal and United Artists. That case, taking several weeks of actual trial in the summer, and months of briefs and hearings this fall, went to the judge two weeks ago.

J. E. Flynn To Work From Chicago Office

Although the basic headquarters of MGM's central division will remain in New York, it is the intention of J. E. Flynn, recently appointed central division manager, to spend most of his time in Chicago and to center his field activities from there making frequent trips to New York as the occasion demands. Charles Deesen and William Murray will continue to handle contract and record details in New York, for the division, as they did under Ted O'Shea.

In changing his base of operations Mr. Flynn points out that most of the offices under his supervision are within a few hours from Chicago with the furthest only an overnight jump. The change, he says, is due greatly to the new method of selling.

NO STRIKES DURING WAR FOR IATSE, SAYS WALSH

New Alliance President Makes Announcement After Talks with Leaders in Washington

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes will not strike "for the duration"; nor will it threaten strikes. It will embrace any mediation or arbitration machinery approved by its parent union, the American Federation of Labor.

So said Richard F. Walsh, Alliance president, in New York headquarters this week, following a conference with AFL leaders in Washington last week.

Those leaders, comprising the AFL's executive council, pledged elimination of strikes in war industries, and asked the President to establish voluntary mediation and arbitration, so that work in those industries might not stop.

Mr. Walsh praised the film industry as vital in maintaining national morale.

Publicists' Talks Resumed

In New York, meanwhile, the breach between the major's home offices and the Screen Publicists Guild appeared closed, with the resumption this week of negotiations for a closed shop contract affecting the advertising and publicity workers in those offices. However, three of the companies at mid-week were still "hold-outs."

The Guild on Friday evening, December 19th, sponsored a "defense" meeting, at which speakers were Francis Harmon, head of the film industry War Activities Committee; Garson Kanin, of the film division of the Office of Production Management; Eugene Plichet, Times Square sector warden; and Captain John Green, of the New York State Home Guard. Many New York industry unions were represented; and a steering committee was formed, to cooperate with Mr. Harmon's committee.

Meanwhile, in New York, the progress of the CIO union, Local 109, Screen Office and Professional Workers' Guild, continues, with expectation of a National Labor Relations Board election at Loew's, next month.

Twenty free-lance publicity agents in Hollywood, last week voted cooperation with the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Civilian Defense.

In Pittsburgh, Claire Meeder has become president of the musician's Local 60. Other officers are Edward G. Engberts, vice-president; Nicholas Hagarty, secretary; Emil Bills, Hal Davis, Mike Hickly, Frank Panella, Gene Urban, and George Wilkins, directors.

The IATSE was designated, last week, by the National Labor Relations Board, the sole collective bargaining agency for the production employees of the Alexander Film Company, Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Reelected president of the San Francisco IATSE Local 18, last week, were Al Maas, president; Nell Joyce, secretary-treasurer; and William Sutherland, business agent.

New officers for 1942 headed by John S. O'Connell, president, were elected by New Haven local 74, stage hands, last week. Mr. O'Connell is president for the fourth consecutive term; Charles C. McBride, vice-president; Harry Feldman, financial secretary and treasurer; John J. Miller, business representative; Robert C. Watson, secretary; Wallace Miller, sergeant-at-arms. Trustees include William O'Connell, Morris Wasserman, and Joseph Dietle, Herman Hegewald, a past president, installed the new officers.

In that area, the union and the circuits have signed new three year contracts, replacing those which expired September 1st.

In Los Angeles, a group of theatre managers has applied to the American Federation of Labor, for a charter. The local office of that union has asked President William Green whether the managers can be classified as employees.

S.O.S. "100 Per Cent Union"

The S.O.S. Cinema Supply Corporation, New York City, is now employing union men in all categories, following renewal of contracts with the American Federation of Office Employees, and the International Association of Machinists; and it announced last week that it was possibly the only supply house in the film industry, "100 per cent union."

NICK YIELDS CARD; TO BEGIN JAIL TERM

John P. "Big" Nick is no longer a "projectionist." He is still a "stagehand." It makes little difference, however; for he is to begin the new year serving five years in jail for extortion. And his jail companion is Clyde A. Weston, who, with Nick, once controlled the St. Louis projectionists' local, 143. Mr. Nick resigned from that local last week, keeping, however, his card in the city's stagehands' local, 6. Local 143 had told him to resign or stand union trial. The United States Supreme Court has refused to review the convictions of the two men.

Another stockholder's suit against a a major—outgrowth of the extortion trial and conviction of George Browne and Willie Bioff, late IATSE leaders—appeared this week. Lester Rankin, Warner minority stockholder, sued the company in Los Angeles Federal Court, for return of approximately $181,600 allegedly paid the two men by the company's officers.

Lincoln Improvements Set

Winter improvements in the amusement area of Lincoln, Neb., include three theatres, with a total expenditure of $113,500. The biggest is J. H. Cooper's Stuart theatre, a 1,884-seat de luxe house, accounting for $100,000 of the money. Howard Federer, general manager of the Nebraska Theatres, Inc., has closed a deal for a new triangular, revolving sign for the Varsity at a cost of $7,000, and will re-seat the State in January at a cost of $6,500.

Spiegel Is Commander

Harry Spiegel, Family theatre, Scranton, Pa., has been made commander of the Sandy Weisberger Post 165, of the Jewish War Veterans of America, in that city.

Buffalo Exhibitor Wins Games Trial

Theatre chance games have been the cause of many more court actions. Many community betterment groups contend that bank nights and games are lotteries. On this matter theatre men have again taken the offensive.

In Buffalo, a supreme court jury has acquitted Harry T. Dixon and the Jay-Phil Corporation of violating state anti-lottery laws in connection with operation of bingo games at the Academy theatre.

Other Cases Await Action

The jury's decision was the first of its kind in Buffalo, another bingo case last year having ended in a disagreement. The defendant at that time was the Old Vienna theatre, with which former Mayor Frank X. Schwab is associated.

There are several so-called bingo indictments awaiting trial in Buffalo, including the Old Vienna case. It was expected that District Attorney Leo J. Hagerty will decide shortly whether to move them for trial or ask that they be dismissed. In effect, the jury's verdict holds that bingo, such as that conducted by the Academy, does not violate the law.

During summations by the opposing counsel, Alfred R. Pacini, assistant district attorney, the jurors were told that the state believes the operation of games at the Academy was a "cleverly-planned scheme to evade and circumvent the state lottery laws."

Testimony was offered during the week-old trial that 99 cents was the admission price at the theatre on nights that bingo was played, while on other evenings the price was only 15 cents.

Other witnesses declared during testimony that there were some persons who participated free in the games while they stood in the lobby and that prizes had been won by them. Charles J. McDonough, representing Mr. Dixon and the corporation, said during the summation that the admission price was higher on bingo nights because of increased expenses, but contended there was no charge for actual participation in the games. They being incidental to the presentation of the motion pictures.

Wisconsin Court Dismisses

The Wisconsin state supreme court has dismissed the complaint of J. L. Stern, Minneapolis, representing Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., Denver, in a suit to collect $1,007 from Minor Amusement Corporation, of Rice Lake, Wis., for payments allegedly due the plaintiff for bank night services. The court's action sustained the ruling of a Barron county circuit court, which based its decision on a state supreme court ruling in 1938 holding bank night to be a lottery.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., federal and state agencies are reported prepared to give bingo games a further jolt. Mayor Charles N. Loveland has banned Sunday bingo games in that city.

According to the report the federal agencies will check further tax payments on admissions while the state is reported to have placed a ban on three buildings where games are held because they allegedly did not have proper exits to accommodate the large overflow of persons.

Total attendance at 256 chance game parties in Cincinnati during October was 295,953, according to report of Police Chief Eugene T. Weatherly to City Manager C. O. Sherrill, who issues the playing permits. Gross receipts were $211,978.07, and prizes, $49,321.05, leaving net of $162,657.02 to the sponsoring organizations. Average net cost per player was 54.1 cents.

W. M. Cadoret, Associate of Comerford, Dies

William M. Cadoret, general manager of Monroe Amusements, Inc., who was associated with Comerford Theatres, Inc., for 15 years, died in Rochester, N. Y. last Saturday of a heart attack. He was 67.

Mr. Cadoret was one of the best known theatre men in the East. He had charge of the Palace, Temple, Century, Regent and Capitol theatres in Rochester.

Born in Hartford, Conn., he attended business college and became an advance man for Washburn Circus when he was 17 years old. He later became a program boy at the old Hartford Opera House, and once was a co-worker of David Wark Griffith, in the early days of picture-making.

In 1909, Mr. Cadoret became manager of the Petite Theatre in Kankakee, Ill. and later obtained control of four theatres in that city, operating them until 1921, when he came East to join Comerford Theatres, Inc. He became a booker and buyer for 75 houses in that organization and had since been an associate of M. E. Comerford and Frank C. Walker.

Funeral services were held in Rochester on Tuesday at the Blessed Sacrament Church. Burial was to be in Bourbonnais, Ill.

Mr. Cadoret is survived by his widow, a daughter, Ellen, and two brothers, Gerald Cadoret, who is general field supervisor for the Comerford circuit, and Arthur, formerly associated with that circuit.

John E. Shipman

John E. Shipman, 69, a member of the maintenance department of the Warner Theatres circuit in Philadephia, died Tuesday, December 16th, at his home here, after an illness of six months. He was the father of J. Ellis Shipman, executive treasurer of the circuit in Philadelphia. Other survivors include his wife, a daughter, a sister and a brother. Funeral services were held in Pittsburgh on Dec. 21.

Mrs. A. P. Giannini

Mrs. A. P. Giannini, 72, wife of the board chairman of the Bank of America, and sister-in-law of A. H. Giannini, financier well-known in the motion picture industry, died Monday, December 22nd, at the Mills Memorial Hospital in San Francisco.

Jack B. Reith

Jack B. Reith, 53, who went to Toronto from Chicago recently to take over management of the Midtown theatre, died in Wellesley Hospital Monday, December 22nd, after a brief illness. His body has been shipped to Chicago for burial. Before going to Canada he had been manager of RKO theatres in the United States for some years.

Harlan Huls

Harlan Huls, 32, until recently manager of the Austin theatre in Austin, Ind., was killed by an automobile, Saturday, December 20th, while walking along a highway.

David Howard, Film Director, Stricken

David Howard, motion picture director, died in Hollywood, Sunday, December 21st, at the age of 45. Born in Philadelphia, he went to Hollywood in the early twenties and at first was associated with King Vidor in such productions as "The Big Parade" and "The Crowd."

In later years he turned to directing action and western pictures, directing practically all those featuring George O'Brien and more recently those starring Tim Holt. His latest films included "Marshal of Mesa City" and "Legion of the Lawless."

Hattie Klein

Miss Hattie Klein, a cashier at the Ambassador theatre for 11 years, in Indianapolis, died Saturday, December 20th, after an illness of eight weeks. She had been in the city's box offices for more than 22 years, beginning at the Ohio and then working for the Indiana and Circle theatres before she went to the Ambassador.

Fact Films In Education

In cooperation with Dr. Frederic M. Thrasher, of New York University, the Association of Documentary Film Producers Thursday presented a program of speakers, in that university's School of Education Auditorium, who discussed the role of documentary films in education. Among speakers were Herbert Kerkow, Freyda Adler, and Boyd Wolff. Shown was Pare Lorentz' "The Fight for Life."

Tri-State Winners

Tri-States Theatre Corporation, theatre managers who are winners of the $50 weekly prize during the first six weeks of the "Salute to Y. Frank Freeman" annual drive were: Eddie Dunn, Paramount, Des Moines; Bob Fulton, Des Moines theatre at Des Moines; Jack Koldo, Esquire at Davenport; Bill Beckley, Hipp, Sioux City; Bernard Dudgeon, Oil City theatre at Fall City, Neb., and again Eddie Dunn of the Paramount at Des Moines.

Harley, Kane Arrive

F. L. Harley, British managing director of Twentieth Century-Fox and Robert T. Kane who was in London supervising English productions, arrived in New York last Friday night via Pan-American clipper after two weeks' delay waiting for transportation. The trip was from Lisbon, Portugal, via Brazil, Trinidad and Bermuda.

Altec-Midwest Contract

As a result of a contract negotiated by Mrs. Ethel Miles of the Midwestern Booking Agency of Columbus, Ohio, Altec booth, sound and repair-replacement service will be extended to the following theatres in Columbus: Champion, Drexel, Grandview, Garden, Hudson, Northern, Victor and Empress, and the Mecca and Palace theatres in Dayton, Ohio.

New York Firm Dissolves

Papers of dissolution have been filed with Michael F. Walsh, Secretary of State in Albany, for Foreign Distributors Corporation, which was originally incorporated through Alexander Nelidow, 1165 Fifth Avenue New York.

R. L. Hall, News Executive, Dies

Ray L. Hall, one time newspaper and newsreel figure, died Tuesday in Washington of pneumonia. He was chief of liason between the newsreels and the War Department bureau of public relations.

Mr. Hall was born in Kentland, Indiana, son of the county surveyor. He was educated at Indiana University and went into newspaper work in Indianapolis and Chicago. He was 62. For many years he was a member of the staff of Hearst's International News Service in Chicago.

While with INS he achieved an important wire scoop in the confession and plea of guilty which ended the trial of the McNamara brothers in the Los Angeles Times dynamiting case. He returned unduly early from luncheon and found the defendants at bar in the surprise plea.

When Edgar B. Hatrick organized the Hearst-Selig Weekly, first all-American reel to compete with Pathe Weekly, he drafted Mr. Hall as editor. The connection continued with the various transformations of the Hearst newsreels into the period of the first World War. It was Mr. Hall who, when Woodrow Wilson demanded changes, was assigned to take Japan as the enemy out of a Hearst serial entitled "Patria."

Mr. Hall was subsequently made editor of Screen Telegram, a wartime newsreel organized by Terry Ramsaye for the Mutual Film Corporation, and in turn with Captain G. McLeod Baynes, Charles Urban and Mr. Ramsaye, the newsreel known as "Kinograms." Mr. Hall had an interim period in production for the American Red Cross.

Subsequent to Kinograms Mr. Hall was the editor of "Fox Varieties," and went thence to the editorship of Pathe News in succession to Emmanuel Cohen, who went to Paramount News.

In intimate personal and political association with Marvin McIntyre, Washington representative of Pathe News, Mr. Hall had a deal to do with the screen representations of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York. Mr. Hall left Pathe News shortly before the end of the Joseph P. Kennedy regime at Pathe Exchange, Inc., and was thereafter in a number of freelance and other picture affiliations until his appointment to the Washington post he held at his death.

Funeral services were to be held Friday morning at the Hines Funeral Chapel, Washington, with burial at Kentland. He leaves a widow, Marion, three sons and a daughter.

Astor

HER ENLISTED MAN (FORMERLY RELEASED BY U. A. UNDER THE TITLE "RED SALUTE"): Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Young—I should have enlisted instead of playing it. Played December 9.—Saul Korman, Apollo Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Burroughs-Tarzan

NEW ADVENTURES OF TARZAN, THE: Herman Brix—There was no adventure in my box-office. It was a sad, sad night. Very sad. Played November 28-29.—Saul Korman, Apollo Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN WASHINGTON: Herbert Marshall, Virginia Bruce—Another "in-betweener". Followed salesman's advice and booked on week-end and it slipped. Business average but patrons not satisfied. Played December 5-6.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

HE STAYED FOR BREAKFAST: Loretta Young, Melvyn Douglas—This was a sophisticated dramatic comedy with sparkling dialogue that proved entertaining throughout. Running time, 103 minutes. Played December 6-7.—W. J. Overstreet, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla.

HE STAYED FOR BREAKFAST: Loretta Young, Melvyn Douglas—A very fine comedy with Melvyn and Loretta turning in remarkable performances. They certainly make a fine team. Running time, 87 minutes. Played December 8-10.—Mel Jolley, Columbia Theatre, St. Thomas, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

THUNDER OVER THE PRAIRIE: Charles Starrett, Cliff Edwards—A good western for Saturday.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TIME OUT FOR RHYTHM: Rudy Vallee, Ann Miller—My public did not care for this musical and those that did express themselves said it would be alright if they took Rudy off the screen. It was not worth the rental and should not be designated in the percentage group. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 26-27.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

TWO LATINS FROM MANHATTAN: Joan Davis, "Jinx" Falkenburg—A light comedy that seemed to satisfy our patrons; although it showed the lack of stars, it did above average business.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

YOU'LL NEVER GET RICH: Fred Astaire, Rita Hayworth—A delightful and refreshing musicale that did above average business. Should do business in most any spot.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Hoffberg

FRIGHTENED LADY: Marius Goring, Helen Haye, Penelope Dudley Ward—Too bad the "sub" didn't get this print carrier instead of a bread carrier. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 28-29.—Saul Korman, Grant Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy—We were compelled to book this one alone and because of the needed second feature we lost business. However, this was not entirely the reason. A western here, regardless of its lavishness, just does not go. This is a fine picture and is very entertaining. No comment from patrons. Business was very poor. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 30-December 2.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

BOOM TOWN: Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr—A fast-moving story of two adventure-loving men with sufficient love interest to keep the audience spell-bound throughout its running. Exceptionally well liked here. Running time, 120 minutes. Played November 27.—W. J. Overstreet, Forida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

DR. JEKYLL and MR. HYDE: Spencer Tracy, Lana Turner, Ingrid Bergman—Spencer Tracy turns in his usual grand performance and Ingrid Bergman is very good. Also Lana Turner. This picture, from a standpoint of production, direction and acting, is very good, but here is the catch. I depend a lot on kid patronage and 95 per cent of the children under 12 cannot stay and see this feature. After all, our job is to entertain the majority and it just can't be done with this picure. Personally I think it should not have been produced. Lots of people stayed away because they did not want to see their favorite actor play this part of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Played December 9-11.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S WEDDING DAY: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—This series still tops for any series. Pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GET-AWAY, THE: Robert Sterling, Charles Winninger—Played with "Reaching for the Sun," a Paramount offering, and both pictures pleased our audience. Business was very good. Running time, 85 minutes. Played December 5-6.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

LADY BE GOOD: Eleanor Powell, Ann Sothern, Robert Young—After lingering along for the first two reels, this story finally gets under way and is quite entertaining. It is another example of too much length. When are we going to hit the last of these? People were listening to the radio news reports so that may partially account for only fair receipts. Running time, 111 minutes. Played December 11.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY HARDY: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Ann Rutherford—It wasn't a bad picture, but it didn't do any business. Played November 9-10.—Saul Korman, Apollo Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY HARDY: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—These Hardy pictures have come a long way since the first one. They have all been good ones with the exception of one or two. This one is a little long and interest lags in spots, but, all in all, it's a nice picture. As another exhibitor said in his report on this picture: "Where does MGM get all those honeyed girls?" Patricia Dane steals the show from Mickey and I do mean steal. She's a honey. Running time, 101 minutes. Played November 30-December 2.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtranck, Mich. General patronage.

MAISIE WAS A LADY: Ann Sothern, Lew Ayres, Maureen O'Sullivan—An "in between" picture. Good mid-weeker. Business slightly below average. Why? Played December 3-4.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

MATA HARI (REISSUE): Greta Garbo, Ramon Novarro—This one from way back when proved to be a good grosser. I saw parts of it and it didn't look so bad, but for my personal enjoyment, I would rather see something else. It drew about 80 per cent women and 15 per cent kids. The men didn't go for this. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 21-22.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtranck, Mich. General patronage.

WHISTLING IN THE DARK: Red Skelton, Ann Rutherford—Good comedy which did average business. Pleased most of the patrons. Played November 22-24.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

ZIEGFELD GIRL: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr, Judy Garland, Lana Turner—Exceptionally good production, very much enjoyed by my patrons, although somewhat high-brow for a rural audience. Singing very good and lavish sets. Play it. Running time, 98 minutes. Played November 29.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Monogram

FATHER STEPS OUT: Frank Albertson, Jed Prouty—A good little comedy that held well on the lower half of our twin bill. Jed Prouty is OK and our patrons didn't squawk.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Thetare, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

SADDLE MOUNTAIN ROUNDUP: Range Busters—Pleased. Business good. Monogram to be congratulated on this attraction.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SADDLE MOUNTAIN ROUNDUP: Range Busters—They might be the Range Busters, but if I play more of them, they will bust me. Played December 12-13.—Saul Korman, Grant Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

TOP SERGEANT MULLIGAN: Nat Pendleton, Carol Hughes—This is really tripe with the title of the picture its only attribute. Did not hear too much bad criticism and I am sure that I didn't hear anything good about the picture. Good drawing possibilities.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Paramount

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall—Although we bought this as a program picture it did outstanding business. Dorothy is a popular gal in our town and they love to see her in her sarong. Give us more Dorothy.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall—We opened to average on Sunday, then war was declared, and we suffered for two more days, with one day showing the lowest gross we ever played to in this theatre. The picture was pretty, had a good cast, and South Sea stuff usually draws good here, but Sunday saved us from a loss. Worth a date, even Sunday, and will do good enough with an even break.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BIRTH OF THE BLUES: Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Coralyn Lee, "Rochester"—Poorest Bing Crosby feature I've ever played, and on percentage, too. Had no draw and was oversold by trailer. I believe the checker even wanted to hide with me when they started out. This, as far as I can recollect, was the first Crosby that I had walkouts on. No business after the first day.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

DOOMED CARAVAN: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—A good western that pleased and drew average Friday and Saturday business. We played it old, but that doesn't seem to hurt this type of picture, unless they see it in another town.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FLYING BLIND: Richard Arlen, Jean Parker, Nils Asther, Marie Wilson—A pretty good action picture that did all right as the bottom half of a double bill. The upper-crust won't like the impossible stuff, but the chewers and spitters, who crave action, will get excited and like it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

FORCED LANDING: Richard Arlen, Eva Gabor—Expected a real airplane action thriller, but did not find it. This just fair entertainment, and don't let the title fool you.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

HENRY ALDRICH FOR PRESIDENT: James Lydon, Charles Smith, June Preisser—Nice family feature that would have had a nice draw but for a beautiful snowstorm. Well liked by those few who ventured out to see it. We paid plenty for it, too. Running time, 74 minutes.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

HENRY ALDRICH FOR PRESIDENT: James Lydon, Charles Smith, June Preisser—The picture drew fair, just average business and wasn't the knockout that Paramount claimed and on which they based their request and command for an increase over the preceding picture of the series. Where do they get that stuff? It is just an ordinary programer with an ordinary cast, no extra dough spent in making the picture; in fact, looks like the budget suffered a little. Played December 12-13.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche—My audience liked this musical farce, and it did all right at the boxoffice. However, I think they were fooled into thinking this had something to do with the draft, which definitely it does not, except the title, which is misleading. Running time, 85 minutes. Played December 3-4.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

LADY EVE, THE: Henry Fonda, Barbara Stanwyck—A swell comedy which did above average business. Both top stars were very good. Played November 30 to December 2.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre. Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

MYSTERY SEA RAIDER: Carole Landis, Henry Wilcoxon—A fair program picture which was played most timely. We phoned as many people as we could and told them the sea-raiders were in town just when the war news was breaking on the Pacific and got extra business for our energies.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NEW YORK TOWN: Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin, Robert Preston—Another one of Paramount's super-dupers that just rates good in the program class and failed to draw any better than many we have played for just about half the rental they socked us. Don't expect too much, don't promise too much, then nobody is disappointed.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

ONE NIGHT IN LISBON: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray—We have no complaints to offer up for this one. Our business was fair and the picture presented a fast, colorful and enjoyable comedy and was well received. Our audiences were interested in the war background material, air raids, blackout details, etc. Whether these details were authentic or not, they did not care. They were just interested. Running time, 97 minutes. Played December 5-6.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN: Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye—A good comedy that failed to do the business anticipated as our town is not a football town.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

REACHING FOR THE SUN: Joel McCrea, Ellen Drew—See review on "The Get-Away." Running time, 89 minutes. Played December 5-6.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

ROUNDUP, THE: Richard Dix, Patricia Morison—A boxoffice attraction for any small town. However, there is a tendency at the present time which seems to indicate that the people are more or less bored with entertainment of this particular type. They have seen the same things that were presented in this picture too many times. Offered little for us here. Business fair. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 3-4.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—A very fine program, with beautiful color and excellent acting. Had the whole town talking. Running time, 107 minutes. Played December 1-3.—Mel Jolley, Columbia Theatre, St. Thomas, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

THE SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS: John Wayne, Betty Field—This was an outstanding production and business way above par. The coloring was supreme as far as color was concerned and the characters well chosen. My public likes these well known titles and something they can understand. Give it your best paying time. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 30-December 1.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

NEW CONTRIBUTOR TO DEPARTMENT

A new contributor reported to the What The Picture Did For Me Department this week, and two others resumed after a lapse of some months.

The new contributor is

FRANK E. RIDER, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb.

THEODORE J. FRIEDMAN, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y.

Read the reports from these and other contributors in the adjoining columns.

WIDE OPEN TOWN: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—Used on a double bill with "Bad Men of Missouri" and my public thought it was a very good show. I have my doubts that either one is strong enough to stand alone. Business about normal. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 28-29.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

Producers Releasing

GAMBLING DAUGHTERS: Roger Pryor, Cecelia Parker—Just passable film fare that did nothing but take up time on our program. This picture has nothing more than independent production caliber and will just about get by.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Republic

BAD MAN OF DEADWOOD: Roy Rogers, "Gabby" Hayes—Average western which did average business. Played November 28-29.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

CITADEL OF CRIME: Robert Armstrong, Linda Hayes—Another one of those so-so pictures that did not create any interest pro or con. Just passable entertainment that can be used on the lower half of a twin bill.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

DESERT BANDIT: Don "Red" Barry—Fair western that seemed to please the Friday and Saturday crowd. Played December 5-6.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

HURRICANE SMITH: Ray Middleton, Jane Wyatt, J. Edward Bromberg—Fair picture. Played it with "Dressed to Kill."—Saul Korman, Grant Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

ICE-CAPADES: Dorothy Lewis, James Ellison—Republic can be proud of this picture. Very well made, entertaining throughout and really grand entertainment. Will set in well with any program. Exhibitors should by all means play this one.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES AT BAY: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—This outlaw brought a little change instead of taking it away. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 30.—Saul Korman, Grant Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

MERCY ISLAND: Ray Middleton, Gloria Dickson, Otto Kruger—This studio has brought out some nice pictures in the last season and this is one of them. Not only does this picture have a nice story, but also some very beautiful photography. It's a story of a group of people lost in the Florida Keys. How they lave and fight their way out makes up this very interesting story. Running time, 71 minutes. Played November 30-December 2.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtranck, Mich. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN MOONLIGHT: Weaver Bros. and Elvery—These pictures are supposed to be hillbilly pictures. Republic seems to be drifting further away from this with every production. Let's have more music and hillbilly life and less of the drawing room and formal dress, and our farmers will like them.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

NEVADA CITY: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—A good western with Rogers singing enough to satisfy. We played this on a double with "Henry Aldrich For President," Paramount, figuring on standout business but the two pictures just did average. Maybe that is pretty good, considering. Played December 12-13.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

PITTSBURGH KID, THE: Billy Conn, Jean Parker—A swell made little picture with good drawing possibilities. Play it up and I am sure that it will be worth while. Can be used very well as a co-feature.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

PITTSBURGH KID, THE: Billy Conn, Jean Parker—Fair picture for a double feature. Conn is too amateurish to act. Advise not playing it alone. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 7-8.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

SAILORS ON LEAVE: William Lundigan, Shirley Ross—Played on Thanksgiving. It's light and quite entertaining. A good double feature picture. Running time, 71 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

SIERRA SUE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Another good picture from Autry, who always pleases on Friday and Saturday. Running time, 64 minutes. Played December 12-13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SIERRA SUE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—A very good Autry to excellent business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SINGING HILL, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Virginia Dale, Mary Lee—Just up the alley for a spot like mine. These improving all the time. Star very popular among the rural supporters. Running time, 75 minutes. Played December 6.—A L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SIS HOPKINS: Judy Canova, Bob Crosby, Charles Butterworth, Jerry Colonna—What a gal this Judy Canova is! Although not the best looker in the world, she has something far more important, and that is talent. She completely captivated our audience with her role as "Sis Hopkins" and gave them many laughs. Jerry Colonna and Charles Butterworth aid with their distinctive type of humor, and with the able assistance of a good cast, help to make this an uproarious farce that is certainly good entertainment. Bob Crosby and his Bob Cats orchestra capably provide the musical touch. Running time, 98 minutes. Played December 13.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

UNDER FIESTA STARS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Just a fair picture that is not up to top Autry Film Fare. Mr. Autry seems to be losing his popularity here. I do not know whether it is the lack of good pictures or his poor acting and appeal. Time will tell.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ALL THAT MONEY CAN BUY: Edward Arnold, Walter Huston, Simone Simon—This was a very good picture and business was fair. However, the sound was very bad on the print they sent me, being too loud one minute and too soft the next. Running time, 105 minutes. Played December 7-8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DUDE COWBOY: Tim Holt—The poorest Holt we have played yet. These western have a very nice draw with the youngsters here, but another like this and I'll be glad that I only bought three of them.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

FATHER TAKES A WIFE: Adolphe Menjou, Gloria Swanson, Desi Arnaz—Good comedy which pleased average business. Running time, 79 minutes. Played December 9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HURRY, CHARLIE, HURRY: Leon Erroll, Kenneth Howell—Used with "Singapore Woman" as a double feature offering for one day, public did not think much of my choice so stayed away and let me take care of the overhead out of my reserves. There is very little to be done about it as far as the public is concerned and the producers never admit they have made a mistake, so we are left holding the bag. Running time, 62 minutes. Played November 25.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

HURRY, CHARLIE, HURRY: Leon Errol, Mildred Coles—Slapstiek comedy throughout. Some enjoyed it. Business average. Played December 10-11.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

HURRY, CHARLIE, HURRY: Leon Errol, Mildred Coles—Not much of a picture, but did business. Errol well liked here.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

KING KONG: Fay Wray, Robert Armstrong—An old picture which did good business. Played double with "The Cat and the Canary," Paramount. Running time, 96 minutes. Played December 4-6.—Mel Jolley, Columbia Thetare, St. Thomas, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LITTLE FOXES, THE: Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall, Richard Carlson—Very well done but very depressing. Those that came seemed to like it and attendance was about average. People leave their radios nowadays for pleasant relaxation and they knew that this would not be it. Comedies, adventures and musicals are all I want just now (so I am playing "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" next week). However, it is still a fine piece of acting by the entire cast. Length was necessary this time. Running time, 116 minutes. Played December 12-13.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

ROBBERS OF THE RANGE: Tim Holt, Virginia Vale—A good action Western that holds up the second half of a double bill.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THREE SONS: Edward Ellis, Virginia Vale—This proved very entertaining; although it did no extra business it proved very satisfactory to those who saw it.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOM, DICK AND HARRY: Ginger Rogers, George Murphy, Alan Marshal, Burgess Meredith—Very light. Pleased 50 per cent. Recommend playing it in the middle of week. Not on a Sunday. Running time, 86 minutes. Played November 9-11.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

TWO THOROUGHBREDS: Jimmy Lydon—A very light piece of entertainment that seemed to satisfy our farm lads.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BELLE STARR: Gene Tierney, Randolph Scott—Exceptionally well done outdoor picture in splendid color. Rugged enough for the action fans and subdued enough for the drawing room crowd. Seemed to satisfy very well.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland—Played this second run to mediocre business.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LAST OF THE DUANE'S: George Montgomery, Lynne Roberts, Eve Arden—Very good western to better than average business. Have you noticed, Montgomery's voice is a dead ringer for Clark Gable's? Played December 5-6.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAN AT LARGE: Marjorie Weaver, George Reeves—Mediocre, and one that if you had the cancellation privilege that we had under the old system, would have been laid out and not run. I am getting so that I want to bite myself every time I think of this Consent Decree mess. I trust that unity will come, and that when the time is up on the trial period we can get back on the old and better way of picture buying. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MAN HUNT: Walter Pidgeon, Joan Bennett, George Sanders—Very good picture, but I couldn't hunt up enough patrons. Running time, 101 minutes. Played November 11-13.—Saul Korman, Apollo Theatre, Detroit, Mich. General patronage.

MOON OVER MIAMI: Don Ameche, Betty Grable—A swell musical comedy in color which did above average business. The entire cast are good and the color is beautiful. Played December 6-8.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small patronage.

MOON OVER MIAMI: Betty Grable, Don Ameche—This picture did not do the business we thought it should. There was no competition, and I am inclined to think the picture was not what people expected. The color shots were good and the music fair, but there isn't much to be said for the rest. The picture is drawn out in regard to the plot. It would have made a better short subject—perhaps two. Business fair. Running time, 91 minutes. Played December 7-9.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

MOON OVER MIAMI: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Robert Cummings—Good musical to better than average business. The color was beautiful. Personally, I like Carole Landis better than Grable. Played December 7-8.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

MOON OVER MIAMI: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Robert Cummings—Excellent picture in color. Pleased and business O. K.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SUN VALLEY SERENADE: Sonja Henie, John Payne, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra, Milton Berle—Splendid picture that entertained every minute that it was on the screen. Exhibitors can feel proud to be able to show this display of film fare. Unfortunately, in my case, it did not draw too well but did get by. —Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

THAT NIGHT IN RIO: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Carmen Miranda—Wow! What coloring. But that don't sell seats here. Musicals mean 25 per cent below average at the B. O. here. Played November 30-December 2.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

WESTERN UNION: Robert Young, Virginia Gilmore—Played this second run tied up with local telegraph company and enjoyed satisfactory box-office returns.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

United Artists

HURRICANE, THE (REISSUE): Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor—Picked up this reissue and played to above average grosses. Surprising how many people missed these good pictures first run. Played November 12-13.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BUCK PRIVATES: Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, The Andrews Sisters—It took a long time to buy this from the new Universal without running in a bunch of clucks, but am not sorry we waited. Every tank and chain within our drawing radius had run this comedy and we were skeptical, but the picture drew average business and, having bought it right, we showed a profit.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

CRACKED NUTS: Stuart Erwin, Mischa Auer—An average picture played to average business. This picture had few (very few) points of merit. To most of my patrons it was rather dull and was something to sit through and endure. Picture standards could be effectively raised much to the benefit of producers and not go over the head of an average audience, especially with pictures of this class. Business fair. Running time, 60 minutes. Played December 7-9.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

CRACKED NUTS: Mischa Auer, Una Merkel—This one has some funny angles and is a little silly at times, but can be used to brighten up a heavy program.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

DIAMOND FRONTIER: Victor McLaglen, John Loder—We did the usual week-end business on this picture and felt we had a satisfied clientele. Think it suitable for most small towns.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOLD THAT GHOST: Budd Abbott and Lou Costello—A riot from beginning to end. Abbott and Costello are quickly becoming the number 1 box office stars. I hope that Universal doesn't ruin their popularity and will do well for them, for they are a boom for the box office. Viva! Abbott and Costello.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

LADY FROM CHEYENNE, THE: Loretta Young, Robert Preston, Edward Arnold—A natural action picture for us. However, outdoor photography poor. National De Luxe preview photography also poor. Attendance above average. Played November 9-11.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

LEATHER PUSHERS, THE: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—PONY POST: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight—Being overbought on Universal's low brackets, we find this double bill (against our policy but short footage our only salvation) clicked marvelously at the box office. Business 25 per cent above normal. Played November 14-15.—E. F. Stuhl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN FROM MONTANA: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight—Very good western. This star not very well known here. With pictures like this, he will build up. Played December 12-13.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

BAD MEN OF MISSOURI: Dennis Morgan, Jane Wyman—See review on "Wide Open Town." Running time, 74 minutes. Played November 28-29.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

BAD MEN OF MISSOURI: Wayne Morris, Dennis Morgan—A swell outdoor picture that really hit the spot. Entertained our patrons very well and they all went home happy. Title good. Production OK. Exhibitors, don't fail to play it.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

BULLETS FOR O'HARA: Joan Perry, Roger Pryor—A good little action picture from Warner Brothers that made this 50 minute feature seem even shorter. Can be used very well with a long first feature on a twin bill. This is nothing for Warner Brothers to be proud about. If you have an action house this will do.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH, THE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien George Brent—A really good action drama of war and excellent character portrayals by Cagney and O'Brien. This was well received here. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 29-30.—W. J. Overstreet, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

HIGHWAY WEST: Brenda Marshall, Arthur Kennedy—Another splendid program picture from Warner Brothers. They seem to have the knack of turning out well made little pictures. Kept our patrons well entertained and they were happy. The only set-back is that there are no drawing names.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SQUADRON: Ronald Reagan—Pleased generally. Recommend Friday-Saturday showing. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 16-18.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

KISSES FOR BREAKFAST: Dennis Morgan, Shirley Ross, Jane Wyman—Used for the top half of a double bill with "Flying Blind," and did a little extra business on Tuesday. After checking everything thoroughly I find I have paid the film companies fifty per cent for film rental, which is not so good for a single day. Running time, 82 minutes. Played December 2. —A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

KNOCKOUT: Arthur Kennedy, Olympe Bradna—Liked by everyone. Played with a Roy Rogers western on Friday-Saturday and made a very good program. Running time, 73 minutes. Played December 5-6.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

MANPOWER: George Raft, Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Dietrich—Good picture. Business fair. The only thing against this feature was the fact that there were so many dark scenes. Played December 2-4.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

MANPOWER: Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Diet-

rich, George Raft—An excellent picture that pleased. Business fair.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR BABY: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Ronald Reagan, May Robson—we are late in playing this extra good program picture. A flood cheated us out of our date in October and we re-dated it because so many seemed to be disappointed. They were back in force and we did better than average mid-week business. If you haven't played the picture, get a date set, then promise plenty; the picture will back you up, even at this late day.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

NAVY BLUES: Ann Sheridan, Jack Oakie, Martha Raye, Jack Haley—A good slapstick Saturday night bill. A lot of good stars running around with no direction, no story and miscast. For preferred time, no.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NAVY BLUES: Ann Sheridan, Jack Oakie, Martha Raye, Jack Haley—Good Sunday show. A little disappointed as it is a little lighter than I expected, but I have no kicks. Played November 23-25.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

ONE FOOT IN HEAVEN: Fredric March, Martha Scott—Very good picture and good business the first day, but snow killed it the second day. This picture will please the older people. Running time, 108 minutes. Played December 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OUT OF THE FOG: Ida Lupino, John Garfield, Thomas Mitchell—Another good one from Warners, but did not do the business. Some liked it and some didn't. It had action and some good acting. The story is a little different than most of the gangster pictures and it pleased those who go for this kind of entertainment. The opening day of this picture was the same day as the Japs bombed the Philippines and business hasn't been the same since. Running time, 83 minutes. Played December 7-9.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

OUT OF THE FOG: Ida Lupino, John Garfield, Thomas Mitchell—Played in middle of week and liked by everyone. Running time, 86 minutes. Played December 3-4.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

SERGEANT YORK: Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, Joan Leslie—Outstanding business for Warners. No more 50% pictures for us. Fine picture.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SHINING VICTORY: James Stephenson, Geraldine Fitzgerald—A splendid heart-tugging story of the medical profession. Splendid acting, well directed, but a trifle heavy. If balanced with a light picture will make up a grand program.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

SINGAPORE WOMAN: Brenda Marshall, David Bruce—A good little program picture that entertained our patrons very well on a Bingo Nite. Well directed, good acting by the cast and a nice story entertained our happy family.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

UNDERGROUND: Jeffrey Lynn, Philip Dorn—Very good and liked by all. Do not think it the kind for Sunday, but it is a very exciting picture. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 5-6.—Frank E. Rider, Chateau Theatre, Wauneta, Neb. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

HIS EX MARKS THE SPOT: Buster Keaton—Very good slapstick.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

ROCKIN' THRU THE ROCKIES: Three Stooges—Although I thought the story was a little weak, the customers liked it. But then what Stooge comedy ever has a story? This one is not their best but it's not too bad. It has laughs and is funny and that's about all that is expected from these boys. Running time, 18 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

WAY OF ALL PESTS: Color Rhadsodies—Colorful, silly, few laughs.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU NAZTY SPY: Three Stooges—These Stooge comedies go over here in a big way. We had a very weak program and this was the only thing that saved it from complete failure. This one is about the best that these boys have made. It's not their newest one, but it's good and worth running extra time. Running time, 18 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FANCY ANSWERS: Pete Smith Specialties—Entertaining quiz reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FLYING BEAR, THE: Color Cartoon—Good color cartoon from MGM. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: No. 219, Vol. 13—These reels have too much war and not enough of anything else. For our screen's safety, we took out the Japs at the Capitol. Our patrons don't go for any of this kind of news. Running time, 6 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

OF PUPS AND PUZZLES: Passing Parade—A pretty good "Passing Parade" that silenced the kids and kept the grown-ups interested.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WHISPERS: Passing Parade Series—A very good short. All should see and hear this one. If the contents could only be put into effect. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU, THE PEOPLE: Crime Does Not Pay—"Crimes" are always good.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

HANDS OF DESTINY: Headliner—A lesson in palmistry, easy to listen to right now, and worth dating on account of the subject matter involved.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Neb. Small town patronage.

LASSO WIZARDS: Sportlights—Real interesting. These hemp-rope artists show unique skill in handling the lariat and are tops in their field. Good for any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MIGHTY NAVY, THE: Popeye the Sailor—Good cartoon. Funnier than usual. Appropriate at this time. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey Okla. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: A news that consistently holds up here. We rely on Paramount News for full footage every week. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

APPLE IN HIS EYE: Edgar Kennedy—Pie-throwing mixed with some very clever comedy got plenty of laughs. Short but sweet. Running time, 15 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

CHEF DONALD: Walt Disney Cartoons—Donald Duck puts rubber cement in bis waffles by mistake and comes through with the funniest antics Disney has presented in a long time. Use this one where a large number of people will see it. It's a dandy. Running time, 9 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, tAlfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

DRAFTED IN THE DEPOT: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—If your patrons go for this kind of slapstick comedy, then it's good. I don't think it so hot, but the customers like it, so we play it. Running time, 18 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

HOW GOES CHILE?: Special—Very good. This series has all been interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 2: "Norway in Revolt"—An exceptionally good subject at tbis time. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 10: "Crisis in the Atlantic"—We had already played this on its regular release, but played it again due to its timely interest. It's good and shows some interesting items about the Japs and the Philippines. Running time, 19 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

WHEN WIFIE'S AWAY: Leon Errol Comedies—It wasn't so bad, and there were some funny spots in this comedy. No one complained and a lot of them laughed, some.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WINDOW CLEANERS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Another good cartoon from Disney. They get better all the time and this one is really good. We get very few poor ones from Disney. These cartoons are about the best and the patrons like them. Running time, 9 minutes.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BIRD TOWER, THE: Terrytoons—A good color cartoon. Definite signs that Terrytoons are coming up in the world somewhat. Running time, 7 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

CLUB LIFE IN THE STONE AGE: Terrytoons—Poor. No laughs.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

ISLE OF MYSTERY: Magic Carpet—Very interesting.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

SOLDIERS OF THE SKY: Adventures of Newscameraman—Best of this series. Very timely and interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

Universal

FOX AND THE RABBIT, THE: Cartune Classics Amusing.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

UNIVERSAL NEWSREEL: McNamee holding together. Just an average news. Could be better.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

Vitaphone

AT THE STROKE OF TWELVE: Broadway Brevity—This Damon Runyon short story has been made into a two-reeler which is as good as many small features. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HIAWATHA'S RABBIT HUNT: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Good cartoon. Had two or three funny spots that rated laughs.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

IT HAPPENS ON ROLLERS: The Sports Parade—Pretty good, but these rinks can give us plenty of competition without us giving them a whole reel full of advertising.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MINSTREL DAYS: Broadway Brevity—Imitations of famous minstrel personalities, with Eddie Cantor and Al Jolson as themselves, concluding with a snappy minstrel show, makes this good entertainment. The Jolson and Cantor scenes are from old features and are too short to legitimately use in advertising. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

IRON CLAW, THE: Charles Quigley, Walter Sande, Joyce Bryant—When we saw the first chapter we thought this would turn out to be a good serial. After following eleven chapters, we don't blame the customers for walking out. I still say good serials can be made, but this is not one of them. This story would have made a good two-reeler. It would have made a weak feature, but a 15-chapter serial, never.—Peter Kavel, Campau Theatre, Hamtramck, Mich. General patronage.

IRON CLAW, THE: Charles Quigley, Walter Sande, Joyce Bryant—This is a serial to end all serials. I don't believe I'll ever have nerve enough to play another. We are on the 13th chapter and so far it has been nothing but a repetition of the other 12. Superman just knocks hell out of six or eight gangsters in every chapter and they run through a few secret doors and there is your serial. This serial has been a marked liability to the theatre as a number of our regular customers stay away until we are through with it. And this was sold to us with adult appeal. It wouldn't even appeal to the feeble-minded.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

SPIDER'S WEB, THE: Warren Hull, Iris Meredith—See review on "Riders of Death Valley," Universal.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

WHITE EAGLE: Buck Jones—Nearly finished with this serial. Holding up good considering usual producer blunders in each chapter. Running time, 18 minutes each chapter.—E. F. Stahl, Rialto Theatre, Melrose, N. M. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

RIDERS OF DEATH VALLEY: Dick Foran, Leo Carrilo, Buck Jones, Charles Bickford—We have run five episodes of this serial and the action has been fast, the cast is good, and this serial boasts the first cast of known names, but our people just don't go for serials anymore.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

RIDERS OF DEATH VALLEY: Dick Foran, Leo Carrillo, Buck Jones, Charles Bickford—This serial is not doing so good for me. I played "The Spider's Web," an old Columbia serial, preceding this one, but "Riders of Death Valley" is not holding anything near the average business that "The Spider's Web" did. Serial is good, but my patrons do not care for western serials.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

PRC Signs Langdon, Rogers

Harry Langdon and Charlie Rogers, who made one picture, "Double Trouble," for Monogram release, have been signed by Producers Releasing Corporation to star in a picture to be produced by Bernard B. Ray.

WAR KNOCKS OUT THE 'JUKE-BOX' MOVIE LINE

Priorities Order Also Affects Candy, Soda Pop, Scales and Theatre Vending Machines

Its growth recent and rapid, the "juke-box" movie may nevertheless fade into the Valhalla occupied by such games as Tom Thumb Golf and other games.

The Government last week ordered production of coin-operated music and film machines cut 75 per cent, by February. It also banned making of slot machines after the first of that month. And it ordered immediate elimination of aluminum, in production.

The war order, from the Office of Production Management, hit the manufacturers of the machines, hard; and, in Chicago, home of the industry, they scurried about for defense orders to counter-balance the production cut; they have formed the Allied Automatic Industries, Inc., to represent them, and secure such orders. J. H. Keeney, head of the Chicago firm bearing his name, is president of the association.

It is said that the OPM is planning another order which will reduce the output of slot-movie and all other vending machines. Theatres would be affected by an order curtailing candy and soft drink dispenser production.

The curtailment order also reduces the output of automatic phonograph machines, penny scales and pinball machines 25 per cent for December, on the basis of average production for the 12 months ending last June 30, 50 per cent in January and 75 per cent in February. Manufacture of slot machines was ordered cut 50 per cent in December, 75 per cent in January and stopped February 1st.

The "juke-box" industry is mainly located in Chicago, where 21 manufacturers employ 12,000 workers.

The Mills Novelty Company, makers among other items, of the Panoram movie machines, for which "Soundies" are made, this week received a defense contract: 320,000 forty millimetre shells, to be manufactured as soon as possible.

Rapid Growth

Some extent of the growth to date of the juke-box motion picture business, a growth heretofore concealed by juke interests, comes from the Mills company, which claims that its Panoram machine, a dime-in-the-slot for three minutes of pictures, now numbers 3,000, showing sound pictures to 15,000,000 persons weekly, distributed by 22 machine-and-film franchise holders.

However, war-and-defense priorities threw clouds over future progress of the cafe-and-tavern-and-restaurant screenings. The Office of Production Management at Washington long scrutinized the 8,900 tons of steel, copper, rubber, zinc and other munitions materials which the juke machine manufacturers use annually.

New England exhibitors are awaiting some action from the Massachusetts legislature to pave the way for restriction of the coin-in-the-slot movies. Although no action has been taken by the legislators in the other five New England states it is believed that the Massachusetts legislature will pass taxation measures which will pave the way for taxation throughout the six-state area.

A bill calling for restrictions on the juke-box movies has been filed with the legislature. It was authored by Arthur K. Howard of the Independent Exhibitors. At present the measure is in a static condition due to a resolution calling for an investigation before imposing any further taxes on any industry because of the increased national taxes with the current defense boom.

It is expected on Beacon Hill, however, that the theatre lobby is powerful enough to get the measure through before the legislature prorogues for the year. Once out, the legislators will not return, except if called in special session, until January, 1943, more than 12 months away.

The influx of the juke-box movies has continued steadily since they were introduced 11 months ago. More than 400 are on location throughout the New England area and collections range from $30 to $150 weekly. It is estimated that the machines already have taken more than $1,500,000 out of the territory since they were introduced. In many small towns, this take on the coin-operated movie machines has cut deeply into the theatre grosses. Exhibitors throughout the area are reported firmly opposed to the machines.

It is understood that a local advertising agency has made overtures to some operators to arrange for the insertion of advertising matter in the films. The advertising would, of course, bring in more revenue and would result in greater ease in getting locations for the machines. Just how the advertising would be used, or how much, is not known.

Theatres Backing Measure

Theatre interests are backing the measure before the legislature and it is hoped that the pressure of the lobby will be sufficient to force some action before prorogation. Exhibitors pointed out that if the measure carries over to the next legislature, there will be at least another $2,000,000 taken out by the juke-boxes before some restrictive action can be taken.

The proposed measure calls for a $50 tax on each machine plus a $2 fee for certification of each film. Inasmuch as the state considers each of the eight subjects on the film in the machine as a separate film, this constitutes a $16 certification fee. Most of the films are changed weekly, which would mean a $16 fee per machine per week.

Some exhibitors have shown signs of favoring the machines to a certain extent and some have even gone so far as to install the machines in their lobbies. Most of these have been quickly removed, however, and at present as far as is known, there are no jukeboxes in any New England theatre.

The re-alignment of the Hollywood organization for production of "Soundies" was announced recently in Hollywood, Sam Coslow became president in charge of all production of the recently incorporated firm. The new outfit will be called RCM Productions, Inc., the title formed from the owners' names, James Roosevelt, Mr. Coslow and Gordon Mills.

Josef Berne and Dudley Murphy were signed to direct the subjects; Lud Gluskin will be musical director, and Ben Chapman, casting director.

Charges some weeks ago by Senator Burton K. Wheeler that coin-in-the-slot film machines exhibit "lewd and lascivious" films brought denials from sponsors of the juke box machine and its product. Mr. Coslow, president of RCM Productions, offered to screen any of his pictures for the Senator and pointed out that they were all reviewed by censors.

RADIO NEEDS SHOWMEN, PRESS TELLS OPERATORS

600 Radio Editors and Commentators Tell Broadcasters What's Wrong with Business

The 600 newspaper radio editors and columnists, who last week chose, for the Quigley Publications' annual, Fame, the best in radio's many categories of entertainment and who named Bob Hope, comedian, the Champion of Champions, (see MOTION PICTURE HERALD, December 20th, page 25), also told the Motion Picture Daily, conductor of the poll, what they thought of radio.

In essence, their opinions were those the majority of people in the film industry hold about their own industry: that radio is still young, that it needs good showmen, that it should be untrammelled, that it has great potentialities.

They also condemned certain aspects: poor comedy material, duplication of coverage, lack of new ideas, similarity of programs, commercial announcements interlaced with war news; and other aspects.

Their opinions were delivered by mail, before the war's outbreak.

Following are some excerpts from editors in various sections:

New Jersey: "Serious and tragic war news should not be interlarded" with commercial announcements."

North Carolina: "Further Government regulation should be avoided. . . . No danger in newspaper and radio co-operation and ownership."

Indiana: "Public is going stale on many radio stories. Scripts should portray the happy side of life. . . . Too much kidding of married life."

"Programs Too Similar"

Iowa: "There are too many programs alike each season. . . . Too many good programs are on the air at one time."

Wisconsin: "Radio is growing up into maturity. . . . Let it grow."

Florida: "Spot announcements are the scourge of the broadcasting industry."

Massachusetts: "Radio should not be harassed by politically minded individuals or Government bodies. . . . American Radio is the finest in the world."

Connecticut: "Replace some of those daytime serials with good symphonic music. . . . With the war and national defense boom taking many away from their homes at night, it may be well to provide some good music for these night-time workers during the afternoon."

New York: "Radio is a streamlined version of what our ancestors dreamed we'd be, educational, broadminded, informal, informative, and matured. . . . In season, when broadcasting football games, there is too much duplication. . . . The radio industry can use good showmen to inject some originality and new talent."

Texas: "Radio had one of its worst years from the standpoint of listener appeal. The ASCAP-BMI fight knocked out the best music. Programs were better organized although the leaning to quiz shows is still very heavy. Many variety shows are falling flat because of poorly conceived gags and stale humor. . . . Radio has done a fine job of presenting spot and feature coverage of the international situation. . . . Corny commercials. . . . Commercial announcers still too emotional."

California: "The Government can have no complaint at the co-operation it is receiving from all networks. Comedy material is at a rather low ebb as are the 'soap operas.' . . . Special commendation is due the industry for the fine work in coverage of war, changing conditions and the like, without injection of personal beliefs or propaganda. There still is a tendency for many programs to be pedantic. . . . Many commercials are long-winded."

Pennsylvania: "Some recognition should be especially designed for the stooge-type comedian without whose assistance these comedy programs would not be what they are. . . . The sooner the FCC cracks down on newspaper-owned stations, the safer and better radio will be."

Ohio: "The tremendous programs boosting national defense are rather poorly done, considering the talent that's drafted for them."

Tennessee: "Radio as lively as ever, is the only amusement that costs no more than a year ago. . . . The industry is making the most of its public service opportunities. . . . With the quiz show era having run its course and interest in war news rising, radio has launched the 1941-42 season with a new high for dull entertainment and lack of innovations. . . . Radio needs new stars and program ideas. . . . Too much commercializing of programs . . . too much studio mugging for inside audiences and syrupy piffle with film queens obviously will kill radio."

Missouri: "No progress for radio in the year, except defense reporting and war news. . . . Too much cancelling of the few fairly good radio concerts to make room for public affairs and special programs."

KALTENBORN ACCEPTS "DAILY" POLL AWARD

H. V. Kaltenborn, NBC commentator, last Sunday was presented a scroll commemorating his selection as "Best News Analyst and Commentator" in Motion Picture Daily's sixth annual poll of radio editors conducted on behalf of Fame. The presentation which was made by Lyle Van, took place at the opening of Mr. Kaltenborn's news program over the NBC-Red Network. He acknowledged the tribute "from my newspaper colleagues," and added: "The praise of fellow craftsmen is praise indeed."

Rylander Joins Columbia

Al Rylander, who has been associated with the Tom Fizdale publicity organization for the past five years, has resigned to join Columbia Pictures home office staff in New York. He will handle special national exploitation events as an assistant to Frank P. Rosenberg, who was recently appointed exploitation manager.

Ask Teachers' Analysis

The Schools Motion Picture Committee has asked teachers to evaluate films used for classroom work. A file of such evaluations will be kept at the committee's New York offices for reference by the teachers.

Review Board Selects "Kane"

The National Board of Review, in New York, in its 16th annual announcement of choices of the best films of the year, made on the basis of artistic merit and importance, selects "Citizen Kane." The best foreign-language film was "Pepe le Moko," the best documentary, "Target for Tonight," with honorable mention given to "The Forgotten Village."

The ten best American films, in order: "Citizen Kane," "How Green Was My Valley," "The Little Foxes," "The Stars Look Down," "Dumbo," "High Sierra," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," "Tom, Dick and Harry," "The Road to Zanzibar" and "The Lady Eve."

The best documentaries: "Target for Tonight," "The Forgotten Village," "KuKan" and "The Land."

On the basis of popular appeal two polls were taken, one of the reviewing committee of the National Board, and one of the motion picture councils affiliated with the Board. The choices of the Reviewing Committee were: "How Green Was My Valley," "Sergeant York," "Citizen Kane," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," "The Little Foxes," "Dumbo," "The Philadelphia Story," "Blossoms in the Dust," "Meet John Doe" and "One Foot in Heaven."

Choices of the motion picture councils were: "Sergeant York," "Blossoms in the Dust," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," "The Little Foxes," "Meet John Doe," "One Foot in Heaven," "The Philadelphia Story," "Cheers for Miss Bishop," "Fantasia" and "Citizen Kane."

Radio Critics Select

Bill Berns, film critic of station WBNY, New York, polled film critics on Manhattan radio stations and announced the following on his program last Sunday: Picture, "Sergeant York"; Production, "How Green Was My Valley"; Direction, John Huston for "The Maltese Falcon"; Actor, Gary Cooper in "Sergeant York," Actress, Bette Davis in "The Little Foxes," Supporting player, Sidney Greenstreet in "The Maltese Falcon"; Musical score, "Dumbo"; Photography. "Here Comes Mr. Jordan"; Newcomer, Joan Leslie in "Sergeant York."

In St. Louis, "Blossoms in the Dust" was listed as the outstanding film of 1941 in a reader poll conducted by Colvin McPherson of the Post-Dispatch. Following in order were: "Sergeant York," "Penny Serenade," "Gone With the Wind," "A Yank in the RAF," "Caught in the Draft," "Blood and Sand," "Kitty Foyle," "The Philadelphia Story" and "Hold That Ghost."

Readers of three fan magazines, Movie Story, Motion Picture and Hollywood, selected "The Little Foxes" as the best picture of 1941. Others were "Sergeant York," "The Philadelphia Story," "Citizen Kane," "A Woman's Face," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," "Honky Tonk," "Kitty Foyle," "The Road to Zanzibar," "I Wanted Wings," "Blossoms in the Dust," "Ladies in Retirement," "A Yank in the RAF," "That Hamilton Woman," and "You'll Never Get Rich."

The Puppeteers of America, an organization of professionals, teachers and hobbyists, has presented a citation to Adolph Zukor for Paramount for the company's Madcap Models Puppetoon release "Rhythm in the Ranks."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

A Right, Bright New Year, Friends

DEAR FRIEND:

First, an acknowledgment of your season's greetings and kind holiday wishes. Many, many thanks, and may 1942 be the biggest and best for you.

Well, we got by Christmas nicely and, now that the Quigley Awards have been launched for the ninth successive year of these Competitions, ye Chairman now takes off to visit a bit with you, to talk some about this and that on what's been and what's to come. So, let us draw up the chairs and relax a minute.

It's a mountain-size job for this corner to keep in personal contact with all of the thousands of you Round Tablers in every part of the globe. So, if you will, please add your first name to the salutation above. Then this morsel of chatter will serve nicely as a personal "howdy".

War, of course—and unfortunately—has just about blanketed everything else. Well, we've got what it needs to meet it. Since the theatreman is trained to take about everything in stride, you will be going about your business of running a theatre, speeding up the pace to keep in tune.

In last week's issue we noted that the Big Job to do is: "Keep 'Em Smiling". In days of stress and strain, showbusiness has a happy habit of so doing. Like the Marines, we all want to say that showbusiness also "has the situation well in hand".

As has come to be expected in your community, you will continue to be among the leaders in national defense and other outside activities, to be giving of your splendid showmanship toward the sale of defense stamps and bonds, the Red Cross Drive, March of Dimes and other vital measures. The members already are making their efforts felt in these directions.

Since quite a bit of this will be tied in somewhat with your boxoffice, it might be well here to dwell briefly upon the Quigley Awards and perhaps their influence upon your personal fortunes.

As noted elsewhere in the pages, January 1st marks the opening of the Awards ninth year. That's a long time, isn't it? The reason? Must be the effectiveness of the Competitions in spotlighting the work of you men in the field and in raising the standard of showmanship. In fact, many of you say so, especially in crediting the Awards for promotions, salary rises, bonuses and increased home-office prestige.

Incidentally, the record number of entrants in 1941—higher than ever before—bespeaks your wholehearted cooperation in all Round Table activities. If this department has taken any bows for service during the year, then you share in the applause for making it so. Please take a bow.

The events of last year focused a lot of new eyes upon the growing stature of showmanship of the boxoffice. That goes even stronger for 1942, especially as concerns manpower. The armed services and defense industries will claim a lot of men. Those who remain at their posts will be called upon for an extra-showmanship job to keep up public morale. It is fairly obvious that all of this points to the new year as a strong "bull market" for able showmen and showmanship.

As has to do with news of the members in the past twelve months, most of it has been good. Promotions among Round Tablers were numerous, all of the boys doing a grand job of it in the new situations. Few of the gang have dropped out. While, as to be expected, a number of theatremen and their bossmen have called it a day, the men so affected had little difficulty in getting set.

Looking into what we call the 1941 vital statistics department, a goodly group of men have vowed "I do", as was duly noted in the pages. Also announced—and frequently—were "new showmen" arrived during the year. On the whole, there was little serious illness among the boys. And, happily, few deaths. Thus, in all, if the year was less than terrific, at least it wasn't too tough. All of us are still around, thank you, face forward and ready to handle whatever gets in the way.

And right here, good friend, is as good a spot to sign off, to conclude the annual account of our stewardship, so to speak, and to join in a toast to see us through the difficult days to come. So, "keep 'em smiling," sez we, and keep smiling yourself.

A-Mike Vogel

Round Table In Pictures

Identification lobby contest by Monty Salmon at the Skouras Beacon, New York, featured display of movie star photos, each of which were numbered. Entry blanks were distributed to patrons, the contest running over a two-week period.

To tie the Christmas season atmosphere to his date on "Tarzan's Secret Treasure", Sam Gilman at Loew's Theatre in Harrisburg, Pa., created display which featured smiling cutout of Kris Kringle, holly wreath and scene still blowup.

Street-stopper was large bench planted in front of the Orpheum Theatre in Terre Haute, Ind., ahead of "Suspicion" by Manager Nat Blank. Copy on back read: "Reserved for those waiting to see," etc., etc.

Giant transparency reported by Homer Harman featured a lobby display for "Remember the Day" at the New York Roxy. The Colbert enlargement was indirectly lighted from top and left.

Arranged by Manager Charles Oelreich and "Bucky" Harris, publicist, was the animated "Dumbo" display at RKO Keith's in White Plains. Mechanized, the ears flopped, trunk moved up and down and the eyes rolled.

1942 Quigley Awards Announced; Industry Heads Welcome Ninth Year of Herald Competitions

January 1st Marks Opening of Awards in Coming Year; Executives Endorse Project as Judging Committee Forms

by A-MIKE VOGEL

The New Year, the new Awards, and new hope for 1942.

That all comes about on Thursday—the starting gun to note the ninth birthday of the Competitions.

Here it is again, folks. Now every theatreman who aims to show what he has in the way of showmanship is offered the bright, shiny opportunity of going into "high" right in the beginning of a new Awards year, to begin right from scratch with the rest of the hard-hitters and fast-flyers for another speedy whirl of 52 weeks.

The eighth year of the Quigley Awards was far the biggest and best, theatremen agree. The ninth promises to reach even higher levels, especially since opinion is unanimous that showmanship in 1942 will have greater emphasis upon the grosses than ever before.

There will be no changes in Awards regulations for 1942. Accepted by hundreds of enthusiastic theatremen as the fairest manner of procedure, the new year will be divided, as before, into the regulation two-week preliminary "Fortnight" periods, and the four Quarter judging periods for the Quarter-Master prizes. And, as usual, entries for the "Fortnights" will again be confined to the best single ideas or promotions, the "meat" of the campaign. Detailed 1942 Awards rulings will be run in next week's issue.

On this page is noted the first listing of the 1942 judging committee, representing executives of distribution, advertising and exhibition. Their acceptances and Awards comments are set down on following pages, with more to come, plus opinions on the Awards from the theatreman himself.

The Big Day, then—January 1st. Time enough to arrange that first entry for the year's first "Fortnight".

No fancy entries are required, no gingerbread or other decorative doo-dads to embellish your showmanship. Just do it, prove it, send it. And keep on sending through 1942.

So, let's go.

EXECUTIVES AGAIN PRAISE AWARDS

G. J. SCHAEFER
President
RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.

Of course, am most happy to comment on the value of these Awards. There can be no doubt that they have inspired theatre managers and operators throughout the country to exploit pictures which have not had unusual marquee values. The result, of course, has been increased grosses to the exhibitor and distributor.

W. G. VAN SCHMUS
Managing Director
Radio City Music Hall

I have always considered it an honor to serve on the Judging Committee for the Quigley Awards in the past, and accept with great pleasure the invitation to do so in 1942.

The work of the man in the field is of paramount importance as liaison between the industry and the public. As understanding grows between the two, the whole industry is benefited. The Quigley Awards have an enviable reputation for stimulating interest and endeavor toward this end.

HARRY M. KALMINE
Assistant General Manager
Warner Bros. Circuit

Acknowledging your letter of the 9th, it will give me great pleasure to serve on the 1942 Judging Committee.

Every year, the Quigley Awards serve as an inspiration to the men in the field.

ARTHUR L. MAYER
Director
Rialto Theatre, New York City

I will again be happy to serve as one of the judges in the Quigley Awards for 1942. For eight years, I have been telling you how highly I think of these competitions. Each year, they seem to become more important to the industry and the community.

R. M. GILLHAM
Director Advertising and Publicity
Paramount Pictures, Inc.

I think you are doing a swell job with the Quigley Awards, and I'll be very happy to serve on the 1942 Judging Committee.

HARRY C. ARTHUR
Vice-President
Fanchon & Marco Service Corp.

It is a great pleasure for me to accept your invitation to serve on the 1942 Judging Committee for the Quigley Awards.

Needless for me to tell you that aside from the very worthy purpose of bringing recognition to the advertising and publicity men in the field through the Quigley Awards, I believe that it is a great stimulant to better box office grosses.

It has been my experience that the grosses on pictures can always be improved by the active interest of the theatre managers and exploitation men in the advertising and exploitation of their pictures. It seems that that added effort put forth always brings better results in the way of increased grosses —at least that has been our experience in our circuit here, and the Quigley Awards go a great way in inspiring our managers and exploitation men to much greater efforts.

Great Opportunity

I am pleased indeed to accept your kind invitation of December 9th to serve on the 1942 Judging Committee for the Motion Picture Herald's Quigley Awards.

The coming year will see some rapid changes in the habits of the general public. Smart managers can best follow the trend of the public feeling through the columns of the Motion Picture Herald. The Managers' Round Table offers managers everywhere the greatest opportunity to obtain recognition for any outstanding selling job or idea he creates, and it also suggests ideas that greatly enhance the grosses of many pictures.

—J. J. FITZGIBBONS, President,
Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, Canada.

S. CHARLES EINFELD
Director Advertising and Publicity
Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

I am happy to accept your invitation to serve on the 1942 Judging Committee for the Quigley Awards.

By stimulating showmanship and bringing recognition to the men in the field, the Award competitions have rendered an invaluable service to the motion picture industry during the nine years they have been conducted.

A. M. BOTSFORD
Director Advertising and Publicity
Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp.

I will be most happy to serve with you on the Quigley Awards Committee for 1942. I am particularly glad to participate in an event which does so much to stimulate friendly cooperation in our industry.

J. J. O'CONNOR
Executive Assistant to the President
Universal Pictures Company

Thanks very much for your invitation to serve on the 1942 Judging Committee of the Quigley Awards.

I should be very glad to serve.

E. C. GRAINGER
President
Shea Theatre Corp.

Thank you for your letter of December 9th. I shall be pleased to accept the invitations outlined in that letter.

NED E. DEPINET
Vice-President
RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.

It will be my pleasure to serve again on the Board of Judges for the ninth consecutive year of the Quigley Awards. I have always felt that these Awards constitute one of the most effective stimulants in our business toward bringing out the best in showmanship both among independent exhibitors and circuit theatre managers. The campaigns that they originate increase the grosses not only in their particular situations. The same ideas are picked up through the Motion Picture Herald and are used in countless other localities. Thus the benefit to our industry, in all its branches, is world wide.

ENDORSE NINTH YEAR OF PROJECT

"Most Constructive"

It is characteristic of too many of us to wait until a man dies before we make known what we think of him. Motion Picture Herald, through Managers' Round Table, deserves great credit for having reversed this procedure. Thanks to the far-sighted policy which has always been typical of it, Motion Picture Herald presents bouquets in the form of the Quigley Awards while the recipients are still around to enjoy their perfume.

Although we have been told that a laborer is worthy of his hire, most of us forget it. We also overlook the all-important point that ability must be encouraged if it is to continue to blossom. Each of us thinks he is good but too often the news never travels any further. The Quigley Awards correct this weakness.

—JACK COHN, Executive Vice-President, Columbia Pictures Corp.

R. J. O'DONNELL
General Manager, Interstate Circuit, Inc.
Dallas, Tex.

I have your letter of Demember 10th regarding the Quigley Awards for 1941—and once again, it will be my pleasure to serve on your committee.

I hope that it may be possible for me to be in New York around judging time, because I always get quite a kick out of the procedure.

C. W. KOERNER
Vice-President in Charge of Theatre Operations
RKO Service Corp.

Will be happy to serve on Quigley Award Judging Committee.

If you recall, I was present at the presentation of the awards last year in Los Angeles. I was highly impressed by the manner in which this was handled and the fine inspirational effort it brings forth on the part of wide awake showmen.

C. C. MOSKOWITZ
General Theatres Executive
Loew's Theatres

Replying to your letter of December 9th, I will be happy to serve on the Committee judging the 1942 Quigley Awards.

H. D. BUCKLEY
Vice-President
United Artists Corp.

I am very happy to accept your invitation to serve on the Quigley Awards 1942 Judging Committee.

The Quigley Awards competition has proven to be a great incentive to advertising and publicity men throughout the Industry, bringing forth their best efforts in the exploitation of each year's product.

The competition engendered in the field of Exhibition from coast to coast because of the Quigley Awards is an important factor in stimulating business, thereby increasing box office grosses.

LEONARD H. GOLDENSON
President
Paramount Pictures, Inc.

Thanks for your kind invitation of December 9, 1941, to serve on the 1942 Judging Committee for the Quigley Awards, which I shall be more than pleased to accept.

J. MYER SCHINE
President, Schine Circuit, Inc.
Gloversville, N. Y.

I shall be very glad to serve on your Committee for the Quigley Awards.

LOUIS W. SCHINE
Vice-President
Schine Circuit, Inc.

In reply to your letter of December 9th, I will be most happy to serve on the 1942 Judging Committee for Quigley Awards.

JULES J. RUBENS
Vice-President
Publix Great States Theatres

I again will be happy to act in the Judging Committee for the 1942 Quigley Awards.

As you know, I have always felt that the Quigley Awards are as much of a permanent part of our circuit as is our Exploitation or Advertising Department. They have meant much in stimulating grosses and creating friendly competition among our Managers.

JOHN J. FRIEDL
President, Minnesota Amusement Company
Minneapolis, Minn.

I will be very happy to serve on your 1942 Judging Committee for Quigley Awards.

These activities serve as one of the finest exchange of idea schemes in the entire industry and should certainly be encouraged.

ALEX MANTA
President
Indiana-Illinois Theatres, Inc.

Will be pleased to again serve as a member of the Quigley Award Judging Committee in 1942.

You know how we, in our organization, feel about the Quigley Award competitions. For several years now our managers have been quite active contributors, to their and our mutual benefit. We all appreciate the continuance of this clearing house of showmanship ideas.

RICK RICKETSON
President
Fox Inter-Mountain Theatres

I am always delighted when I am asked by you to serve as a judge for the Quigley Awards for another year. The Motion Picture Herald through the Managers' Round Table is doing a splendid job.

I have found a keen interest among our theatre managers concerning the activity of the Managers' Round Table, and, as you know, we have had some winners, and always compete for the Quigley Awards. I believe this is one of the best industry features pointing toward intelligent showmanship and higher exhibition standards.

LATE EXPLOITATION FLASHES

FIVE NEWSPAPER CONTESTS TELL ABOUT "SUSPICION"

Five contests in three of the Syracuse papers is the recent score rolled up by Harry Unterfort for "Suspicion" at Keith's. The Schine city manager reports a star head jigsaw tiein in one daily, a limerick contest and classified hookup with the second. The third paper went for a slant which was tied to the number of pictures in which Cary Grant appeared, readers being required to give the actual number and not the titles. In addition, the same sheet cooperated by offering guest tickets to readers whose names and addresses were carried at top of the pages.

Since the early December air-raid excitement affected theatres in Greenfield, Mass., as it did in other New England sectors. Manager Jerry Jerauld, of the Wesmas Garden, did a lot to calm the public by putting together a full-page layout, headed "This is the time to remain calm", copy carrying reassurances of safety and measures taken to allay war alarums. The ad, paid for by local merchants included in the copy, was credited with bringing the folks back to normal and to restore the theatre's usual grosses, as it did business in general.

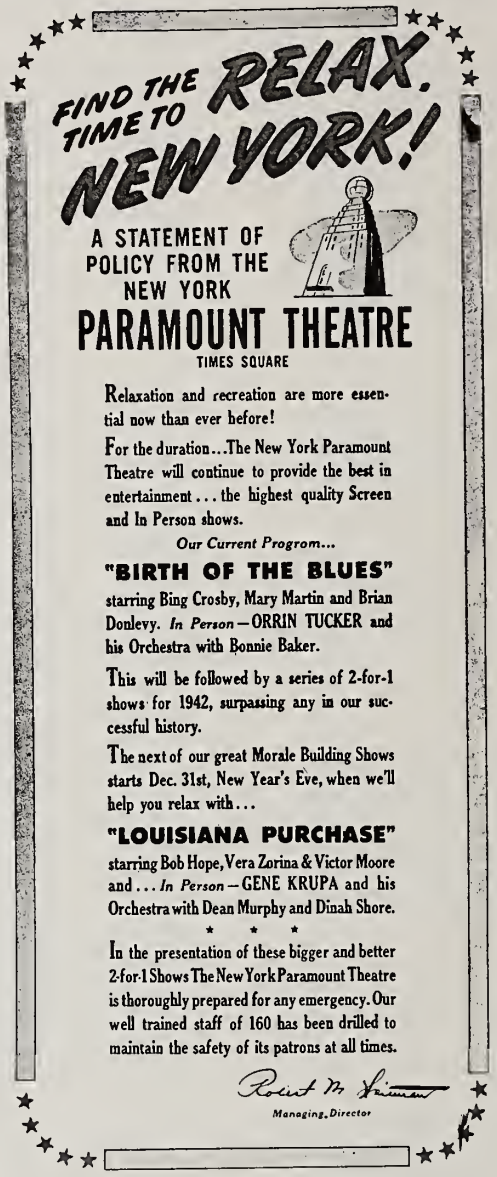
WINDSHIELD SERVICE FOR PATRONS APPROVED



Customers at the Ga-Ana, in Georgiana, Ala., returning to their cars in the theatre parking lot, find a herald on the coming attraction attached to the windshield wipers. On the reverse side is stamped: "We cleaned your windshield while you were in the show. Another friendly service of the Ga-Ana Theatre. Drive home carefully. We hate to lose you as a customer." Signed by Manager Felix H. Tisdale, who reports the idea, stating the service is appreciated by patrons and state patrol.

SELLS "HONKY TONK" BAR AFTER STUNT IN LOBBY

It was an old-fashioned bar in the lobby of the Tri-States Bonham, Fairbury, Neb., that attracted the folks, since it was tended by an old-timer with flowing mustache, plus the other props, and who dispensed free coke drinks on the house, as a buildup for "Honky Tonk". The drinks were promoted, reports Jimmie Redmond, and business was brisk among the locals who studied the colorful display of liquor bottles (empty) and scene stills mounted.

Topper for the stunt, says Jim, was the sale of the 13-foot bar, after the date, to one of the patrons for the same amount that the thing cost to construct.

"DO NOT DISTURB" CARDS CARRY PICTURE TITLE

As a switch from the conventional "disturb" cards used by hotels for room service, Ed J. Fisher, Loew's Cleveland zone ad head, promoted the local hostelries to accept one gotten up by the Loewman. The "Do not disturb" line was maintained, with the rest of the card given over to "H. M. Pulham, Esq." in giant capitals, followed by theatre and date in smaller type to advertise the engagement at the State. Leading hotels worked with Fisher to hang the cards for three days ahead of the opening.

The idea was also put across by Jack Lykes for the date at Loew's Valentine, Toledo, and as successfully. In addition, Lykes managed to have "H. M. Pulham, Esq." paged over the public address system at the Civic Auditorium, the name being announced before its nature was realized, says Jack.

THEATRE ADVERTISING OFFSETS WAR JITTERS

Further examples of what Round Tablers are saying in print to ease the public state of mind are illustrated in the two layouts reproduced in the center column. The top is a 200 lines on 3 col., by the New York Paramount, the purpose being to offset last week's air-raid excitements and to encourage attendance. Restatement of program policy and assurances of protection to patrons in emergencies were emphasized under the signature of Robert M. Weitman, managing director.

The reproduction below is of a 70 lines on 2 col., the copy slant aimed in the same direction, for the date on "Louisiana Purchase" at the State, Minneapolis, and reported by Charlie Winchell, ad head. The assurance slant here was an inclusion of a prominent local doctor's newspaper interview wherein attendance at the movies was advised, the ad panel tieing the suggestion to the picture.

The original mirrors used in the production of "Shanghai Gesture" were included in the colorful lobby display for the premiere at the New York Astor, the props taken from elaborate gambling house set. Added decorations were paintings of Oriental scenes. Featured Fifth Avenue window display was made up of caricature dolls, each representing members of the cast and used as guest placement in the banquet scene of the film.

Opening was also publicized with broadcast from the lobby; interviewed were stars of the picture and others concerned in the production of the picture.

Pottsville Mayor Sponsors Tie-ups

Exploitations aimed for community benefit are not restricted to theatremen as evidenced recently by a series of events in Pottsville, Pa., staged by Mayor Claude A. Lord assisted by the various civic organizations and importantly by J. Lalor Joyce, manager of the Hippodrome Theatre.

Reported by Mayor Lord is the unique celebration of a Third Thanksgiving Day on the first Thursday in December given over to a varied and interesting program. This year's celebration was highlighted with a "Santa Claus" parade which drew children and their parents within a radius of 40 miles and climaxed by a lunch at the leading hotel, where service awards by the Red Cross were distributed.

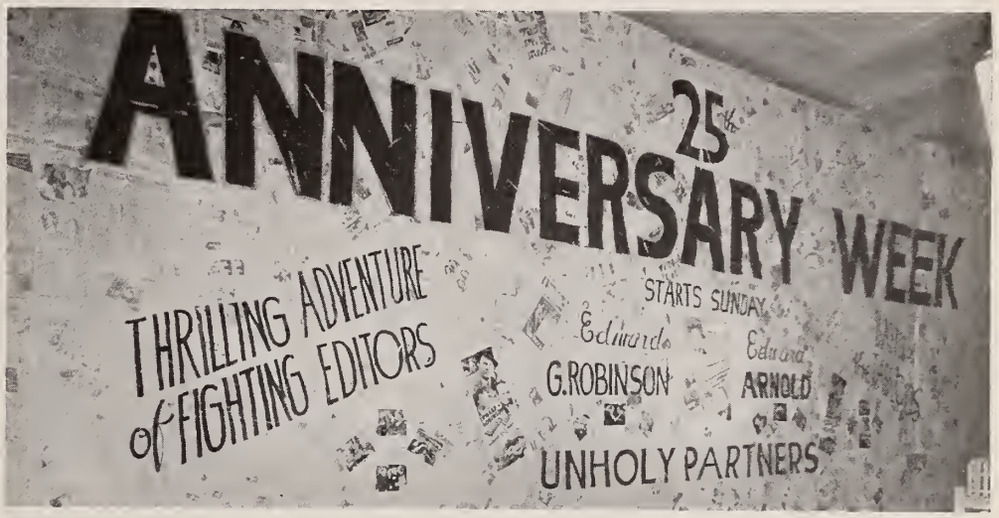
In the evening, in conjunction with a return date of "Blossoms in the Dust" at the Hippodrome, Mr. Lord presented 35 gifts from the stage contributed by local merchants to the first baby born on that day in any of the three hospitals within the city limits. Gifts were displayed for two weeks ahead in one of the city's best located windows. The day's activities wound up with an all-star football game for the benefit of the county's crippled children, the entire program broadcast over both WOR and WJZ.

The unusual Thanksgiving Day is the latest in a number of events sponsored by the exploitation-minded city head, who credits the motion picture industry and the local theatres for cooperation in these promotions.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Wheeler's Double-Fun Show Featured at Midnite Rally

With tremendous crowds on hand in South Bend, Indiana, for the recent Notre Dame - Southern California game, Ray Wheeler worked out a midnight pre-game rally and double fun show at the Granada on the Friday night before. Two features specially selected by Wheeler for the occasion were "Swing It Soldier" and "Sailors on Leave." As an added attraction, popular local organist led the audience in a collegiate song fest.



Since night clubs and bars close at midnight, the Round Tabler covered all these spots, plus hotels, billiard parlors, etc., with heralds just three hours before the show. The proprietors of these various spots were given guest tickets to insure cooperation.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Personal Letters Aid "Hold Back the Dawn"

A unique exploitation stunt was worked out on "Hold Back the Dawn" by Charlie Poorman for that date at the Lyric, in Williamstown, Pa. For two days, a week ahead of playdates, an usher was posted inside the theatre, who approached male patrons upon entrance whispering: "I was told to slip you this." On opening a perfumed envelope marked personal, written in feminine hand was a note reading "My dearest. Remember the night we wanted to Hold Back the Dawn? Meet me here, please next Friday or Saturday. Olivia."

SPECTACULAR SETPIECE

Coupling the 25th anniversary of the Fox-Strand in Salina, Kansas, to the featured attraction, "Unholy Partners", Manager Don Aldritt put together a sensational lobby display, 40 feet long by 20 high, made up of headlines of 900 newspapers, to emphasize the background of the picture (see cut). To stress the event, Aldritt also promoted a "signature page" co-op copy honoring the occasion and signed by leading merchants who paid for the unusual advertisement. House-to-house distribution of anniversary heralds in the city and throughout the drawing area also helped to spread the word, as did a newsboy tiein on the main streets wherein the Round Tabler arranged to have the carriers dispose of "extras", the front page of which was overprinted with picture copy.

House Building Contest Aids Patchen on "Dumbo"

N. E. Patchen, manager of the Chief Theatre, Pueblo, Colo., tied-in with the two leading publications of this city, the Chieftain and the Star-Journal, for a Timothy Mouse house building contest as part of his campaign on "Dumbo." The contest was played up by the papers in their news columns which gave free ad space and interest to the picture. Those submitting the best miniatures were given cash prizes and theatre passes. One hundred jumbo sized special window cards were spotted in prominent downtown locations crediting the feature and playdate and the theatre tied-in with radio station KGHF for a special 15 minute broadcast on opening day.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Air Force Tieins Aid "International Squadron"

Contacting headquarters of the British War Relief Society, Manager George French and publicist Bill Morton at the RKO Albee, in Providence, secured one-sheet card display of stills from the picture together with a message to all British flyers, sailors and merchantmen who visited headquarters that the picture should be a "must" on their list.

On the theatre's regular daily street program, a man who had worked with the Canadian Air Force told in detail about the men who come to Canada and subsequently make up the International Squadron. Tieup with the local government approved ground school gave complete coverage of all air-minded youths in the state, while display of model planes brought further attention.

Curley Promotes Mayor on "Keep 'Em Flying Week"

Jules Curley, manager of Warner's Strand in Albany ahead of the Abbott and Costello picture, "Keep 'Em Flying," worked in conjunction with the Times-Union and got Mayor Herman Hookkamp to proclaim a "Keep 'Em Flying Week." Contest was based on guessing the altitude of an American Airways liner which regularly comes in from New York at 2.30 P. M. The paper advertised the contest and the picture with two-column heads each day for a week in advance. On opening day, the paper's headlines carried the time the plane would first circle around Albany. A total of 25 prizes were awarded, with $25.00 in cash for top money, given to the persons guessing nearest the correct altitude.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Tighe Ties Cadets To "Keep 'Em Flying"

To help publicize "Keep 'em Flying" at the Penn, in Wilkes-Barre, Paul Tighe invited a group of 35 aviation cadet candidates and members of the Army Recruiting Station force at the Wilkes-Barre Examination Station to view the film.

Cooperating with local newspapers, a special showing of the film was held for 800 carrier boys employed by the Times-Leader, Evening News and Wilkes-Barre Record to mark the opening of their campaign to sell defense stamps. Tighe received unusually fine publicity for the film and theatre. A parade through the city preceded the special showing.

Schiners Pledge Circuit Support To Aid National Defense Program

Members of the Schiners Organization, the Schine circuit employees association, at the last meeting in Gloversville, N. Y., pledged full support to the national defense in the purchase of defense stamps and bonds. Committee has been appointed to handle stamp distribution, each employee binding himself to a definite amount each week. The Schiners have also enrolled in special first-aid classes to be conducted by the Red Cross at the Schine Gloversville headquarters. Two-hour sessions weekly will be held for a 10-week period. It was also voted to suspend the regular luncheons served at the Schiners' meetings and to substitute a $25.00 Defense Bond given at each meeting in a drawing.

To further impress the importance of the Schine theatres upon their communities at this time, Seymour Morris, home-office ad head, reports a circuitwide suggestion for managers to broadcast the Lowell Thomas 6:30 newscast over the theatres' sound systems—this to be plugged widely at the theatre and by the cooperating radio station. Important newsreel war shots will also be emphasized in ads and display, and local newspapers tied in to relay flash bulletins of high news value to the theatre for immediate announcement.

Novelty Ideas Build for Addison Dates

Street stuff for "Chocolate Soldier" at Schine's Paramount, Glens Falls, N. Y., aimed by "Addie" Addison, had two boys, one colored and dressed as a chocolate-soldier, the other as a clown, who carried sign, "If you think this clown is funny, wait till you see Nelson Eddy in", etc. Soldier carried attraction copy. Tonsorial parlors carried window cards: "If this barber shop was in Hollywood, Nelson Eddy wouldn't be wearing a beard in"' etc. Classified ad, running three days ahead said: "Wanted. Beavers. Ten gentlemen with luxurious growth of beard to view Nelson Eddy's in 'Chocolate Soldier' and offer expert opinion of his 'beaver,'" etc.

On "Appointment for Love", Addie set up a lobby Cupid's Post Office, supplying cards and stamps to those wanting to make appointments-for-love. Appointment pads with cover plug were distributed. Playing the picture during Thanksgiving,, the Schiner used a topical ad, headed "Eat your turkey. Eat your pumpkin pie. We have an entertainment menu all set for you". The rest of the copy was set up as a menu with the different courses identifying the units of the program.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

War Veterans Hosted By Callow for "Boots"

Everett Callow, publicity chief for the Warner theatres in Philadelphia, for the world premiere of "They Died With Their Boots On" at the Stanley Theatre, arranged for four generations of fighters to attend the opening ceremonies as honored guests. The fighting men were led by a 95-year-old veteran of the Civil War, a group of Spanish-American war veterans, World War veterans and ten new enlistees. In addition, the county commander of the American Legion, the Legion's state adjutant and chief officers of the recruiting service stationed there, all participated in the ceremonies. Colors were presented to the men in which the battle flag of the Republic was handed over to the men of today's army. The opening ceremonies were broadcast by WPEN.

Fitz Holds Doubles Contest For "Shadow of Thin Man"

Realizing that to the average theatre-goer "Asta" is a symbol of the "Thin Man" series, Ed Fitzpatrick at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., staged an "Asta Doubles" contest in connection with his opening on "Shadow of the Thin Man." Local pet shop was tied in, Ed promoting a small wire-haired terrier for grand prize. Newspaper cooperating, ran several stories accompanied with two-column cut and mats on page two. Radio coverage included announcements on Stations WATR and WBRY's children's programs a week ahead. Permission was also secured to plant a small dog-house on downtown streets with copy. Lobby stunt featured large blackboard on which patrons were invited to draw outlines of "Asta."

For "Chocolate Soldier," "Fitz" used two lads dressed in that uniform doing toy soldier routine at breaks and pointing to display signs on the attraction. Two uniformed attendants carried five-foot pass through streets and delivered it to Mayor Scully at City Hall. Newspaper coverage was abundant, dailies coming through with stories and art in addition to a coloring contest for guest tickets.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

House Sells Localities On "Let's Go to the Movies"

Instituting a campaign to get the people of his city more interested in the movies, Manager Lloyd Hause of the Strand Theatre in Sunbury, Pa., erected a large electrical sign over the theatre and it reads: "Let's Go to the Movies." Worked with flashers the sign contains 200 lights.

To publicize the houses' 13th anniversary, Hause had his artist, Walter Fuge, construct a large cake for the lobby of the theatre. He further gained attention to the occasion by using teasers of round discs with "Lucky 13" lettered in red. They were spotted on the risers of the steps leading to the balcony and mezzanine and on mirrors in the lobby. He also strung a large banner across the main street of Sunbury to herald the anniversary.

Unterfort Ties Store to Unique "Business" Contest

Highlight of Harry Unterfort's "Unfinished Business" campaign at Keith's in Syracuse was tieup with leading department store which featured large ad in dailies plugging certain items, folks were invited to compare ad with merchandise in a certain window and list items on display, yet omitted in newspaper ads. Guest tickets went to first 25 submitting correct list. Window carried appropriate tiein cards. Other newspaper contest stressed a couplet contest, tickets going to those completing and submitting best last two lines.

Radio coverage on "Birth of the Blues" was abundant, Unterfort landing 15-minute transcription program on WAGE, while 40 spot announcements were had on WOLF by tying up with their Bing Crosby recorded programs. Recordings were also had over WSYR and woman commentator described the picture on her matinee program. Newspaper contest asked readers to bring their oldest copies of songs heard in the picture.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Felt Hat Day" Inspired By Pressbook Hat Tieup

One of the last campaigns put on by Ken Prickett before joining M-G-M in charge of the company's "Showbuilder", was a smart hat tiein for "Manpower" that came about through a pressbook tieup with a hat manufacturer. Contact with the retailer handling the line brought Prickett a contest with hats as prizes for best 25 word descriptions of the title. Radio station and newspaper also came in to stir up things, the dealer whipping it up with ads and windows.

This led to a still fatter promotion for a Felt Hat Day which Ken put on by getting the Mayor's proclamation. With this in hand, the Round Tabler was able to promote a series of co-op ads from all of the other hat dealers plus accompanying merchandising displays. Among the stand-out windows was a representation of a movie set further decorated with stills of male stars in the latest hat fashions.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Planes and Accessories Sell "Yank" In Texas

Minus wings, but otherwise complete, was the plane used by Manager M. E. McDaniel, Strand, Port Arthur, Texas, as a lobby attractor for "Yank In the R.A.F.", one of the features of the campaign put over by the theatreman with the aid of Ben Hill, of the Hal Horne Organization. Title was lettered on the fuselage and display of action stills mounted in the cockpit. Sides of the lobby were framed with machine guns and sandbags and front of the boxoffice decorated with crossed plane propellors. During the run, the plane in the lobby was moved out front, to the sidewalk and signal flares touched off on each side.

Bugler in uniform out front gave army calls and a girl in aviation costume distributed heralds in the downtown sector. Novelty handed out by the cashiers with change was small card reading, "Save your money to see", etc. Full-page newspaper feature carried in the pressbook was used for general distribution, theatre credits headlined across the bottom. These were stuffed in newspapers and placed in all hotel rooms.

PRODUCT DIGEST

THE RELEASE CHART SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

The Man Who Came to Dinner

(Warner Bros.)

Comedy of (Bad) Manners

The George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart stage play which has been amusing the populations of the nation's cities for the past couple of years has been changed but little for screen purposes. Some of the hotter lines have been cooled a little in consideration of the screen's larger audience but most of their pungency has been retained. The piece is still a dish of sophistication for grownups and impresses as a natural for the cities, perhaps something less than a natural for the towns unless the fame of the play and some facts about it have penetrated to the provinces in sufficient abundance to have prepared the citizenry for what's coming.

The names of Bette Davis, Ann Sheridan, Billy Burke, Jimmy Durante, Reginald Gardiner and some others supply showman with plenty of marquee material for attracting the movie-conscious.

The name of Monty Woolley, generously publicized in magazines and elsewhere since the play began to make news, conveys the stamp of Broadway as an inducement to the others.

The chief character as played by Mr. Woolley is, on the screen as it was on the stage, a famed ego-centric thrown for a time into the household of a Babbitt and making it his own to the consternation and confusion of everybody on the premises or in 'phone range. So are the other characters as they were in the original, and the film talent portraying them handle them well.

Jack Roper and Jerry Wald, associate producers, director William Keighley and screenplaywrights Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein appear to have determined to retain in utmost practical degree the form spirit and manner of the play. Their diligence in this direction gives their production a somewhat un-movie quality which may turn out to be asset or liability. Theirs is a workmanlike and thorough display of craftsmanship in any case.

Previewed at Warners' Beverly Hills theatre on a Friday night to a capacity audience which laughed loudly and often and seemed to enjoy the experience thoroughly. — WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Kings Row

(Warner Bros.)

Study in Psychoses

The film adaptation of the best selling novel, "Kings Row," comes to the screen as a star-studded, superbly mounted Warners production which has an emotional impact few pictures have ever had. It stimulates horror, compassion, pity and kindred morbid reactions.

The basic material, Henry Bellaman's book, was grim and gruesome, replete with situations and theme ramifications for which the screen had no place.

The film version is in a comparatively lighter vein, but the main tenor of the theme has been adhered to. Sadism, illicit love, insanity, jealousy, suicide and murder are among the ingredients of the film.

The players are accurately cast and deliver compelling performances, down to the least of them.

Ann Sheridan, Robert Cummings, Ronald Reagan, Betty Field, Charles Coburn, Claude Rains, Judith Anderson, Nancy Coleman, Kaaren Verne, Maria Ouspenskaya, Harry Davenport and Ernest Cossart enact the roles of the principal inhabitants of the hamlet of Kings Row.

Miss Sheridan may now be forgotten as the "oomph girl" and be billed as a top flight actress because of her characterization of "Randy." Reagan, as "Drake," a type of role which he has not had before, is outstanding. The performance of Cummings as "Parris" is of the highest caliber.

Casey Robinson's screenplay is a masterful piece of cinematic writing; the dialogue is rich and powerful. Sam Wood in his direction exacts from each situation the maximum of audience-gripping elements, making it an extremely fluid photoplay. Associate Producer David Lewis and Hal B. Wallis, executive producer, have given the picture the rich embellishments of top Warner product.

Taking two hours five minutes to tell, the story has these among its highlights:

The first realization by "Parris" and "Drake" of the eccentric character of "Dr. Gordon" when they hear a man scream while being operated upon without an anaesthetic.

The seduction by "Parris" of "Cassie," who for years has been confined to her home by her father, "Dr. Tower."

The slaying of "Cassie" by her father and his suicide, for which "Drake" attempts to take the blame. ("Dr. Tower" in a last note leaves his property to "Parris.")

The amputation of "Drake's" legs by "Dr. Gordon" and the accusation by his daughter, "Louise," who loves "Drake," that the operation was unnecessary.

"Randy's" helping "Drake" regain his mental balance.

The discovery that "Louise's" charge is true and that "Dr. Gordon" had left a trail of maimed persons behind in his career as a self-appointed, sadistic dispenser of retribution.

"Parris'" disclosure to "Drake" that the amputation was unnecessary.

It is to be noted that "Parris," indirectly responsible for the murder and suicide, is not punished, but actually benefits from the acts.

Previewed at Warners studio, Burbank, to a press audience audibly moved by the emotional stresses and agonies of the story.—VANCE KING.

Dangerously They Live

(Warner Bros.)

Adventure in Espionage

Although events in the world of fact have dated in a degree this fictional adventure in espionage, there is enough of anti-Nazi in it to cope with the conditions of the time and enough relevancy to Atlantic convoying to make it sizzle in point of public interest when and if national attention swings back to focus upon the sea highway to Britain.

The story is of Nazi agents operating in New York who abduct a girl in employ of the British Secret Service and try to make her divulge information pertaining to a convoy about to set out for Britain. She pretends amnesia, makes a confidante of her doctor, and together they outwit their captors after a series of desperate adventures which differ in a variety of ways from those which have become standard for this type of film.

John Garfield as the doctor, Raymond Massey as the Nazi-in-chief and Nancy Coleman as the girl in the case dominate the cast and the proceedings.

Ben Stoloff produced and Robert Florey directed from an original screen play by Marion Parsonnet which dawdles along for a spell but makes up for lost time when it gets rolling.

Billy the Kid's Round-Up

(Producers Releasing Corp.)

Adventure Western

Dominated by the comedy of Al St. John in the role of "Fuzzy Jones," a role with which he has become associated in this and other series, "Billy the Kid's Round-Up" is a continuation of the westerns starring Buster Crabbe. It is a story in which the elements of action, comedy and a modicum of romance have been incorporated to the best advantages of the production budget.

Supporting the stars are Carleton Young as "Billy's" right hand man, and Joan Barclay as the small town girl who takes over her uncle's newspaper to fight the crooked politicians trying to put their own man in the sheriff's office.

Directed by Sherman Scott and produced by Sigmund Neufeld this production is on a par with other "Billy the Kid" productions from Producers Releasing Corporation.

Wild Bill Hickok Rides

(Warner Bros.)

Western, Melodrama

Opening in Chicago while the Great Fire of 1871 is consuming the city, and closing in Powder River, Montana, with the flood from a dynamited dam bringing death to those of the films' many bad men who have survived the heroes' blazing guns up to then, this western melodrama, is on the scale of the same studios' "Dodge City" and "Santa Fe Trail" and as full of lead, larceny and heroics as the liveliest half dozen standard westerns you can think of in a hurry.

Hurry is the keynote of the picture, which gets started at high pitch and never lets down for more than a minute at any point.

The story, an original by Charles Grayson, Paul Gerard Smith and Raymond Schrock, takes Warren William and Constance Bennett from Chicago to Powder River with intent to steal the ranchlands from the settlers and brings Bruce Cabot, as the title character, up from Kansas to prevent them from doing so. The tale contains the mortgage, the claim-jumpers, the crooked sheriff, the lynching party, the dance hall sequences and the shooting affrays, indoors and out, which are hallmarks of the westerns. It also contains stampedes, gun duels, a framed trial and a considerable apportionment of humor.

Ray Enright's direction maintains headlong speed without permitting the pace of proceedings to obscure plot or dialogue at any time.

Associate producer Edmund Grainger turned out a western to rank with the best of them.

WARNERS RELEASING "SONS OF THE SEA"

Warner Brothers is releasing "Sons of the Sea," which was produced in the company's Teddington studio, England, under the title "Atlantic Ferry." The picture was trade shown this week. A review of the picture from London appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, issue of July 5, 1941.

The Review said the picture "is cunningly tuned to the pitch of Anglo-American relations. Its inspiration and subject matter prove to be the opening of the first steamship service across the Atlantic, its keynote the link between the two great English speaking peoples. The subject, thus, has immediate marketability, and the lavish canvas upon which it is laid should assist that quality.

"The subject is treated in a spectacular maner, and added to the human idea behind the story, over and above the epic inspiration, the picture has landfalls and departures, tempests and free fights, and an heroic passage in which Michael Redgrave dives into the paddle box of his ship to set it to rights in the face of a storm."

Walter Forde directed. The cast, besides Redgrave, includes: Valerie Hobson, Griffith Jones, Hartley Power, Margaretta Scott and Bessie Love.

Hi Gang

(Gainsborough-General Film)

Radio Extravaganza

"Hi Gang," with Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon, Vic Oliver—and others to be found in the film—ran every Sunday night for a year over the B. B. C. network proved the most popular program broadcast during the War by that corporation. The Gainsborough Production sets out to exploit the immense popularity of the radio show, with the same name and the same stars. That alone should ensure a cast iron box-office success for the film in its British release. The relationship with the radio show is not much more than titular and personal, though there is a re-creation of one of studio shows at the close of the picture. But the Daniels-Lyon-Oliver team is ready made for the showman, and the film itself is breezy and ebullient. It should be one of the winners of the year on this side.

The story is an effervescent affair about rival U. S. broadcasting companies, with Bebe and Ben each a star news commentator on one or the other, and Vic a stooge who ruins all the scoops. The fun comes mainly from the exploitation of this rivalry, with backchat and banter, and reckless battling over the programs. There is fun with British evacuees, and the comedy switches to England where ultimately a "Hi Gang" radio show is put on in an R. A. F. hangar. The nonsense reaches its climax when, chasing Vic Oliver, Ben and Bebe, forgetfully ring some church bells and, since this is Britain's invasion signal, the Army, the Navy and the Air Force are called out.

The comedy is of a familiar pattern with the Lyon's matrimonial mishaps a major contribution, and Oliver's particular brand of effeminate foolery constantly interpolated. Good as are the radio team, for British audiences the native nonsense of Moore Marriott (the "artful ancient") and the adipose Graham Moffatt is a surefire factor.

The story is unduly long in the handling and audiences who are likely to come in expecting intenser exploitation of the radio show will have to wait some time before music makes its appearances. When it does it proves worth the waiting, with Jay Wilbur's orchestrations, Sam Browne's manly vocalism and the swing singing of the Greene Sisters all mingled in. There are one or two tuneful numbers, too, and Bebe's presentation of them is superlative.

Though it is an English inspiration the setting is greatly American and the main artistes likewise. This, plus the polish of production, and the breezy nature of the entertainment offered, suggests a market wider than the merely British.

Press previewed under audience conditions the film undoubtedly, in a classy westend hall at that, made an obvious hit with the paying customers. Some of the critics saw a familiar pattern in the yarn and some seemed uneasy at the slowness of the story, but all were agreed that the picture had what it takes to take what they have.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Fiesta

(United Artists-Roach)

Gaiety in Technicolor

This addition to the Hal Roach roster of "streamlined features" is beneficiary of color which adds lustre to the signing and dancing ensembles which are its chief points of interest. These are of Mexican variety and please the eye.

Separating these sessions of song and dance are some incidents pertaining to the wooing of a senorita by a fortune hunter and his exposure at the hands of the faithful sweetheart and his pals, but all of this portion of the picture is victim of that artificiality which used to be the hallmark of musical comedies as produced upon the stage before advent of the revue type musical.

Anne Ayars, George Negrete, Armida, George Givot, Antonio Moreno and other principals are handicapped beyond rescue by script and continuity.

Production and direction by Leroy Prinz are up to high standard in the ensembles and perfunctory in the intervals between them.

Mr. District Attorney in the Carter Case

(Republic)

Comedy Melodrama

A fast moving melodrama spiced with comedy, "Mr. District Attorney in the Carter Case" is the second Republic picture based on the Phillips H. Lord radio program, "Mr. District Attorney." An entirely different cast than was seen in the first film is used in this, with James Ellison, Virginia Gilmore, Franklyn Pangborn, Paul Harvey, Lynne Carver, Spencer Charters taking the top roles.

The original screenplay by Sidney Sheldon and Ben Roberts deals with the murder of the publisher of a society magazine being tracked down by an assistant prosecutor and his fiancee, a newspaper girl. Through clues which lead to two more murders, the solution is arrived at.

Director Bernard Vorhaus kept the action going at a fast, plausible clip. Leonard Fields was the associate producer.

The Lone Rider Fights Back

(Producers Releasing Corp.)

George Houston Western

Continuing the "Lone Rider" series, Producers Releasing Corporation, under the aegis of producer Sigmund Neufeld brings another western production to the screen starring George Houston. Like predecessor westerns down through the years, it has a theme of the forces of justice subduing those of evil and corruption.

Directed by Sam Newfield, the story concerns a gang of outlaws who swindle a rancher from his property and the efforts of "Tom Cameron" and his aide, "Fuzzy," played by Al St. John, to restore the land to its rightful owner. Throughout the story the star of the picture is given the opportunity to render a number of western musical compositions and display his fistic ability. Dorothy Short is seen as the heir to the ranch after the murder of her uncle, and Dennis Moore renders an impressive portrayal as the hunted murderer.

Exhibitors who have found previous PRC westerns successful at the box office will have little trouble presenting this production.

Girl from Leningrad

(Artkino)

Russian War Film

The "Girl from Leningrad," while less than an action war film in the accepted sense, is nevertheless more than a documentary about the life of Soviet war nurses in World War II.

The leader of the war nurses and heroine is Zoya Fyodorova, who has appeared in such pictures as "Three Women," "Soviet Border," "The Man With the Gun" and "Musical Story." The nurses go to the front, take care of the sick and wounded, and even use a machine gun when necessary. One of the more impressive war scenes occurs when the heroine aids the soldiers in capturing an enemy post, and is herself wounded in the attempt. The soldiers, clad in white, drag themselves, faces downwards, through the snow amidst a fierce wind in order to make this surprise attack on the enemy.

This film from the Soviet Union is unlike a good many of its predecessors because it does not have the quality of propaganda or a pep talk about the everlasting glory of the U. S. S. R., but concentrates rather on more human values. It actually portrays such proletarian virtues as love and a sense of humor, hitherto unknown quantities in pictures of this ilk. There is also a musical accompaniment, and a number of songs are sung in true Russian tradition.

The war scenes will undoubtedly appeal to Russophiles and war action fans, but the more realistic and sympathetic aspects of the film will probably interest a wider audience.

Reviews received too late for this Section are printed in the regular news pages of the Herald and are reprinted the following week in Product Digest for their reference value.

Victor Eisimont has directed the picture so that it emerges as more of a human document than a documentary.

Corsican Brothers

(UA-Small)

High Adventure a La Dumas

Producer Edward Small's liking for films of adventure in the swashbuckling tradition, which gave showmen "Count of Monte Cristo," "Man in the Iron Mask" and "Son of Monte Cristo," is again displayed in this adaptation of an Alexander Dumas novel. In it Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., portrays twins, fighters both, a device giving him double latitude for his tendency toward heroics, while Akim Tamiroff as the arch villain who rises to domination of Corsica by a process of murder furnishes a characterization that dominates the picture.

The screenplay by George Bruce and Howard Estabrook is designed to pack a maximum of action, thrill and suspense into the running time. The tale is of twins joined together at birth, separated by surgery, kept apart and in ignorance of their twinship until coming of age, when they set out to avenge their parents' death.

By what is called "physical telepathy" one twin reflects the emotions, impulses and experiences of the other, including his love for the girl in the story, until death terminates that relationship.

Incidents in the story, directed by Gregory Ratoff, range from swordplay and knife throwing to torture, banditry of assorted kinds and abduction of the fair lady by both friend and foe. They are given substantial credibility, in part by the basic incredibility of the twinship as treated.

Previewed at the studio for a turnout of press people, who found that the picture took their minds off the war, which is the standard test for entertainment merit at this point.—W. R. W.

Hellzapoppin'

(Universal)

Screwy Musical

Deliberately setting out to be the craziest film ever made, this picture uses every known camera and vaudeville trick to attain that end. The sheer novelty will bring laughs from every audience. Patrons who like their comedy on the wacky side may consider it one of the screen's funniest.

The inspiration was the successful Broadway production by Olsen and Johnson, who give the picture what little unity it has. But a plot in most musicals means little; here it means nothing. In fact, although there are a few songs by Don Raye and Gene Paul, including "Watch the Birdie" and "Heaven for Two," the music is secondary to the comedy.

A "Hellzapoppin'" number opens the picture. After this the scene is the studio where the director is trying to persuade Olsen and Johnson to get down to the business of making a film. A writer tells them a story and they get into it. The chief action takes place at a house party and play given on the estate of the parents of the girl in the case, played by Jane Frazee.

Every kind of trick photography is used. Olsen and Johnson talk back to the operator in the projection booth; one character, Hugh Herbert, a detective-magician, steps from behind a curtain and talks to the audience; the projectionist screens part of a western by mistake.

Even without the Olsen and Johnson nonsense, Jules Levey, the producer, has given the picture good entertainment values. It is on an elaborate scale and includes excellent performances, especially those of Martha Raye and Mischa Auer, in addition to those already mentioned. Glenn Tryon and Alex Gottlieb were the associate producers and H. C. Potter, the director, did a good job of organizing the insanity. Jack Otterson's art direction required settings ranging from a swimming pool, complete with waterfall, to backgrounds of every known and unknown origin.

Previewed at the Rivoli theatre, New York, to a late afternon audience there to see "How Green Was My Valley." The customers greeted the opening of the surprise film with applause and laughed loud and frequently but not hilariously.—MARTIN QUIGLEY, JR.

ADVANCE SYNOPSIS AND INFORMATION

MAN FROM CHEYENNE (Republic)

Western

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER-DIRECTOR: Joseph Kane.

PLAYERS: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Sally Payne, Lynne Carver, William Haade, James Seay.

SYNOPSIS

Roy Rogers, brought up by "Gabby" Hayes, but separated from him for ten years, returns to the Cheyenne vicinity and discovers first that his childhood playmates, Gabby's niece, Judy (Gale Storm), his daughter, Sally (Sally Payne), and Marian Hardy (Lynne Carver), heiress to the neighboring ranch, have grown up, and second, that the ranchers are plagued by an epidemic of cattle-rustling. Marian Hardy is responsible for the rustling. She hates the West and wants to amass a fortune so that she can go East and live in luxury. Her foreman, Ed (William Haade), is in active charge of the rustling. Roy discovers the true situation and with the help of the ranchers capture the rustlers.

Drama

PRODUCER: Darryl F. Zanuck. Directed by John Cromwell.

PLAYERS: Tyrone Power, Gene Tierney, George Sanders, Frances Farmer, Roddy McDowall, John Carradine, Elsa Lanchester, Harry Davenport.

SYNOPSIS

Sir Arthur Blake (George Sanders) takes into his manor, Breetholm, as a stableboy the son of his brother's secret marriage. His cruelty finally drives Ben, now a young man, to escape on a ship out of Bristol in spite of his love for Sir Arthur's daughter, Isabel. In the South Seas he makes a fortune in pearls and falls in love with an islander (Gene Tierney). But his desire to establish his hereditary rights to Breetholm brings Ben back to England, where Isabel is now determined to thwart him. Imprisoned on old charges by his uncle, he is able to prove his identity, but his interest in the estate has gone, and he returns to the islands.

CHINA CARAVAN (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Drama

PRODUCER: Samuel Marx. Directed by George B. Seitz.

PLAYERS: Laraine Day, Barry Nelson, Stuart Crawford, Keye Luke, Sen Yung.

SYNOPSIS

Joe Tracey (Barry Nelson), piloting supplies over the Burma Road, meets Gail Farwood (Laraine Day) who has been refused entrance to China. He agrees to take her over the border secretly in his truck before he learns that she is on her way to her husband who deserted to the enemy before being captured. Admiring her loyalty and courage in the face of danger, Joe continues his trek with her and finds her husband is a prisoner of guerillas. He arranges to bring him to trial in Chungking, but Tom redeems himself and dies before that. Joe and Gail return to America.

RIGHT TO THE HEART (20th Century-Fox)

Boxing, Romance

EXECUTIVE PRODUCER: Sol M. Wurtzel. Directed by Eugene Forde. Adapted from the story by Harold MacGrath.

PLAYERS: Brenda Joyce, Joseph Allen, Jr., Cobina Wright, Jr., Stanley Clements.

SYNOPSIS

This tells of a former college football star who, ending five years of rich man's son's dissipation, goes to a fighters' training camp in upstate New York to get into condition. His intention is, after conditioning, to return to New York and knock out the man who had whipped him before "the girl" in a fashionable club. For three months he trains and then goes to the city to confront his former assailant but no blows are struck. Seeing the girl again he realizes he doesn't love her but that he does love the school teacher that he had met while training in camp.

A GENTLEMAN AT HEART (20th Century-Fox)

Comedy, Romance

PRODUCER: Walter Morosco. Directed by Ray McCarey. Based on the story, "Masterpiece", by Paul Harvey Clarke.

PLAYERS: Cesar Romero, Carole Landis, Milton Berle, J. Carrol Naish, Richard Derr, Rose Hobart, Jerome Cowan.

SYNOPSIS

Cesar Romero and Milton Berle here play a couple of high-powered bookmakers who find themselves with an art gallery on their hands. Romero's interest in art stems from his interest in Carole Landis, employed at the gallery. But his instinct for racketeering leads him to use that method to put the financially insolvent gallery in the black, thereby incurring the wrath of Miss Landis. However, Romero's ignorance of art and underestimation of the art dealers he contacts finds him paying an exorbitant price for a phony Rembrandt which he sells at a loss. He gives the gallery to Miss Landis and returns to horse racing. Miss Landis follows him there, she in turn having passed the art gallery on to someone else.

THE MAD DOCTOR OF MARKET STREET (Universal)

Drama

PRODUCER: Paul Malvern. Directed by Joseph Lewis.

SYNOPSIS

A party including a maiden aunt on the way to her fiance, her niece, a ship's officer, a steward and a mad scientist wanted for murder are survivers from a shipwreck in the South Seas. Benson, the scientist (Lionel Atwill), saves the life of a native princess, winning the respect of the tribe who attribute it to supernatural powers. He becomes convinced of his ability to restore life and decides to experiment on the group, whose escape he cuts off by destroying the boat. He also plans to marry Pat, the niece, who loves the steward, Jim. After a showdown in which Benson's powers are disproved, a plane rescues the party.

YOUNG AMERICA (20th Century-Fox)

Drama

EXECUTIVE PRODUCER: Sol M. Wurtzel. Directed by Louis King.

PLAYERS: Jane Withers, Jane Darwell, Lynn Roberts, William Tracy, Robert Cornell, Roman Bohnen, Irving Bacon, Ben Carter, Louise Beavers, Darryl Hickman.

SYNOPSIS

Rich, spoiled Jane Campbell (Jane Withers) arrives in Button Willow Valley where she has been exiled to the home of her grandmother (Jane Darwell) by her widowed father, who finds her a problem child. Despite Jane's brashness, the people of the valley are friendly and the younger element propose her name to the 4-H Club, a government-sponsored organization of farm youngsters. Jane isn't interested until she meets Jonathan Blake (Robert Cornel), the club's president. Although he is enamored of Elizabeth Barnes (Lynne Roberts), Jane makes a play for him. In the 4-H animal contest, Jane wins when it is discovered that Elizabeth's entry is traveling on forged registration papers. The victory is a hollow one. Jane helps to establish Elizabeth's innocence and, realizing that Jonathan loves Elizabeth, Jane graciously brings them together.

RAIDERS OF THE WEST (Producers Rel. Corp.)

Western

PRODUCER: Sigmund Neufeld. Directed by Peter Stewart.

PLAYERS: Bill "Cowboy Rambler" Boyd, Art Davis, Lee Powell, Virginia Carroll, Charles King.

SYNOPSIS

Posing as horse traders in an attempt to get some information about a mysterious counterfeiting ring, Bill Boyd and Art Davis come into contact with the head of the counterfeiting ring, Duke Mallory (Charles King), and agree to work for him as entertainer. Meanwhile the other member of the trio, Marshal Lee Powell, poses as a counterfeiter. Duke and his henchmen capture Powell when they discover his true identity. He escapes. Bill and Art stumble on the counterfeiting hideout by accident, and a struggle ensues, with the boys getting the worst of it until Lee arrives, balancing the odds and rounding up the gang.

HOW TO HOLD YOUR HUSBAND-BACK (MGM)
Pete Smith Specialty (S-363)

In this subject Pete Smith presents his conception of the major faults of modern wives, depicting three types who most effectively hold their husbands-back. The first type is the lovey-dovey kind whose husband must tell her he loves her fifty times a day or face the threat of her return to mother. The second type describes the budding politician's wife. She believes in being one of the boys but when her husband brings the lads over for a quiet game of poker she sets the table for a ladies' bridge game and generally makes herself a nuisance. The final type is the woman who can't stand the thought of her handsome husband being in the army with all those other ordinary men. While compliant hubby sits in a chair she pounds his feet with an ironing board, bangs a skillet with a hammer close to his ears, squirts vinegar in his eyes and freezes his trigger finger in the refrigerator. Hubby is taken anyways.

TRAIL OF THE BUCCANEERS (Univ.)
Variety Views (6345)

This is a camera trip along "The Spanish Main" where the pirates of old once sailed their windjammers. Starting at St. Petersburg on the Florida Gulf Coast, the camera follows the courses used by the pirates in their trips from the mainland through the keys and along the southern coasts of the Caribbean. Tampa Bay was once the rendezvous for the sea brigands. Now it is a gathering place for bathing beauties and winter tourists. The waters around St. Petersburg have become a yachtman's paradise and scenes from some of America's sailing classics are shown. The trip concludes with a visit to Havana, covering famous shrines and buildings, Columbus Chapel and other historic spots on the island of Cuba.

SHORTS SYNOPSES AND INFORMATION

NIX ON HYPNOTRICKS (Par.)

Popeye Cartoon (E1-3)

Olive is completely bewitched by a hypnotist's voice over the telephone and, at his bidding, sets out to meet him at his apartment. Popeye follows her, seeing to it that automobiles miss her as she walks in her trance. On one occasion, when Olive is walking along a roof edge, Popeye yanks an adjacent building within reach so that she can continue in her trance quite safely. When they approach the hypnotist's window, Popeye swallows his spinach and practically demolishes the charlatan.

WONDERS OF THE SEA (20th-Fox)

Adventures Newscameraman (2203)

The marine wonderlands of the Great Barrier Reef off the Australian coast, with its teeming underwater life, is the subject of this piscatorial cameraman's adventure. One of the more remote places of the earth, this reef extends eleven hundred miles off the northeastern coast of the island continent. The subject is highlighted by a dramatic battle between two hermit crabs.

LIFE OF A THOROUGHBRED (20th-Fox)

Sports Review (2302)

The life story of a thoroughbred is presented here with description by Ed Thorgersen. The camera finds a foal, in Kentucky's bluegrass country, only a few months old, taking its first tottering steps. From this scene the picture unfolds the entire history of a Kentucky Derby winner in the making. Finally the picture goes on to show the mighty Whirlaway winning the triple crown with triumphs at the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont.

THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS (MGM)

Technicolor Cartoon (W-341)

Tom Cat and Jerry Mouse call a halt to their eternal battling and decide to celebrate the holiday by exchanging presents. But a lifetime of enmity cannot be resolved in a moment of repentance so when the presents are opened Tom gets a tome on "The Art of Catching Mice" and Jerry receives a package of cheese beautifully wrapped and neatly affixed to a mouse trap. Thus, once more, the feud begins. Round and round the Christmas tree, in and out of the piles of presents dashes the cat in pursuit of the mouse.

THE MECHANICAL MONSTERS (Par.)

Superman Color Cartoon (W1-2)

A small army of monstrous flying robots engaging in nefarious activities are controlled remotely by an unscrupulous inventor. When the inventor successfully raids a display of the world's finest gems by means of his robots, Lois hides inside one of the robots. Clark changes into Superman and attacks the robot but the mechanical monster escapes. Superman breaks into the inventor's hideout, saves Lois from destruction in a cauldron of molten steel and grabs the inventor when that individual attempts to commit suicide.

THE KITCHEN QUIZ, No. 2 (Col.)

Quiz Reel (3603)

Ed East and Polly, the radio team, appear in their second Kitchen Quiz short featuring helps-for-housewives. In their light banter, they show how to remove grease spots from clothing; how to tell whether eggs are fresh without breaking them; how potatoes may be used to remove excess salt or the burnt taste from food; how to collect hairs shed by your dog, and other hints along similar lines.

THE CAGEY CANARY (WB)

Merrie Melodie Cartoon (7706)

The cat tries to catch the canary, and each time he has the canary cornered, the canary whistles and the lady of the house comes to his rescue. The cat finally succeeds in putting a pair of earmuffs on the old lady, so she cannot hear the canary when he whistles. The canary outwits the cat, however, but they make such a rumpus that the old lady throws them both out of the house.
